LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased today to have guests with us in the east gallery who are students from the Fairmount Park Senior Public School of Toronto, and in both galleries, students from Georgetown District High School of Georgetown.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: There can be no point of order, nothing. The proceedings have not commenced.

Mr. Sargent: I rise on a matter of urgent public importance.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Grey-Bruce is out of order.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a matter of urgent public importance with regard to the payment of $15 million pending the Fidinam affair of this government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is quite out of order. I am sure he must realize that. He is quite out of order at this time. He will have an opportunity during the question period to bring up such matters but positively he is out of order at this time.

Mr. Sargent: It is a matter of urgent public importance, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member does not have the opportunity.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, we are paying $15 million. The cheque has not been written yet.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will please be seated. He is out of order.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is out of order, he will please be seated.

Mr. Sargent: I suggest to you, sir, that this is a very important matter. Fifteen million dollars is involved, but the cheque has not been written. I want the Premier (Mr. Davis) to give us an undertaking that it will not be paid.

Mr. Speaker: For the third and last time, will the hon. member be seated? That was the third and last time. Will he be seated?

Mr. Sargent: There is a $50,000 payout I want to talk about.

Mr. Speaker: I hereby name the hon. member and I direct him to leave the chamber as of this moment, for the remainder of this day's sitting.

Mr. Sargent: I feel I have a right to bring this up. It is a matter of public importance, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): I bet my caucus that this would happen and nobody would take the bet.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will please remove himself from the chamber for the remainder of the day's sittings.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, this is a very important thing. Fifteen million dollars is involved.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will remove himself.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: I must remind the hon. member that if he does not leave under the escort of the Sergeant-at-Arms I have other remedies.

Let the record note that the hon. member had to be taken from the chamber by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): What is the necessity for recording that? Why record it?

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I would like at this time to comment upon the matter concerning the agreement which was entered into by the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board and Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. involving the provision of new accommodation for the offices of the board, and a number of the questions that have been raised in connection with the propriety of that agreement.

Honourable members opposite have been reported to have raised some very serious allegations with respect to the decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board in entering into this agreement, and the decision of the cabinet in approving the agreement, and have alleged that these decisions were influenced by a contribution to the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to restate my own position both as leader of the party and as head of the government insofar as the matter of party financing is concerned. Since becoming leader of the party I have followed a policy of refusing to inquire into the matter of the financing of party activities.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I believe, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Three little monkeys—see no evil, hear no evil, and there isn't any.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I believe, Mr. Speaker, that given the present system such a policy provides the clearest kind of safeguard against the suggestion or suspicion—

Mr. Singer: Nonsense.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Why doesn't the Premier start to change the system?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—that any action of the government might be related to financial contributions to the government party.

As a result of following this policy, Mr. Speaker, I have never had any knowledge, nor has any member of the government ever had any knowledge, either of the sources or of the amounts of contributions to the party.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Now he is going to be the laughing stock.

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, Mr. Speaker, it has been reported that Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd.—

Mr. Cassidy: The premier would not get past St. Peter with that story.

Mr. Lewis: As a matter of fact, he may have to change direction!

Hon. Mr. Davis:—did make a contribution to the Progressive Conservative Party after entering into the agreement in question, and that the president of that company has acknowledged that this was in fact the case.

Mr. Cassidy: You admit it?

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): The Premier should have given it back.

Mr. Singer: Well, isn't that nice!

Hon. Mr. Davis: In view of these reports and of the serious allegations attributed to some hon. members opposite, I have personally examined this matter in order to determine, first, whether any improper influence was exerted either upon the Workmen's Compensation Board or the cabinet with respect to the agreement in question—

Mr. Singer: What did you find?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and, second, whether the terms and conditions of the agreement itself are in the best interests of the public.

Mr. Singer: That isn't what the Premier told the papers.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have conferred with the treasurer of the party, Mr. William Kelly, in whose personal honesty and integrity I have complete confidence—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—and he has stated categorically that no contribution to the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario is in any way related to any past, present or future involvement by the contributor with the government.

Mr. Singer: And that's it?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Did the Premier ask him directly?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the record of facts reveals that the recommendation of the Workmen's Compensation Board with respect to the agreement in question, and the approval of that recommendation by the cabinet, both predated the time at which the contribution was reported to have been made.

Mr. Singer: Oh, that's very significant!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The decision, Mr. Speaker, of the Workmen's Compensation Board to accept the Fidinam proposal was taken at a meeting of the board on April 6, 1971. Under the terms of section 69 of the Workmen's Compensation Board Act, it then became necessary for the board to obtain the approval of cabinet with respect to this decision. This approval was obtained at a meeting of cabinet on June 29, 1971.

Mr. Cassidy: What day was the payoff?

Mr. Singer: Why couldn't the Premier remember any of this when we asked him in the House last summer?

Hon. Mr. Davis: The date on which the contribution was reported to have been made was July 23, 1971.

Mr. Cassidy: Twenty-five days to pay off!

Hon. Mr. Davis: In these circumstances it would not have been possible for the decisions of the board or of the cabinet to have been influenced by any prior knowledge of such a contribution.

Mr. Singer: Who would believe even that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: In addition, the standing committee of the Legislature for resources development examined this matter earlier this year and I should like to quote in part from the standing committee's report as follows—and as I recall, Mr. Speaker, there were members opposite on that particular committee—

Mr. Bullbrook: We didn't know about the payoff.

Mr. Singer: We didn't know about the purchase of the Harbour St. building either.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I quote: "This committee is appreciative of the presentation by the present Minister of Transportation and Communication and by—"

Mr. Lewis: Order, order. The committee didn't know about the $50,000 pending contribution.

Mr. Singer: And it didn't know about the Front St. building!

Hon. Mr. Davis: To continue:

This committee is appreciative of the presentation by the present Minister of Transportation and Communications and by board members and employees relative to this area. This presentation, with clarity and precision, answered the committee's questions with respect to the decision to move, the selection of that particular site, the involvement of the board by purchase and by mortgage supported by leaseback, and the disposition of the existing building—

Mr. Cassidy: The committee was blindfolded by the government.

Mr. Singer: Yes, it was.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Hon. Mr. Davis: To conclude: "All of these aspects obviously received full and thoughtful consideration, and the entire transaction appeared to be advisable and advantageous for the board."

I wish to make it clear—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker, since I was one of the people who signed that report, I want to make it clear that we were not aware of the $50,000 donation and we were made to believe that the existing building had been purchased by—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member certainly does not have any point of privilege.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, I would only observe that the reported contribution to the Progressive Conservative Party surely doesn't relate to the validity or otherwise of the particular transaction.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I wish to make it clear that the decision to accept the proposal of Fidinam (Ontario) Limited from among the other proposals put forward was, quite properly, a decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board and not a decision of cabinet.

I have caused to be reviewed in detail, the terms and conditions of this agreement and I have found no reason to question the judgement of the board in recommending the acceptance of the Fidinam proposal or that of the cabinet in approving it.

My examination of this entire matter has satisfied me beyond any doubt that there was absolutely no improper influence exerted on either the Workmen's Compensation Board—

Mr. Singer: How about the satisfaction of the people of Ontario?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —or upon the cabinet with respect to their decisions in this matter—

Mr. Singer: You weren't really elected God, just Premier.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and that the decision by the board to enter into an agreement with Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. was based solely on the merits of their proposal, and that the terms and the conditions of the agreement itself are in the best interests of the public in this province.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Is the Premier going to give it back?

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, Mr. Speaker, I share the concern which has been expressed with respect to the broad question of the financing of political activity both in this province and in the country.

Mr. Cassidy: Then do something about it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The questions of public confidence in the political system and of personal choice in party support have been and will continue to be a source of very real concern to the government. However, we are not satisfied that any other system has been proven to provide any effective protection against abuse, or to have produced any greater degree of public confidence. Nor are we satisfied that any other system would serve to protect the right of the individual to freely participate in political activity and to free choice as to which party he will support.

Mr. Cassidy: He will send $50,000 to us.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Like parliamentary democracy itself, our present system may well be less than perfect, and while our own concern will lead us to study more carefully the ways and means in which it might be improved—

Mr. Cassidy: Cop out; cop out!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —we will be reluctant either to change it substantially or to abandon it entirely until some other system has been proven better.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would hope, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Singer: It was four years ago that a study—

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that the experience of the government of Canada in this area will be of assistance to us in our study of this matter—

Mr. Singer: Four years of back and forth with a lot of Tory promises—

Hon. Mr. Davis: —and we shall look forward to assessing the federal legislation—

Mr. Singer: —and not one word about legislation.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —which has been promised, and the practical results of its implementation on the Canadian political process.

An hon. member: Shame!

Mr. Singer: That was the Premier's worst hour. That's his worst hour since he came into the House. Absolutely terrible; beyond belief!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Corruption is fine if I say it is okay.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

An hon. member: The Premier should blush when he reads that. Blush!

LAND PURCHASE ON NIAGARA ESCARPMENT

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Mr. Speaker, on May 1, 1972, the government of Ontario appointed the Niagara Escarpment task force under the chairmanship of S. J. Clasky, director of regional development, Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs.

The task force consisted of members of the public service representing seven key ministries and agencies. The terms of reference of the task force were:

To develop overall priorities to be used in the acquisition of land by the province and its agencies; to advise on all proposed land acquisitions by the province and its agencies; to establish land use and development standards and to examine various methods of land use control, and to recommend a system which will ensure the appropriate use of lands; to advise upon all proposals which would result in major changes in existing land use patterns.

Over the last six months the task force has held seven public meetings in the Niagara Escarpment area and has considered hundreds of letters and briefs. Through personal interviews, extended tours of the escarpment and private meetings with municipal councils, ratepayers' groups, conservation-oriented organizations, businessmen and others, the task force has had direct contact with over 3,500 people. I have now received the first draft of its report.

In the letter of transmittal the chairman has noted that the task force—and I quote—“strongly suggests that the narrative be examined for probable rewriting and polishing prior to any public release.” The government has accepted this suggestion in view of the widespread interest which this report will generate.

We do not wish this report to be regarded as a technical document for limited circulation only, but will ensure that it receives the broadest possible distribution to all individuals and groups concerned with the future of the Niagara Escarpment.

The task force anticipates that the review and printing process will take approximately six weeks. If the Legislature is in session, the report will then be tabled in the normal fashion. In any event, the report will be released as soon as possible.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION BOARD

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to comment on the report of the resources development committee, and on the operations of the Workmen's Compensation Board. However, first I would like to make a few comments on the board itself and the quality of its work.

When the various allegations appeared in print I was new to this portfolio and I was unfamiliar with many of the workings of the board and many of the problems which it faced.

During the subsequent months of April and May, I sat through many of the hearings and I was briefed on the remainder and, of course, I have transcripts of the entire testimony. I read the report by the resources development committee several times, and I spoke to many members in regard to its findings. Several delegations requested to see me concerning the report, and I met with those groups and discussed the entire question with them.

I also met with members of the board both jointly and on an individual basis. I requested each board member to give me his opinion and his recommendations concerning the report and then I requested the board itself to submit a recommendation to me.

As a result of this, I feel that I am now quite familiar with all sides of the matters brought before the committee and I wish to make a few remarks in that regard.

There is no doubt that the various innuendoes of wrongdoing and charges of blackmail were completely refuted by the testimony before the committee. The report, as I am sure all members are aware, makes this quite clear and I do not intend to read its findings. Suffice it to say that the sensational headlines surrounding the original stories and the first part of the hearings proved to have no substance whatever in fact.

The board is composed of three members, in each of whom I have confidence; and I assure members that in my opinion and the opinion of this government, the Workmen's Compensation Board administrators, in an equitable and efficient manner, an area of very complex social legislation affecting management, labour, the professions and the public.

Turning now to some of the specific recommendations which the committee made, I would like to inform the House of the intentions of the board in regard to each.

The committee was disturbed by the appointment of, and remuneration granted to, ex-board members acting as consultants to the board. The present practice in this regard is that any consultancy by a former board member must be approved and the remuneration fixed by cabinet.

The committee was critical of the retirement age for board members; and I intend to make a recommendation in this regard to my colleagues in the cabinet.

The committee suggested that the holiday accumulation rule of a maximum entitlement of two years' vacation credit for board employees should be extended to board members, and this is now being implemented by the board with some transitional arrangement to be made in fairness to persons who have more than two years' credit as a result of the present practice.

The committee was critical of the early retirement scheme permitted for employees of the board and felt that it ought not to be selective in character. The board is presently reviewing its early retirement policy which will apply to all present employees and a revised approach will be developed which is seen to be fair to both employees and the organization.

The early retirement scheme also came under criticism by the committee because it permitted the accumulation of further attendance credits while the employee was in fact on early retirement. The board has recommended that this practice be ended.

The committee pointed out that there should be an automatic posting of employment and advancement opportunities for employees of the board. This practice has been in effect for some time and will continue.

In the past an employee leaving the board on early retirement was given the benefit of any retroactive salary increase. This practice was discontinued some time ago.

The committee also examined section 86 (7) assessments, and suggested several changes. The board has instituted a practice whereby every company assessed an amount under that section is notified of its right to appeal.

A three-tiered appeal system has been instituted for any employer wishing a remission of his penalty. The director of safety will act as a consultant to the body hearing the appeal only at its request. The emphasis on whether or not a company should be permitted a remission of its penalty is still on the effectiveness of the employer's accident prevention programme and the demonstrated results.

In the area of administration, the committee expressed the opinion that the present system requires examination, and that the functions of the executive manager and the board should be reviewed. As I will outline later, I am initiating a study of this by a task force.

The committee was critical of Mr. Legge's attendance record at appeals and suggested that "board-related activities" should not interfere with his other board duties. The board will now take under advisement all invitations to speak on board matters on behalf of the board and allocate them among board members.

All of the board members and senior staff are engaged in making speeches and attending meetings and seminars on board activities, with the chairman receiving many personal requests in this area. I have encouraged the board to continue the sharing of these responsibilities. All travelling arrangements outside of Ontario will conform with normal civil service rules.

The last recommendation of the committee was that a study be instituted of the board and its organization and administration. I have decided that such a study could be useful to the board and to me as Minister of Labour. As a consequence, a committee will be set up to examine, among other things, the following: 1. The whole question of retirement benefits and attendance credits for employees and board members; 2. the administrative structure of the board; 3. the role of the workmen's advisers; 4. the composition and responsibility of the board; 5. safety functions of the board and the Ministry of Labour.

Some committee members felt that the board had not kept the Minister of Labour aware of its operations and decisions. I am sure that all members are familiar with the statutory provisions concerning claims hearings and the fact that the Minister of Labour cannot influence these hearings any more than the Attorney General can interfere in a judge's decision in a criminal case. This practice of non-interference in these cases will, of course, continue; but since my appointment to this portfolio I have met with the board and its members individually on many occasions, and I intend to continue this liaison.

I have discussed the entire committee report with the board. The members agree with me that as Minister of Labour I should work closely with the board. The purpose of my recommendations concerning allocation of time and travel authorizations is to further this relationship between myself and the Workmen's Compensation Board.

PLANNING OF SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, in September of this year a situation in downtown Toronto involving the transfer of a number of pupils from public elementary schools to separate elementary schools became critical. These transfers resulted in vacant pupil spaces in certain public schools and severe overcrowding in certain separate schools.

Upon learning of the details of this situation and realizing that both public and separate school boards in various areas of the province were beginning to experience similar pressures, I appointed a three-man, fact-finding team to investigate thoroughly all aspects of this particular Toronto situation and to try to pinpoint the factors which led to it. Their assessment of the situation and subsequent meetings and discussions with school trustees and administrators confirmed my feeling that the broad matter of co-operation between public and separate school boards throughout the province regarding the efficient provision of pupil places must be faced squarely.

Mr. Speaker, I'd like to inform the House today that I am mailing a memorandum to the chairmen and chief executive officers of each school board in Ontario which outlines a new procedure to ensure that all school boards serving a given geographic area will co-operate, consult and plan with each other on the matter of allocating school accommodation reasonably and efficiently. Henceforth, before the ministry will give grant approval for the construction of any new pupil places, the boards concerned with the geographic area will have to show evidence of real need and co-operative planning.

This means that representatives of the boards, using all available sources of information, must make the best possible projection of initial and/or future enrolments in their areas. From this information they must then estimate the number who will be attending public schools and the number who will be attending separate schools and relate this information to the available existing accommodation.

Mr. Speaker, using these co-operative estimates, they will then work out a proposal by which their school accommodation requirements can be met. This may take the form of sharing facilities, the sale of facilities or new construction. To facilitate such collaboration, the ministry will distribute a new printed form which will be a required component of all future submissions by school boards for approval to construct new facilities. This document must be signed by representatives of all boards concerned. Its format will demand, Mr. Speaker, that the boards have carried out the kind of enrolment analysis I have described.

In addition to initiating these procedures which will ensure co-operative planning of school accommodation needs, today I am also establishing a study team to look specifically at some of the problem areas associated with sharing or transferring of school facilities.

The terms of reference for the study team are: 1. To identify and recommend guidelines to assist school boards in determining the feasibility of sharing or transferring a particular school or schools; 2. To investigate the feasibility of establishing a procedure or a schedule to minimize difficulties which can arise when there are large-scale transferrals of pupils from one school system to another; 3. To provide additional comment on any related aspects of the broad matter of efficient allocation of school facilities between school boards operating in a given geographic area.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that Mr. J. A. Marrese, chairman of the Metro Toronto Separate School Board, and Dr. R. J. Christie, chairman of the York Board of Education, have agreed to serve as co-chairmen of this study team. They will be assisted by four persons who will be named in a few days, once arrangements for their participation have been finalized.

I have asked the study team to report back to me no later than the end of January, 1973. The matters to which members of the study team will address themselves are of the utmost importance in the context of decisions that will be made by Ontario school boards and the Ministry of Education in the years ahead.

Mr. Speaker, at a time when school enrolments are falling or shifting in many areas, and when there will be a sharp curtailment in the amount of money available for capital construction in education, the Ministry of Education is not prepared to finance new school construction for any board if adequate vacant accommodation is available nearby.

However, I am confident that the educational objectives of all concerned will not be compromised by a determination to avoid waste in the use of school buildings. Mr. Speaker, I believe that the people of Ontario share this view.

DENTAL TECHNOLOGISTS

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on Bill 203, which was introduced at the last sitting of this Legislature.

As a result of the introduction of this bill and as a means of gaining additional information for the Ministry of Health, an order in council dated July 19, 1972, established a dental technologists advisory committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Barry Lowes, which was to report to the Minister of Health.

This committee has fulfilled its responsibility and has produced such a report.

Members of the Legislature should be reminded that the terms of reference were:

To make recommendations to the Minister of Health respecting the matters contained in Bill 203, intitled An Act to provide for the licensing and practice of dental technologists and in particular to make recommendations respecting section 16 thereof.

As the members no doubt are aware, section 16, in part, says:

The Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations:

Governing the manner in which dental technologists conduct their practice and business affairs;

Governing applications for and issuing licences to engage in the practice of dental technology and renewals thereof, and prescribing terms and conditions of licences;

Prescribing the qualifications of applicants for licences and renewals, and providing for the holding of oral and written examinations set or approved by the board.

During the summer, since Bill 203 was given first reading, representations have been made to government, to all members of the Legislature and the ministry, from both members of the dental profession and members of the Denturists' Society of Ontario, and from the public generally. These representations have given reasons why the denturists should be allowed to deal directly with the public, and reasons why they should not.

It has been my stated concern on numerous occasions that my priority interest, and that of the ministry, is the health of the public and the provision of such health care at the lowest cost compatible with adequate safeguards.

This position was clearly stated by the then Minister of Health (Mr. Wells), on Jan. 21, 1971, under the report tabled before this House entitled "Guiding Principles for the Regulation and the Education of the Health Disciplines." Quoting from that report:

The primacy of the public interest should be the basic principle underlying the regulation of the health disciplines. Since safeguarding the public interest is the primary concern of government, the government must take overall responsibility for ensuring that satisfactory arrangements exist for the regulation of the health disciplines.

The report also states, and I quote:

The right of individuals to use the services of the health practitioners of their choice should be respected. Any limitation on these rights should be those designed specifically to protect the public interest.

It is in the light of these principles that the Legislature must evaluate Bill 203.

The Lowes report and its ramifications are now being studied by the ministry so that whatever may be the outcome of the deliberations, it will be in keeping with the principles clearly stated in January, 1971, and adopted by this government.

Later today, Mr. Speaker, I am tabling the report of the dental technologists' advisory committee.

Having made these introductory comments to outline to the members the seriousness of the situation under which this very important matter will be discussed, I would also like to inform the members that the second reading of Bill 203 will be introduced before the current session is prorogued.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, has the Premier got something? About the farmers?

WATER RESOURCES STUDIES IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, in view of the many requests that this government has received for information on the nature and purpose of water resources studies being carried out in northern Ontario, particularly since the recent CBC Weekend programme which presented somewhat incomplete coverage, I would like to make a statement with regard to these studies.

In August, 1965, the Prime Ministers of Canada and Ontario announced that studies of Ontario's northern water resources and related economic development would be undertaken by each government. A co-ordinating committee was appointed to represent both governments to arrange for a complete exchange of information gathered in the studies and to ensure the avoidance of duplication in them.

The objectives of the studies have been stated as follows:

With respect to waters draining into James Bay and Hudson Bay in Ontario, to assess the quantity and quality of water resources for all purposes; to determine present and future requirements for such waters, and to assess alternative possibilities for the utilization of such waters locally or elsewhere through diversions.

The Ministry of the Environment is responsible for carrying out the Ontario study which is primarily an inventory of the quantity and quality of water in the five major river basins and the hydrologic factors involved. It is a continuation of a water resources assessment that was carried on mainly in southern Ontario and now has been extended to the northern area.

The Canada Department of the Environment survey is directed mainly to engineering feasibility studies of possible diversion sites within or between the major river basins. Specific studies have been undertaken in connection with this work in the Ogoki area where soil testing has been done along the Albany River for possible dam sites for power generating stations.

The co-ordinating committee for the northern studies has reported back to the respective ministers through progress reports issued semi-annually. Although these reports have been designed for internal distribution, copies have been made available to members of the Legislature and other persons on request. The field work for the studies will be completed next year and a complete report made available by the two governments in 1974.

It is the work of the federal group that seems to have generated the many water diversion rumours, such as selling water to the United States and the flooding of Indian lands. Both the federal government and this government stress publicly in the strongest possible terms that no consideration is being given to any diversion scheme that would sell water to the United States. Since the resources of northern Ontario waters flowing into James Bay and Hudson Bay come within the jurisdictional responsibility of the Province of Ontario, their development and use for whatever purpose will be evaluated from the viewpoint of what is best for the people of our province.

The government of Ontario has made its position clear repeatedly on this matter over the past several years when questions concerning the northern studies have been raised in the House. Should the engineering studies establish the feasibility of diverting additional waters within or between northern river basins for hydro-electric or other purposes, no dam would be constructed without first thoroughly assessing the socio-economic advantages of such a scheme, including the cultural and ecological effects on the area.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, further to the Premier's statement on the Fidinam matter, did he undertake in his personal investigations to get some information pertaining to why the official communications between Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. and its head office in Switzerland did refer to this particular $50,000 donation, and tied it specifically to the decision of the government to lend Fidinam $15 million and proceed with the building of the property at the corner of Bloor and Yonge?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, after receiving this information at my home in Brampton from a reporter from the Globe and Mail about 4:30 in the afternoon on the Friday prior to the federal election, on the assumption of what was contained in the two Telexes, without my knowing whether in fact it was accurate or not, I proceeded on the basis that there was a contribution to the party.

There were two points to be raised, which I covered: whether in fact the contribution had any effect or whether any influence was used by government on the decision made by the board; and, secondly, whether the validity or viability of the proposal was in the public interest.

The correspondence or Telexes between the head office here—or whatever office it was—and an office in Switzerland, Mr. Speaker, is not relevant. The relevant fact or the relevant issue is surely whether or not the contribution that was reported—and I went on the basis that that report was accurate—had any bearing on the decision. I say to the members of this House categorically, Mr. Speaker, it had not.

Mr. Singer: The Premier can't say that because he doesn't know.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I am saying it didn't.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the Premier aware that the secretary-treasurer of Fidinam, in justifying the payment of $50,000, informed the international president, who sometimes visits Canada we are told, that the $50,000 was a quid pro quo in payment for the favour rendered by the government?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am familiar with what I read respecting the two Telexes in the paper. I just repeat, and I repeat it again, that any suggestion that the decision by the WCB—I hope, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition recognizes that if you take this to the logical conclusion, the recommendation came from the Workmen's Compensation Board to the cabinet of this province. I would not like to think that he is suggesting that the Workmen's Compensation Board of this province and its members acted under any pressure whatsoever as to the determination of this contract, because I don't believe it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: As a supplementary, has the Premier informed himself as to whether or not the president of Fidinam, Mr. Saunderson, was in fact on the fund-raising staff of his trusted and good friend Mr. Kelly?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have informed myself of the fact that Mr. Pat Saunderson, the gentleman who is involved with Fidinam (Ontario) was not a member of the group raising funds under Mr. Kelly's direction for the party here in this province.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Did he or did he not in fact raise funds for the Progressive Conservative Party in any capacity?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't answer that. I wouldn't know whether Mr. Saunderson—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I can't! I can't answer as to what Mr. Saunderson did. I can say that he was not part of the group that worked with Mr. Kelly in the raising of funds for the Progressive Conservative Party.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, come on!

Hon. Mr. Davis: He was not.

Mr. Singer: The Premier is splitting hairs.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am not splitting hairs.

Mr. Singer: Did he raise any money? That is the question.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Certainly not to my knowledge.

Mr. Singer: Not to the Premier's knowledge.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We will inquire.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, if you will permit me, sir.

Since the Premier has indicated publicly his personal concern if not for the facts of the case at least for the concern expressed by the citizens of this province in this circumstance, why would he not consider at least a royal commission investigation into this aspect—or at least the acceptance of the recommendations of the select committee on election law, which in fact would control and establish a limit to the expenditures that would be possible under our election law in this province?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the reasons for not having a judicial inquiry into this are very obvious. There is one fact at issue—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier doesn't want to have it, that's all.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, that's not the case at all. There is one fact at issue and that is whether or not the reported contribution to the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario, which was confirmed by Mr. Saunderson, had any bearing on the decision of the WCB and the cabinet. I say, Mr. Speaker, that this, in fact, did not happen.

Mr. Singer: That's not the answer.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I say that categorically.

Interjections by hon members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is a very objective viewpoint. Mr. Speaker, I would say further that the latter part of my statement made it abundantly clear that we are not, as a government, closing our minds to consideration of the total question. I think I should also point out—

Mr. Singer: The government is not closing its bank accounts, either. Not closing its minds or bank accounts!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I should also point out, Mr. Speaker, to the very sanctimonious group opposite, that as I went through many of these press reports and considerations in the past month and a half, when this issue was raised in relation to the federal Liberal Party in Canada I saw not one of them at a candidates' meeting—

Mr. Singer: The Premier is on the spot!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —or anywhere else—

Mr. Singer: If we had an election—

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Davis:—requesting the federal government to resolve this particular issue because they, too, are satisfied as to the complexity of the issue.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park has a supplementary.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): I would like to ask the Prime Minister—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Prior to making the $15 million loan, did the government get a credit rating on Fidinam? If it did get a credit rating, why did it go ahead with the $15 million loan when Dun and Bradstreet say the company is having some difficulty? It is slow in repaying a $1,579 loan which it has at the present time. If it can't pay back $1,579, how is it going to pay us back our $15 million?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I must confess to the member for High Park that I have not become an instant expert in this kind of complicated leaseback arrangement, etc., overnight. I fully appreciate he may have—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is rather basic; you don't have to be an expert in that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I fully appreciate that he may have, as a result of his intensive research in Zurich and elsewhere with his own private staff of private investigators, made some determination which I am sure he will reveal to the House, which may be very helpful. As I understand it, Mr. Speaker—I want to protect myself from this standpoint; I say as I understand it—the development is being done by Yonge-Bloor Development Corp., not by Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. I understand this information was available to the members of the standing committee. The equity involvement in the Yonge-Bloor development project relates to people and banks and agencies other than Fidinam.

The shareholders include the Union Bank of Switzerland, as I understand it. I think the member for High Park, from his very intensive investigations into the monetary systems of that great country, will know that it is a reputable bank. I understand that the Royal Bank of Canada—and I say, Mr. Speaker, I understand this—

Mr. Cassidy: How does it feel to have the gnomes of Zurich working for the Progressive Conservative Party?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I understand that the Royal Bank of Canada—and I think it is fair to state here to the member for High Park, who is far more knowledgeable in matters financial than I am, that it too has a share interest in this particular project.

Mr. Cassidy: The Premier pleads ignorance about everything. Let him tell us something he knows.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The share interest also, Mr. Speaker, extends to other banks and groups which had participated or are participating in the equity investment. I am told, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: The Premier's advisers on this one missed the boat!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, I don't think they did!

Mr. Lewis: This time Dalton Camp didn't write the script.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am informed that the equity position is between $7 million and $10 million. It is not being provided by Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd.

Mr. Shulman: Of course not! They haven't any money!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. are a firm of consultants who develop the projects and proposals.

Mr. Singer: And who give $50,000 donations. Same firm!

Hon. Mr. Davis: They are done individually by corporations where certain banks, groups and others make the equity contribution, financed as well by certain mortgage arrangements. I fully appreciate the Dun and Bradstreet report and the member can send it over to me, I will be very interested in it. But with respect, I don't think it gets at the essence of the financing of the Yonge-Bloor development where the Workmen's Compensation Board funds will be made available by way of mortgage which is, as I understand it, a first charge on a portion of that particular facility which secures the funding to be advanced.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. Bullbrook: A supplementary if I may, Mr. Speaker, so as to not divert us from the principal issue of this matter.

In view of the negative response to my leader in connection with the request for a public inquiry or royal commission, and in view of the Premier's professed statement last week that he had general discussions with Mr. Kelly, the treasurer of the Progressive Conservative Party, may this House assume that the Premier rests the integrity of his government on the fact that there were no other donations to the Progressive Conservative Party concurrent with any contracts with the government of Ontario or its emanations; the acquisition of land by the government of Ontario and its emanations, or the rental of buildings by the government of Ontario and its emanations?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I make this statement and I make it very simply, that—

Mr. Lewis: The Premier doesn't know! As Premier—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I recognize the hon. member for Sarnia likes to put things in their most simplistic form and I will endeavour to co-operate.

Mr. Bullbrook: So that the Premier can understand them.

Mr. Cassidy: A bit of simplicity on that side of the House would be welcome.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I do not know who made contributions to this party with respect—

Mr. Singer: Well, isn't it about time the Premier found out?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think this applies to other political parties. I think this principle does. I do not know; and I will say to the hon. member for Sarnia—

Mr. O. F. Villeneuve (Clengarry): All in the same boat.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Neither crocodiles nor ostriches.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—that there is no one doing business with this government because of contributions he has made to the Progressive Conservative Party.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary question—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, by way of one further question.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, by way of one further supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! I am attempting to give various hon. members the opportunity to ask supplementaries.

The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: May I—reverting to the broad issue for a moment—ask the Premier, by way of supplementary Mr. Speaker, is he saying that not only he, but that no member of his cabinet has any knowledge of any contributions to the Progressive Conservative Party during the process of the campaign, and that he thinks that that is a desirable situation in the public interest?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't speak for all of my colleagues as to whether they feel it is desirable or not. It is my own personal approach. It is one that I think is proper. I think it is important for the head of government when he is making decisions. And it is as important for ministers where they are making decisions, where there is some discretion—and there are cases for discretion or determination—that one can make that without any subconscious feeling that John Jones made a contribution and Henry Smith did not.

This is the way I think it should be done; this is my own personal approach to it.

And Mr. Speaker, contrary to the observations made by some columnists—who quite frankly in many respects have some valid points to make in spite of some of the editorial comments—that give the existing system of contributions to political parties—

Mr. MacDonald: Which the Premier will never change.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—I think it is important for the head of the party not to be influenced by having knowledge as to who gave, and how much they gave, in the determination of his responsibilities.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, could the Premier tell us if in his intense investigations of this particular transaction he was able to discover how this particular $50,000 donation from Fidnam came about? Was it offered by Saunderson? Was it sought by Kelly? Or did it just happen to drift down out of the air?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think I can answer the last part of the question with—out any hesitation whatsoever. I would think that the reported contribution did not drift down out of the air.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: That's what's wrong, that's what's wrong; and the Premier is in trouble, boy. He is in the worst trouble he has been in since he came into this House—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order please!

Mr. Singer: —and none of this is going to help him.

Mr. Lewis: How can anyone believe that the Premier and his people don't know? How do they expect the public to believe that the Premier and his people don't know?

Mr. Singer: How incredible!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: How about Honey Harbour when William Kelly visits the Premier? What does he talk about? The weather?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further supplementaries? Since we have now had 15 minutes of supplementaries about this question—

Mr. Lewis: It is a very important matter.

Mr. Speaker: —does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have any other supplementaries?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No.

Mr. Speaker: All right. Does he have any further questions? The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMME

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I would like to ask the Premier, Mr. Speaker, if he can announce to the House what plans there are to assist the municipalities and other organizations in providing employment during the winter periods when, obviously, unemployment levels are going to be at least as high as they were last year. We know his deep concern about this matter and we feel, certainly on this side, that any announcement is already seriously late.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I expect there will be an announcement with respect to the province's winter works programme either at the end of the week or the early part of next week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just as a supplementary: Is he expecting a federal announcement so that there will be joint programmes, or are we going alone on this particular procedure?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to think that there will be a federal programme, but I am not in a position to assure the Leader of the Opposition there will be.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: There is a Local Initiatives Programme which is obviously there.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will not debate the Local Initiatives Programme but—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: But there is a programme, and the Premier should know about it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have no indication as to the federal government's involvement with the municipalities in a form of winter works programme. No, I can't give the Leader of the Opposition that assurance.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Is it government policy that if the federal programme is designed to assist the municipalities directly that the province will veto, let's say, the participation of Ontario in such a programme?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Speaker, there is no question of that whatsoever. In fact, with regard to the Local Initiatives Programme, which one might debate in some respects as not relating always to municipal groups, I have written a letter to the Prime Minister of Canada, and I have had a very good response, as to the advisability of informing the government here—and this is being channelled through the Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mr. Welch) on the basis that maybe we have some suggestions to offer—whether ongoing programmes are presently in existence. We are really not standing in the way of federal initiatives whatsoever. We would just like to see a few more of them in the field of assistance to winter works programmes.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker, with your permission: Can the Premier explain why the province has delayed its decision in this matter until this point when, obviously, the funds couldn't possibly be available before the middle of December at the earliest? Why did we not have a programme that was understood and workable—at least understood by the municipalities—available in September or earlier?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the programme that was developed last year really worked quite well. I would think that if a programme is introduced or announced in the next few days, there will be very little difficulty administratively in having it come into effect right away.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, will the programme that is announced indicate at what level unemployment is anticipated to remain in Ontario over the next several months? Will it continue to be above five per cent?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I or the Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) will endeavour to get as close a guestimate as we can, as we see it, of the figures for January, February and March. I shall endeavour to get that for the member.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: If not, the hon. member for Scarborough West.

TASK FORCE HYDRO

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: In view of the first Task Force Hydro report and the Premier's willingness to accept the principle of a Crown corporation, and subsequent reports, would the Premier rescind the rate increase announced by Ontario Hydro pending the publication of the financial analysis of that commission?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't think there is any point in suggesting to Hydro that the rate increase be rescinded. What I hope we will be discussing here are the problems facing Ontario Hydro related to the next four or five years.

As I understand it from statements made by the chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, Hydro is faced with further rate increases over a period of time. The report from Task Force Hydro and the reports that will follow really don't deal with the complexity of rate increases; they have some observations to make.

So, Mr. Speaker, I really think there would be little purpose served in rescinding the rate increase. It has been supported basically by the OMEA or the participating municipalities with respect to the need for the rate increase. You know, no one likes to see it, but I think that the economics of it are there for anyone to see and I would hope that when the time comes to discuss the task force report and the other reports flowing from it—some of which I hope we may have available before the break at the end of this session—we can discuss in a broad way the energy situation that we face in this jurisdiction.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, perhaps the Premier could then tell the House what he means by the economics being there for anyone to see, given the padded $253 million presently in the rate stabilization fund, and the arbitrary setting of rate increases by Hydro without any public consultation at all? How does he justify that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not saying that I do justify the question of the establishment of rates. I mentioned the day the task force report was released that I personally—and I expressed then a personal point of view—I personally—

Mr. Cassidy: Has the Premier objected in the last 10 years to that? Has he objected in the last 10 years to the way that Hydro sets its rates?

Mr. Speaker: Order please, the hon. member for Ottawa Centre does not have the floor.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I said that I personally was not averse to the consideration of Ontario Hydro, or whatever form the new corporation takes, being required to have rates approved by some independent organization such as an energy board.

Mr. Deans: The Premier said that a year ago. He said the same thing after the last increase.

Hon. Mr. Davis: And I think, Mr. Speaker, that when we get the recommendations of the task force being headed by Dr. Deutsch related to the total energy picture, then perhaps we can put this in some broader perspective.

This view is not shared by everybody, because some people will argue that you can't put Hydro in the same position as other private public utilities. In other words, it is a non-profit organization selling power at cost. But I want to repeat, from my standpoint I think there is some merit in considering the possibility of having Hydro's rates go before some form of agency or board for adjudication.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: How does the Premier justify the decision by the government to oppose the application by Bell Canada for rate increases when it is not prepared to enter a similar objection to the same sort of decision taken by Ontario Hydro? Surely it is not enough just to say the economics are there for all to see? I am sure Bell Canada feels the same way. Why does the Premier object to the one, which appears to be simply a grandstand situation on his part, and not take any role in the control of Hydro rates?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): It hasn't got a board.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think there is a very real distinction and I will try to outline it for the hon. member. Bell Canada is a private corporation operating—

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): What is the Premier talking about? It is a public utility.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—under the jurisdiction of the transport board which has the statutory authority for the approval of increases in rates. It is a private corporation to the extent that it makes a profit and pays a dividend. The question of rate increases will reflect itself in many aspects of Bell Canada's operations—not just in the provision of new equipment or new technology but other aspects, and in my view this is a distinct difference from Ontario Hydro—

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): It sounds good!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In this case—

Hon. Mr. Davis:—where Ontario Hydro is a public utility, I think in the true sense of the word, in that it is not a profit-making organization. It is selling—

Mr. Singer: Its rates are going up faster than the telephone rates.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Sure the rates are going up. But, with great respect, you cannot compare Ontario Hydro with Bell Canada. They are not the same.

Mr. Lewis: No, Bell Canada hasn't gone up as quickly.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I have a further supplementary. The question was really based on the report of Task Force Hydro and I would ask the Premier—similar to the question that was originally asked—if he is prepared at least to enter into a further investigation of the decision by Ontario Hydro to build a new $40 million headquarters at the corner of College and University Ave., or is he prepared to allow Ontario Hydro to proceed with that decision even though it appears that the recommendations of the task force would call government policy into being and have some play on that decision.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't think there would be any change in this. As I understand the mathematics of the new office for Hydro, I think it will lead to a reduction in their costs of about $2.4 million a year. The question of the development of that particular facility dates back many years; it is not in conflict whatsoever with the Task Force Hydro report. There would be no purpose served in saying, "Don't go ahead with your new facility because of rate increases"—the two are not related.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, we're not trying to relate it to rate increases, but simply to the recommendations of the task force.

Can the Premier tell the House if in fact he did approve the decision taken by Ontario Hydro to put up this building on a leaseback basis, in a situation somewhat similar to that we've entered into with the Workmen's Compensation Board and Fidinam?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the question of the new facility for Hydro really was never dealt with by cabinet; it is not a matter of cabinet decision. The chairman of Hydro suggested to me some months ago that they wished to proceed with their new facility—it has been on the drawing boards or under consideration, I believe, since 1967 or 1968—I indicated at that time that in my view, whatever was done, should not influence the capital situation. I understand that Hydro have gone ahead on the basis that it does not require them to borrow, and as a result it has not affected the capital situation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They're going to raise the rates next time!

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Raise the rates—of course!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

GOVERNMENT ACTION AGAINST DOW CHEMICAL

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, one last question of the Attorney General; it is in two parts. What is the status of Ontario's suit against Dow Chemical at this point? And has the lengthy processing of that suit been affected in any way by a contribution from Dow Chemical to the Progressive Conservative Party?

Mr. Ruston: Never, never!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, the present status of the matter in reference to Dow Chemical is that it is before the court on a motion of the defendants. The Master, Mr. McBride, has not given a decision. I was hopeful he would have by now.

Mr. Cassidy: He's constipated.

Mr. Singer: What motion?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Counsel is proceeding with the matter, and I am hopeful that we will have that decision very shortly.

I know nothing about the other matter.

Mr. Renwick: Is it the correct name?

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, could the Attorney General tell us what the motion involves?

Hon. Mr. Bales: It's an extremely complicated motion.

Mr. Singer: Yes, I am sure.

Mr. Ruston: The minister is right.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Don't laugh, because the hon. member for Downsview would like to be able to argue that matter, if he could.

Mr. Lawlor: It is whether it will sue the right person or not.

Hon. Mr. Bales: But the motion before the Master is on the basis of evidence being given by one of the senior Crown counsel concerning the parties to the action, Dow Chemical Co. and Dow Chemical of Canada Ltd.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): We were there two sessions ago!

Mr. Lawlor: Sue the right guy!

Mr. Renwick: Is the name wrong in the writ?

Hon. Mr. Bales: It is a motion by the defendants to delete one of the defendants in the action. The matter was fully argued some time ago—

Mr. Lewis: Yes, a considerable time ago.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The Master has not given his decision, and as soon as he does, we are in a position and prepared—

Mr. Lawlor: To start all over again!

Hon. Mr. Bales: —to take whatever steps are necessary to proceed.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, would the Attorney General be brave enough to venture a prediction as to when the matter might get to trial? Is he as brave as his colleague sitting next to him was?

Hon. Mr. Bales: At this point I'm not going to estimate when it's going to get to trial.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): In the fullness of time.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I can only say that in the intervening months I've taken all steps necessary to see that we can proceed expeditiously.

Mr. Deans: How would the Minister like to bet on the decision?

Mr. Roy: Call on the Master for a decision!

Mr. Singer: It'll never come to trial. I say that again.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill was trying earlier to get the floor.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Well, Mr. Speaker, the appropriate minister has left the chamber—I don't understand how this comes about—so I'll ask the Premier because it's a general question.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! I should determine whether the hon. member for Scarborough West has finished with his questions.

Mr. Lewis: Yes.

Mr. Givens: He said he has.

Mr. Speaker: Then the hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

TRI-LEVEL CONFERENCE

Mr. Givens: I'd like to ask the Premier why it is that the request I made last spring, that the opposition party should be represented at the tri-level conference of governments on urban affairs, was not heeded? What great inner secrets and mysteries was he afraid we were going to learn and divulge? Isn't this a pretty shabby way to treat members of the opposition who've been beating their brains out all summer and have been helping on the report of the OMB.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Mr. Givens: Why were we not represented, at least as observers, at this historic conference?

Some hon. members: Shame!

Mr. J. H. Jessiman (Fort William): Get on the bandwagon, Phil.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I share the hon. member's view about it being a historic conference. I will certainly discuss this with my colleague and find out if the leader of the official opposition from Ottawa, or other opposition members, are part of the federal delegation and whether there are members from some of the other provincial jurisdictions from the, shall we say opposing parties. I recognize the member for York-Forest Hill's completely dedicated service to the select committee on the OMB this summer. I am not sure how that relates to this particular conference.

Mr. Givens: The minister ignored us deliberately, for no reason.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There are no secrets. I think Ontario's position, as I read it in the press today, has been pretty well documented but I will certainly discuss with the Treasurer the observations made by the member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary if I may, could the Premier enlighten the House as to why the Province of Ontario had to take such an immediate negative response in connection with the request—

Mr. Haggerty: Habit!

Mr. Bullbrook: —by the federal government and the municipal governments for a continuing tri-level secretariat?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that one should really interpret yet what one has read as to any negative response. I think if one goes back in the history of this particular conference you will find that Ontario was one of the prime initiators of the conference. And I say that—

Mr. Bullbrook: That is why I asked the question.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I say that quite objectively.

Mr. Ruston: The Premier's mind was made up from the start.

Hon. Mr. Davis: The position we have taken in a general sense is that no one is quarreling with consultation or the involvement of the municipalities in a consultative process. What we are concerned about is the development by the federal government of programmes dealing directly with the municipalities which might be in conflict with or duplicating existing provincial programmes. And I sense, as I read the press report, that this is a view expressed by some of our sister provinces.

As I say, it is not our intention to be negative. My own thought would be—in that a part of this originated with the first ministers' conference, I believe a year ago this month; at least a portion of it was discussed there—that perhaps there is some merit in having this referred to the first ministers' agenda to see whether there should be some ongoing secretariat. I should point out, Mr. Speaker, that we suggested this to the federal government as it relates to the first ministers' conference and, of course, this was met with a somewhat negative reaction on their part.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of one further supplementary, are we to correctly understand then that the government has, in effect, changed its mind from the reports attributed to the Treasurer of Ontario; in point of fact, the Province of Ontario will look with favour upon an established continuing secretariat on a tri-level basis?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Speaker. I think what is clear—I hope is clear—is that Ontario is not going to stand in the way of continuing discussions. What I think should be done—and I think it only logical that it be done—is that whatever recommendations develop out of this conference be referred to the first ministers, because, very frankly, in some provinces at least this is ultimately where the decision will be made for those provinces as to the extent of their participation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Could the Premier indicate why the conference was held in camera?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Speaker, I have no knowledge as to why it was held in camera. I shall endeavour to find out for the Leader of the Opposition. But let me point out that some of the first ministers' conferences have been held in camera as a matter of tradition, and I am sure the Leader of the Opposition has been at one or two where, in fact—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That was in John Robarts' day.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, I can recall the Leader of the Opposition being at one when it was not John Robarts' day, where he was in attendance and where a portion of it was on public view by camera back here to the Province of Ontario.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, I do recall.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. Shulman: I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources, in two parts: What was the government business for which one of his Lands and Forests airplanes flew on five Mondays this summer to Port Severn to pick up one William Kelly, returning him the following Friday? And why was the pilot instructed not to taxi into Mr. Kelly's marina but to stay out far enough on the lake so that the plane's markings could not be seen?

Mr. Worton: Double—0 Seven.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): That's a good question.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, as the member is obviously aware, there are some 40 aircraft in my ministry—

Mr. Lewis: Giving a note of penury!

Mr. Cassidy: Who was being carried in the rest of them?

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—and I certainly do not keep a running check as to who flies in what aircraft and where.

Mr. Shulman: Is the minister saying that he doesn't know about these trips of Mr. Kelly's with one of his airplanes?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, I do not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Shulman: Well, as a final supplementary, if I may, is it possible for someone not belonging to the government—and I think he does not belong to the government—to get the use of one of his planes without his knowledge?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. MacDonald: Not according to the guidelines last spring. Watch out for the trap now!

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—I think the policy for use of government aircraft has been clearly spelled out in this House on a previous occasion.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary? Yes.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Did the minister undertake, in response to the question that was just asked, to get a full report on that matter for the House? I consider it of great seriousness and I am sure everybody else here does, too.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, I did, Mr. Speaker. I said I would investigate the situation.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And report to the House?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary. Will the minister indicate whether or not, after he has investigated, he will report to this House?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will report to the House.

Mr. Speaker: I understood the minister to have said that. The hon. member for Ottawa East.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. Roy: I have a question of the Premier in relation to his statement in the early afternoon. Is the Premier aware of the provisions of the Criminal Code of Canada in relation to political contributions and contracts? If so, why was this matter not referred to the Attorney General's department to get an outside opinion on this with a view to coming to either one of two conclusions, whether or not a charge is laid, that is whether the Attorney General might feel that the money might be either given back or given to charity?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have not consulted with the Attorney General on that aspect.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

LIQUOR CONTROL BOARD EMPLOYMENT POLICIES

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Premier. Is it with the Premier's approval that the local outlets of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario require that applicants for employment receive approval from the local Conservative member or the local Tory bagman before they are considered?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Or the defeated candidate!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can only indicate how I treat these responsibilities within my own riding. I do that—

Mr. Singer: He doesn't know a thing about all that. That is why we have got Kelly.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —I do it very simply on the basis of the need of the individual applicant for a job, his position.

Mr. Singer: Kelly must be very busy.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I can quite categorically say no one has done it on the basis of party or non-party support.

Mr. Cassidy: The Premier admits that it is done?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think, Mr. Speaker, there would be very few members in this House, certainly on the government side, who haven't taken an interest in finding employment for people with the Liquor Board. I would think this is true on the other side of the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: In fact, I can recall one or two situations where one or two private members opposite spoke to me to see if I could in any way help with one or two of their constituents related to legitimate cases of need for a job. I must confess, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Bullbrook: I deal with the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson). I don't deal with the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I must confess, Mr. Speaker, that I did my best to accommodate them, I did my best. It is not policy, no.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: If it is not the policy of the government, will the Premier make it known to the local outlets that it is not with his approval that this is done and it ought to cease?

An hon. member: Oh, sit down!

Mr. Deans: Sit down? Is the minister afraid of it?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Education—

Mr. Deans: What is the matter? Does that give the minister a little bit of patronage in his riding?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There are eight minutes of question period remaining. Order.

REVILLE REPORT

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Education: In light of the great concern and interest over the Reville report and its 22 recommendations, does the minister plan on introducing any legislation concerning the report before the Christmas recess?

Hon. Mr. Wells: The determination of when legislation will be brought in is announced in the House when legislation finally appears. I can tell the hon. member that in light of the programme of consultation and discussion with the affected parties—school boards and teachers of this province—it would be impossible for us to bring in any legislation.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): I wonder—is the minister considering circumventing the Legislature by introducing measures regarding teacher-board negotiations either through regulation or order in council?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Could the member repeat the first part of that, please?

Mr. Foulds: Is the minister considering circumventing the Legislature by introducing the practice governing teacher-board negotiations either through regulation or order in council?

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Like the snowmobile licences.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Certainly not, Mr. Speaker. What the hon. member is suggesting is that perhaps by some roundabout way we might implement part of the Reville report.

Mr. MacDonald: He wasn't suggesting, he was asserting.

Mr. Deans: He was asking the minister directly.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I think he should know that we would not consider anything like that. Indeed, I have told the members of the teaching profession of this province and the school trustees that their views will be fully heard before any legislation, if legislation is necessary, is presented; and that is the view of this government and this minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South was attempting to gain the floor.

Mr. Haggerty: A question of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: All right, I will permit a supplementary. The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister indicate what his own personal thoughts are in regard to the Reville report? For instance, does he not think that the report went overboard on the side of management, rather than protecting and supporting the teachers' position?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister doesn't have any views, does he?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that my personal views matter at this point in time. I am listening to the various parties concerned in this particular situation and after this has been done and I have had a chance to consult with my colleagues, the position of the government on that report will be made known. As of now, it is a report that has been presented to the government and it is being studied by us just as it is being studied by the teachers and trustees.

Now, the hon. member for York South says we have had it for two months or so, and I might tell him that some of the teachers' groups are writing us and asking us to give more time for them to prepare their position—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: —and so are trustee groups. The trustees are not coming in until after the election, so really I think that it has been considered in fairly good time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, with your permission. Is it not true that the report was out of print for a considerable period of time and that the minister was asking for the opinions of the professional organizations and others no later than Oct. 30?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, it is true that it was out of print, Mr. Speaker. I think about 3,000 copies were printed and we couldn't foresee it as being a best seller but it did sell out in the government book store. However, the various federations helped us by printing the recommendations themselves and sending them around.

The Oct. 30 deadline for comments was merely an indication of a time to get people sort of working and presenting suggestions on it in a hurry. It was never intended to be a definite deadline.

The report is now available, and if anyone wishes to comment on it we are happy to have their comments.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Welland South.

WCB COMMITTEE

Mr. Haggerty: A question of the Minister of Labour: In his statement today he announced that a committee would be established to review the operations of the Workmen's Compensation Board consisting of retirement benefits, administrative structure of the board and safety functions of the board.

Will the minister also include in the study a review of the inequity of the disability awards to persons who were injured some 10 to 20 years ago, taking into consideration the cost of living factor and the inflated dollar values over the past years?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I think I said in my statement that among other things we would look at the five points, but I also have in mind looking at other areas.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I am not committing myself to any one issue in particular, but I mean—

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister to stop studying the matter raised by the member for Welland South and do something about it?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I shall take this into consideration too.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Middlesex South was trying to gain the floor,

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): I had a question of the Minister of Health.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: Hit him with your cane!

An hon. member: Will the real Minister of Health sit in his seat?

Interjections by hon. members.

LIVESTOCK MEDICINES

Mr. Eaton: In view of the information that has been circulated as to the fact that livestock medicines and antibiotics are going to be brought under the Health Disciplines Act—and this is a recommendation of the College of Pharmacists—I would ask the minister if he has any intention of doing this and putting our livestock men in an unfair competitive position with provinces such as Quebec and other countries?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That should help the minister with his answer.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I have been accused before of being a horse doctor, but I have no intention of including this under our new regulations.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Essex-Kent.

BUILDING ADJACENT TO LAKES

Mr. Ruston: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources.

Would the minister consider imposing a freeze on the building of any homes and cottages in the areas abutting Lake Erie and Lake St. Clair in Essex county until such time as the high water levels can be assessed?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I think the member is aware that the high water levels on Lake Erie have been of some concern to the population of that area, and indeed to this government. We think that this can be related to the damage that has occurred in the Pelee Island area. But I don't think that I would be prepared at this time to put any ban on construction, as the member was recommending.

Mr. Bullbrook: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, I am wondering if the minister would consider some programme by the government to assist all property owners, either by subsidy or by assistance through the municipality, in connection with damage anticipated by further elevation of the level of the Great Lakes.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult to assess what will happen in the future. I think we are dealing with the problem now that is presently before us; and that will be well taken care of.

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been sufficient supplementaries, in view of the time.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside has been trying desperately to gain the floor.

Mr. Lewis: Hear hear! Great fellow!

Mr. MacDonald: You recognize his indefatigable qualities.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, my question was of the Premier regarding the continuing threat to the homeowners along the lakeshore of St. Clair and Erie. Where the extension or the raising of a breakwater seems to be feasible as a method of preventing the flood damage in future, is the government contemplating helping, with any kind of subsidy, the homeowners who might band together to create these extensions?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am not really qualified to say whether a group of cottage owners who build some form of retaining or seawall would, in fact, help with any increase in lake levels or any problems that could be created. I am sure that the Minister of Natural Resources would be prepared to take a look at any suggestions that might be coming from the municipalities. As I said when I was in the area on Saturday, perhaps some further incentive locally with respect to the creation of a conservation authority might also give some structure to see what things might be done.

Certainly anything we can do by way of advice or some leadership we will do, but I question whether we can get into the difficulty of the increase in general lake levels. That is something that is somewhat beyond our jurisdiction. But certainly we are very sympathetic. If the hon. member has any specific suggestions to make to the minister, I am sure he would consider it.

Mr. Burr: As a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: I am afraid not. The oral question period time has now expired.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. Potter presented the report of the dental technologists advisory committee.

Hon. Mr. Snow presented the report of the commissioner of agricultural loans.

Hon. Mr. Guindon presented the report of the Workmen's Compensation Board for the year 1971.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that commencing tomorrow, Wednesday, Nov. 22, and until further ordered, each Wednesday will be reserved for meetings of standing and/or select committees, and the House will therefore not meet in the legislative chambers.

Mr. Speaker: Does the motion carry?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, might the House leader indicate to us what tomorrow will be used for—or will we have such an indication?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might not speak to the motion, and relay an invitation to all members of the House to go to the Ontario Science Centre at approximately noon tomorrow. It involves a government proposal with respect to urban transit.

Part of the policy statement in the presentation involves a—what do they say? The Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Spectacular?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, an audio-visual presentation, which I understand, Mr. Speaker, might or might not be permitted here in the House and might be difficult anyway.

We are going to be inviting the heads of a number of the municipalities which would be affected and I am anxious that the members of the House hear the policy statement and see the proposals. We will have the municipal heads there.

I thought we would do this, Mr. Speaker, if convenient, at noon tomorrow. We didn't schedule it for 1 p.m. because I think the senior citizens use the Science Centre around 2:30 or 3 p.m. for their Wednesday afternoon film productions, or some such programme.

I think the presentation itself, the questions and discussions, probably should take two hours. There will be a relatively light lunch served after the presentation—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: A relatively light lunch after the presentation and this, Mr. Speaker, is what I would suggest would occupy, I hope, the interest of all members tomorrow, starting at 12 o'clock.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

INCOME TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Grossman moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Income Tax Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Mr. Speaker, this bill provides that the provincial rate of income tax will remain at 30.5 per cent of federal tax payable for 1973. The remaining provisions of the bill are concerned with clarification of the effects of the property tax credits introduced last June as part of the Income Tax Act.

MOTOR VEHICLE FUEL TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Grossman moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, this bill, as is the previous one, is really a housekeeping bill and is intended to clarify the application of a number of sections of the Act and to facilitate implementation of certain administrative changes that are made by the amendments that this bill makes to the Act.

MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FOOD ACT

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Ministry of Agriculture and Food Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): The section re-enacts and grants authority to the Lieutenant Governor in Council to guarantee payments of loans made to farmers for the encouragement of any branch of agriculture and food.

HOMES FOR THE AGED AND REST HOMES ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Homes for the Aged and Rest Homes Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, the main purpose of this bill is to authorize the board of management in a territorial district to enter into a lease or agreement with the minister to operate and manage homes established by the minister under a proposed amendment to the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, this bill authorizes payment of grants for programmes in social planning. It also allows the province to purchase social or community services pursuant to an agreement, and would allow agreements between the province and social agencies respecting the delivery of such services.

Also, the bill will permit the province to lease property received by way of gift or donation to any person or organization authorized under the Act for management and operation.

FIRE MARSHALS ACT

Hon. Mr. Yaremko moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Fire Marshals Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, this is by way of a housekeeping bill. The provision repealed required the payment by insurers of an annual levy based upon gross premiums, fixed payments and assessments. The payment shall be provided for in the form of an additional tax under a bill to enact the Corporations Tax Act, 1972.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Separate Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, the urgency of these two bills at this session is that they contain sections providing that where boundary changes in the designation of a school area are effective on July 1, 1973, or in any other year, and an election precedes that, the boundary changes will be considered in effect for that election. It affects both separate schools and boards under the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act. There are also a number of other minor administrative and housekeeping amendments in the bills.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any further bills?

Before we enter into the orders of the day, I beg to inform the House that during the adjournment I received the resignation of Allan F. Lawrence, Esq., as member for the electoral district of St. George.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order having to do with the matter that you have just brought to our attention, can you advise the House when it will be necessary under our statutes that that vacancy will be filled by way of by-election?

Mr. Speaker: Well, I can tell the hon. member that in accordance with the due process of the procedures a warrant will be signed today.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What does that entail? Does that mean it is then the responsibility of the Lieutenant Governor to issue a writ? And what would be the time limit, starting today?

Mr. Speaker: I am informed that the time limit from the date of the issue of the warrant is six months.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Next June.

Mr. Givens: A by-election has to be called within six months, is that correct?

An hon. member: Yes, from today.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day, I would like to raise a point concerning the privileges of this House. It relates to the editorial that appeared in the Toronto Globe and Mail this morning in regard to the incident involving Jonathan Manthorpe and the publication of some of the recommendations of the committee on the Workmen's Compensation Board.

You will recall, sir, that you made a ruling and, if I recall correctly, held the Globe and Mail in contempt for publishing a synopsis of the report before the report was presented to the Legislature. The editorial in the Globe and Mail seemed to be calling for some clarification as to the procedures that should be followed by the news media in this regard. I think the point was well made that indeed they had been found guilty without any kind of trial or having their day in court, which of course is somewhat inimical to our democratic system.

I wonder, sir, if you could indicate very clearly just what form or procedure should be followed in this regard; how far your ruling would go in regard to the publishing of information from private and confidential reports, for instance, and if in fact there is any procedure by which any news medium that has been accused or held, as the Globe has been, can appear before the bar of this House and state its case.

Mr. Speaker: I was trying to follow the hon. member very carefully. I must say I haven't read the editorial to which he has made reference.

Mr. Lewis: Really?

Mr. Speaker: No, I haven't had an opportunity to read the editorial to which he has made reference.

Mr. Reid: I would say, if I may, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: They said that you were in contempt of the Globe and Mail.

Mr. Reid: The editorial, I gather from reading it, almost has a very thinly veiled threat that they will proceed as they have in the past.

Mr. Givens: Throw down the gauntlet!

Mr. Speaker: I should point out to the hon. members that the opinion I expressed some time ago simply was my opinion as to the actual circumstances of the incident that took place at that time. No action was taken by anyone against anyone; therefore nothing happened about it at all. I simply expressed my opinion and made a ruling in this House that that sort of thing could possibly be construed as being contempt for the Legislature.

Now the hon. members may refer to that ruling in the journals of the House—and I am not aware of the editorial to which the hon. member refers: I believe he said it appeared today.

An hon. member: It was on Thursday.

Mr. Speaker: I haven't seen the editorial. I would certainly be glad to look at it and examine it and try to relate it to the matters raised by the hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: If I may just add, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, what you said almost allows any of us to stand here and accuse someone outside of this chamber of being a murderer or a rapist and say that is our opinion and let it go at that.

I would hope that you would read the editorial and that you would give us some kind of ruling on Thursday or Friday as to the exact procedures that will be followed if this kind of situation arises again.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, Mr. Speaker, I want to pursue this because I think this is a thoroughly unsatisfactory situation. Unfortunately, you haven't been able to read the editorial and therefore are sort of not up to date on the public comment on it.

But the thing that disturbs me—if I may fix on one comment of yours—was that you expressed this as a personal view that publishing a secret report is in violation of the traditional rules, and in fact, it might even be contempt, but nothing happened last spring.

What are you implying? That a law has been broken but you winked at it? When you read the editorial, you will find that it is a pretty defiant assertion that they are going to do it again.

Quite frankly—and this is the point I want to come to, Mr. Speaker—you have your finger pointed in the wrong direction. Any newspaperman worth his salt is going to get information. If he gets information, his paper has an obligation to publish it. So if he gets the information, don't put the finger on the working journalist who got it, but rather on somebody who gave it to him in breach of the secrecy.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's right.

Mr. MacDonald: There is where the finger should be pointed. And it seems to me that your posture last spring and what appears to be a reaffirmation of your posture now, is to blame the newspaper and to suggest that they are going to be dragged in in contempt.

Quite frankly, I think you'll make a laughing stock of us, yourself and everybody else if you attempt that kind of thing.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the words of the hon. member for York South. If he will examine the records I think he will find that certain questions were asked, relative to the ruling I delivered, by certain members of Her Majesty's loyal opposition, which clarified the thing quite perfectly. I think the hon. member for Downsview asked the question.

Now, according to the records that I could find and the research that was done, it did constitute a contempt as far as this Legislature is concerned. But I did mention, and the hon. member for York South will find this too, that any action that would be taken would be taken by an hon. member of this House, not by the Speaker.

I also indicated that perhaps the fault did not lie there with the press, but with the person who leaked the information to the press. Now, I have gone on record as having said that, so I don't think the hon. member for York South is quite correct in saying that I am pointing my finger in the wrong direction.

I understand the matter; I had to deal with it as it had arisen. The hon. Leader of the Opposition asked me certain questions which I answered. I have my own personal feelings. I delivered an opinion based on the research available to me.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I owe you an apology if that was what you said originally. However, let's deal with the basic point, having extended my apology for misrepresenting your position last spring.

The point is, the rule is an ass, just as sometimes the law can be an ass. Therefore, there is no point in reiterating a rule which says that if the paper publishes a so-called secret report that it is going to be in contempt of the House.

If you want to reframe it, you say "if the paper publishes a report which was leaked by somebody who violated the confidence of the committee," then at least, you are pointing in the right direction. But let's not go off in a heated tirade vis-à-vis the press. The press, I submit, are doing their job. If somebody helps them to do their job and in so doing is breaching the confidences of the committee and their obligation, then that is not the fault of the press.

Mr. Speaker: Again, I appreciate the comments of the hon. member. Of course, the whole gist of the thing that happened was, where and how did the press get the information? Until such time as you knew that, who could take any action against anyone?

This is the position I felt at that time. How could anyone take any action against anyone? It had never been done for decades and decades but the opinion was based upon all the materials available to me and was based on the existing rules and regulations of parliamentary procedure. There wasn't any doubt about that opinion being valid in that respect.

Whether or not it is a proper position, whether or not the interpretation should apply in this day—1972—is another point. Perhaps they should be amended. I have said before that I think perhaps some of our rules should be amended to bring them up to date and to use the current language that is easily understood by the layman.

I will be very glad to look at the editorial to which the hon. member for Rainy River has made reference. I haven't seen it, frankly. I will look at it and see what implications it might have. If anything further is necessary on my part to this House, I will certainly be glad to convey it to the members of the House.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, before we proceed with the next order I would like to advise the members of the House that, contrary to what I said yesterday, I will, in fact, call No. 7 first. Following that, I would like to call order No. 17.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves second reading of Bill 190, An Act to Amend the Legislative Assembly Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): In the absence of anybody from the opposition party, Mr. Speaker, I do have a few comments to make on this bill.

It is rather — I think the word the lawyers use is nugatory. That is, the stable door is being locked after the horse has fled in this particular case. It fled in a most unusual manner, and I think it deserves to be brought to the attention of the House.

It is rather a pity that the Conservatives who were involved, both the member for York East (Mr. Meen), who is the parliamentary secretary for the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs, and the members who happened to be on municipal councils during the course of the summer and who were forced off because of this bill and a related bill which amends the Municipal Act, don't happen to be in the House right now.

However, members may recall that last spring, in fact in the Throne Speech, the government declared its intention to make it no longer possible for people on municipal councils to hold office in the legislative assembly. If they were in the assembly, Mr. Speaker, they would have to resign or quit their positions on councils. Eventually on June 20, the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) introduced this bill, An Act to amend the Legislative Assembly Act, which was clearly to be the instrument by which the government was going to work.

It set out the government's intention, with which we happen to agree, concisely and relatively clearly as legislation from that side tends to be. There the matter stood; for some inexplicable reason, with all that flood of legislation which came forward in the last week of June, this bill was never passed.

It was simply left on the order paper for now. Along with a great number of other people, I made the mistake of assuming that there the matter rested and the government would be waiting until this session in order to implement its policies; and that it must have decided somehow that the member for Ottawa South (Mr. Bennett), the member for Don Mills (Mr. Timbrell) and the member for Beaches-Woodbine (Mr. Wardle), had such monumental contributions to make to their particular councils that they had better be left on until the end of their terms and be replaced by election.

There was even some coherence and logic to that, given the fact the government had not provided for a mandatory by-election in these particular cases. There the matter rested, in fact.

It rested there until Aug. 30 when there was suddenly an enormous stirring of the cat among the pigeons over on the other side of the House. It was discovered that another piece of legislation, of which the Attorney General was quite unaware — and of which the then Minister of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs (Mr. McKeough), who, as we know, had quite a number of responsibilities, was unaware — had done the Attorney General's job for him. That was Bill 201, which was the Act to amend the Municipal Act and which happened to say among its various clauses that a member of the legislative assembly was ineligible to hold office on a local council. If he did, then, with the proclamation of Bill 201 his seat would be declared vacant.

It was something which totally escaped the government, Mr. Speaker. There are a number of things which escaped the government, including, I might say, the connection between $50,000 contributions and their propriety as a government. However, not only did this escape the government, but it did so inasmuch that a letter was sent out to members who were affected — I happened to be one of the four who were affected in the assembly — and to the mayors or other officials in the city councils that were concerned. They came from the member for York East.

I wish to place this letter on the record, Mr. Speaker, because I find it an entrancing letter, and I think the Attorney General would find it very interesting as well in view of the Act that he is now putting before the Legislature. Contrary to what the Attorney General has assumed, there was for certain members of that side of the House passage of this Bill 190 some time in May or June of last year. Witness the member for York East's letter addressed to me and dated Aug. 30:

Re: The Legislative Assembly Amendment Act, 1972, I have been advised today [it doesn't say who by] the subject Act has been proclaimed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council and appeared in the Ontario Gazette under date of Aug. 19, 1972.

That is the bill we are considering today.

By the terms of the proclamation the Act has come into force as of July 31, 1972. Pursuant to section 1 of the Act you were deemed to have resigned from the council as of July 31, 1972, and you should, therefore, not attend any meetings of your council on and after that date.

The member for York East wrote me on Aug. 30 to tell me that during the entire previous month I should not attend meetings of my council. He said the same thing to the member for Ottawa South, to the member for Don Mills and to the member for Beaches-Woodbine. It was an instruction, Mr. Speaker, with which it was exceptionally difficult to comply.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Did you give any money back?

Mr. Cassidy: Then in the final phrase in the letter he said that he was taking the liberty of forwarding a copy of this letter to the clerk of my municipality for his records. This same letter went out to spread further confusion, which persisted for about four or five days, before the government actually decided, or found what it had done.

What it had done was, in fact, that the Minister of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs—the former minister, now leaving the House—had pre-empted the job of the Attorney General in a most impolite fashion, and had really left him here to introduce another piece of legislation which, except for the need to tidy up the statute books, needn't be introduced at all.

However, it has been introduced, and I have a few comments to make on it, apart from the confusion which was created by the way of its introduction.

The fact, of course, is, Mr. Speaker, that the bill wasn't passed. The member for York East blew it, the government blew it, and created far more confusion than they needed to. The cabinet could very easily either have decided to go ahead and stated so, or have exempted the relevant sections of Bill 201 until this particular piece of legislation came forward.

There are a couple of principles which I assume lie behind the government's decision to introduce this bill. One is the conflict of interest which may be entailed in a member of the Legislature also being a member of a municipal council. The other is the straight conflict of time which may be entailed if a member happens to be involved in a municipal council with heavy responsibilities, and also intends to be devoting his time to the Legislature.

The question about the conflict of interest is one which is a somewhat difficult philosophical one. It is argued that members here may have conflict of interest with members there. In a general theoretical way it has some validity, but I don't want to dwell on that too much longer. The conflict of time is a much more direct one. I certainly experienced it, and I am certain that the other members experienced it. For that reason alone, this particular bill would be justified.

The question of conflict of interest, though, which is not dealt with directly in the bill in terms of an explanatory note, should really be included in some future amendments to this bill in a much bolder form because the possible conflicts of interest entailed in being on a municipal council are really insignificant compared with the kinds of conflicts of interest which we have seen among members of this legislative assembly over the last couple of months—and which are possible both among cabinet members of this assembly and also among the backbench members of the assembly.

I have just examined the Act and the Act as a whole is virtually silent on the matter except insofar as the entering into contracts between a member of the assembly and the government.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, there have been two very pronounced, regrettable and inexcusable examples of conflicts of interest that have come up over the summer as regards members of this assembly.

In one case, the minister involved—the member for Chatham—had the courage and the sense of responsibility to resign his seat in the cabinet. In the other case, the minister introducing this bill regrettably did not have that sense of responsibility—and he sits there now as living tribute to the ideological and personal principles of the Conservative Party.

It is very regrettable that he, of all the members of the cabinet, should be introducing a bill which seeks, among other things, to regulate a particular kind of conflict of interest that relates to members of the assembly; that is, when they might also be members of a municipal council.

I would hope very much that the minister could say a few words about that and explain why he did not take the honourable course of action, which was chosen by his colleague in the cabinet, and decide that he too would resign his seat—rather than clinging to office with unsatisfying explanations of the order of those we have heard from the Premier (Mr. Davis) today on another matter where conflict of interest and influence on the cabinet is involved. I think that he really should take the first opportunity that is presented to him to explain himself—not only to the public, as he has attempted to do, but also before this Legislature, the body to which he must initially and primarily respond.

I think that with this bill the government ought to bring forward proposals that relate not only to embodying the conflicts-of-interest guidelines which the government has now brought in for cabinet ministers, but that there should also be similar guidelines as far as backbenchers are concerned. This would be done in order to ensure that they are not in a position to vote on matters which may directly affect them in a pecuniary fashion, or that their contact with information that is available to members of the Legislature should not be used in order to allow them to profit—as the Attorney General was about to profit—from actions which are taken or proposed by the government.

This is something which should extend beyond the government and should extend to any member of this Legislature, government and opposition combined.

The guidelines right now are inadequate, it certainly is not enough for the Premier to introduce guidelines for the cabinet and not put them into legislation—and they should extend to the members as well.

I would like to turn back now to this question of conflict of time, which seems to be one of the root causes of the legislation introduced by the minister. The feeling here is that membership of the Toronto or the North York city council, or the Ottawa city council or any other council—even right down to a little village council that meets on one Monday afternoon every month—is incompatible with membership in the Legislature.

It is a principle that we accept. What it means is that the government is saying in this bill that it expects in this particular instance, and one presumes that one can erect that into a more general principle, that the members of the Legislature are here to work full-time on behalf of their constituents and on behalf of the people of the province—and that the kind of diversion of interests and diversion of concern and time entailed in holding municipal office is therefore no longer acceptable. There is too much of a job to be done here with six or seven months a year of sittings; with maybe two or three months of select committees, with all of the work with constituents and with all of the things that I am sure many members have been telling the Camp commission—the heavy burdens they bear as private members or as government ministers.

I haven't seen the same sense of concern by the government about the outside private activities of its backbenchers. I would have thought that at least some guidelines might be erected here, to suggest that backbenchers should, in fact, work full-time or virtually full-time at this job rather than having a whole string of corporation directorships or other little activities which entail most of their attention and allow them to devote only a portion to the Legislature.

However, there is a more particular kind of thing which is directly within the government's control. In amending section 8 of the Act to exclude the possibility of holding municipal office, the government chose to ignore the fact that it itself is responsible for appointing a number of Conservative backbenchers to positions, one would have thought, of substantial responsibility. Whether they are being filled in that vein is another matter but they certainly look like positions of substantial responsibility that come within the appointment of the government.

Some three or four months after I posed the question, we were given the list of members of the Legislature who hold these jobs and it is illuminating. The member for Wellington-Dufferin (Mr. Root) still holds the position on the water resources commission at $15,000 a year plus expenses, including his travelling expenses every time he comes to Toronto, even when the Legislature is in session. The member for Simcoe Centre (Mr. Evans), who has just left the chamber, has $10,000 a year as first vice-chairman of the hydro commission. The member for Ottawa West (Mr. Morrow) gets $6,000 a year on the hospital commission. The member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) $5,000 a year from the Niagara Parks Commission plus—and this was not stated in the return—the use of a very handsome apartment in what must surely be the prime location in all Niagara.

I had the pleasure to be entertained there by Mr. Allan and I was grateful for his hospitality, but at the same time that doesn't change my view that, in principle, he should not have the job. He should not have the perks of a millionaires' club on the borders of the Niagara River, overlooking the two falls, with its own kitchen, its own serving staff, its own billiard room, its own apartment.

This is added to the $5,000 per year plus a commission car at his disposal whenever he wishes it, and the OPP to guide people to and from his headquarters. I presume a budget for entertainment is part of the commission expenses and so on and so forth.

It was great hospitality but he should not have it. The government should not appoint government members or any members for that matter to this kind of position which detract from their prime responsibility in the Legislature.

The member for Hastings (Mr. Rollins) gets $5,000 a year on the St. Lawrence Parks Commission. Perhaps he could enter in the debate to say what kind of private club he enjoys and whether in fact he is doing as well as the member for Haldimand-Norfolk and is able to offer such substantial hospitality.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): He has a lovely house. I have enjoyed it often.

Mr. Cassidy: A lovely house?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): We are going to make the exception on that one.

Mr. Cassidy: The member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer) gets $7,000 a year for the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. The Liquor Licence Board is not covered—you see, he couldn't have that job but the Liquor Control Board is included. Now, surely—

Mr. Lewis: That is in recognition of his capacity.

Mr. Cassidy:—it is a matter of logic, principle—what kind of capacity? Yes! It is a matter of logic and principle that the least the government could do now in a very simple amendment would be to accept that these appointments are as unjustified as the holding of municipal office, which is outlawed in this particular bill.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, there is only one point I wish to make which I think is very serious. I hope the Attorney General will hear me out for the reasons that I will indicate.

We talk about conflict of interest and we are used to the usual conflict of interest—you know, this business of having your hand caught in the till or in the cookie jar. This is regarded as bad and venal and inexcusable, and where such a conflict of interest appears a person should resign or at least declare his conflict and refrain from voting. This is the old kind of conflict of interest: a monetary kind of conflict of interest.

I suggest with great respect there is a different kind of conflict of interest which we do not seem to comprehend or take into consideration. That is a mental conflict of interest, or psychological, or philosophical conflict of interest; a conflict of interest having to do with the expenditure of a person's energy or time, and here I'll get to the point.

In order to be consistent with the federal Election Act, through you to the Attorney General, under the federal Election Act when I decided to run provincially, for reasons that I shan't go into—

Mr. Cassidy: Are they unspeakable then?

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Do.

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, do.

Mr. Givens:—the Act required me to resign as of the date of the official nomination. I suggest to you with great respect that it is not sufficient to say that once the person is elected to this assembly he is no longer deemed to be a member of his local council. It is grossly unfair that a member of a local council should be able to draw his breath and his pay, commit himself mentally and psychologically to seeking office at a different level of government, have that unfair advantage over somebody else and still, to the last moment, be able to retain that option.

Even if he loses, Mr. Speaker, to what is this man committed to? Is he committed to his former council? Is he committed to the higher level? To what is he committed if he loses?

Let me give you another personal example. In the last provincial election that I ran in in York-Forest Hill there were two members of the board of education who ran against me but continued in their jobs and continued their pay. One member had previously attempted to run federally and lost. In the last provincial election he sought to run provincially and lost to me. Now I read in the newspapers he is seeking to run provincially again in the riding of St. George which was just declared to be open today.

This is as good an example as I can think of. I am not doing this for vindictive reasons or for personal reasons but simply to give you an example that it isn't sufficient merely to say that because the fellow is elected to higher office he ceases being a member of the other council. He should have to declare himself from the date of the official nomination.

I would even go so far as to say he should have to declare himself and he should have to resign as of the date he is nominated by a nominating convention. Perhaps there would be unfair aspects to that, because sometimes a person is nominated six months in advance, or a year in advance, and then devotes himself and dedicates himself to this new election, this new aspiration that he has.

I say with great respect, sir, that this is wrong from every respect, and that this section should be amended to be consistent with the federal Election Act requirement, because the minute a person decides on his option that he wishes to seek a different kind of office, he should have to vacate the position that he holds.

It is unfair, and definitely a monetary conflict of interest, for this person to aspire to the higher office, go out canvassing, go out campaigning, get his literature ready and be subsidized out of the public purse when he has already made up his mind and made up his sense of commitment that he doesn't choose to serve in the capacity to which the people have elected him.

It is a free country and he can have that option. He can have that option, but in all fairness to the people who have elected him and to the people who may elect him to the other office, he should shave or get out of the bathroom and make up his mind at the time that he chooses to do this—namely, when he is officially nominated as a candidate.

Mr. Speaker, if the Attorney General doesn't choose to make this amendment which I implore him he should—I'm not interested in scuttlebutt or muck-raking or anything like that; I think this should be consistent with federal policy, which I think is right and I think the Attorney General will agree with me, within the inner interstices of his whole conscience, that this is a wrong principle to persist and that he should change it—if he doesn't change it I will then move an amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Any further members wish to speak to this bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, for sake of clarification I will be moving an amendment when this bill goes to committee in reference to one section. I would want to advise the members of that at this point.

I don't agree with the hon. member for York-Forest Hill in reference to the points he raised. He has been in the federal House and hence he has had the experience of being required to resign his seat in the House of Commons to contest an election to come to the Legislature. On the other hand I think we should encourage people if they seek office at a higher or different level.

But, we all recognize that with the pressures on us as members of the House and the time required to serve and adequately cover the work in this House and to meet the requirements of our constituents, we cannot properly serve both on a municipal council and in this Legislature. This is a full-time job, as I am sure the committee studying the function of the member and the work of the Legislature admirably is finding out.

For that reason, I think it wise that we should pass a law which prevents members from holding both a municipal office and a seat in the Legislature of this province. The Municipal Act that was passed provided the converse of that. It prevented a person from continuing to hold a municipal office. This bill prevents a person from holding a legislative office.

The amendment that I will bring forward is in reference to section 2. It disqualifies members of the assembly from being members of a municipal council and makes it clear that when a person holding municipal office is elected as a member of the assembly he may continue to hold municipal office until a recount has been held and until the final result is published in the Ontario Gazette. Then, as of that day, he is deemed to cease to be a member of the council.

I think that this bill should receive the support of all members of this House, and to clarify a situation that has perhaps caused difficulty for some in the past in the allocation of their time and responsibilities as between two elected offices.

Mr. Cassidy: Tell us about the member for Hastings.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the minister a question. It would appear to me that he missed the point of the suggestion that I made entirely.

Mr. Cassidy: He missed a lot of points there.

Mr. Givens: I do not object that this should be so, that one can't hold two elected offices. I'm suggesting that the member, in seeking what the minister calls a higher office, should be required to resign his other office at the time that he's nominated. What objection has the minister got to that?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I dealt with that point. I realize that if a member of this House, as, for example, the former member for St. George wished to aspire to higher office in the federal field, and he aspired with success, he had to resign before he could be officially nominated. But I do not see—

Mr. Givens: Why doesn't the minister do it this way from municipal to legislative?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Now—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The member is conducting a debate.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I think that there are many things we do here wherein we do not need to copy the federal people on. As it stands today, if a person wishes to run in a provincial election he may do so. If he is elected then he serves here, but he cannot serve at the same time on the municipal council.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, if I may put a question to the minister, would that be permitted?

Mr. Speaker: Will the minister accept an extra question?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I think we have dealt with the matter, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I beg your pardon?

Hon. Mr. Bales: We have dealt with this bill.

Mr. Cassidy: The minister answered the hon. member for York-Forest Hill and he didn't answer my question.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Calculated evasion.

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, that's right.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Do I understand that this bill is to be referred to committee of the whole?

Hon. Mr. Bales: To committee of the whole.

Mr. Speaker: So ordered.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I am prepared if you wish to—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the House, the minister is prepared to deal with it in committee now.

Clerk of the House: The third order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. G. Hodgson in the chair.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

House in committee on Bill 190, An Act to amend the Legislative Assembly Act.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Chairman, I move that subsection 2 of section 8(a) of the Act, as set out in section 1 of the bill, be struck out and that the following be substituted therefor:

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, there is another amendment on the—

Mr. Chairman: Subsection 1?

Mr. Renwick: On subsection 1.

Mr. Chairman: Could I see that?

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Yes, I have the amendment here, Mr. Chairman. I just wanted to speak to it briefly as well. The amendment is to add at the end of subsection—

Hon. Mr. Bales: May I present this amendment?

Mr. Cassidy: By all means.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Subsection 2:

Every person who is elected a member of the assembly while holding an office referred to in subsection 1 may continue to hold such office, notwithstanding any other Act, until the end of the day on which the return of the election of such person to the assembly is published in the Ontario Gazette, under section 127 of the Election Act, at which time he shall be deemed to have resigned such office.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Bales moves that subsection 2 of of section 8(a) of the Act as set out in section 1 of the bill be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

Every person who is elected a member of the assembly while holding an office referred to in subsection 1 may continue to hold such office, notwithstanding any other Act, until the end of the day on which the return of the election of such person to the assembly is published in the Ontario Gazette, under section 127 of the Election Act, at which time he shall be deemed to have resigned such office.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Chairman, I would like to move a sub-amendment which I have just scrawled out now, which is that subsection 2 shall be deleted and in lieu thereof I offer the following subamendment:

That every person who is nominated to seek office as a member of the assembly while holding an office referred to in subsection 1 shall be deemed to have resigned his office as of the date of his official nomination.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Very good, very sensible!

Hon. Mr. Bales: That is contrary to the principle in the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, since the minister has raised that point of order I would like to express our view on the point that he has put forward.

Surely the principle of the bill is that one cannot hold both offices simultaneously? Our amendment simply changes the time at which the resignation would deem to have been effective. Surely that is not the principle but the practice of the principle?

Mr. Givens: Mr. Chairman, what I am asking is that—and we have this example—just as the former Minister of Justice I think his title was at that time, had to resign in order to seek federal office, any person who is a member of the Toronto city council and the Metro council, for instance, should have to resign on the date of his official nomination if he chooses to run for the Legislature. He shouldn't be subsidized by people of another jurisdiction when he has other personal ambitions. I see nothing wrong with that or inconsistent with that. I think it is only just and equitable.

Mr. Chairman: Having heard the amendment, all those in favour?

Mr. Singer: Could I talk to the amendment?

Mr. Chairman: Yes, the sub-amendment?

Mr. Singer: The sub-amendment put by my colleague for York-Forest Hill.

I think what he says makes the whole position very clear. It makes great good sense. Really, what he is saying in effect is, let the ambitious person put up or shut up; if he holds a position and decides he wants to seek another one surely he shouldn't be able to carry on in the first one.

Now, if the government means what it has said insofar as what has happened before, then the government should gladly accept the sensible amendment advanced by my colleague for York-Forest Hill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I am trying to recall, Mr. Chairman, if I may, to the time when the hon. member for Downsview ran for this House—

Mr. Singer: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —and I think you served—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): That glorious day.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —and continued to serve, as the reeve of North York until the end of your term; and then you quite properly and sensibly did not run again.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, since the hon. Attorney General has chosen to incorrectly state certain facts, let me draw these facts to his attention.

I was elected to be the reeve of the township of North York in the elections in the late fall of 1956. I served in that capacity during the years 1957 and 1958. There was a provincial election in the summer of 1959; I contested no municipal office during that period. When I ran to be the member for York Centre, as it was called at that time, I did not hold any municipal office.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I accept that. It refreshes my memory and I retract what I said about when he ran.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Recognizing, Mr. Chairman, that the Attorney General had his tongue somewhat in his cheek, he still has neglected, purposely or otherwise, to answer the focal point that the member for York-Forest Hill put to him; that is, that he sees an undue advantage, philosophically—perhaps also monetarily, as he says—in an incumbent minor politician running for that office. And he says it concerns him that there isn't that true equation in the adventure to seek the office of a member of this assembly. That is what he is saying.

He is saying, in effect, as I understand it, that alderman so-and-so can continue with the appellation alderman so-and-so before the public when he seeks office here. He says that's unfair. He says it's not right.

He says, secondly, that the people elected alderman so-and-so to devote his energies in that connection, not to devote his energies to seek this office. And he says that's unfair.

He says, thirdly, that the people are paying the alderman to devote his energies to that particular office and he is not doing so. He says that's unfair.

Those are the points that were made by my colleague, every one of which the Attorney General seemed to dismiss out of hand. In a point of fact, the minister hasn't even refuted them. What the minister is saying in response to him is, "I don't like the federal system."

An hon. member: That's right!

Mr. Bullbrook: That's no answer at all.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I did not say that.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, perhaps I misunderstood the minister. Perhaps the Attorney General will refute, logically, each one of those three points.

Hon. Mr. Bales: What I said to the member is that I think the elected persons at the municipal level, or perhaps at the level of school boards or other boards or commissions, should be encouraged to stand for higher or different office if they see fit. We all agree on that.

Mr. Bullbrook: So should anyone.

Mr. Singer: Any qualified person should.

Hon. Mr. Bales: But I believe, and the government believes, that they should not hold two elective offices at the same time and continue in both capacities because the demands today are too great.

But I do not agree that, for the short space of time required for a provincial election in this province, it is unfair for a person to hold his municipal office until he is declared elected and the result is printed in the Ontario Gazette, and then he must vacate his other post.

We have had, in my view, other instances where persons have attempted to carry out their responsibilities at two levels of government over a protracted period of time, and it is not satisfactory now and it doesn't—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Givens: That is not what we are talking about, Mr. Chairman. Doesn't that give a man an enormous advantage over a new person? Can't the minister see that?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Just a minute. Would the member sit down?

Mr. Givens: The minister is not answering the question.

Hon. Mr. Bales: This amendment is going to cause unnecessary by-elections or vacancies in these situations. The principle is acceptable to those in the member's party and in mine: that a man, when elected, should not hold two elective offices at the same time.

Mr. Bullbrook: But, Mr. Chairman, if you follow the logic of what the Attorney General said, it is about as specious an argument as I've heard in a long time when he says that we might create by-elections as a result of the amendment.

If we follow the logic of what he is saying, then there is great validity in saying, in point of fact, that my colleague from York-Forest Hill should not have had to resign his federal seat until he was elected to this House, because it created a by-election whether he was elected as a member of this House or not.

I say most respectfully to the Attorney General that he is not answering the question at all. He is saying in effect that the total purpose of this is that people don't hold two offices at the same time. The enlargement put forward by my colleague is superimposed. He says that isn't the only purpose of this type of legislation. The purpose of this type of legislation is not only that, but also to make sure that there isn't any undue advantage to one person aspiring to office over another—and you don't meet that with any logical resistance at all.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Chairman, we are going to support the amendment. This being a sub-amendment to an amendment introduced by the minister, I don't really want to introduce a third one; that would really be getting ridiculous.

However I would say this, that our feeling is that the degree to which the amendment from the hon. member goes is probably a bit extreme in order to cure the abuse or the evil of which he talks. That in fact the problem of which he talks is the fact that municipal councillors, particularly those in the larger municipalities where they are relatively well paid, do enjoy an advantage. Part of the advantage is having the freedom to campaign and knowing that that salary continues—and it seemed to me from his speech that that was the main thing he was saying. In fact, I would like to see the minister exercise that flexibility for which he is so noted, and particularly in principles such as those I outlined before, and accept an amendment which in fact would—

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Flexibility? I hadn't realized that!

Mr. Cassidy: Oh yes, the most flexible of men; yes!

Mr. Lawlor: Well, well!

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, yes!

Mr. Lawlor: I will sit around and wait.

Mr. Cassidy: I would like to see him accept an amendment which simply stated that any member of a municipal council or other municipal body who accepted nomination would not be entitled to his municipal salary for a period of two weeks after and two weeks before the date of official nomination—and that would be a total of four weeks. The fact that Mr. Lowes, or someone else, might be campaigning for five or six months beforehand is something over which, I suggest, there is very little control either in this legislation or in the proposal, the amendment, of the Liberal Party.

However, the specific point about a certain financial handicap—or at least financial equalization—that might take place, is a valid one. One might, for example, think of the member for Ottawa South (Mr. Bennett), who during the time that he was the official candidate for the Conservative Party for that seat, drew a municipal salary of approximately $12,000 and was able to campaign while drawing that kind of salary.

So we will vote for this amendment with the hope that the minister, exercising the kind of flexibility he exercised during the summer, would also be able to accept an amendment along the lines that we suggest.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Chairman, may I just have one word—a point that I am being questioned on—and that is the nomination day that I stipulated in the sub-amendment is the official nomination day; that is where you file your official papers under the Act, not the party nomination.

Mr. Chairman: The member for York-Forest Hill has moved a sub-amendment to subsection 2 of section 1 of the Act stating:

Every person who is nominated to hold office as a member of the assembly, while holding an office referred to in subsection 1, shall be deemed to have resigned as of the date of this office nomination.

Mr. Singer: There is only one that the law recognizes.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of the sub-amendment will please say "aye."

All those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Call in the members.

The committee divided on the sub-amendment, which was negated on the following vote.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the "ayes" are 23, the "nays" 68.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the sub-amendment lost.

Hon. Mr. Bales has moved that subsection 2 of section 8(a) of the Act as set out in subsection 1 of the bill be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

Every person who is elected a member of the assembly while holding an office referred to in subsection 1 may continue to hold such office, notwithstanding any other Act, until the end of the day in which the return of the election of such person to the assembly is published in the Ontario Gazette under section 127 of the Election Act, at which time he shall be deemed to have resigned such office.

All those in favour, please say "aye."

All those opposed, please say "nay."

I declare the motion carried.

The member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: I wish to move another amendment since by agreement the minister's amendment would come first. It is that clause 1 of Bill 190 be amended by adding at the end of subsection 1 of section 8 (a) the words "or as a member of any board, commission or other body established by any Act of this Legislature for which remuneration by way of salary is paid."

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): They are out to get you, Wally.

Mr. Cassidy: The intent of that amendment is simply to carry out with some consistency and coherence this statement that the minister made during the debate on the previous sub-amendment. That is, that a man should not hold two jobs at the same time insofar as it is within the control of this Legislature.

That principle is adopted here. The minister has very explicitly stated the principle and I really can see no way in which the government could oppose itself to the principle that, insofar as it is within control of the Legislature, a member of the Legislature should not hold more than one job.

Mr. Deans: Right!

Mr. Cassidy: The Act does make exceptions of members of the cabinet. Obviously, in that case their jobs as members of the cabinet is an integral part of their role as members of the legislative assembly. However, it is impossible to see how a position on one of the parks commissions or the Hospital Commission or the Hydro-Electric Commission or the Liquor Control Board or the other agencies, boards and commissions on which government members are put at substantial remuneration, substantial prerequisites and this sort of thing, is in any way defensible under the principle that the government has enunciated through the words of the Attorney General. That is, that a man—a member of this legislative assembly rather—should not hold more than one job. I would hope very much that the minister would respond to this seeing as he did not do so during the debate on second reading.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Chairman, what I said was that you should not hold two elective jobs at the same time.

Mr. Cassidy: That is splitting hairs, Mr. Minister. In other words—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: The words you used were a man should not hold more than one job.

However, you have now qualified it in order to seek safe ground, in order to defend the patronage of which your party is guilty; and it is patronage, Mr. Minister.

An hon. member: Come on!

Mr. Cassidy: Pure and simple patronage!

Mr. Deans: Absolutely!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: It is a reward, Mr. Chairman, which is given to members of the party. They are given these little promises. They are told

“It is all right; we will take care of you with $5,000, $10,000, $15,000 a year, free cars—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Which one is that? Which board is that?

Mr. Cassidy: The Niagara Parks Commission has a free car at its disposal at any point in time. The St. Lawrence Parks Commission as well.

Mr. Chairman: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: Travelling expenses, hotel expenses! All these things you are guilty of, Mr. Minister.

Mr. Deans: Absolutely.

Mr. A. Carruthers (Durham): We won't support that.

Mr. Cassidy: I don't see how you can support that in any way. It is pure and simple patronage. If you feel these people are under-rewarded you have two courses of action. You can go to Fidinam and you can get some contributions from Fidinam for their expenses, or you can do something about the emoluments of the members of the Legislature, which would apply to all members of the Legislature.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): You know where you can go.

Mr. Cassidy: It is indefensible, Mr. Chairman, that this kind of patronage should continue.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): How about doing this again?

Mr. Cassidy: It is indefensible that members of this Legislature who are asked to vote on legislation—and the Act states very specifically as a general principle—let me just read it—

An hon. member: Can he read?

Mr. Cassidy: It says:

No person accepting or holding any office, commission or employment in the service of the government of Canada or the government of Ontario at the nomination of the Crown or the nomination of any of the officers of the government of Canada or the government of Ontario to which any salary, fee, wage [and so on] emolument is attached is eligible as a member of the assembly or shall sit or vote therein.

That is the principle that the minister is breaching by refusing to accept this amendment.

Mr. Deans: Absolutely.

Mr. Cassidy: If he states as a principle that a man should not hold two elective offices, I urge him to read section 8 of the Act, because the principle of not taking paid employment with the government is there too. I ask, Mr. Chairman, how can the member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer) for example, vote on liquor legislation before this House when he is directly implicated as a member of the Liquor Control Board? How can the member for Ottawa West (Mr. Morrow) vote on hospital legislation when he is a member of the Hospital Commission—or when he was a member of the Hospital Commission.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): He had better abstain then.

Mr. Cassidy: And you can raise the question on every one of the members who enjoy this kind of patronage which is dished out by the Conservative Party to its members. Perhaps the minister can give us a more adequate response.

Mr. Stokes: You're featherbedding.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just before the minister replies, Mr. Chairman, if you will permit me to express a view on this matter.

I believe that the hon. member is entirely correct when he states that the Legislative Assembly Act and the customs of the province, until recently, forbade any member of the Legislature taking extra emolument from the Crown for any purpose. I don't know whether the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe can recall, but certainly it was the custom for many years after Confederation, that when a private member was appointed to the cabinet he had to resign his seat, seek re-election by way of a by-election, before he could take the extra indemnity associated with a job in the cabinet.

I believe that the point made by the hon. member for Ottawa Centre is correct. Certainly the practice here has developed into the grossest sort of pork barrel where 95 per cent of the members opposite, if they don't get an appointment to the cabinet get an appointment to something which gives them access not only to extra indemnity, but to many of the emoluments which we just find out about occasionally. That is access to cars and planes and other facilities; I suppose even a private car on the railway from time to time.

Mr. Chairman, I think the matter that has been brought forward is an important one. I think part of the fact that it is a conflict of interest to those members opposite is that most of them are in receipt of this entire indemnity and it will be a conflict of interest when they vote against the amendment that has been brought forward. We, on our part, will support it.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Hastings.

Mr. C. T. Rollins (Hastings): Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Ottawa South made a statement that there was a car furnished for the chairman of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission. This is not only—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: No, he didn't.

Mr. Stokes: Niagara Parks.

Mr. Rollins: He said St. Lawrence too.

Mr. Cassidy: I said you probably did. I didn't say it categorically.

Mr. Rollins: Well half way; flip flop!

Your erroneous impression was that there is a car furnished. I want to clarify that so that it won't go any further than Hansard, and you can check it out tomorrow. I listened very carefully to his statement and I also want to say to him and his fellow members, that when he has asked for the use of the guest house of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, he was granted this, and his leader, and his members over here, and it was a pleasure for me to do it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rollins: If that is a conflict of interest—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Should it be reserved for you and your colleagues?

Mr. Rollins: I would be glad to change my—

Mr. Cassidy: Nobody on this side makes $5,000 a year.

Mr. Rollins: I have a little note in my pocket that was sent over a few moments ago during the discussion of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission and the use of it, and both opposition parties have possibly used it more than the Conservative members on this side.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Rollins: If this is your feeling—and you take the car—

You check your Hansard, the hon. member from Ottawa South; you said a car.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Mr. Chairman, not ever having used that house, I am free and have no conflict of interest in speaking about it. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that there is all the difference in the world between the payment of a salary, which is the issue we are talking about, and a facility which is used by all members on occasion.

Do you want it only for the Tories? Is that what you are arguing?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Is that what you are arguing? You are arguing that it should be wholly for the Tories; just as, for example, the planes are going to be only for the cabinet, but now we discover it goes to the Tory bagman?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Shame!

Mr. MacDonald: Is that what you are arguing?

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury): The Tory organizer!

Mr. MacDonald: That's what you're arguing, is it? Okay!

Mr. Martel: The Tory organizer!

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Chairman, let's get it on the record, that's what they're arguing. They want it just for themselves. In addition to the $5,000 extra salary, they want all these little perks just for themselves.

Mr. Deans: How do you go about getting the guest house?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I won't be asking to use the guest house at the St. Lawrence Park again this year.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Order. The member for Ottawa Centre moves that clause 1 of Bill 190—yes?

Mr. Cassidy: I did ask the minister for a reply. He is being notably silent. Possibly you might give him an opportunity—

Mr. Chairman: He has replied.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The main point is, as I said before, that I think it inappropriate for people to try to hold two elective offices in two different areas at the same time. It is too great a responsibility to do a good job in both spheres simultaneously.

As for the matters of the commission, and so on, they're emanations of the House, they're part of the work of the House. In that regard they are really working in that respect.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Like a select committee.

Mr. Cassidy: You support speculation and patronage, is that right?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre moves that clause 1 of Bill 190 be amended by adding at the end of subsection 1 of section 8(a) the words:

“or as a member of any board, commission or other body established by any Act of this Legislature for which remuneration by way of salary is paid.”

Those in favour will please say “aye.”

Those opposed will please say “nay.”

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): The “ayes” have it!

Mr. Chairman: In my opinion, the “ayes” have it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Give him a chance to correct himself.

Mr. Givens: It proves you are not all bad.

Mr. Chairman: If they want to stay silent over there, that's up to them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Chairman: Call in the members.

The committee divided on the amendment, which was negatived on the following vote.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the “ayes” are 32; the “nays” 58.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion lost and subsection 1 carried.

Subsection 1 to 3 of 8 (a) inclusive, carried.

Shall the bill be reported?

Mr. Lewis: Not even two to one.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the bill be reported?

Bill 190, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Order, please!

Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill with certain amendments and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Order 17.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Aha. Now we see the split!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

WOLF AND BEAR BOUNTY ACT

Hon. Mr. Bernier moves second reading of Bill 219, an Act to repeal the Wolf and Bear Bounty Act.

The member for Rainy River.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I just have a few comments to make on this bill. It is almost with a note of regret and sadness that I rise to speak about this because I recall, in years gone by, that this debate particularly used to call forth a great deal of emotion on both sides of the House. Some members, particularly those opposite, some who we thought were not really allied but stopped and didn't take part in the debate, would straggle to their feet and give their opinion on the wolf bounty question.

I think that the minister, is solving part of the problem by bringing in the other bill to go along with this which will reimburse farmers for any sheep, cattle or whatever, harmed or killed by wolves and bears. I think that this will solve part of the problem in that regard.

I think I should, however, Mr. Speaker, bring to the attention of the House—

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): My moose was killed last week though. How do I get reimbursed?

Mr. Reid: —the concern of many people in my area, particularly the trappers who feel that they are going to lose a fairly substantial part of their income in not being allowed to bring in their wolfskins particularly and be paid the $25 bounty.

We all know—it has been proven over the years—that the bounty in itself has not solved the wolf problem as far as predation goes. However, the trappers have made a substantial amount of money, according to their income, in trapping wolves and bringing the skins into the Department of Lands and Forests or the Department of Natural Resources as it is now.

I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if I may put a question to the minister in this regard, if he has considered the question of allowing trappers to continue trapping wolves and also paying them a bounty, perhaps under the other Act, or amending this one, which would still allow the registered trappers to continue trapping wolves and be paid the bounty and so retain a large part of their income?

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Cochrane South.

Mr. Ferrier: We are going to support this bill. We feel that it is certainly a proper step for the minister to take.

I must disagree with the member for Rainy River. Perhaps things are different in his part of the country than they are in mine, but having talked to the fish and wildlife people in my area, they said that there are so few trappers and people who were collecting this bounty that it was certainly not going to interfere in any significant way with the amount of money that they were bringing in.

We did have the quite interesting spectacle, when the minister's estimates were up last spring, of members of his party taking him to task for even contemplating the changing of this legislation to remove the wolf bounty. There has been no indication in this legislation that the open season on wolves is being taken off. I know from a circular that went out from members of the Queen's University faculty of education, who had made a study of this, they were wondering if it might be that the ministry was going to put certain seasons on the hunting of the wolves.

Mr. Martel: Only two-legged ones.

Mr. Ferrier: There had better be no season on those. As long as the open season is there and there are very few people getting any money from the wolf bounty, what is the advantage of having it? Why was all the emotion generated over it?

I suppose there is always the possibility, if the wolves got out of hand, of having predator control through the regulations of the Fish and Game Act. I am also told by biologists in the minister's department that the wolves themselves have a way of controlling the number of offspring and their own population, so that they never get wildly out of hand.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Better than people.

Mr. Ferrier: Maybe those of us in the human race who are concerned about—

Mr. Martel: Prolific.

Mr. Ferrier:—overpopulation could learn a few things from the wolves.

Mr. Lewis: This is not official party policy.

Mr. Ferrier: At any rate, there is accompanying legislation that if farm animals are destroyed by wolves there is a means whereby a hearing can be held and the farmer compensated for the loss to his particular animal. So I think that personally I would have to say that the minister has introduced some very sensible legislation—

Mr. Martel: That is something new.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Nice to see. So ideological.

Mr. Ferrier:—something that at least I am prepared to support.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this? The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): What about the member for Renfrew South (Mr. Yakabuski)? Is he going to speak on it?

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): What about the member for Prince Edward-Lennox (Mr. Taylor)? Where has he gone?

Mr. Foulds: I, too, am in favour of the bill, but I am very disappointed that in the accompanying legislation the minister did not also make a provision for the loss that trappers suffer to animals caught in their traps. It is not merely the value the trapper loses from the wolf skin or from the bounty that is causing concern amongst the trappers; it is that a part of their legitimate trapping income caught in traps is destroyed by the wolves.

If the ministry can make provision for live-stock, ranging from chickens to cattle, in Bill 220, I see no reason why the minister can't bring in accompanying legislation covering the loss that trappers suffer because of wolves. I think that something along the lines of section 2, subsection 3, clause f, where you put a limit on the total amount for the season, would be acceptable. Thank you very much.

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Renfrew South.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): This is the first time he has spoken this year.

Mr. Yakabuski: I think, Mr. Speaker, it would not be in order if no one from this side of the House participated at this time. Perhaps there are others about to, but I hadn't seen them indicate so up to this point.

Mr. Cassidy: It doesn't happen that often.

Mr. Reid: Not by the time he is finished.

Mr. Yakabuski: I feel, Mr. Speaker, that I must be consistent and be opposed to Bill 219—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Of course, that is not required on their side of the House.

Mr. Yakabuski:—because over the past eight years I have opposed the wolf programmes of the then Department of Lands and Forests, and certainly I have not been happy with the predator control programmes that have been put into being up to this point.

As a matter of fact, if the predator control programme had been brought along as the minister indicated to us last spring, perhaps I could even see fit to vote for this bill; but certainly no predator control programme has been developed in either the Pembroke or Tweed forest districts.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the wolf problem has worsened in the past two years rather than improved. Certainly at the present rate we will have not only the farm people plagued more and more each year, but also there is very little left of a diminishing deer herd.

Now let me make my position clear. I am not a hunter. I do feel that the wolf has, and will always have, a place in the scheme of things. But I think if I have to make a choice, I will have to vote in favour of the preservation of the deer herd.

Only the other day one of the ministers of this government was in my area and we had the occasion to be in a school where one of the ladies was carding and spinning wool, and he asked where she got the wool. Well, she said "I bought this wool; we don't raise sheep any more."

That gives you an indication of what has happened in many parts of this province where sheep raising was a sizable part of the farm industry just a few years ago. People will not now raise sheep.

Again this fall there have been more and more of the farm areas plagued by the wolf, which is becoming much more numerous than it was even five or six years ago when this was an even more controversial matter than it is today.

I have to vote against Bill 219 for that reason. I am happy that the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) is introducing a bill, or has introduced a bill, that will perhaps lessen the problem to some degree in the farm areas whereby farmers will be compensated for poultry, livestock, etc., that have been killed by wolves. But I don't—really, I am not speaking on that bill now—but I don't think that goes far enough, because there is an awful lot of work that the farmer has done over a great many years that could be destroyed in one raid by a wolf or a wolf pack.

In a way I feel a bit sorry for the minister, because if I understand the situation properly this originally was a budgetary decision with which the minister must live. And I want to say at this time that I don't approve of budgetary items that affect the affairs of one department of government or the other that have not been approved by the minister or his staff before they go into the budget. I don't think a minister should be put in this position. It isn't the first time. A minister should not be put in the position whereby he has to defend or live with something that has been thrust upon him even perhaps by people outside of government.

Again, I want to say that another province adjacent to ours some two years ago, on the advice of the experts and the biologists, did do away with the wolf bounty; and if I understand the situation correctly at this given time and point—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): It would be a miracle.

Mr. Yakabuski:—I think they regret that decision very, very much. They have had an organized wolf hunt over there not so many weeks ago because the problem is increasing considerably. I think if they had to do the thing over again they would not do away with the bounty. I wouldn't be surprised if in the coming years the Quebec National Assembly will again vote to restore the wolf bounty in that province. Certainly, if this bill is going to pass I'm not going to help it pass, I'll tell the members that!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Yakabuski: If this bill is passed, I think the department is going to have to take some real positive measures in the management of wildlife in this province. I recall and many of us do—

Mr. Deans: That's a positive suggestion.

Mr. Yakabuski:—that during and immediately following World War II in Germany the wildlife of the country was slaughtered in a wholesale fashion. As a matter of fact, as the saying went, everything that moved was shot. Immediately following the war when great reconstruction was taking place in that nation they developed a wildlife management policy that I think the rest of the world can look at with some envy. My information is that wildlife is again very plentiful in West Germany and that the deer herds have increased to such a great degree that thousands of deer were killed on the highways in West Germany in 1971.

Mr. Martel: That is called planning, something this government—

Mr. Yakabuski: Again, I want to say that if this motion is to pass we are going to have to have a positive wildlife management programme. We are going to have to have a predator control programme with some teeth in it.

We have been told we have a predator control programme and only a couple of weeks ago a farmer in my area was plagued by wolves raiding his stock. He took it up with the conservation officer in the area who, in turn, took it up with his district and he was told to go out and engage an assistant to do some predator control work.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Yakabuski: The assistant was about to commence his duties on the following Monday and he was advised, "Sorry, we will not be able to take you on because we have no funds for this project". Certainly, if forest districts like Pembroke and Tweed, where the wolf problem has increased by—

Mr. Lewis: Leaps and bounds.

Mr. Yakabuski: —an awful lot in the last couple of years, don't have funds for a predator control programme such as the minister has been telling us he has for the last two years, then the situation has reached disastrous proportions.

Mr. Martel: The predator control office is in the Timmins area.

Mr. Yakabuski: With that, Mr. Speaker, again I have to say that I have to stand up and be counted to vote against Bill 219.

Mr. Lewis: It is a matter of conscience for the member.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to participate?

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Like the member for Renfrew South I have to be consistent.

An hon. member: The other half of the pack.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I do want to say to you that there is a far better list of measures on the order paper than there originally was, and that is the bill for the payment of damages caused to livestock by wolves.

I am still not very happy with the situation when you say wolves, because in my area there aren't any wolves. My area has a hybrid; it is part dog. Forty-two of them were bountied last year in the Lindsay district. I still regret that the Ministry of Natural Resources does not have a predator control programme worthy of note.

I had a lady call me the other day to say that her sheep over at Wilberforce, Ont., a breeding stock that she had raised for years, were literally destroyed. We have in the hunting season throughout our area people shooting these hybrids as wolves.

I do think that the department has to manage predators. You know, we were in Sweden recently and we saw deer in the fields just on the outskirts of the city as we went by in buses from the airport into Stockholm. In West Germany, where they don't have any predators, they even export venison. In New Zealand, where they don't have any predators, they export venison. I think the interesting thing is that here in Ontario it seems to me that we enhance the people who suggest that things be destroyed.

In Parry Sound we have closed part of the deer hunting area simply because there are not any deer there, and that is under the management of this department. Today in Algonquin Park, and it is there for anyone to see, even the biologists of this province now are convinced that there are too many beaver there, that they took the wrong policy in stopping the catching of beaver there some years ago on the advice of the department biologists. This year, in hunting season or prior to it, the department issued a statement here in Toronto and one was issued by the Lindsay district game and fish people. They were in direct contradiction to one another. So what are the people in the country supposed to do when the department isn't even together on the statements that are issued?

I do think that we are short-changed by not having a management programme of predator control. I do think that doing away with the bounty on wolves without adequate measures is a mistake, and I also think that the department has come a long way to recognize what the situation is.

We have the member for Oshawa (Mr. McIlveen) here. One of the most favoured sports today on the outskirts of Oshawa is hunting wolves with dogs. That was an almost unheard of thing a few years ago. You have wolves in eastern Ontario and wolves in western Ontario. All came within the last 10 or 15 years under this department's management programme, so I think that—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: It sounds as though Oshawa people are going to the wolves!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I would like to see the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. R. F. Nixon) say something on this issue, because I think there are wolves down his way. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to participate?

Mr. J. Lane (Algoma-Manitoulin): Mr. Speaker, I too am against discontinuing the wolf bounty, or at least I was until I saw what bills were on the order paper, particularly a bill to repay farmers for the loss of livestock. In my discussion with the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier) I understand that in areas where wolves become a problem there will be a method used, if necessary, where hunters who are capable of hunting wolves will be hired to do the job for us. If this is the case I am prepared to support the motion, and if it not the case then I will have to vote against it.

Mr. Deans: How are you going to tell?

Mr. Martel: Remember the bear problem—

Mr. Speaker: Any other members?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Gilbertson: If the members over there in the opposition will be quiet for a little while and give me an opportunity to express the feelings of the people, or I would say the majority of the people, in my riding of Algoma, I would be remiss if I didn't get up and express the sentiments, the feelings of the people in my riding pertaining to this bill.

Now, there is one thing. I notice that the minister has made some provision for farmers who are losing animals to the wolves. I think this is an improvement, but a lot of the flak that I get in my area is over what the wolves are doing to the deer population. I think this is the most important issue now facing us, and I feel that even if this bill does go through, I don't think it'll be too many years before there'll be another bill put through to put the wolf bounty back on.

Mr. Deans: It's inconsistency on the government's part.

An hon. member: They're a bunch of predators over there.

Mr. Gilbertson: I think the ones who can speak most intelligently on this bill are those who are affected by it.

An hon. member: The wolves themselves!

Mr. Deans: The deer!

Mr. Gilbertson: So, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Foulds: We have a St. Francis in our midst.

Mr. Gilbertson: —I think the minister understands very well the flak that there would be from ridings like mine—

Mr. Cassidy: What about Kenora?

Mr. Gilbertson: —or those of the member for Victoria-Haliburton, the member for Renfrew South and similar areas. We have the same type of conditions. In my area there are snowmobile clubs that go out in the winter and help to feed deer in places where the snow gets too deep. They have told me about finding wolf carcasses here and there; on some of the islands in the North Channel all they have to do is go out in the winter and they see deer carcasses on the ice.

Mr. Deans: I've had a lot of complaints about some irresponsible snowmobile clubs too.

Mr. Gilbertson: They can count 10 or 15 deer carcasses without any trouble; they find them lying out on the ice where the wolves have chased the deer, and caught them. I want the minister to be aware that this is the situation in the riding of Algoma.

Mr. Deans: Is the hon. member voting against the bill?

Mr. Gilbertson: I'm not speaking for myself; it doesn't matter that much to me. I'm thinking of the farmers who have gone out of sheep entirely on St. Joseph's Island where I live. I doubt whether you will find any more than two or three sheep herds there now. Practically every farmer used to have a herd, but they've had to go out of sheep on account of the wolves. That's what I would like to bring to the attention of the minister.

Mr. Deans: But the bounty is still on.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to debate the bill?

Mr. Lewis: The hon. member for Oshawa will want to speak.

Mr. Speaker: If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. If I may reply to the comments of the various members who participated and those who are supporting this bill, I certainly extend my appreciation to them.

I would start with the hon. member for Rainy River and point out to him that in the year 1971 we bountied about 90 timber wolves in that particular area, and while he has suggested that we recognize registered trappers as such, I don't think this is the purpose of the bill. We intend to remove the bounty completely and, of course, replace it with the Wolf Damage to Livestock Compensation Act, which we'll be debating at a further point.

He mentioned the tremendous amount of money that was being directed to the trappers and the trapping industry in the Province of Ontario.

In the year 1971, the trappers took 989 wolves out of the total of about 3,300, which shows that it's not a large economic factor. In fact, the farmers of this province took 807 wolves. There you see the difference. I think the actual economic return and the monetary gain to the trapper is really not that high. In fact, the point that is clear to me—and I've been watching it very carefully—is that since the long-haired furs came in, and the demand for long-haired furs became dominant over the short-haired furs—

Mr. Martel: Is the minister getting personal?

An hon. member: Be careful.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No, I'm not referring to any member at all.

An hon. member: He's turning around.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Don't turn around, Elie.

But we have seen the price of the wolf skin rise to $35 and in some cases as high as $45; so with that price for the fur itself and with the bounty at $25, the wolf is getting to be a very attractive fur-bearing animal. However, this did not change the numbers of wolves that were bountied in the Province of Ontario in the past three years. It leads me to believe that the trappers were not really interested in the economic return they were deriving from the bounty itself.

The member for Cochrane South has mentioned his particular area. I would point out to him—and I thank him for his support of this particular bill—that 84 wolves were bountied in the district of Kapuskasing in 1971 and 55 were bountied in the district of Cochrane. It has really not had a big impact in that area and I think he recognizes that. He, of course, has indicated his support for the bill.

The member for Port Arthur has suggested that we consider compensating trappers for the loss of animals in their traps. I think if he gave this some thought he would realize it would be practically impossible to administer because how do we know if it was a weasel or a porcupine or even possibly ravens, if they were around at that particular time? We couldn't define whether or not it was a wolf that ate the carcass. I think we shall just have to discount that suggestion, too.

The member for Renfrew South has expressed his opinions very forcibly. I think he and the member for Victoria-Haliburton expressed their interests very clearly during my estimates last spring. Much of what they have said today has already been repeated but I would say to the members on this side of the House who have expressed a concern with our predator control programme that we will be intensifying this programme tremendously. It is our intention to train additional predator control officers and when a demand is prevalent, when the need is there, we will move in with our predator control officers. If they can't do the job we will engage local help at that particular time and point.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Your top priority should be conservation officers, not predator control officers.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: We will have to use our conservation officers and train them because I think one realizes that to hunt or to trap wolves is a highly technical proposition or employment. I assure members here this afternoon that we will be intensifying our predator control programme and I think that, together with the Wolf Damage to Livestock Compensation Act, we can satisfy the needs, do away with an Act that has outlived its usefulness and go on with the job of maintaining a species in the Province of Ontario and correcting any damage or cost to livestock.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

Mr. Martel: I thought the government members were split on that. The member for Renfrew South should vote against it. I would raise a point of order.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, before moving a motion to adjourn the House, I would like to say to the members that tomorrow, I think at 11.30 a.m., there will be transportation supplied to the Science Centre for the purpose of the presentation there. I would also say that on Thursday, the House should prepare itself for the bills standing on the order paper. I would like to call the bills introduced today by the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells)—I don't know the number—the Secondary Schools Amendment Act. There is some urgency there in this regard.

Mr. Stokes: They won't be printed, will they?

Mr. Martel: They are not even printed.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: They should be here tomorrow, I think.

Mr. Stokes: Will they be printed by tomorrow?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think so. I think that will be sufficient for Thursday.

The companion bill to the one that has just been passed, No. 18 on today's order paper, will be called as well.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5:55 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased to have visitors with us today: In the west gallery, students from Earl Haig Secondary School of Willowdale and students from Holy Cross Separate School in Toronto. In both galleries there are also students from the Georgetown District High School of Georgetown. At 3 o'clock we will be joined, in both galleries, by students from the Fort Erie Secondary School of Fort Erie.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I would like at this time to inform the House that we also have another honoured guest with us today in the person of the Hon. Mrs. Gloria McPhee, the Member for Education and Libraries from Bermuda. She has been here spending a few days viewing our educational institutions and talking to our ministry about teacher-education programmes and the teaching of young people from Bermuda at our teachers' colleges and colleges of education. I knew, sir, that this House would want to welcome Mrs. McPhee here today. She is sitting in the Speaker's gallery.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

PERSONAL REPORTING AGENCIES

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I would like to announce—

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Enjoy it, there won't be many.

Hon. Mr. Clement: My friends across the way have me so choked up with emotion I don't think I will be able to make the statement, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I would like to announce to the House today this government's intention to introduce new legislation to control the storage and supply of personal information for rating purposes.

Mr. Speaker, there are a number of compelling reasons behind the government's decision to move ahead at this time. As all of us are aware, personal information, based not only on fact but also on opinions of individual character and lifestyle, is playing an increasingly important part in the everyday decisions made by many kinds of businesses. As personal information has become easier to store and transfer, its influence has increased with important consequences for the individual concerned.

Along with development of our capacity to manage information, Ontario has also undergone great social changes which have increased the demand for personal information. This province is no longer predominantly based on communities where each man is known personally by his neighbours, his employer and his bank manager.

Personal knowledge of the individual who is interviewed for a job or for credit has been largely sacrificed to our increasing geographical mobility and the vast growth of our cities and businesses. The trend is to rely upon facts and opinions supplied by others. It is because of this trend that personal information has become an important commodity and a major social concern.

Information about us, collected and disseminated by people we have never met, now has, in many instances, the power to determine where we work and how much we can spend.

As a commodity quickly collected and interchanged by hundreds of people, information has often become divorced from the individuals it affects.

It is therefore essential that information on individuals, used for rating persons, be correct and responsibly used.

Mr. Speaker, this government does not doubt that the majority of businesses gathering or using personal information do so responsibly and with proper care. But it only takes one mistake, seriously impairing the life of one person, to establish the need for accountability of personal information management and use.

We are faced with a potentially dangerous situation when personal information, gleaned from unreliable sources and used secretly, can twist a man's life and frustrate his future.

For some people, the results have been disastrous. There are cases in which a man's ability and sense of responsibility have been given less weight than unsubstantiated opinion about his character, the remarks of an irresponsible creditor or the results of a simple clerical error.

The fact is that personal information used for rating purposes is today in some cases nothing other than institutionalized rumour, with influence far in excess of its credibility. Information is too often outdated or available to many people in violation of the right of the individual to privacy. And, worst of all, the individual may not even know what is being said about him and why he is refused the benefits of credit or employment.

The argument has been used that information for rating purposes is very important to today's consumer-oriented economy and that its flow must not be impeded; but if personal information is important, it must then also be accountable for its accuracy and its use. This government and my ministry have considered how personal information systems are to be made accountable and we have concluded that far-reaching legislation is needed. We have concluded that a man's right to establish and protect his own reputation must be entrenched in the law.

Having implemented the McRuer report recommendations, which have resulted in significantly increased personal freedom from arbitrary decisions made by unaccountable bodies, we cannot now fail to remove the power of arbitrary judgement over individuals presently held by people who collect and use personal information. We must place them under the law also.

My ministry, in the drafting of the new legislation, has kept in mind the four following basic rights:

The right of the public to expect responsible conduct from businesses engaged in gathering, storing, assembling or using personal information.

The right of the individual to know what is being reported about him, to whom it is reported, and when.

The right of the individual to correct false information about himself.

The right of the individual to change his lifestyle without persecution from his past.

The legislation which I will introduce this afternoon more than meets these principles. It includes new requirements for consumer reporting agencies—those who furnish consumer reports for gain—and new guidelines as to the use made of consumer reports. The requirements for consumer reporting agencies will include the following:

Every consumer reporting agency will be required to register with my ministry before engaging in business.

A consumer reporting agency will be restricted as to whom it may give access to the information. Persons obtaining information from an agency for unauthorized purposes will be liable to prosecution.

The consumer reporting agency will be required to adopt all reasonable procedures for ensuring the greatest possible accuracy of its consumer reports, including the requirement to note the sources of information. Information will not be permitted in a report unless the evidence it is based upon is corroborated or the lack of corroboration is noted and expressly accompanies the information. Agencies will also be required to make all reasonable efforts to corroborate information in their reports.

Under the new Act, a report will not be permitted to include any information in relation to judgements more than seven years old—including information on criminal convictions—unless it pertains to a judgement which the creditor has confirmed by letter as still unpaid, or as to bankruptcy. In the case of bankruptcy, no information more than 14 years older than the most recent bankruptcy may be permitted.

No information regarding writs issued against the consumer more than 12 months prior to the date of the report will be permitted unless the current status has been ascertained; nor will a report legally include any information as to race, creed, colour, ancestry, ethnic origins or political affiliations.

Persons who knowingly supply false information to those engaged in the preparation of consumer reports will be liable to prosecution under the Act.

The consumer reporting agency will be prohibited from using information unless it appears in files stored or collected in a repository located in Canada.

Provisions regulating the use of credit reports include the following:

Anyone assessing an individual for credit, employment or insurance purposes must, upon request, tell that individual the name and address of any agency which has supplied a report bearing upon the assessment.

Where a report of a consumer reporting agency which is to be used in the assessment of an individual contains personal information as to his character, reputation, personal characteristics or mode of living, obtained from interviews with neighbours, friends or associates, the person requesting the report must inform the individual that such a report has been requested and the name and address of the agency which is to supply it.

A credit grantor will be required to inform the consumer that he intends to use a credit report at the time the consumer applies for the credit.

A credit grantor will be prohibited from supplying information on his transactions to other credit grantors, unless he has informed the consumer in writing, at the time of the original application, that he intends to do so.

Whenever information derived from a credit reporting agency results in a refusal of credit or an increase in the charge for the credit, the credit grantor will be required to disclose to the consumer the nature of the information and, where the information has been obtained from an agency, the name and address of that agency.

Every agency collecting information on individuals for rating purposes will be required to disclose to any individual, without charge, the nature and substance of all information in its files concerning the rating of that individual.

The registrar of consumer reporting agencies in my ministry will have the power to order changes or deletions in any file where he is satisfied that the information is inaccurate, outdated or otherwise unsuitable for rating purposes, as provided in the Act.

Appeals by both agencies and individuals will be heard by the commercial registration appeal tribunal.

Mr. Speaker, these provisions reach right to the heart of the problems that are inherent in personal information reporting. They will give Ontario the most progressive and far-reaching legislation on personal information of any province in Canada.

Under this legislation, the use of personal information will be clarified. There will be no secret information. Sources will be open to inspection so that information can be evaluated. Quality controls will be imposed upon the information in reports. And perhaps most important, the consumer will be able to answer back effectively when ill-founded statements have been made against him. Protected under the law, and with access to what is being said about him, he can set the record straight.

That is the goal of this government.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): That is an auspicious start.

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I would like to report to the Legislature on the progress we have been making in developing our health care delivery system and the effect this will have in the next few years.

Government policies and innovations are already showing some early success in providing a broader, more comprehensive health care service, with greater involvement at the community level in planning and co-ordinating services and the provision of facilities.

The reorganization of the ministry itself, which while a formidable task is proceeding on schedule, is of course designed to overcome the problems of co-ordination and proper evaluation of needs which inevitably resulted from the many changes in financing and delivery methods that came about in the past 14 years.

A major thrust in the ministry, Mr. Speaker, has been directed toward a change away from a hospital-oriented society. This has produced a new emphasis on such things as extended care service, home care, the inclusion of nursing homes in the insurance package, a step toward providing more chronic care beds and, in an innovative field, such facilities as self-care units.

Much has been written and said about misuse and abuse of the insurance plan by some of the public and some of the profession.

Mr. Lewis: And by some of the ministers: most irresponsibility by the minister himself!

Hon. Mr. Potter: The colleges responsible for licensing and regulating the various health disciplines are co-operating with us in our attempts to identify and appropriately deal with individual physicians and other practitioners who may be exploiting this plan. We are determined that aberrant practices will be curbed, and are actively following up all information that can be provided by the plan. I am not happy about the speed at which these matters can be concluded, Mr. Speaker, but I recognize that jumping to conclusions without the investigation necessary to confirm the facts would be irresponsible.

In addition, the extent of insured services and the basic fee structures are being closely examined by the Ontario Council of Health to determine whether there are now included in the insurance plan any services which properly should be excluded.

Mr. Lewis: Oh sure!

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): What about the other side of the coin?

Hon. Mr. Potter: All of these things, and the tightening up of the requirements for active treatment hospital care, will have a definite effect on the costs of health care in the province, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): That is the minister's only concern.

Hon. Mr. Potter: It must be stressed, however, that accomplishment will require time and the co-operation of the public, the professions and the health delivery agencies. For our part and toward this end, we are developing a communications programme designed to keep the public and the health delivery agencies informed, and to improve the dissemination of pertinent information within the ministry and other interested areas in government.

Our statistical analysis indicates that, broadly speaking, our capital construction programme has largely caught up to the demand for active treatment beds. This is not to deny that there are still some pockets of concern. Capital funds for extension of active treatment hospitals will be extremely limited for the immediate future.

It is the intention of the ministry and the government to continue our emphasis on the provision of such alternative care methods as I outlined earlier, in an effort to counteract the steadily spiralling costs associated with the provision of active bed care. This has necessitated a review of our funding procedures to ensure that the thrust of funds parallels the priorities in health care.

In referring specifically to hospitals, analysis indicates that, taking all these factors into account, there are a number of areas in which hospital active treatment inpatient facilities are in excess of the eventual goal of four beds per thousand. An interim goal of 4.5 beds per thousand has been set. Fiscal constraints will be applied to active treatment facilities in excess of this standard in an effort to enforce better utilization and more economical operation. This should encourage an accelerated shift from inpatient to more ambulatory care and to other health facilities in the community.

Mr. Cassidy: Which the minister refuses to pay for.

Hon. Mr. Potter: In addition, Mr. Speaker, there will be an amalgamation of obstetrical facilities in certain community areas where there are now two or more facilities and where current occupancy rates are low. It is intended that obstetrical beds withdrawn from service will not be made available for active treatment patients.

There will also be certain selective budget reductions from their 1972 base for some hospitals where, on the basis of both indices of performance and actual current performance, there is a discernible efficiency spread.

There will be no additional funds available to finance new or expanded active treatment hospital programmes or services in 1973, Mr. Speaker.

On the question of operating costs, after the above restraints have been implemented, hospital boards will be entitled to apply for a percentage increase of their operating budgets for ongoing programmes and services, not exceeding five per cent of the 1972 approved maximum allowance net operating costs.

The formula agreed upon is the result of considerable research and study within the ministry, and the constraints that are built into it are necessary to enable the government to hold the line on health delivery costs.

The ministry has not agreed lightly to setting out on this road. Unfortunately, costs are very high and I am persuaded by reports of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, whose teams have been visiting hospitals lately, that in many cases our hospital facilities are not being used most effectively.

It was felt the most desirable approach is to point out to the public, the medical professions, hospitals and other community health facilities that a co-operative drive to increase our efficiency could be the answer. For our part, the ministry is prepared to make available all its expertise in assisting local boards to meet this challenge, Mr. Speaker. Similar offers of mutual assistance have been made by the Ontario Hospital Association, the Ontario Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The second look will also apply to boards of health, community mental health agencies and other related boards or agencies. However, in keeping with the direction the ministry is taking, consideration will be given to programme proposals that do enable us to move away from the present hospital-oriented concept.

While there will be many who will not applaud the action we are taking, accomplishment of the savings which must be made demands positive action. If we are to succeed, I repeat, we must have the co-operation of the public, the professions and the health delivery agencies.

Our course has been charted, Mr. Speaker, and we are determined to do our best.

COST OF POST-SECONDARY EDUCATION

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, from 1964, when the Department of University Affairs was created, up to the present, full-time post-secondary enrolment in Ontario has increased from approximately 70,000 to 190,000. To accommodate this growth, extensive physical facilities have been provided by the taxpayers.

During this period, capital grants to the universities from the province for this purpose have totalled $868 million.

Since the first colleges of applied arts and technology opened their doors in 1966, the colleges have been supported in a construction programme which has resulted in modern, functional units and renovated buildings located on more than 60 campuses across the province. Provincial support for this community college building programme has totalled $246 million.

The combined total of capital assistance for university and college buildings during this period has been $1.114 billion.

Mr. Speaker, marked changes have been taking place in post-secondary education, not only in Ontario but in other provinces and jurisdictions as well. In view of these changes, and having in mind the rising costs of higher education in a period of limited financial resources, the government is reassessing its overall priorities. As a result, there will be a deceleration in the flow of capital support to those institutions which receive funds from this ministry.

Mr. Lewis: "Deceleration in the flow" means there will be less money—is that it?

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): A marvellous calculation.

Hon. Mr. McNie: The effects of this decrease, Mr. Speaker, will be felt immediately, as it will not be possible to proceed with many projects which the institutions had scheduled to begin this year. Essentially, building projects will be limited to those already under construction.

This pause will provide the government and the institutions with the opportunity to study current enrolment trends and to examine existing inventories of space with a view to more intensive utilization and generally to reconsider their plans for future development. In consultation with administrators, officials and advisory bodies, and with regard to the final report of the Commission on Post-Secondary Education, the government will seek to determine the best possible directions of growth.

Despite the necessity for exercising these constraints, I would like to reaffirm the government's commitment to provide all qualified students with accessibility to universities and colleges and of encouraging excellence in college and university programmes.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions. The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Health, in response to his statement today: In this rather strange goal of reducing the number of active treatment beds per 1,000 of population, are we to gather that the preponderance of excess beds—if one might call them that—is in the rural areas of the province rather than the urban areas and that the minister is going to resume the policy of his predecessor of closing community hospitals in those areas which, in his opinion, are overserved with facilities?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker, there is no intention of that whatever. In the surveys we've done the excess beds have been mostly in the larger urban areas. Certainly we have no intention of cutting down on services in the rural areas, rather, we are interested in providing more services. And we will supplement the services that are there now with the home care programmes that have already been started and other types of facilities. There is no intention of cutting down on the smaller hospitals in the small communities.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: In order to achieve the announced policy goal of getting away from a hospital orientation, is the government considering a programme whereby it will give capital assistance to the building and establishment of community medical clinics of the type that are being built independently, and often with the assistance of winter works funds, by so many of the smaller towns?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker. There have been several community clinics opened this summer and they have been sponsored on a local basis by the communities themselves. The one or two that I have been directly concerned with were sponsored by an individual or a group of individuals; they raised money in the community and, in co-operation with the medical officer of health and the doctors in that community, they designed and built what they refer to as a health centre. It is a building out of which the doctors operate.

Drayton is a good example; there the medical officer of health has assigned one of the public health nurses to work out of the centre with the doctors, and a section of the homecare programme works out of this centre with the doctors. They are providing a tremendous programme in that area.

This has been financed at the local level; it is set up as a non-profit organization. In talking to the president in this particular area, he estimated that within three or five years they would have their debt paid off and the income from the unit would be of such a nature that they are beginning to wonder now what to do with it.

In other words, they built the facilities and rent space to the doctors and the dentists who work out of the facility, as well as to the public health and home care people.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary!

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough West has a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, since the minister knows that the curtailment of the bed ratios is a very modest part of solving the problem, can he list for us in the House those projects in the reorganization of delivery of health services that he is now subsidizing or about to subsidize in the field of community medical centres? What has he got on his books?

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): That's the question that needs to be answered!

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I can't give that information today, but I will be glad to get it for the hon. member.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): A supplementary question!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the minister in a position to indicate the government's conclusion with regard to the major recommendation of the Mustard report, namely that money that might otherwise be spent for another medical school should be directed to the development of community-based facilities where education and the delivery of services could be combined?

Hon. Mr. Potter: This report is at present under consideration by our social development committee and I—

Mr. MacDonald: It came out last spring. How long is the gestation period?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, last spring it was on the agenda; we are finally up to it now and we will have a report very shortly.

Mr. Lewis: I hope the minister didn't have an exhausting summer!

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Can I ask the minister if this will mean that more funds will be made available for mobile medical clinics in remote areas of the province that are underserved at the present time?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Well, the hon. member knows that for the past year we have been extending services into these remote areas through the nurse-practitioner type of assistance. Mobile medical clinics is a matter we haven't got under study at the present time, but I would certainly take it into consideration.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Cassidy: A supplementary!

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary; all right.

Mr. Cassidy: This statement makes no reference to regional health planning councils, and I wonder if it is a studied, deliberate indication that the minister no longer intends to encourage them, but will simply be cracking the whip at the provincial level?

Hon. Mr. Potter: The health planning councils are well on their way. That was announced in August with the restructuring of the ministry—and certainly we're encouraging the development of health planning councils. As a matter of fact, regarding the one in the member's particular area, the chairman of the steering committee was in touch with us yesterday concerning this.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Does the minister mean the district health councils?

Mr. Lewis: By way of one last supplementary, if I may, Mr. Speaker; as part of the minister's effort to contain costs in medical programmes, is he now willing to have the government negotiate the fee schedule directly with the Ontario Medical Association and to deal with the extra billing?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, we're already far ahead of the hon. member on this. At the present time a committee of physicians across the province has been meeting for a month to look at the fee schedule and also at the programme as we have it today. I've asked them to bring it—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is that answer made as a doctor or made as a minister?

Mr. Renwick: Whose fee schedule are they looking at?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I'm talking about the physicians.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, well! That's very impressive.

Hon. Mr. Potter: I'm still a physician; I'm still a physician. I asked the physicians if they would look at the fee schedule—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): But the minister is not speaking as one today.

Hon. Mr. Potter: With the idea of making—

Mr. Deans: He is Minister of Health today.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —recommendations to me for—

Mr. Renwick: We are beginning to think that the minister is not so far ahead after all.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —for revising it. I think that we're really getting somewhere on it.

Mr. Lewis: No, no!

Mr. Speaker, I would appreciate my question being answered. I did not ask if the physicians of Ontario were examining their fee schedule with a view to its improvement. I asked whether the government was entering into direct negotiation with the OMA to establish a fee schedule.

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: Okay then; don't talk to us about costs.

Mr. Cassidy: Then don't talk about being so far ahead.

Mr. Deans: They're not very far ahead.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions on this point; or will he go along with further supplementaries?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, I have other questions; but if you want to continue the supplementaries—

Mr. Speaker: I think we'll permit one more supplementary.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I'd like to ask the minister, through you, what is being considered in respect to proliferation of laboratory fees, which have grown pretty drastically in recent years?

Hon. Mr. Potter: As the hon. member probably knows, Mr. Speaker, we are now in the process of licensing private laboratories. In licensing the laboratories we will not only license the facility, we will license the procedures they're entitled to do on a need basis.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Potter: At the same time we are looking at the laboratory fees with the idea of putting them on a budget basis.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

URBAN TRANSPORTATION POLICY

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier, emanating from the pyrotechnical policy statement that he made at the Science Centre yesterday: Can he explain to the House, although he recognizes the serious transportation problems that are faced and will be faced by the people in the north-west quadrant of Metropolitan Toronto, why he would not accept the recommendation—the unanimous recommendation of his joint technical committee—that the right-of-way presently prepared for the so-called Spadina Expressway be paved, at least down to Eglinton, or perhaps to St. Clair, to relieve that situation until such times as his elevated trains are in operation?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I am really very interested to have yesterday's very quiet announcement described in such glowing terms by the Leader of the Opposition. I can only assume from that description that he was completely enthusiastic about the—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—concepts and that he will succeed in bringing himself and his colleagues to support it with, of course, a few minor variations as it relates to—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why doesn't the Premier try to answer the question?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I shall get around to answering the question, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The Premier has a right to enjoy it. Tuesday was a bad day. Wednesday was a better day.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, at least we're batting 500; which I find is a substantially higher percentage than the gentlemen opposite bat every four years.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Speaker, one always keeps an eye on the scoreboard to a certain extent.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Look at the score, 79 to 20!

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, to get back to the very important question asked by the Leader of the Opposition—I'm sure on behalf of the hon. member for Downsview (Mr. Singer) and, to a certain extent, for York-Forest Hill (Mr. Givens)—actually, it is not my joint technical planning committee; it is a joint technical planning committee chaired by the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton) and the chairman of Metro—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier does have something to do with him from time to time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I have a great deal to do with him. It's quite obvious after yesterday's announcement, Mr. Speaker, that that particular minister will emerge as the foremost leader in the world as far as rapid transit is concerned. Yes, I have a great deal to do with it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Premier has something to do with him from time to time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, getting—

Mr. Renwick: I'd be careful about becoming the crown prince.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Unlike many of his colleagues, he wouldn't claim it for himself.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I don't know. I haven't thought about that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: However, Mr. Speaker, to return to the northwest quadrant of Metropolitan Toronto, the government made a policy decision not to temporarily pave the unused portion of the Spadina Expressway from Lawrence to Eglinton on the basis that we felt, with the proposals made yesterday for the introduction of alternatives to this in the northwest quadrant, that we could to a certain extent relieve some of the traffic problem. While I recognize, Mr. Speaker, that some of the members opposite, who are directly affected, would prefer that some other decision might be made, the government has felt that this will assist in a significant way—not to solve the problem completely; no one is suggesting this—but it is compatible with the overall approach that we are suggesting, with an integrated system of transportation that will include, of course, the northwest quadrant.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: I am interested in the Premier's allocation of funds, based on his announcement yesterday. I did some quick addition and got $1.2 billion. The newspapers seem to find $1.5 billion as the commitment.

Can he inform the House whether there will be supplementary estimates before us while the House is completing this session, at least to begin this expenditure? Has he put a formal request to the government of Canada for participation, and will he permit federal participation at the municipal level or will he accept only assistance for our treasury from the government of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I have read the estimates. I am not sure just which approach to the mathematics would be correct. Our own estimate is approximately $1.3 billion, which is probably somewhere between the estimates that the Leader of the Opposition referred to as far as—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mine was conservative.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, the Leader of the Opposition's estimates were conservative, which is not a bad approach to things, we find. We find it has worked reasonably well over the past number of years. But I—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It hasn't got me to first base.

An hon. member: You were over here, Bob!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would observe that as far as federal participation is concerned, I can't speak for the Minister of Transportation and Communications as to any informal communication there may have been with the federal minister. I have not communicated directly at this moment with the Prime Minister of Canada. I feel that perhaps after his cabinet is restructured over the weekend—and I understand it will be announced on Monday—we might be in a better position to suggest formally that Ottawa could have and, in my view, logically should have some involvement.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it is fair to state that our view is it should basically be financial assistance to assist the provinces. I don't think this kind of programme—the financing of it—will be confined to the Province of Ontario.

I might go one step further, Mr. Speaker; I think there is a great logic—and I have not suggested this to the federal government—in its becoming involved in some of the development cost, and perhaps even having some personnel involved, because I think the potential is so great that it could become a significant national industry in which the national government would very logically have, I think, a role to play. As I say, I thought of this rather late last night or early this morning. This has not been communicated to the federal government but I think this would be a very legitimate or logical area for it to become involved.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Would the Premier make it clear whether, if the federal government does in fact become involved, the 20 per cent share allocated to the municipalities by the policy statement will be reduced by the amount of federal contribution, or will only the provincial treasuries get the benefit of that?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite obvious. It's a 25 per cent contribution by the municipalities that will continue, probably, on these terms. Obviously, if we get some assistance from the federal government which will free some of the funds that we are presently planning, this will enable us, perhaps, to expedite the programme or expand it. I think it is quite obvious to all members of the House that we are looking upon the solution of the transportation problems in this jurisdiction as, quite obviously, a very significant priority.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): The Premier has made it eminently clear, with respect to the route which was decided by Metro two months ago, that that leaves the question open for the technical committee on Friday—it was supposed to meet on Friday, according to what he said. Is he saying that the question with respect to any decision that the joint technical committee may make with respect to a route having to do with trucks and commercial transportation still remains open as well?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think it was fairly obvious from the presentation yesterday that the area still to be finalized is, firstly, the route in that corridor for a form of rapid transit. I did indicate this yesterday, and I would hope the joint technical committee of TTC and Metro would look in a constructive way at the possibility of the intermediate mode of transportation in that corridor.

I stated yesterday, and I think it's important that we point it out, that we recognize that the TTC probably is faced with some significant technical situations relating to the interface of the proposed line with the Bloor subway line at St. George and Bloor. We have not said categorically, and we were very careful in our presentation to say which "probably" made the greatest sense, but we are hopeful that the committee will at least see whether the new mode might have application in that corridor. But it is obvious from the presentation made yesterday that we are not suggesting or planning some form of limited expressway access for trucks or commercial vehicles.

I think the whole concept of this must be understood, Mr. Speaker. Our hope is through this integrated approach to reduce the number of automobiles on the streets in Metropolitan Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton and those other communities that might be served. In my mind at least, I think the logic follows that, if we can reduce the dependence on the automobile and the number of cars on the roads, obviously this frees more space for the very necessary commercial or industrial vehicles that need access to the centre of the cities and points to and from.

I think it's quite important to point out, Mr. Speaker, there would be no real purpose in coming to grips with the transportation problems in the Seventies and Eighties without recognizing that the patterns are going to have to change and it will not be just a case of providing new modes. It will also be a case of people recognizing that if our cities are to survive we can't follow existing or established patterns or ways of life.

I don't want to get into this discussion with the member for Sarnia because we might have to decide what we meant by a way of life; but I do make it quite clear that, in my view—and it applies to commercial vehicles and it applies to working hours—we will have to become somewhat more creative.

That is a very long answer, I'm afraid, to the member for York-Forest Hill, in saying no, we are not planning a truck corridor down the Spadina.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: In view of—

Mr. Speaker: Is this a supplementary question?

Mr. Stokes: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: Right.

Mr. Stokes: In view of the imaginative approach to the problems of urban transportation, is the Prime Minister planning to take the same approach and provide a dial-a-bus service for people in Armstrong in the northwest quadrant of the province?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Stokes: Or a dial-a-plane service between say, Big Trout Lake and Sioux Lookout?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, if the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) were here, I'd facetiously observe he might have some serious objections to a dial-a-plane service in that part of the province. I can only say that the member—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —for Downsview has already volunteered the Downsview dial-a-bus service to Armstrong. Whether or not we can effect that transfer is somewhat doubtful, because—

Mr. Lewis: Well, if the member went with the dial-a-bus!

Mr. MacDonald: I am afraid neither quadrant is going to be helped very much.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —we are hopeful there are some people in Downsview who will utilize this.

An hon. member: We're with the Premier on that.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I'm sure the member should discuss this with the Minister of Transportation and Communications. He is a very sympathetic individual, interested in anything that is creative to assist in any part of the province. The member might discuss this with him.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: As an interim measure for the next three to five years—

Mr. Givens: Three to five years? Ten years!

Mr. Deacon: —will the Premier press the federal government not only to continue the present trial commuter service to the northwest but to increase it so the proposed Downsview dial-a-bus service in the northwest sector could be integrated with that rail service at the St. Clair station to downtown Toronto, and thus give good connections?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I haven't personally assessed that possibility. I certainly would be delighted to discuss it with the minister. If we feel it is viable, certainly we would be prepared to communicate this to Ottawa. I was going to go on and say something else that was a bit facetious about how one might press things at Ottawa at the moment, but that might be a bit difficult; so I won't.

Mr. Lewis: Don't be facetious.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I won't.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, could I ask the Premier whether he is prepared to make a public commitment at this point that the vehicles for this transportation system will be built in Canada?

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is very difficult to make a complete commitment. I can only say that it is my own personal hope that they be made in Canada. I can't guarantee that all the components will be made in this country. This is very difficult to say at this particular moment. I can only say that our own planning at the moment indicates that on the run at the CNE, 80 per cent of the vehicle and the guideway will be, in our view, constructed in Canada.

Mr. Lewis: Where?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I can't say this yet.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Depends on political contributions!

Hon. Mr. Davis: We have no idea. One of the obvious possibilities, of course, is that Hawker-Siddeley, which already operates in this country, will happen to be the successful firm that is selected. But our intent is—and I mentioned this yesterday—to have developed here a Canadian-based industry. There is no reason, I am told by the technical people, that the majority of the work cannot be done in this jurisdiction. This doesn't mean that when you get into the guideway systems, and some of those aspects, that some of the components may not be made somewhere else. I don't know. But I think it is fair to state we feel that the vast majority of the expenditure will be made within this country.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Well, I will permit one more supplementary. The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Premier could tell us if the costs of disintering the Buckminster Fuller report are really worth all the trouble of exhumation?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, one should never speak lightly of the author of that particular proposal.

Mr. MacDonald: Facetious reply to a facetious question.

Mr. Lewis: I didn't know it had been disinterred.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I didn't know it had been interred.

Mr. Singer: It smells peculiar.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I just made the observation yesterday and I think, really, it is not important whether it is the Buckminster Fuller proposal. As I mentioned yesterday to a municipal political leader from North York, it can be his proposal. If the member for Downsview has now graciously accepted the fact that the expressway isn't going to be built, I would have no objection if he has a proposal that makes sense, acceptable to Metro and the province. I would call—

Mr. Singer: At the same rate?

Hon. Mr. Davis:—it the Singer proposal.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I will accept the Singer proposal.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

McDOUGALL CONSTRUCTION BANKRUPTCY

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of the Environment. Can he explain to the House whether it was the withholding of payment on the part of his ministry that forced the McDougall construction company of London into receivership, even though the sewage disposal plant that it was building in Hamilton was 98 per cent complete?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, it is a very complex matter. The whole McDougall situation—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Auld: I don't know, Mr. Speaker, whether you would permit me to read the entire report that I have.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, come on! The Minister has got it summarized in three short paragraphs.

Hon. Mr. Auld:—the contract the ministry took over from the city of Hamilton, in the first instance, was a total amount of $20,368,000. There is presently a holdback of some $2.7 million. There are presently claims filed of approximately the same amount of money. The amount of money not paid under the terms of the contract to McDougall—the last two draws for August and September—were $15,000 and $20,000, which is a total of $35,000. I don't, in my opinion, say that that would have put the firm into bankruptcy, although I will mention that—

Mr. Singer: It won't do them any good.

Hon. Mr. Auld:—one of the claims which is filed from the major subcontractor, Jurall, whose total portion of the contract is something in the order of $5 million is—depending on which paper you read—between $1.7 and $2.2 million. Consequently, I can say unequivocally that no action on the part of the ministry would cause McDougall to have gone into receivership.

There is another holdback of some $400,000 involved in another contract by McDougall with this ministry in the Elgin area—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is that Port Stanley?

Hon. Mr. Auld:—Port Stanley. Two hundred thousand dollars of that is in relation to claims filed under the Public Works Creditors Payment Act in connection with the bankruptcy of one of its subcontractors, N. L. Lever.

Sometime in 1971, the then commission told McDougall that we were withholding that $220,000 to satisfy claims under the Public Works Creditors Payment Act. McDougall went to court on the basis that the commission had no right to do this. The Supreme Court said the commission had. McDougall then filed an appeal which finally got to court in June of this year, I think. Then he withdrew his appeal, at which time we appointed a trustee, Mr. Strauss, to adjudicate these claims, and told McDougall that when this had been done we would pay him whatever difference there may be between the claims and the amount owing.

That was complicated by the fact that the trustee in bankruptcy for Lever came to a different total of claims than we did. However, I am told that is virtually straightened out and that we were prepared to start settlement of those claims about three or four weeks ago.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I don't want to pursue it unnecessarily, but surely the minister must realize that his ministry's reluctance to meet certain payments—another case in point that is closely associated is that put forward by Wilson and Somerville, which has been billing the ministry for $42,000, an amount that has been approved for more than a year—must put a tremendous financial strain, if not on a huge company like McDougall then on some of these smaller ones which have had a good record of work around the province.

In light of the problems and complexities that the minister seems to be swamped with, as a matter of policy is he contemplating establishing a construction unit associated with the ministry so that they can go ahead and do their own contracting?

Hon. Mr. Auld: No, Mr. Speaker, we are not.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What is he going to do about the $42,000 to Wilson and Somerville?

Mr. Lewis: They promised it to him 30 or 40 times now.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Wilson and Somerville Ltd. was a direct subcontractor of McDougall and had no contract with the ministry. The ministry paid McDougall all moneys due under the contract except for the 15 per cent holdback. To assist Wilson and Somerville and some other direct creditors of McDougall on the Lake Erie project, we sent to the solicitors of McDougall cheques in the amount of approximately $160,000, payable jointly to McDougall and certain creditors of McDougall, including Wilson and Somerville.

We advised the solicitors for McDougall that these cheques were to enable McDougall to pay the outstanding accounts pending in receipt of certain documentation. McDougall refused to endorse the cheques and returned them to us, advising that McDougall would not accept partial payment.

I might say in explanation that before we pay we have to have an affidavit from the contractor saying there are no outstanding accounts, and apparently this is where the problem was. Quite frankly we were—and still are, I guess—curious to know whether the payments that were being made, say in Hamilton, were being applied to the people who were subcontractors and suppliers or whether they were in effect going to clean up other accounts of some other contract.

Under the Public Works Creditors Payment Act, we have a responsibility in addition to that which the normal owner would have with a contractor and subcontractor.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the minister prepared to intervene personally in these matters so that the small contractors are not going to be forced out of business because of these complexities?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Under the Public Works Creditors Payment Act we had appointed Mr.

Strauss again, about three weeks ago, to deal with those matters in the Hamilton situation where claims had been filed under the Public Works Creditors Payment Act. As a matter of fact, the first meeting of Mr. Strauss and the creditors was to have been today but that now has been postponed because of the receivership which we learned about two days ago.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

INCOME TAX RATE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, first a question of the Premier: Why was it that the government, in introducing the Income Tax Amendment Act yesterday, suggested that the tax rate for Ontario for 1973 would be the same as it was in 1972 when in fact the personal income tax rate in Ontario is going up by three per cent on Jan. 1, 1973?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't answer that. I wasn't here when the bill was introduced. I will discuss it with the minister who introduced the bill.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary to the Premier; the Premier will concede that the 1972 rate of 30.5 was reduced by the three per cent, which the government conceded; that therefore the effective rate was three per cent less, and that to reinstitute the original rate in 1973 means a three per cent increase on Jan. 1, 1973, which was not mentioned yesterday in this House?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am sure this is something that can be discussed when second reading is given to the bill.

Mr. Lewis: If not by way of supplementary then a new question: Why does the Premier here fly in the face of all the tax suggestions, even of the federal leader of the Conservative Party, that this is a time to maintain the three per cent rate decrease in order to stimulate employment and purchasing power rather than to reinstitute it at this stage?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, once again this is a budgetary matter.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): The election is over too, you know.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It will be discussed when the bill is given second reading. I personally was in agreement with the leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, as it related to national policy.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the Premier in agreement with his own government?

Hon. Mr. Davis: But I also make this point, Mr. Speaker, that the Province of Ontario is faced with its own financial responsibilities. We have certain obligations we too must fulfil and it is our responsibility to do so.

Mr. Ruston: That is not what the Premier said last time.

Mr. MacDonald: The Premier doesn't practice what he preaches.

Mr. Stokes: He said he was in agreement with him out in Alberta.

Mr. Lewis: Let me remind the Premier that it was the former Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) who reduced it.

WASHINGTON OFFICE

Mr. Lewis: And speaking of that excellent chap from Chatham, Mr. Speaker, whatever happened to our envoy to Washington?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't recall the term "envoy" used. It is not a bad word, I should say that. I'm quite prepared if the member from—I always get the east and the west mixed up?—

Mr. Lewis: West.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —Scarborough West—is contemplating a change in profession, if this is what he is subtly suggesting to me, we have not as yet made the appointment. If he wants to make application certainly I will refer this to the Minister of Industry and Tourism (Mr. White), under whose responsibility it will be. We still plan to have representation in Washington, quartered in the Canadian Embassy in that city. As to who that person will be, and the time of his appointment, I am not in a position at this moment to inform the hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Thank you for the offer. I don't want it. Many of his backbenchers have quietly approached me and I thought I should raise it in the House. When does the Premier think in fact—

Mr. Ruston: Which one?

Mr. Lewis: When does the Premier think his Ontario office will become a reality? Has he a timetable on it? It was announced in the Throne Speech, as I recall.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, it will not be an Ontario office. I recognize that when it was announced it was referred to as an Ontario office. I spoke to the Minister of State for External Affairs, some time, I believe, in June or July—I forget the exact time—and I expect we will have further discussions if the same gentleman occupies that position after Monday. The federal government made the point to us—and I accepted their suggestion, very frankly—that they would prefer that there not be a separate office for the Province of Ontario. It is somewhat different from London, which is also the financial as well as the political centre of that country, whereas I think one could fairly describe Washington as being basically the political centre, while New York might be described as being the industrial or business centre. The Minister of State was concerned that there would be some feeling that this was a separate form of embassy or consulate or what have you. And I accepted—it just shows you how co-operative we are—what I thought was a reasonable position, where there would be an employee at a senior level of government of the Province of Ontario working within the Canadian Embassy. We haven't discussed terms or rates or what have you. But that is the direction we intend to take.

Mr. Bullbrook: What oath of allegiance will he take?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Natural Resources has the answer to a question previously asked.

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday the hon. member for High Park posed the following question:

What was the government business for which one of his Lands and Forests air-planes flew on five Mondays this summer to Port Severn to pick up one William Kelly, returning him the following Friday?

And why was the pilot instructed not to taxi into Mr. Kelly's marina but to stay out far enough on the lake so that the plane's markings could not be seen?

May I first point out to the hon. member that the Department of Lands and Forests no longer exists. This department—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: As he may know, the Department of Lands and Forests and the Department of Mines and Northern Affairs merged into one ministry, the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Start all over again.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Government policy with respect to the use of aircraft operated by the Ministry of Natural Resources is of course well known, but briefly to inform the hon. member, only members of the executive council and deputy ministers of the government have the authority to requisition aircraft for government business.

As outlined in the Legislature by the Premier on April 4, 1972, "The Premier makes use of the government air services for the efficient discharge of his duty as Premier."

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: In the instance referred to by my friend from High Park, it is correct that one William Kelly accompanied the Premier on government aircraft on some occasions during the past summer at the request of the Premier.

Mr. Bullbrook: There is more than one William Kelly. We know he is all over the place.

Mr. Lewis: At the request of the Premier! What did they talk about while flying?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: At no time—

Mr. Lewis: What were they counting under the seats?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: At no time, Mr. Speaker, has Mr. Kelly ever been the sole occupant of a government aircraft; and under the terms of the government's policy respecting the requisitioning authority of these planes—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Stokes: Would the minister like to rephrase that?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am coming to the hon. member for Thunder Bay. I am coming to him. He is next!

Neither Mr. Kelly nor any other private citizen of this province could obtain the use of government planes for any purpose whatsoever, other than for compassionate reasons arising from an accident or illness in remote areas.

Of course, I will refer to one exception to this government policy in just a moment.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Compassionate payoff.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: With respect to landings at Mr. Kelly's marina, I am informed that the Severn River at this point is approximately 120 feet wide. I am further informed that this marina is extensively used by small pleasure craft and that the docking facilities available are not suitable for the docking of large, pontoon-equipped aircraft.

Any suggestion that ministry aircraft should taxi into a 120-foot wide river which is extensively used by small craft is dangerous in the extreme. The reason for landing on the lake is obvious.

Mr. Lewis: Look, for that amount of money it is worth the danger.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: It was to avoid accidents.

Mr. Renwick: It should be too dangerous to land then.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I merely find it humorous to think that a ministry aircraft, painted bright yellow and affectionately known to all of us in the north as the great yellow birds, would park in the middle of a 120-foot wide river so as not to be seen. That really digs me.

And as I mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, there is one exception to the government's policy of exclusive use by government personnel.

Mr. Lewis: So there should be, and he remains that justified exception.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes. On June 1 of this year, I received a letter from my friend, the New Democratic Party member for Thunder Bay—

Mr. Lewis: The biggest riding in this country.

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—requesting special consideration for his need to visit the more remote areas of the Thunder Bay riding. As I am sure all members are aware—

Mr. Deans: And he is a member of the Legislature.

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—the Thunder Bay riding—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier:—the Thunder Bay riding is the largest riding in Ontario.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): What request did Ross DeGeer have when he was in Sudbury with the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough)?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: The president of the Tory organization. Does the member remember that?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that all the members are aware that the Thunder Bay riding is the largest constituency in Ontario and I am sure that the House would approve of my decision at that time to assent to the member's request—and all my friends agree—to provide the hon. member for Thunder Bay an aircraft for such a visit once a year when the plane is available.

Mr. Cassidy: That is quite a bit different then.

Hon. Mr. Davis: How well did he do?

Mr. Lewis: He is our bagman in Pickle Lake.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I would point out where he used the aircraft. On Aug. 10 and Aug. 14 of this year the member for Thunder Bay visited Pickle Lake, Wannaman Lake, Kingfisher Lake, Big Trout Lake, Angling Lake, Fort Severn, Kassabonika, Webeque, Lansdowne House and Fort Hope in a ministry Turbo Beaver.

An hon. member: What about Centre Island?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: There have been no other exceptions to policy respecting use of government planes.

Mr. Shulman: A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: May I have the minister's permission to examine the logs of the planes for the past six months?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, as I said yesterday, there are some 40 odd aircraft in my ministry and each has a log book. I don't think anything useful will be served by providing the member with all the logs.

Mr. Deans: He doesn't mind taking the time.

Mr. Singer: Fly without a pilot!

Hon. Mr. Bernier: If he has some specific trip or some specific individual, I'd try to answer his inquiry.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary, I am prepared to go to Sault Ste. Marie, on my own time, and look at the logs.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Are there any secret or any confidential missions the planes have been on that the minister is afraid to have examined? Why is it a secret? Why can't we see the logs?

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Don't come to the Soo.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I think I've answered the question once. If he has a specific request or an inquiry, I will do my best to get the answers.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary question: Would the minister inform the House whether he used government planes when he was a private member before coming into the executive, and to whom did he make application?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I don't recall ever using a private aircraft when I was a private member.

Mr. Stokes: Oh, come on!

Mr. MacDonald: Did the member use government planes to fly through the northern reaches of his riding when he was a private member?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: No.

Mr. Stokes: We did it together.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Not without a minister with me.

Mr. Stokes: Oh yes, we did.

Mr. Lewis: Not without what?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: A minister.

Mr. Lewis: Not without a minister accompanying him. Well, of course!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: We didn't think he would go into it alone.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for York-Forest Hill. A supplementary, I presume?

ALBERTA NATURAL GAS

Mr. Givens: What action is the Minister of Natural Resources taking or what action is he planning to take with respect to the very serious announcement of policy by the Premier of the Province of Alberta to establish a two-price system for natural gas, which will very seriously and detrimentally affect industry in Ontario, having regard for the fact that it is probably unconstitutional? Is he doing or is he planning on doing anything about that announcement?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I would refer this to my colleague, the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence).

USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT

Mr. Speaker: I thought that was a supplementary to the previous question. Were there any further supplementaries?

Mr. Lewis: Yes, I wanted to ask one.

Mr. Speaker: I think we can revert.

Mr. Lewis: All right. I want to ask the Minister of Natural Resources on what grounds, since it must be submitted to him, the plane was used for Mr. Kelly on those numerous occasions; and how does it fit in with the definition of illness and compassion and the other items which he documented for the House?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The member didn't understand me, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Kelly did not at any time use an aircraft by himself. He was in the company of some other official, on many occasions the Premier.

Mr. Deans: Who?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, perhaps, in that I know the member for Scarborough West and the member for High Park are very interested in this matter—the Leader of the Opposition raised this yesterday and was anxious for a report—maybe I can briefly assist the member for High Park so that the information he receives from Gloucester Pool will perhaps reflect the actual facts of what transpired.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Who is Gloucester Pool?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, Gloucester Pool; which shouldn't be at least too unfamiliar to the member for Scarborough West, because his own summer estate was at Six Mile Lake, which is not—

Mr. Lewis: Summer what?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —too far distant from Gloucester Pool.

Mr. Lewis: Estate?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, cottage.

Mr. Lewis: Thank you very much; very nice.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): It is an estate if it is on our side; it is a shack if it is on theirs.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in order to put this in its proper perspective, the gentleman who has been mentioned from time to time, both in the press and in the last few days here in the Legislature, Mr. William Kelly, is a personal friend of mine and has been for some years.

An hon. member: Good!

Hon. Mr. Davis: He does function as the treasurer—he functions well—of the Progressive Conservative Party of the Province of Ontario. I might also—

Mr. Cassidy: Just good friends on the aircraft? Is that right? Just good friends, nothing else?

Mr. Lewis: No discussion?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, it is more than that. I might also point out, Mr. Speaker, that Mr. Kelly has over the years been involved in the chairmanship of the board of Ryerson Polytechnical Institute and thus is an adviser to the government. In fact, he was the one who led the move to have students on that board; I can recall it well, the development of the degree situation—

Mr. Martel: They are expanding north, are they?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Kelly—

Mr. Lewis: Oh, that is what they talk about. He sits on the board of Ryerson while flying.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, it was before that; it was before that.

Mr. Cassidy: It's strained beyond the breaking point!

Hon. Mr. Davis: But just so that the gentlemen opposite will not be panting in eager anticipation, or some members of the gallery—since I have read about Mr. Kelly's activities in one or two columns—I do discuss matters other than those of the political organization of our party with Mr. Kelly.

Mr. MacDonald: What a compartmentalized life the Premier leads!

Mr. Cassidy: He discusses who he will invite to his next breakfast for Conservatives!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Kelly happens to be a very able, intelligent person who has a great deal to contribute that goes far beyond the question of being party treasurer. He has a great deal to contribute—I hope members got that.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Keep it going.

An hon. member: "Dollar Bill."

Hon. Mr. Davis: Now that we have established that Mr. Kelly is a personal friend and a gentleman that I speak to—

Mr. Lewis: Would Freud like to be here right now!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —on matters other than that of the party financial situation, which takes about a half an hour every six months; I do talk to him from time to time—I make no bones about it.

An hon. member: Just stick to the point.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I should point out that while Mr. Kelly is not employed full time in any other organization he does have, as a part of his business interests, a marina—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Perhaps, in fairness to him, I should tell the hon. member for High Park the name of the marina so he can avail himself of it—

Mr. Shulman: Thank you, I have it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: —as he drives up in his Excalibur to test the waters of Gloucester Pool. I would point out to him that this has developed as one of Mr. Kelly's interests. It's on the Severn River about 200 yards east of the main locks.

Mr. Speaker, I must also make this confession to the members of the House: I, too, have a summer retreat, which we've had in the family now for about 50 years; it is about eight air miles north of Port Severn. There have been occasions, when the Beaver has very surreptitiously slid into Gloucester Pool for everybody to see, quite frankly when Mr. Kelly has stopped at Port Severn and I have carried on to Townsend Island for the weekend with my family. I make no bones about it.

Mr. Lewis: It must be nice to have a friend who has an aircraft.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think it is also fair to state that there were two occasions when I met Mr. Kelly at Severn Boat Haven, on the Severn River, where, with others, we discussed matters not related—this may surprise you—to activities of the Progressive Conservative Party, but matters which I think have emerged in the past day or so as being of some significant interest—

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): With a Conservative tune in the background!

Hon. Mr. Davis: —to the public of the Province of Ontario. In other words, he and others are some of those outside of government circles I do talk to from time to time.

I think if the hon. member were to check with his informant from Gloucester Pool he might also find that Orillia Airways operates, not a Beaver, but a yellow-coloured aircraft which on a number of occasions, at Mr. Kelly's request and payment, has gone to Severn Boat Haven and transported Mr. Kelly from that point to some other. I think I should also point out, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Shulman: But it had no trouble getting into the docks.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): A beautiful story!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I think I should also point out that it is just physically impossible—

Mr. Reid: What is this, Sesame Street?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —for a plane of that size to sneak into Gloucester Pool or the Severn River without everybody within five miles knowing about it or seeing the markings.

Mr. Shulman: The plane never went into the river, but always went out into the lake.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Well, Mr. Speaker, I can explain. I really would like to take the hon. member for High Park up to Severn Boat Haven.

Mr. Lewis: The Premier doth protest too much.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There's a very simple reason—

Mr. Lewis: This wasn't a trip to Cuba, you know.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: That's quite right—it's just to the Severn River.

Mr. Lewis: It's not overseas.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It's not overseas. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Scarborough West is quite right, it is not far in terms of time. I've calculated it; it's about 43 minutes.

Mr. Lewis: It's taking a long time.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not being an enthusiastic flyer, I calculate the number of minutes. I would say to the hon. member for High Park that the plane lands in Gloucester Pool rather than the river because it causes far less inconvenience to the boat traffic—and quite frankly it is faster. I have calculated it; it is faster to take a boat from the dock out to the centre of Gloucester Pool, because that's where you have to take off from when you do leave that great area. Really, it is a shorter period of time. So I hope that in some way—

Mr. Lewis: This is a lot more sinister than I thought it was!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Oh, I know. It's very sinister and this is why I really knew that the member for High Park was anxious to have his answer.

Mr. Lewis: The Premier has gone on for 43 minutes; he could have flown to Gloucester Pool!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I must confess at this time of the year that would not be necessarily the direction I would be flying if I were doing so.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Did the Premier ever leave Kelly alone?

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

Mr. Givens: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. With great respect, the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development was just about to answer the less serious question that I asked before. Could I indulge your patience and have him answer the question I asked about the announcement in Alberta?

Mr. Speaker: There obviously is no point of order. We have gone over the time allotted for questions.

Mr. Givens: Can he take notice of the question?

Mr. Speaker: No, I called for supplementary questions; the hon. member for York-Forest Hill asked a new question. Perhaps he would place his question again at the next sitting of the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Any bills from the ministry?

STORAGE AND SUPPLY OF PERSONAL INFORMATION

Hon. Mr. Clement moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to control the Storage and Supply of Personal Information for Rating Purposes.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I have no further comments to offer with reference to this bill in view of my earlier remarks and the statement by my ministry.

FAMILY BENEFITS ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Family Benefits Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to provide for interim payments for maintenance to an applicant or recipient after a request for review has been made to the review board.

Mr. Speaker: Any further bills from the ministry? If not, the hon. member for St. David.

NOISE RESEARCH BUREAU

Mr. Scrivener moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to establish the Noise Research Bureau.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to establish a bureau which will co-ordinate studies and research on noise measurement and control.

EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS ACT

Mr. Drea moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Employment Standards Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, the intent of the bill is to bring apartment superintendents into the 20th century by removing the exclusion that now confronts them in the Employment Standards Act.

Mr. Speaker: Before we proceed with the orders of the day, I should like to deal with the matter raised on Tuesday, Nov. 21, by the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Reid); which matter, of course, was discussed by the hon. member for York South. On Tuesday, November 21, I was asked to comment further on the question of privilege relating to the publication of a committee report before it is presented to the House, particularly in view of an editorial published on that date.

The privilege in question is simply the right of the House to be informed first of matters relating to its business, whether it be a committee report, a statement of policy by a minister of the Crown or whatever. This is a right which, on occasion, I have personally heard very vociferously defended on all sides of this House. In all jurisdictions it has always been recognized that a breach is committed not only by the informant but by the reporter and by the publisher.

However, if the present members of this assembly do not wish to insist upon this privilege that, of course, is their decision and the remedy is simple. They need only refrain from taking action in any given case. But I suggest that before any positive steps might be taken to rescind this privilege permanently, the members should think of it very seriously.

Orders of the day.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves second reading of Bill 227, An Act to amend the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few comments concerning the bill. The principle of the bill is set up in six different areas; however, I wanted to speak primarily to the one area and that is the establishment of schools for the trainable retarded.

According to section 6, this gives permission solely to public school boards to set up the schools. In my estimation that same privilege should be extended to either of the two boards rather than having it solely for one board. As a result, if it is extended, likewise the advisory committee so appointed should be altered to compensate for its complement, according to the structure as it is set out here. That is, if it is a separate school board which sets up the school for the trainable retarded, two members should be from the separate school board, with one from the public board and two from the community. That's the extent of my comments, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to address himself to this bill?

The member for Port Arthur.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): I wonder if the minister wants to reply to that?

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): No, not on second reading.

Mr. Foulds: Does the minister wish to reply to that particular item first?

Clerk of the House: This is second reading.

Mr. Foulds: All right. The only question I wish to raise in addition to the one raised by the previous speaker is on section 5 of the Act.

How are we to ensure that the electors have been enfranchised if the boundaries are being changed during the assessment period?

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to speak to this bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, first, in answer to the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville, the provision in this bill to provide for the setting up of a school for the training of the retarded and giving this authority to the public school board is being done in a general form here, but specifically so that a school may be established in Moosonee.

Now, only division boards have the power under the present legislation to carry on training for the retarded under our programme. When the schools were brought in under the boards as part of the total educational process, it was decided at that time they would come under the divisional boards, and the combined separate school boards in the province did not take part in that particular programme. I think, at this point in time, this is the more economical, more efficient and better way.

Therefore, especially in this particular case, where there will not be that many pupils to be educated, this provision would be the one that should apply. Members will notice there is provision here that a separate school representative shall be on the advisory committee. That's the reason for that.

In answer to my friend's question about section 5, it will be the responsibility of the clerks and the people responsible for carrying out the elections to so inform the people. Now, in actual fact, in order to see how it would work, this has been tried. It has been going on in most of the northern areas, and the people who are so affected have been enumerated, I am told, in the new districts.

This was an attempt to see how this problem could be met and as a result of what's been going on, it's been suggested that we amend the legislation and, as my friend will see, it's been suggested that this section be deemed to have come into effect on July 1 of this year.

Mr. Foulds: So this legitimizes the practice?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Yes, but it not only legitimizes it, it sort of puts into legislation something that has been tried out. I am told it is working all right and, therefore, it makes sense to put it in the legislation.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves second reading of Bill 228, An Act to amend the Separate Schools Act.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FOOD ACT

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves second reading of Bill 223, An Act to amend the Ministry of Agriculture and Food Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) would advise the House as to the policy of the government with respect to the extension of the guarantee.

The revision of that section to provide the province's guarantee for loans made to members of the farming community is one which we don't necessarily disagree with. My comment is directed only to the fact that it is all-embracing. It does not delimit the nature of the lenders to whom the guarantee of the province would be extended.

For example, when the question of the egg marketing report came before the Legislature it was well known and established in that report that the source of the loans was, in many cases, the feed merchants. I use that simply as an example to ask whether it's the intention of the minister that this power would be used to provide guarantees for that type of loan, or is it part of his continuing but unsuccessful endeavour to interest the chartered banks in the Province of Ontario and other traditional lending institutions in providing credit to the farming community?

We have, of course, Mr. Speaker, on other occasions mentioned in the House that we, while not objecting to the grant of the guarantee of the Province of Ontario, believe that it should not be used as a crutch by traditional lending institutions as the only basis on which they will make an extensive extension of credit to the farming community.

I am not suggesting that we on this side of the House have a monopoly of that concern—I know that the minister himself is concerned about that—but I do think that in asking for a wide open revision of this provision of the bill, the minister should state very clearly to us what the policy of the government of Ontario is, and in the language of the day what the guidelines are to which this guarantee provision might be exercised, the extent to which he intends to exercise it, or in the past has exercised it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, just a comment on the bill. I had always understood that the real value of the guarantee was not so much as a crutch to use to beat the regular lending institutions into submitting to receiving and approving farm applications, but to have some means whereby the interest rates could be controlled, or at least the prime rate, or very close to the prime rate, would be available to the farmers who might apply.

In my view, the availability of farm credit is not restricted so much by the willingness of certain institutions to lend money, but by their exuberance in establishing the interest charges. Even the Industrial Development Bank is only too glad to make what it tends to call last-resort loans to farmers, particularly those with substantial operations, as long as the farmer is prepared to sign on the dotted line at an interest rate no less than 10 per cent and sometimes in excess of that, which I think is just usurious in the extreme. I can't really contemplate a proper farm organization being established on such a basis, or that there is anything left for the farmer or those people working for him if he has got to pay interest rates at that level.

Frankly, I like the idea of a government backing, which leaves the banks with at least sufficient freedom that they can reduce the interest rate to the prime level, or no more than a half per cent above it, and this in my view is of special usefulness to the farm industry.

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to speak to this bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to explain the position the government takes in asking for this amendment to the legislation.

From time to time in the past we have, as you know, come before the House requesting an amendment to the Act for a specific purpose. Frankly, I feel, as has been expressed by the Leader of the Opposition, that there are places where the government can be of assistance to groups of farmers for specific purposes—but not, as my friend from Riverdale suggests, entirely to interest the banks in providing this money, because many of them do already, but to interest the banks in providing an interest rate that is more compatible with what a farmer can afford to pay, and for specific purposes.

I refer particularly to the Judge Ross report on the egg industry in Ontario, which clearly demonstrates that most egg production in Ontario was under contract of one kind or another, and really the producers were, I think, in many cases paying more for the use of the feed company's or the supplier's credit than they were for the product as far as profit to the supplier was concerned. We think that there may be opportunities—and I am not going to say that the government will definitely get into this field—but we certainly think there are opportunities here for us to enter the field if it is deemed advisable. I would like to have this as general legislation so that we might be able to move into this particular field, in a circumstance that would warrant such an approach, without having to come back to the House for a specific amendment to the legislation for that purpose. That really is what is behind the amendment.

I share the concern expressed by my friend from Riverdale, Mr. Speaker. We have been concerned that the chartered banks have really not got into the field as far as we think they might have with farm loans. I am encouraged by the interest that is now being displayed by some of the chartered banks in engaging specifically agriculturally oriented staff to carry out not only investigative work but to carry out policy development work within the banks' structure.

Some of them have gone so far as to develop travelling offices by which they will visit the farm community—with an office right on the farm connected to a central office by telephone. I think that is an excellent idea and I am sure that we will see more of that as time goes on. Today, farming has become a very highly involved financial business requiring large sums of capital if it is to operate satisfactorily.

We really believe that there is a way of controlling excessive interest rates that might be associated with contract farming and the supply of various types of feed for instance—supplies that are necessary for carrying on the farm—by the feed companies and other suppliers. Perhaps there is a way in which we can put the real power back in the farmer's hands by assuring him of an alternative source of credit.

The record of repayment has been, I think, reasonably good over the years in which this method has been employed in the past. That is really the purpose of the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, in order to avoid asking that the bill go to committee, may I put one question to the minister?

Mr. Speaker: Yes, I think it would be allowed.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the minister if he would undertake to include annually in his report a complete statement of the nature and scope of the exercise of this authority, rather than to require by amendment to the section some provision for tabling such a report? Perhaps the minister would undertake, as policy is developed, as determinations are made and as he can see fit, to classify the types of guarantees and the kinds of loans and the nature of the borrowers who are, in fact, given the benefit of this assistance?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I see no reason that couldn't be done, Mr. Speaker. It is certainly public money and I think everyone—certainly the Legislature and those supplying the credit—is entitled to know where the money is going. I see no reason that can't be done. I do not want to undertake that we do it on a specific basis but I see no reason it shouldn't be done, certainly during the estimates of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, so that it is put on the record on an annual basis.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Agreed.

WOLF DAMAGE TO LIVESTOCK COMPENSATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Bernier moves second reading of Bill 220, An Act respecting the Payment of Damages Caused to Livestock by Wolves.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few very short comments on this bill. We are in favour of the principle enunciated in the bill. On Tuesday we had a companion piece of legislation designed to remove the wolf bounty, and today we have the piece of legislation designed to compensate farmers for livestock killed by wolves.

There are some changes I would like to make in the bill, and I am going to do that when we get into committee of the whole. Basically we support the principle. There are several mechanical matters with which I want to deal when we get into committee of the whole. Nonetheless, I will have to wait until that time.

Mr. Speaker: Do any other members wish to speak to this bill? The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, as the bill will be going, as I understand it, to committee of the whole we can usefully make our comments in committee.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): I want to make one tiny comment about the bill. I can recognize the need for this bill, but I want to tell you, sir, that I am sick and tired of debating bears and wolves and compensation when there are so many needs for people around this province. We talk about putting money into urban transit, putting money into wolves, bears and compensation—

Mr. Speaker: That is not really on the principle of this bill.

Mr. Deans: —when there are people in this province who are starving and need some help. Why the devil doesn't the government bring in legislation to help the people?

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. minister have any remarks to make in reply to the first two speakers?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Well, Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to thank the member for Huron-Bruce and also the member for Riverdale for their comments and their indication of support to this bill, but certainly the member for Wentworth is completely out of order with the statement he made. This particular bill we are bringing in will reduce cost to the taxpayer, and I am sure if he would give it a little bit of thought, he would realize it would be a tremendous saving.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Do I understand this bill to be ordered for committee of the whole House?

Agreed.

Clerk of the House: The fifth order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. W. Hodgson in the chair.

WOLF DAMAGE TO LIVESTOCK COMPENSATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill 220, An Act respecting the Payment of Damages Caused to Livestock by Wolves.

Mr. Chairman: Is there any member who would like to speak to it?

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Well, on section 2, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman I have one question on section 1.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I think the member for Victoria-Haliburton (Mr. R. G. Hodgson) yesterday referred to a hybrid type of wolf. I am not an expert in any of these questions. Does the definition of a wolf as set out in the Act include the hybrid type of wolf that the member for Victoria-Haliburton referred to yesterday—and if not, why should it not?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that it does. The hybrid is a cross between a coyote and a dog. It is my understanding that this definition takes those three species into consideration. There is the timber wolf, coyote and a hybrid.

Mr. Chairman: Any more questions on section 1.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Well, Mr. Chairman, I know my colleague has an amendment to section 2, but can the minister explain why this bill has to be established for payments for the depredations of wolves when we have other legislation dealing with dogs? I agree with the member for Wentworth. We don't want to spend all our time on this sort of thing.

Why can't the minister sort of co-ordinate this matter and have one piece of legislation that will compensate farmers for the injuries to their flocks and herds from animals, whether it is wolves or dogs or, I suppose, even hunters—because we have legislation which will pay the farmers for cows shot by hunters. I think the minister should consider putting this thing together so that the scales of compensation and the attitudes are the same and that the farmers' interests are protected.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: In answer to that, Mr. Chairman, this matter was thoroughly discussed with the Ministry of Agriculture and Food. It was felt that because my ministry was dealing with the wild aspects of the resource, that it was more appropriate since we have offices and people right across the province who are able to define what is a wolf kill. We have some 49 offices in northern Ontario and across southern Ontario and these particular individuals are trained to be able to define the difference between a dog kill and a wolf kill. It does take some considerable—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What is the difference? The farmer should be compensated anyway.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, this is under a separate Act and it is operated by the Ministry of Agriculture and Food through the municipalities. When a sheep is killed by a dog the carcass is scattered over a very large area and they tell me that when a wolf attacks any type of farm animal that it is a very clean kill. But it does take an individual of considerable experience, which we have in the Ministry of Natural Resources, to recognize this; therefore it was felt that it would be better handled in my ministry.

Mr. Chairman: Any more comments on section 1?

Section 1 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Section 2?

Mr. Gaunt: On section 2, Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that reads as follows.

I move, seconded by Mr. Nixon, that section 2, subsection 3 be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

No payment shall be made under subsection 2 of an amount in respect of (a) a head of cattle, (b) a goat, (c) a horse, (d) a sheep, (e) a head of swine, (f) poultry of one owner, killed or injured in any year, in excess of the value placed on such loss by a municipal livestock valuer.

The reason I place this amendment, Mr. Chairman, is that I can't agree with the limits set out in the bill with respect to the various classifications of livestock.

In most cases I would say that those limits would be adequate. However, there are a number of cases, perhaps more than we would like to think, where people who have in their possession high-quality livestock, or very expensive horses, purebred for the most part I am sure, would not be adequately compensated under this particular Act.

I give you an example of a farmer who has a very expensive purebred cow which may happen to be killed by a wolf. Under this legislation he would be compensated no more than $500, and the market value of that animal would certainly, as I have indicated, be in the neighbourhood of perhaps $2,000 or $3,000. So that aspect of the bill is most unfair.

The other section that I was somewhat uneasy about is subsection 2, where it says 'but not exceeding the market value of the livestock in respect of which payment is made.'

Now if we are talking about market value in terms of what a willing buyer will pay to a willing seller then that is all right. If we are talking about market value in terms of shipping that animal down to the stockyards and taking product price for her then that is quite a different matter and I certainly wouldn't agree with that part of the bill either. However, I've taken the broad interpretation of market value and I presume that's what the minister means there as well.

But I make the point that the municipal valuer in each case is very familiar with the livestock of the farmer; if he isn't he should be, otherwise he shouldn't have the job. I think most of them are familiar with the circumstances and with the individual livestock of the farmers in their area. So he goes in and he places a value of that animal based on market value—on the value a willing buyer would pay to a willing seller. It would simply mean that his evaluation would be taken and it could very well be in excess of the figures indicated and that is why I have moved this particular amendment.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I don't think that we can support the amendment. This is a gratuitous payment to protect persons in a reasonable degree against a hazard; it's not an insurance scheme as I understand it. It would seem to me that the maximum amounts set out by the minister in the bill are ample to accomplish that purpose, because expensive breeding stock is, I assume—and I stand to be corrected by the member who introduced the amendment—insurable and it would be insured against this particular kind of hazard. It doesn't seem to me that the owner of a very high-priced thoroughbred horse, for example, should be paid out of the treasury of the province because the horse has died by depredation by wolves. It would seem to me to be only reasonable in that kind of situation that the owner of that kind of expensive stock should take the normal precautions to protect the value of his property through the insurance market.

Mr. Chairman: Any one else wish to speak?
Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, I certainly appreciate the comments of the hon. member for Huron-Bruce, and knowing the type of business that he is in, of course, I know he does have some concern and he expresses it very, very well. However, I would point out and, possibly reiterate what the hon. member for Riverdale has just pointed out to you—these were my thoughts before he got up to speak—that this certainly is not an insurance scheme. It's intended to provide assistance in the case of hazard and damage from wolves. Last year in our wildlife predator investigations across the province there were 185 sheep, 17 cattle and two swine lost because of wolves. So it's not a very large number. And as has already been pointed out, anyone who has purebred cattle or a thoroughbred horse—and I have no record of a horse ever being killed by a wolf—I'm sure that he's properly cared for, more so than the cattle who roam in the open.

Mr. Gaunt: Your colleague from Middlesex South doesn't agree with you.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Yes I do.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: So I think that those purebreds or thoroughbreds that would be on those farms would be properly looked after; more so than would be required in this particular Act, and I certainly don't feel I can support your amendment.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Further to the amendment, I think the minister is right when he said this is not supposed to be an insurance scheme. As a matter of fact, it is a sop that he is giving to the farmers of the country and, incidentally, to some of his own caucus backbenchers, to replace the elimination of the wolf bounty, which over the years has been a programme, if not to eradicate, at least to control the wolves and the depredations that they work on the flocks and herds of the rural areas of the province.

Mr. Chairman, the minister has said that one of the advantages of eliminating that bounty is the large sum of money that the province is going to pay. And if in fact, as is feared by some, the wolf population expands tremendously—like the beaver, for example, in Algonquin Park, which the minister I'm sure is concerned about, which now will have to be controlled by his own experts going in and knocking them off—then the livestock herds and flocks are going to be under considerably more danger.

In many areas—and Middlesex is one; I don't know what the wolf population up there is, but I presume that there is at least some opportunity for wolf damage if you're hunting them around Oshawa—those herds of prize Holsteins are not babied in a barn at night and they don't have somebody standing on guard out there to keep away the animals which up until now have been at least controlled in part by the wolf bounty legislation. I don't think there's anything unfair at all in the amendment that's been put forward by my colleague.

The minister got at least a majority of his colleagues to support him in the elimination of the former programme, and now in this bill, which is designed to at least protect the farmers against financial loss, he is not putting sufficient advantage into it. To suggest that the farmers should carry wolf insurance on their expensive livestock, or even their standard-priced livestock when it comes to breeding stock, is ridiculous. If we are talking about beef herds or milk herds particularly, to indicate simply that the beef price for those animals is the fair remuneration is unfair; in fact, it is ridiculous.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, Mr. Chairman, I still must retain my former position that the maximum payments are quite fair—$500 for cattle, $100 for a goat, $500 for a horse and $100 each for sheep, swine and poultry up to a maximum of $500 per year.

But I do want to point out to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, in connection with the payment of bounties in the year 1971, that when the wolf bounty repeal Act was introduced for second reading the other day, many complaints were raised about the cattle and sheep herds being molested.

Normally the period for pasturing is the months of May, June, July, August and September, but it is interesting to note that those are the lowest months of the year when bounties were paid. And I'll read those numbers into the record: The total number of bounties paid for the month of May was 93, for the month of June 45, for the month of July 49, for the month of August 77, for the month of September 222. Compare those figures with those for the winter months when the cattle and sheep herds are kept in corrals: 349 bounties were paid in the month of October, 457 in the month of November, 422 in the month of December—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They're not going to be around next summer to knock off the cattle.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: —600 in January, 560 in February, 383 in March and, as I said, 129 in the month of April. Therefore, those figures do show that the pasturing season was the lowest time of the year when we actually paid bounties.

Mr. Gaunt: With good reason.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, that's what I'm saying: If there was a real danger, if the farmers were that concerned and the wolves were doing that much damage to the cattle herds, then surely our bounties would be much higher in the pasturing period of the year.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, Mr. Chairman, obviously the wolves that in the past had been controlled by the bounty system, by the hunts or the trapping in the months when the cattle are not out to pasture, are not going to be around during the next pasturing season to work their depredations.

I'd be interested, since the minister wants to quote some figures, to know the total amount he paid out in the bounty programme last year. I don't want the figure minus his so-called predator control programme, which was criticized in the House on Tuesday; I want the gross amount. Then, since I don't want to enter the discussion again—Mr. Chairman is looking at me with his eyebrows raised—

Mr. Chairman: You've got me all wrong.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, is that so?

An hon. member: He's on your side.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —I would just like to compare in advance that figure, which must be a considerable figure, with the rather parsimonious limits that the minister is setting on the payments to the farmers who are going to lose their livestock because of the removal of the control programme.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I have those figures for the year 1971-1972, Mr. Chairman. The provincial total was $58,072 and the county payments were $23,805, for total bounty payments in the year 1971-1972 of $81,877. As for the estimate of the cost of this new programme, we are budgeting about $15,000 for the balance of this year and then we will move it up to $25,000 in the following years.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, just in case, as happened on Tuesday, that this amendment would pass on a voice vote in the House, I'd like to ask about the strange exclusion in subsection 5. It seems to me that death of livestock usually occurs by the bite of a wolf, and yet this bill excludes compensation if the animal happens to be bitten by a wolf that has an infection. I don't seem to quite understand the reason for that subtle distinction.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, Mr. Chairman, this is in the event that a rabid wolf is in the area and happens to attack a farm animal; it may be around or injured for some considerable time. It would be very difficult to lay the blame on the wolf. It could be some other animal. This is one of the reasons it is spelled out in the Act.

Mr. Bullbrook: How about a no-fault wolf?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: A no-fault wolf, yes.

Mr. Chairman: Are you ready for the amendment?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): How about insuring people against parasites?

Mr. Chairman: Its been moved by Mr. Gaunt and seconded by Mr. Nixon—order, please!—that section 2, subsection 3 be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

No payment shall be made under subsection 2 of an amount in respect of (a) a head of cattle, (b) a goat, (c) a horse, (d) a sheep, (e) a head of swine, (f) poultry of one owner, killed or injured in any year, in excess of the value placed on such loss by a municipal livestock valuer.

All those in favour of the amendment will please say "aye."

Those opposed will please say "nay."

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

I declare the amendment lost and the section carried.

On section 3, any comments?

Carried.

On sections 4 to 7, any comments?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Chairman, there is one typographical error in the second line of subsection (b)—

Mr. Chairman: Of section 7?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, section 7, subsection (b).

I move, seconded by Mr. Clement, that clause (b) of subsection 7 be amended by striking out "paid" at the end of the second line and inserting in lieu of that word "made." It is a typographical error.

Mr. Gaunt: Bill, you're too late. I needed you and you weren't here.

Mr. Chairman: Any comments?

Mr. Renwick: We'll let that go through.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Reasonable fellow.

Mr. Chairman: Carried?

Sections 4 to 7 and the amendment proposed by the minister, carried.

Sections 8 and 9 carried.

Bill 220, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee of the whole House rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill with one amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

McMICHAEL CANADIAN COLLECTION ACT

Hon. Mr. McNie moves second reading of Bill 216, An Act to establish the McMichael Canadian Collection.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Riverdale.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: (Leader of the Opposition): What about the minister?

Mr. Speaker: Did the minister have anything he wanted to say first?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook) sat down to allow the minister to speak.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): He's a very courteous fellow.

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): I have a few remarks that I think would be appropriate, Mr. Speaker.

Actually, this Act simply formalizes what has been a fact and it helps to make possible some things that are a little more difficult now than they might be—for instance, things like accepting donations, which have to be handled in a rather round about way.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): We have never suffered under that burden over here.

An hon. member: They never will!

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, there are obviously words like "donations" and "contributions," and things like that which we have to handle with care.

Mr. Singer: Yes. Some more than others.

Hon. Mr. McNie: By way of introduction, this bill establishes a non-share capital corporation to be known as the McMichael Canadian Collection to operate the McMichael Art Gallery. The bill is designed to establish the collection in a manner similar to other provincial cultural institutions, under a board of trustees which will be responsible for the maintenance, protection and development of this valuable provincial resource.

By way of background, members will be interested to know that the McMichael Canadian Collection is devoted principally to the works of Canada's outstanding landscape artists, and particularly the Group of Seven. The gallery overlooks the Humber River Valley near the village of Kleinburg, some 15 to 20 miles northwest of our building here.

The collection was assembled by Mr. and Mrs. Robert McMichael. We are happy to have Mr. McMichael here with us today, Mr. Speaker. They have collected it over the past 20 years. It was initially a personal collection, housed in their home. The number of paintings and the public demand to view these grew so much that the McMichaels had a special gallery wing built on their home in 1963. In 1965, Mr. and Mrs. McMichael donated their property and art collection to the province.

Since that time, the collection has been maintained as the McMichael Conservation Collection of Art under an agreement executed by the McMichaels, the province and the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority. Happily, Mr. and Mrs. McMichael have continued to act as curators.

The collection, as many members are probably aware, has grown steadily to more than 360 paintings and drawings, as well as many pieces of sculpture. I should stress at this point that the acquisitions have been by gift, or bequest, or by purchase with moneys donated by private individuals.

While the province and the conservation authority have played a role in the maintaining of this collection, credit must be given in the first instance to Mr. and Mrs. McMichael for their personal role in establishing and developing this collection, which is of major significance to the province, and to Canada, and as I have discovered in conversations with art people abroad, internationally as well. The generous donations of works of art by many individuals should also be recognized at this time.

I think the value of the collection and the importance attached to it by the community can be gauged in large measure by its acceptance and use by members of the public. Mr. Speaker, the number of visitors has increased steadily since the collection was opened. I won't bore you with a lot of figures but I think one or two here would be worth noting.

In 1966, 41,000 individuals and 109 school classes visited the collection. By 1971 the attendance had risen from 41,000 to 122,000 and the number of school classes had risen from 109 to 1,077. It is estimated that more than 2,000 school classes will visit the gallery during the 1973 and 1974 school year.

Mr. Speaker, on April 1, 1972, the responsibility for the McMichael Conservation Collection of Arts was transferred from the Ministry of Natural Resources to the Ministry of Colleges and Universities. This arrangement is in keeping with the recommendation of the Committee on Government Productivity.

In reviewing the administrative arrangements for the collection it was decided to introduce legislation to formalize the arrangements concerning this gallery. In doing so, we would be remiss if we didn't express our appreciation to the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority for its great assistance in administering the affairs of the gallery since 1965.

There are just one or two features in the bill I would like to draw your attention to. One I mentioned earlier; in section 2, the McMichael Canadian Collection is established as a corporation without share capital. Sections 3 and 4 provide that a board of trustees of from five to nine members shall be appointed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council for a three-year term, to manage the corporation.

The corporation is established as a Crown agency by section 5. Section 6 sets out the objects of the corporation which are, in brief, to manage, maintain, develop and preserve the collection, the gallery and the lands of the corporation.

Section 18 sets out certain special provisions in recognition of the role that Mr. and Mrs. McMichael have played in establishing this collection of Canadian art. These provisions were basically embodied in the agreement which established the collection in 1965.

Just one further point, you may be interested to know of the continued development of the collection and the facilities to house it. Anyone who has been up there recently would know that construction of a new reception area is under way with completion expected by the spring of 1973. I would hope that at that time we can arrange for the members of this House to join the board at Kleinburg for an evening and to enjoy the works of art that are there for not only the people of Ontario to enjoy but people from all across Canada.

One of the other things that they are doing up there is they are housing a very fine, a very great Canadian, Dr. A. Y. Jackson. It was my privilege, a few days after I joined the ministry, to go up and extend to him on behalf of the province greetings on his 90th birthday. Those of you who know him would know that he is a remarkable man who, I am sorry to say, is not as well today as he was on his 90th birthday.

I am not sure how appropriate it is for the Minister of Colleges and Universities to make it, but I was talking to students the other day and I commented on the fact that here is a gentleman who never had the advantage of a post-secondary education. He never earned enough money up until the Second World War even to pay income tax and—my wife is not sure what point I am making here—he never got married. Yet one only has to meet him to find a man who has great peace of mind and who has made a very, very significant contribution to this land of ours. I think it is an appropriate comment to make because, really, what we are housing up there is something more than art; we are housing a very, very large and important part of Canada.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to rise in support of this bill as the McMichael Canadian Collection of Art is within my riding of York Centre. It has been a pleasure for me for some years to know the McMichaels and to have watched the way that the gallery has developed as a result of the dedication and generosity of Robert and Signe McMichael. They have devoted untold hours of work and been most generous to the people of Ontario in what they have done there. The province now is in a position where it can augment the work they have done and can ensure that we will have for years to come an outstanding collection, which I am sure will improve as the years pass, and have it preserved for all time.

Unfortunately, over the years one point has come up, that I hope will be taken account of by the minister, and that is the need to have on the board of trustees two representatives from the local municipality. The reason I feel that we should do this is that in the past there have been misunderstandings and differences, which the minister and his department certainly are aware of, with the local community. I think that these are things that can be prevented if we are able to deal with them at an early stage. I think that whenever a provincial institution is set up we should be sure that it does have communication with the local community in a way that any misunderstandings and unpleasanties can be prevented if at all possible. I urge that the minister give that consideration whether it be in legislation or in policy, and I bring that point up.

The other thing I feel is that the minister should give consideration to applying the same type of restriction on the number of terms the trustees can remain on a board—as they do on most other boards around the province. Perhaps in this case it could be one more term, but not more than one term—in addition to the initial three-year period; except in this case, of course, the McMichaels themselves. I think it is important that there be continual change and movement for provincial boards. We have found in the past that sometimes they become ingrown unless we do have provision for change taking place.

With the exception of those two points I feel that the bill is a good bill, and we certainly support it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, we support the principle of the bill. I do, however, have two or three questions in connection with it, which I trust perhaps the minister would consider.

We share with all the members of the House the expression of gratitude to the McMichaels for the donation of this art treasure to the Province of Ontario, and the value which it lends to the enhancement of the cultural life of the province.

I don't know anything about art valuation, but we are—as I can understand from the one report that has been made by the advisory committee on the board—talking about a collection worth in the neighbourhood of $4 million or $5 million. In due time, undoubtedly, it will be worth very much more than that. In addition, the site itself and the development of that site has substantially improved its value. Therefore, I would assume on any conservative estimate that the gift to the province is in the neighbourhood of $9 million or $10 million, for which the province has perhaps had to spend somewhere between $1 million and $1.5 million. So the extent of the benefaction of the McMichaels to the people of the province is extremely great if one even values it only in such mundane terms as the value of the dollars that might be ascribed to it.

I am, however, concerned in two respects about the way in which the foundation has been set up. And I want either some very clear assurance from the minister about it, or a protective provision or provisions inserted in the bill by way of amendment to allay the area of ambiguity that is involved in the bill.

The Crown in the right of the province is, as the minister has stated, a party to an agreement entered into with Robert McMichael and Signe McMichael and with the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority. That agreement is an extensive agreement covering a large number of topics, and I don't intend to elaborate on them. But specifically there are very clear provisions in that agreement about the sale of any of the items included in the art collection. I can find nothing in the bill as presently before us which specifically and clearly states the manner in which any decision could ever be made on which any of the items in that collection could be sold. I think the bill should contain some such provision.

Secondly, there is at the end of the agreement, the 1965 agreement, a specific provision—and I am going to quote it in extenso in order to make the point that I want to make. It is paragraph 30, the last paragraph of the agreement entered into in 1965, and it states that:

Notwithstanding any of the foregoing provisions of the agreement, in the event that the Province of Ontario establishes a foundation for any of the general purposes of preserving, maintaining or developing lands, buildings, and collections of art for the public benefit, the Crown may assign the whole of the lands and premises and collection vested in or subsequently acquired by it, pursuant to this agreement, including all its rights, powers and privileges and subject to all its obligations in connection therewith to the said foundation, provided that the Crown agrees not to make such assignment until the foundation covenants to be bound by the provisions of the agreement to the same extent as is the Crown herein.

I was struck on reading the bill that there is no reference whatsoever to that agreement in the Act which is before us.

Now there is a provision—and I again don't know why this particular method was selected for the establishment of the foundation—saying that the foundation is but the agent of the Crown and will be simply in that capacity.

Then there are other provisions which use the word "hold" with respect to the lands and the buildings and the property which is included in the McMichael collection. That again seems to me to be very ambiguous as to the distinction between holding and having the actual title vested in the foundation, and whether or not they are holding simply as agent for the Crown, and whether that provision in the bill which states that they are holding only as agent is a sufficient protection for the purposes for which the original agreement was entered into.

It would appear to me, Mr. Speaker, that the very clear way of dealing with this matter would be to assert in the bill, by way of a suitable saving clause, that nothing in the provisions of the bill will alter or vary in any way, or delimit or attenuate or diminish, the responsibilities and obligations of the Crown as set out in that agreement, so that anybody reading the statute will have a clear reference to the agreement.

In my view, I think it would be very wise if the agreement itself were included as an annex or an appendix to the bill. Then, anyone looking at the public statutes of the Province of Ontario would have specifically drawn to his attention in the schedule the original founding document of the conveyance of this collection to the Province of Ontario.

I would hope that some such amendments would be perhaps prepared by legislative counsel if they found favour with the minister, rather than to have us here draft that kind of an amendment. The bill could come through committee of the whole House with suitable amendments.

Therefore, without getting into a discussion of legalities about it, I would ask that there be a saving clause in the bill specifically continuing the obligations of the Crown in joining the foundation as agent for the Crown in the obligation to perform those obligations set out in the agreement and that the agreement itself would be set out as an appendix to the bill, so that it will appear in the public statutes of the Province of Ontario for all time.

I would ask as well, Mr. Speaker, for some explanation of whether or not the authority—that is the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority—is now bowing out of the picture and is being released from its obligations under the tri-partite agreement of 1965, or whether it continues to be obligated to perform the provisions that relate to its obligations in that agreement.

I would also, out of curiosity, like to know what is the extent of the insurance which is presently carried, or will be carried, to protect the collection in the event of theft or loss by other hazard that could be possibly remedied by appropriate insurance coverage.

Mr. Speaker, those are the comments that I have on the bill. I would ask the minister to consider some appropriate amendment to give effect to the latent ambiguity that is involved in the bill, having regard to the three-party agreement entered into in 1965 when the government became the possessor of this collection.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I, too, rise in support of the bill. I commend the minister and his ministry for bringing it in at this time. I think also the McMichael family has made a contribution that goes considerably beyond the dollars that my colleague from Riverdale mentioned. I think is a very significant contribution, the retention and the promotion of Canadiana in the province, and I commend them for that.

of the exhibit is where it is and therefore it is by necessity restricted to those people who have fairly easy access to that location in the province. I guess the total number now would be approaching 200,000 people, if one includes the children, who visit the collection every year. I think it speaks for itself that it is the kind of collection to which the entire province should have access and not just those in the southern part.

I think that I would like to see the ministry—particularly considering section 8(f) of the bill, which does make allowance for lending parts of the exhibit and taking them elsewhere outside the actual location—take some kind of action to take parts of this collection on occasion to northern Ontario and particularly to the schools and to appropriate places up there where people can visit them.

I think also that any ministry that can live with slogans like “more scholars per dollar” and “Artario 72”, surely could dream up a slogan, perhaps “art in a cart” or something, that would take the exhibit across northern Ontario. So, I do hope, that the minister will make a considered effort to make the collection more mobile than it is at the present time.

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to speak to this bill? The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of points raised by the three speakers. First, with regard to the local problem, I think that's pretty well in hand. I think there are indications that this matter wasn't handled as well as it might have been in the past and there was a lack of co-ordination of planning.

Mr. Deacon: Our suggestion is to ensure that it doesn't happen again.

Hon. Mr. McNie: I'm assured that that will end now and that the left hand knows what the right hand is doing.

With regard to the appointments to the board, I can only say that personally I subscribe to the turnover principle and I would hope that we can make it apply to other boards than this as well.

With regard to the third point, the sale of art, the members made a number of points, and perhaps I can deal with them together. I think the purposes of the bill as described—that the objects of the corporation in brief are to manage and maintain, develop and preserve the collection—while they don't spell out in the kind of detail that the member described and which was described in the earlier agreement, yet it seems to me that, because it is a Crown corporation reporting to the government, he could expect the board to handle in the best interests of the public the matters that he describes, having regard to the sale and having regard to other obligations that are going to be performed by the collection.

I know that I am not speaking as a member of the legal profession. I incline to acts and memoranda which are brief rather than lengthy, because my own experience with them has been that the longer they are and the more they try to cover all the points at issue, the more you play into the hands of other legal people. The Act here, to me, reads rather simply and I think the most important things will be the appointments to the board and ensuring that the people on the board are the kind of people who can carry out these objectives.

With regard to the insurance, I am not familiar with this but I will be glad to find out, Mr. Speaker, and to inform the hon. member as to the amount of insurance that's carried. I would gather it would be pretty substantial.

With regard to the points raised by the hon. member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Laughren) I think, having regard to our residents in the north, the collection is inaccessible or, in fact, largely inaccessible. Certainly it performs a function much larger than serving the Metropolitan Toronto area. I know in my own home all five of my children at one time or another have been down with school classes. This is a matter of some practice in the schools surrounding Toronto and I think it should be encouraged a great deal more.

I will pass along to the Minister of Education the member's suggestion. Perhaps there may be ways in which students and others from outside this particular area might have an opportunity to visit this kind of an exhibition.

I don't think that a travelling exhibition would accomplish what we're trying to accomplish here. There are lots of works of art of the Group of Seven in galleries across Canada but, without intending to be unkind, the difference in the way they're displayed is something to behold. In Ottawa, if you get within a foot or two of one of the pieces of art, you're likely to have somebody land on you! It's an atmosphere that I think is hardly conducive to making children appreciate good art, and that's anything but the atmosphere at the premises of the McMichael collection.

I think this is one of the things that makes it as effective as it is—not only the architecture and the design, but also the kind of mood that is set in the premises. I know that the children love to go and I know—I've been told by any number of people—that one of the reasons they have so many adult visitors is because the children insist on dragging their parents back by the hand.

Mr. Speaker, with those comments I would commend the House to approve the second reading of this bill.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Renwick: We'd like it to go to committee.

Mr. Speaker: Does the minister agree?

Clerk of the House: The fifth order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. B. Beckett in the chair.

McMICHAEL CANADIAN COLLECTION ACT

House in committee on Bill 216, An Act to establish the McMichael Canadian Collection.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any comments or questions in regard to this bill?

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Yes.

Mr. Chairman: On which section?

Mr. Deacon: Section 3.

Mr. Chairman: Is there anything before section 3? The member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, I bring up this point again on the matter of one or more further terms. I move that in section 3, subsection 3, the words "or more" be struck out and the word "terms" be changed to "term."

This is in accordance with the principle that the minister agreed he would like to see happen, where there is a restriction in the number of terms, so that in this case "a trustee can be appointed for a three-year term and one more term," and I so move.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Deacon moves that the words "or more" in section 3, subsection 3, be struck out, and that the word "terms" be changed to "term."

Does any member wish to speak to this?

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Chairman, while I endorse the need for turnover, quite frankly I wouldn't want to inhibit the board in that regard. My experience is that there are times when there are people who have made an extraordinarily good contribution to the boards; and I think that if you would reflect yourself, you will realize that there are such times. For my own opinion, I think that "two terms" would be a much more satisfactory amendment, if you were proposing an amendment.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, if the minister would agree to having not more than a total of three terms, whatever way you want to amend that; but in principle I still feel that there should be a restriction to the number of years a person can be reappointed in these Acts. I refer the minister to many other boards of this type where this type of restriction on the number of terms has been inserted in order to ensure the turnover that we all feel is important.

I recognize that some people can be invaluable, but there is one addition here that I should have made in that amendment, and that is that this would not apply to the McMichaels themselves, because of course they should be life trustees of this collection. We recognize that. But I am concerned about the other trustees, and that there be a continual turnover.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Just one further comment, Mr. Chairman; speaking to my colleagues here I think that government policy of late has been to try and accomplish just what you are saying. Quite frankly, I think it would be better to leave this the way it is and then, as far as I am concerned, to assure the hon. member that this in fact is what we have strived to achieve here.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of the amendment please "aye." Those opposed please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "nays" have it.

Any other comments, questions or amendments to this section of the bill?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to clause 6 of the bill, that clause 6 be amended by adding the following subclause (e)—

Mr. Chairman: Anything before clause 6? Please continue.

Mr. Renwick: —that clause 6 be amended by adding the following subclause:

(e) To carry out and observe the obligations imposed on the Crown by the agreement dated the 18th day of November, 1965 between Her Majesty the Queen in right of the Province of Ontario, Robert McMichael and Signe McMichael, and the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority set forth in the second schedule hereto.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): A good amendment; you should accept it.

Mr. Chairman: It is moved by the member for Riverdale that clause 6 be amended by adding the following subclause:

(e) To carry out and observe the obligations imposed upon the Crown by the agreement dated the 18th day of November, 1965 between Her Majesty the Queen in right of the province, etc.

Ending "set forth in the second schedule hereto."

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I'm not going to repeat what I said on second reading. I think that it is most important, and not as a matter of legalities at all, I think it's essential that there be a reference in the bill to the obligation of the foundation to carry out the obligations imposed on the Crown by that agreement and that the bill itself contain as a schedule the agreement of 1965 establishing the collection so that the public statutes of Ontario will for all time contain the 1965 agreement within the bounds of those statutes.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister, do you wish to comment on this?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Chairman, as I said earlier, I'm satisfied that the intent of the bill is to accomplish just that.

Mr. Chairman: All in favour of the amendment please say "aye".

Those opposed please say "nay".

In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Any other comments on this bill?

Bill 216 reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill without amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

LAND TITLES ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 209, An Act to amend the Land Titles Act.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 209. The member for Sarnia.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I'm not going to be too long in this connection. Some comments that I'll make relate of necessity to Bill 210 since the bills are somewhat complementary. We perhaps would want to elaborate when 210 comes before you.

I wanted to say that we agree in principle with the enlargement of the concept of land titles throughout the Province of Ontario. I think it serves the public which is, of course, our paramount concern. It certainly serves the legal profession well. This I suppose is selfish, but also important.

I'll be interested in first querying the minister, when he responds, as to how long he feels it will take to develop a total land title system in the Province of Ontario because, as I understand the pronouncements by his predecessor, this is the intention.

The enlargement of the system itself basically, I suppose, is what could be construed as a principle in this particular bill. There are particular sections we hope to deal with, not necessarily by amendment but perhaps by further discussion in committee, relative to various incidental and normal housekeeping aspects of the bill.

I want to bring to the attention of the minister matters of which he might be professionally aware, Mr. Speaker, but matters that really have to be discussed in the total picture of what's happening with land registration and conveyancing in the Province of Ontario.

The minister, in his capacity as a solicitor, recognizes that there has been imposed upon the public, albeit for the good of society as a whole, tremendous obligations in connection with and concurrent with the division of land—by developers, by individuals, by farmers.

We don't take issue with that principle of attempting to protect society and neighbourhoods from undue and helter-skelter development. But it seems that as a result of such planning legislation we are developing ourselves a significant volume of jurisprudence. If one reads the Ontario Reports of, say, 1955 and compares the reports of 1971 and 1972, one will find that probably the jurisprudence in connection with land conveyancing and land separation has enlarged by at least 100 per cent. The problem that we face now is that solicitors—and the public, as a result—are finding themselves in a position where they are fettered unduly, I suggest, in their ability to develop land at a reasonable cost.

I recognize that this doesn't deal entirely with the principle as enunciated in this bill, but I want to suggest to the minister that he might take up with his cabinet colleagues some refinement of the planning legislation so that we do not find, in dealing with problems of conveyancing and land registration, that an undue financial burden is placed on the public.

To exemplify the situation, I happen to be involved now in correcting a parcel of land that is exactly 1.6 inches in width for a client. By the time he's finished with the necessary survey work, the application to the committee of adjustment and gets final approval, if there is no appeal, it is going to cost him at least $300.

An hon. member: That's a very steep figure.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, I'll probably do this on a voluntary basis. In any event, it is going to cost him at least $300 to remedy an obvious survey error.

There is a case by a county court judge which says in effect that when one is attempting to correct title in that nature it is not necessary to go before any land division committee or committee of adjustment. The position that we and many other lawyers in the Province of Ontario are taking is that that particular decision is not binding upon us, and until there is a pronouncement from a higher court we are going to be safe with this type of thing.

The point I make, concurrent with this particular bill, is that this type of burden should be placed upon what now will be called the land registrar rather than the profession as a whole. So, we accept the principle of the bill itself. My colleague from Downsview will be discussing it further.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, the Law Reform Commission of the province within the last couple of years has presented to us a very elaborate, voluminous report on what it proposes for the land registration of the future.

Of course their basic proposal was that it all be assimilated to a Torrens registration system, as is contained in our land titles at the present time. And within the ambit of that particular report, as I recall it, they said that no very profound legislation ought to be passed in the area of either the Registry Act or Land Titles Act pending the finalization of the investigations arising out of that particular report.

They said that report required more anguish and more deliberation subsequent to its handing down than any other report they had ever dealt with for the simple reason that the introduction of the computers and the various machinery that had to be brought into effect was extremely elaborate and trying, and would take some period of time to prepare.

Nevertheless, they have given an indication of what the indexing ought to be; how the preparation should be made; and what should be contained in these things.

I would take it that the legislation before us doesn't traduce the principle that they set forth at that time; that no partial changes in the legislation ought to be gone forward with. These are rather, on the whole, peripheral matters that we are dealing with except for the beginnings, for a partial step, in the direction of the amalgamation of the two systems on the administrative side whereby the registrars of deeds on one hand and the land titles master of titles on the other become meshed in one individual called a land registrar; and the registry offices cease to be known as they are presently and become land registry offices.

It seems to me the legislation before us in both this and Bill 210 are advances in that particular direction. In other words we are preparing the ground to revise the registry system.

Now, in the registry system I suppose there are 750,000 titles at the present time. And in land titles, as I understand it, there are something in excess of 7,500, or some odd.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Seven thousand five hundred?

Mr. Lawlor: I am reading the figures last night.

Mr. Singer: There must be a lot more than 7,500.

Mr. Lawlor: I am afraid it can't be so, can it? I agree. There are more than that right in Toronto.

Well, forget the figures. In any event the volume in the registry system, particularly in the southern part of Ontario, is infinitely greater than that in the land titles system.

However, the trend has been changing over the past number of years, particularly since the Condominium Act came into being—which requires land titles registration; won't permit registry office registration—and by reason of people seeking to take a more expeditious and perhaps simpler way of correcting titles that have some defect in them, and getting them made absolute by way of getting land titles registration; switching voluntarily from one system to another. There has been a gradual erosion of the registry system and an affirmation and increase in the volume of titles being handled through the land titles system—and this is all to the good.

Everyone knows that the 40-year search of title in the one system leaves all kinds of uncovered traps for solicitors and for their clients with respect to prescriptive rights and to unregistered easements and to any number of hidden fallacies in the tax system, such as the liens that are involved.

The utilization of the land titles system affords infinitely greater protection to the public.

I hope as it goes forward—and the Law Reform Commission says little or nothing about this—that as this process goes forward the fees being charged in this particular regard, considering the inflated costs of real estate, would be reflected in the relative ease with which the titles can be established in the land titles scale.

I would hope that the legal profession would take that to heart as a gesture toward an anti-inflationary measure.

This legislation before us goes further with respect to seeking to encourage the transfer of titles into the land titles system by way of section 10, giving the master of titles in an area, the land registrar, the right to initiate in an area in which land titles exist, in a designated area, that all registrations of subdivisions and other registrations such as he designates be sent over to the land titles division and not be registered in the registry office.

It goes further in section 30 with respect to the subdivision plans in compelling in these areas that the subdivision plans be registered in his office and not in the other. These are all, in other words, preparatory, beneficial provisions, looking forward to the day when there will be a single registry system throughout the province, and this promotes that particular purpose. I think we should go through it clause by clause because there are various matters of which inquiry might be made or questions asked, and I would ask that of the minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to see that these bills are presently before the House. It will perhaps make my task a little easier when we come to consider the minister's estimates. I won't have to repeat the same speech that I have made for 10 years, that the whole system of land registry needs to be radically reformed and we have to get into one system of controlling land holdings and titles and searches and so on.

This is an improvement, the extent to which I don't really know, since we are still going to wait for final moves insofar as the recommendations of the Law Reform Commission are concerned. They seem to be wrestling with it. But, even though at this point we seem to be moving a little bit ahead with these statutes, by other statutes we seem to be moving backwards. There are more things that one has to look for today, more outside searches beyond what you find either in a registry office and/or the land titles office, which are necessary to be made in connection with closing a transaction than ever before.

I would guess, and I don't know what the government's legislative programme is, that probably one or two statutes that we'll see either in this session or the next session are going to put a few more liens on land in relation to sales tax or corporate tax or residency or income tax or what have you. They are getting to the stage that it is difficult, unless one reads all of the statutes every day as they are passed either here or in Ottawa, to keep up with all the changes that are regularly being made.

So, I think that while the minister is bringing forward, or has inherited perhaps, some statutes which are somewhat of a step forward, it might be that, being a recent legal practitioner, he will have a far better understanding of what the conveyancer has to face than some of his predecessors in the same portfolio. With that approach he could begin to look at some of the serious faults that exist in our legislation.

This, as I say, is a step forward; but it is going to be comparatively meaningless unless at this time somebody pays attention to the staffing of these offices, to the staffing of land titles offices and the staffing of registry offices. I don't know if the minister since he has taken over has heard the loud wails emanating from the legal profession in the Toronto area about what exists today in the land titles office. They are months behind in being able to provide duplicates or documents. It isn't that they aren't working hard; it is just that they aren't enough in staff. Some of the staff who have been recently acquired need to be trained.

I think what has to happen as this minister takes over is he has to look at land titles and registry office staffs across the province and begin to offer, I suspect, much better salaries than are being paid because I think this particular group of people probably has been passed by in other salary increases and the government is not retaining the more capable people.

It is not too many years ago I recall relating to the Attorney General of the day—and he was the cabinet minister in charge of matters relating to land titles at that point in time—the story about a young man I knew who worked in the land titles office of Toronto. He was a very bright young man who, at government expense, was sent to law school with the idea of bringing him back and making him a senior official in the land titles office.

When he graduated from law school and came back they said, "You are now a clerk 2 instead of a clerk 3 and you will get a little bit more money, but the fact that you have gone to law school really isn't going to change your status." So he left and he is now earning 20 times what government might have paid him in a large legal firm in London and doing very well. He is a very capable young man.

This is the kind of thing that I think the minister has got to have a look at. He has got to build these staffs because, insofar as registry systems or land title systems are concerned, they are very important to the development of this province—the exchange of land, the development of land and so on.

If we delay the process through inept civil servants or over-burdened civil servants; if we allow the possibility of mistakes occurring; if we have to do all these additional searches or all these new liens created and so on—all of this slows down the whole process and the government is not really serving anybody.

The second thing I want to bring to the minister's attention in this regard is the effect, of which the minister should well know, of the Forfar decision. That has just thrown everything into chaos in the Province of Ontario. I had a call today from a gentleman who owns land outside Aurora, who says, "I now have the great privilege of paying taxes on my land but because of the Forfar decision, I cannot get a building permit and because of the Forfar decision, I cannot sell it but I can continue to pay taxes."

Surely, when we are talking about land titles and registry offices, this government has to move in connection with the regularization, in some manner or other, of the titles that were disturbed by this decision? I think it is time the minister got off whatever he is sitting on and brought in a bill to deal with this very far-reaching court decision which has disturbed a lot of people and is unfairly discriminating against a lot of others.

I can well understand the great concern of the gentleman who spoke to me today saying, "Surely, it isn't justice if I can only pay taxes on my land? I can't sell it, I can't build on it and I can't use it but what's going to happen to me if I don't pay my taxes?" I am sure the minister can understand that.

In principle, as I say, we agree with what he has here. But the principle alone isn't very good unless in practice and in effect we are going to have an administrative system that works well; unless we have a minister and a civil service advising him, aware of what is going on and able to keep up to date with the problems of a changing economy. And a civil service able to grossly simplify the various burdens that are put on land by government action; perhaps we can find, through the magic of the computers, a central system of searching for all of these liens that might attach with some positiveness.

I think for the public good—and the hon. member for Lakeshore has touched on it—the government should reduce the legal nonsense which surrounds transactions in land from what it is to a system which is easily investigated, a title that is easily searched, and eliminate the ludicrous situation in which you can easily have four or five lawyers acting on the same transaction of purchase and sale, charging four or five cumulative fees, all based on a percentage of the amount involved in the transaction.

The people who are suffering from this are the people who are eventually going to buy homes on these properties. The legal fees are out of all relationship, in my mind, to the kind of service that is being provided. The legal profession is to be blamed I think, and I have said this before, and the government is to be blamed, because the government has really done nothing in a meaningful way in recent years, until we are nibbling at it now, to control what I think is a most unfair system of dealing with titles.

I can remember there was a gentleman who was the assistant registrar in the city of Toronto at the time I was a law student and he said if he was paid a dollar for every title in the city of Toronto registry office he would certify them all, and he guaranteed that he would leave as a millionaire. He was that certain that the mumbo jumbo that we lawyers go through in searching back 40 years and submitting requisitions each time was so meaningless that he was prepared—and he was the man who knew as much about land titles and registry office systems in Ontario as anyone.

Now that still is perhaps—I don't know—equally true today. But I think this minister although new in the job comes with experience. My relationship to him has been good; I'm impressed with his intelligence. I hope he will grasp what is before him and we'll see something that is going to help the people of Ontario. This is a beginning; it is not enough. But I hope the minister will be able to tell us something about the kind of changes I've been talking about.

Mr. Speaker: The member from Owen Sound.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to back up the views of my colleague. I'm quite sure the new minister will be as progressive along this line as I feel he will be.

I'm not too knowledgeable about the intricacies of the law, but I do know that sometime in our lifetime we have to cope with the maze of stick handling that goes on in this field of transfer tax, search, etc., etc. My only feeling is that with all the technology we have, Mr. Speaker, it is shocking that the minister hasn't got a computerization programme in the hopper now.

I know that in the counties of Grey and Bruce one county has a combined system and the other has only one system. I feel that we must have some factor that will help the small homeowner; as the member for Downsview has said, we must come up with computerization. There is no reason why we can't do it within the next 12 months.

I hear that even Toronto hasn't evolved this system yet, but I would say in my very limited contribution to this debate that in the real estate field that I'm involved with, we're talking in many millions of dollars of revenue for the government, which I think is completely unfair. Of course, your greatest scale is for the small homeowner and his transfer tax payment is small, but I don't think it is one tax he should have to pay.

The motivation for the tax was to pay for the registry office and pay the salaries. In this government we have, I think, 65,000 employees across the province, as against 30,000 10 years ago. You could fire half the people you have working for the province and you wouldn't miss one of them.

I have had civil servant department heads agree with me on this, Mr. Speaker. They agree that we could fire half the employees the government has in the province and we wouldn't miss a thing. So we're talking about multi-million dollar savings in salaries there.

But getting back to this field, I feel that we must move towards using the technology we have in computerization to take another load off the small man when he wants to sell his home or his farm or something. He should be given a break.

But I do want to say that I feel the minister is on top of everything and he will do a good job in this field too.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this bill?

The hon. minister.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, it is my assumption from the comments I have heard from all those who've spoken in connection with this bill that the members are in essence agreeable and find the bill acceptable to them. For those in the House who do not know the intricacies, I'm the last one to have a deep technological knowledge of both the registry office system and the land titles system, but basically the distinction is this: In the land titles system you look at a page in a book, and that indicates who the owner is; it also indicates any mortgage that is registered against the land. But under the Land Titles Act we refer to the mortgage as a charge, which is something else that bothers me.

If you buy land in the registry system, you get a deed, but in the land titles system you get a transfer. We all know what a mortgage is, but in the land titles system we speak of a charge—and this makes it more confusing to the lay person when he's discussing these matters with his solicitor.

In the registry office system, in order to certify title we must go back a period of 40 years and see where A sold it to B, B to C and so on; that is called the chain of title. It doesn't mean you just go back from 1972 for 40 years, because the last deed on that title may have been put in there in 1933 and you would have to go beyond that—and the deed ahead of that may have been registered in 1887.

You can see the problems. It's a very archaic system. When this form of recording land was initiated the registrar was usually intimate with the land. He was a local man; he knew the farms and the people involved. But now it's a very involved and very complex system because of the great number of parcels and the great turnover annually in various pieces of land.

My friend from Sarnia asked how long it would take for the land titles system to be extended across the province. At the present time 24 counties in Ontario do not have it; I am advised it will take about four years to convert those 24 counties. In order for the entire province to be converted, there are some two million parcels to be converted and that would take a period of about 20 years.

He also mentioned some refinement of the planning legislation, which I might take up with my colleagues in cabinet—

Mr. Sargent: The minister won't be here in 20 years!

Hon. Mr. Clement: I won't be here in 20 years? I was here Tuesday.

Mr. Sargent: That's dirty pool!

Hon. Mr. Clement: I was going to save some comments for my good friend from Grey-Bruce. I was going to mention later how nice it was to see him here for the entire day. I'm glad he decided to stay, because I noticed the Sergeant-at-Arms burnishing his sword earlier today and I wish the member no ill will or harm.

I will take this matter up with my colleagues in cabinet. There have been some discussions about these problems at this particular time, and I am very much aware of some of these problems. As a former practising solicitor I can see some of the burdens that have been cast on a good number of people in this province, and because of this situation I hope something can be done to correct them.

The hon. member for Downsview, Mr. Speaker, made some comments about statutory liens. They are a very worrisome thing from a legal practitioner's point of view. For those who are perhaps not aware of this, this is where a statute says that if a certain tax isn't paid, then a lien shall automatically go against the lands of the taxpayer who has defaulted. Unless a particular search is conducted in this department and a certificate of clearance issued, in most instances those liens remain with the land, and it might be several owners later and several years later before they are detected. I believe it was the Law Reform Commission which recommended that this type of lien be abolished. I personally share that view, and since I went into the ministry we have had discussions with my senior officials, who also share that view.

Mr. Singer: Are we going to see a statute?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I can give no undertaking at this particular time as to whether a statute to this effect will be brought into being in the foreseeable future. But may I say this to members, and I say it sincerely, that I endorse the removal of statutory liens, save and except as to executions, which I think members will agree are a separate type of concept and very readily ascertained. This is the whole key.

Mr. Singer: Provided again the minister sharpens up some of the sheriff's offices too, so they know where they exist and what they can do.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I'll make a note: "Sharpen up sheriff's office and—"

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Clement: —"Sergeant-at-Arm's sword."

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lawlor: It wasn't an absolute appellation that—

Hon. Mr. Clement: Pardon me, I couldn't hear the member. Would he say that again? I would like to hear it.

Mr. Lawlor: If I may, Mr. Speaker, they didn't propose to abolish liens completely. It is just that they wanted registration; and secondly, registration that would apply against the very person, the present owner, from whom the debt was owing, or from whose estate the debt was owing. The liens still remain. I have no objection to it as long as it is registered and it's against current people, not six generations back.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Agreed. With the problems referred to about staffing, particularly in the registry office system, the problem is that the staff are usually working the hours that the searcher of the title or the solicitor is working, so when the staff member in the registry office goes to make an entry in a particular index or abstract, the book is in the hands of someone who is completing a search.

Certain officials from my ministry this past September advised me following an inspection of a similar type of operation in another jurisdiction, that they have got into the staggered work-hours situation, the particulars of which escape me. But it seems to me that people worked four days a week, or something of this nature, and worked perhaps from 9 in the morning, we will say, till 5, and the other group worked from 12 to 8. They were able to keep current in their entries, which, I am advised, are as complex as ours, by virtue of the fact that the books were available when the public didn't have access to the office.

This is something that we are taking a very good look into right now to see if, within the terms of existing labour legislation and agreements that exist between our staffs and government, whether something like this could be tried. I think it might be rather interesting if we did even a pilot project type of thing to see how it worked.

At particular times of the year when there seems to be a run on real estate, or there are more transactions than the normal type of month, it's possible to get very far behind, as has been pointed out. I understand that there was a backlog in the registry office here in Toronto—I have some figures before me—of some 22,000 documents by the end of September.

Mr. Singer: How about land titles, which is even worse?

Hon. Mr. Clement: They caught up by almost 9,000 by the middle of September; additional staff has been taken on, and there is a night staff working.

The problem for the solicitor, of course, is if the document isn't registered when he gets the book, then he looks in the book and he sees no other entries; but the unregistered documents are put on a sheet called the day sheet or the day book, and you have to look through many pages of the day book and you may be competing with 10 or 15 or 20 other people all looking at the same time trying to see the same information.

With reference to the young man that my friend from Downsview alluded to, I understand that he has made application to return and this may be of some real assistance to my ministry and may be of some assistance to him. As members probably know, there are three vacancies for registrars now being advertised in the press. The competition closed, I believe, near the end of October. We're advertising for a registrar of deeds in Toronto, Newmarket and Windsor.

Many bar associations have made submissions to the ministry in the past that these jobs should be filled by skilled and experienced solicitors. I'm told in the case of these three applications that certain solicitors have made application, but a good number of other types of people have applied who perhaps would not be satisfactory by virtue of their rather limited background in another field.

The cabinet at the present time is considering the problems raised by the Forfar decision. I anticipate that my colleague, the Attorney General (Mr. Bales), will be making some comment on it in the not too distant future.

The Ontario Court of Appeal has not yet answered certain hypothetical questions that were submitted to it last year relating to the Planning Act under, I believe, the Constitutional Questions Act. The matter was referred to the Court of Appeal by the cabinet. Perhaps when that decision is rendered, it may be of some real value to those who are involved.

I have no comment to offer with reference to solicitors' fees. I believe one of the members made reference to it. The process now of going back 40 years does involve a lot of time and a lot of skill.

The land titles system is the ultimate type of situation. I think it will be of assistance not only to the legal profession but to municipal, provincial and federal bodies in checking title and to the layman off the street himself, being able to come in and almost at a glance ascertain the property in which he is involved.

This is a rather technical bill, as is the next bill which accompanies it, Mr. Speaker. It's my hope that it will be referred to a standing committee of the House for consideration. I think those members of the House—

Mr. Sargent: Could the minister answer a question, Mr. Speaker?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes.

Mr. Sargent: Is the minister serious when he says that the input for computerization of two million in Toronto would take 20 years? Is he serious about that?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Not on computerization! The problem is that to put a programme on a computer you would have to ascertain, and very definitely ascertain, the exact boundary of each parcel of land that's programmed into the computer. Perhaps the member heard his colleague from Sarnia mention an application in which he is involved dealing with a 1.6 inch strip of land of certain depth—I don't think he made comment about the depth.

In essence you would have to search every title and satisfy yourself. You'd have to go back the 40 years to see if there are any old claims, if there are any heirs who hadn't signed off. You'd have actually to define the land and then get it on the computer. If all that information was available and agreed upon as far as programming it into the computer, I agree that it would be a relatively short period of time; but it's getting the information to go into the computer.

I know from practising law for nearly 18 years I've had disputes going on through clients next door to each other who can't even decide between themselves who owns the fence. This is the problem from a very practical point of view in computerizing it. That would be the ultimate, where you punch the button and you get the read out, but we've got to get the information to get it in there.

As the member for Downsview pointed out, the public, to whom I am responsible as Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, is very much concerned about a property being searched by maybe two or three different firms of solicitors. If you have a first and second mortgage on a property in a purchase, every solicitor in this House will agree you can have three firms of solicitors going on the same title, actually vying for the books at the same time and each charging for the responsibility which he incurs and the costs involved; and it is on the same parcel of land.

It is something that has been compounded over the past 100 to 150 years since we have been registering land in this province. We now have to face up to correcting it because if it goes on, 20 years from now it will be just that much worse.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Do I understand that this bill is to go to the appropriate standing committee?

Agreed.

REGISTRY ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 210, An Act to amend the Registry Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sarnia.

Mr. Bullbrook: I wanted, if I might, to reiterate that a great deal of this legislation is complementary to the bill which we had previously discussed. There is something, Mr. Speaker, that I'm going to be personally involved in with the minister, and that is in connection with the utilization of registry facilities by paralegal assistance and help.

As you recognize, the Canadian Bar Association, and Mr. Lang, the Minister of Justice, recently suggested that it would be wise for the legal profession to develop—as other professions, such as the dental profession, wish they had now—a certain coterie of para-professional assistants.

This is being done to a great extent by solicitors in the conveyancing field by training clerks, by training secretarial assistants in the actual abstracting of documents in the preparation of an appropriate abstract for the solicitor to digest the question or requisitions or otherwise in connection with a particular title.

I personally endorse this for the minister's consideration. A situation that is obtaining now in Sarnia is that the registrar of deeds has received a communication from the ministry to the effect that typewriters cannot be used in the registry office itself and that certain solicitors who have used typewriters, or their secretaries have used typewriters, will have to have them removed. I believe that this is a unique situation.

We are blessed with the registrar of deeds in Sarnia. He is not a member of the legal profession and I want to interject that I don't necessarily subscribe to the philosophy that a land registrar under either of these statutes needs to be a lawyer. I think some of the most knowledgeable people in connection with the application of these particular statutes aren't lawyers. They have a great many years, sometimes a generation, of experience that no lawyer, notwithstanding the sheepskin he has, can gain.

I endorse the principle, frankly, that the minister should consider the appointment of land registrars on their background and merit, not necessarily on their academic qualifications.

However, the point I was making was this: I will be shortly taking up with the ministry, through letter, the question of its attitude toward the use of paralegal assistance. I really recommend it for the consideration of the ministry. One would hope that it will eventually bring down the cost concurrent with searching of titles, because I think anybody in the profession has to recognize that the profession is going to have to have a look at the charges it makes to the public relative to certification of titles.

I think we all feel and recognize that sometimes it's an undue burden upon the public to pay, as the minister mentioned Mr. Speaker, in some instances three separate sets of legal fees. Albeit that we rationalize it as we do from the point of view of responsibility—and we do have that responsibility and it should be recorded for the public to understand that we are paid not only in connection with our training, our background and the work that we do, but we are paid also for the responsibility that we accept concurrent with that work.

What happened in effect is this; I will be sending the minister a copy of a letter where a member of his ministry has in effect said that no person is entitled to a specific spot for a typewriter, that that is a public domain—and with that no one can disagree.

I do say for example, however, that I would think at least 100 solicitors or their agents or their secretaries can work quite comfortably in that modern registry office in the city of Sarnia, without overburdening the accommodation. And so I think that the positioning, for example, of two secretaries by one of the law firms to abstract instruments by typewriter is not, I think, a burden on the public access to those facilities.

Concurrent with this, and concurrent with the principle of transferring the registry system eventually to land titles and the benefits to accrue to the public and the profession, I would ask the minister in the interim while that is being done, that he consider the recommendations of the Canadian Bar Association and the Federal Minister of Justice—and I believe of his cabinet colleagues—that we have to attempt to streamline the professional obligation in order to lessen the financial burden on the public.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak? The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: I haven't very much to say on this one, Mr. Speaker. The one comment, which is a rather minor one, has to do with the minister's designation of land registrar. The minister does it in both Acts and then he proceeds in the first bill to continue to call him master of titles—and throughout the course of this he calls him a registrar.

Having established the name why doesn't he stick to it? Give it some currency and establish it in the profession and among those who want to talk about registrars.

The only other matter which I thought might be worthy of mention in this regard is that the Law Reform Commission report 2—which I have just looked at really very cursorily—does not go to the third possibility in terms of the Registry Act and land titles and that is to the title insurance corporation concept as it operates in the United States. It seeks to retain the on-going system, absorbing the registry offices into the Torrens system.

The reason it does that apparently is because in those other jurisdictions there are incomplete abstracts; they haven't got the plenitude of material and the plenitude of documentation that is in our registry system, and therefore which can be meshed. And so they brought in the insurance concept in order to basically patch over the hiatus that has occurred in that particular system.

I was hoping that it wouldn't begin because of the monetary factor, which I mentioned previously, because I think with title insurance it is possible to get your titles done a good deal less expensively than it is in this province and I wouldn't want this to be a merely feather-bedding aspect of the legal profession in the terms of continuity. If other rationalizations can be found it will appease my conscience and that of my colleagues, I am sure.

The particular sections of the bill before us which have to do with a wide diversity of matters, such as where you cancel out the books, discharges of mortgages; how you operate with partial discharges; the business of the bar of dower and when it is utilized and when it is not—all these things can be discussed in committee.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this bill? The member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few comments with respect to this bill.

The minister mentioned previously the Planning Act, and I must say that in talking on this bill I am into an area with which I am not entirely familiar. But as I understand it in one case—and I use this example, since it pertains in my riding—it is a case where there was a registered plan in a municipality and over the years the registrar at Goderich had been registering deeds on that registered plan until just lately.

One lawyer in the area suggested that this not be done and that his client not purchase this particular piece of property under this registered plan. Then the whole thing was more or less thrown into chaos and it was suggested that under the registered plan, even though it was registered after the municipality was incorporated—which apparently adds to its legality—the purchaser in this case, in order to make absolutely certain that his title was clear, should proceed under a vendors' and purchasers' motion. Now I am not entirely familiar with the implications of that, but as I understand it, if the purchaser in that case did proceed on that basis and the court went against the applicant, then there are hundreds and perhaps thousands of deeds in this province which would be invalid.

I am wondering, in view of this, what this ministry and the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs are doing about this situation. As I understand it, there was one court case on this point and I believe there is another one pending in Owen Sound, and the ministry feels that it wants to wait until this particular matter is dealt with by the court in Owen Sound, in this instance, before making any judgement with regard to overall policy.

I am wondering if there isn't a better way to do it. I'm not a lawyer, but certainly it seems to me that if in fact the court did go against the applicant in this case—maybe they won't, maybe the chances of that are very small—but if in fact they did, then we will have utter chaos as far as registering deeds is concerned.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I would like to make myself clear on two matters. I referred to the question of certain advertisements in local newspapers for registrars of deeds. At no time did the requirements set forth that the applicant had to be a solicitor. I am just pointing this out, because in my comments perhaps I did not make—

Mr. Gaunt: Does he have to be a defeated candidate?

Hon. Mr. Clement: We don't have many around any more.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): They have all been given jobs. Right?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Certainly I agree with the concept submitted by the hon. member for Sarnia that there are many other people of other experiences and backgrounds and training who can certainly fill this function very adequately. But I did not want to demonstrate that there was a movement among certain groups in certain areas who felt that it was mandatory that only a member of the bar of this province could fill this type of occupation. That is more or less contradicted by most of us, of course, recognizing that a good number of solicitors practising in this province have little or no skills in the registry office because they have restricted their practice to other areas of activity.

The hon. member for Sarnia also made reference to paraprofessional assistants. There are a good number, and have been for many years, of abstractors and law clerks assisting the legal profession, subject always to the supervision of the legal profession and to the responsibility of the legal profession. I understand that there has been for some time an institute of law clerks, and certain community colleges do have courses in teaching matters pertaining to paralegal assistance.

I understand there were some difficulties about typewriters in the registry office at Sarnia. I am not aware of those, but as a former practising solicitor I would take umbrage with the fact that I had to sit down at a desk next to somebody who was using a clacking typewriter and interfering with my train of thought as I was trying to trace out the change of title. I find it difficult enough to do the search without that type of interruption.

I made reference to the Planning Act. I would like to make it clear that I have no responsibility for that Act, but it does touch on the registry office because the effect of the Planning Act is one dealing with titles and my responsibility is for the recording of the documents that come into the registry office or the land titles office through that system—not only the recording but the permanent custody of those documents.

As for the matter touched on by the hon. member for Huron-Bruce as to the effect of a decision which might well alter the outcome of many, many titles, I presume that is before the courts and it would not be proper for me to make comment on that particular case, the circumstances of which I know nothing about, other than what he mentioned here today. But this is the type of thing that the land titles situation pretty well excludes.

This is a risk that we all run, those of us who own lands under the registry system. It is a risk that we always run that the entire title might be upset at some future time. That's the very reason, of course, why we presumably go to a solicitor and have him certify title in writing, so that if this type of tragedy occurs, there is someone you can grab by the throat and legally get reimbursed for the damage which has been occasioned to you.

We are generally opposed to the title insurance situation. You will remember 10 or 15 years ago title insurance companies came into Ontario—I know they did in my home town—from the United States, saying this was the answer to the maiden's prayers. This is not much of an answer because the cost to the public has increased. You pay an insurance premium every time the property changes hands. This is exactly one of the complaints that the public is making, that if A buys a piece of land and is charged by a solicitor and sells it to B, then B complains because his solicitor is charging him for it. This certification of title from a solicitor in this province today is just the same as an insurance policy. It is for that reason that people have titles searched and certified to them in writing.

Another problem with the title insurance situation is that in many instances, so I am advised, the lender and the title insurance company are affiliated in some way and the lender, or the potential mortgagee, makes it conditional that he will only lend the money if title insurance is issued. So, he receives his interest on his mortgage and he also receives some money through his affiliate.

We are of the opinion that this would tend to direct people into this type of situation. I have a good number of friends practising law in the state of New York across from my home town who have been living with it for quite a few years and I have never heard one of them speak out strongly in favour of it—very much to the contrary. They are not too impressed with the title insurance situation.

If you have land titles across the province, then in effect you do have the province through a particular fund insuring your title once it is accepted for registration under the Land Titles Act. So, I need not make any further reference I suspect to title insurance.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading? Committee of the whole House?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am sorry. I would like that to go to a standing committee, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Standing committee.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say to the members of the House I had intended calling another piece of legislation. I don't think it would be fair at this hour of the day, so I am going to ask that we call third readings.

The following bills were given third reading upon motion:

THIRD READINGS

Bill 219, An Act to repeal the Wolf and Bear Bounty Act.

Bill 216, An Act to establish the McMichael Canadian Collection.

Bill 220, An Act respecting the Payment of Damages Caused to Livestock by Wolves.

Bill 223, An Act to amend the Ministry of Agriculture and Food Act.

Bill 227, An Act to amend the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Bill 228, An Act to amend the Separate Schools Act.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, as announced earlier this week, tomorrow we will call item No. 4 standing in my own name. If further time is available to us I would suggest that we'll have open for call any items standing on the order paper today.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6:10 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1972

The House met at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased to have visitors with us this morning. In the east gallery are students from the George Brown College of Toronto, and in the west gallery—I presume they will be arriving—students from the White Oaks Secondary School of Oakville. At 11 o'clock in the west gallery we will be having students from the Michipicoten High School of Wawa; and at noon hour, 12 o'clock, in the east gallery, students from Royal York Collegiate Institute of Toronto, and in the west gallery, students from St. Joseph's Separate School of the town of Preston, Ontario.

Statements by the ministry.

NEW YEAR'S LIQUOR LICENCE REGULATIONS

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, as members of this Legislature are no doubt aware, New Year's Eve this year will fall on a Sunday. In the past this has meant that it has not been possible to celebrate the New Year in the traditional manner.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Clement: The members are all waiting with bated breath, I know. I should like to announce to the House today that my ministry has requested the Ontario Liquor Licence Board to make special provisions for this one specific day.

As a result, the board has undertaken to amend the regulations to permit all licensed establishments to remain open and serve in the usual fashion from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m. on the night of Sunday, Dec. 31. Licensed dining rooms and dining room lounges will also be permitted to serve from 12 noon to 3 p.m. in the afternoon of that day, as well as from 6 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): A whole new era.

Hon. Mr. Clement: These hours replace the normal 12 noon to 10 p.m. Sunday hours for this one day. I trust this announcement will meet with the approval of this House.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): The member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) will drink to that, that's for sure.

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): It doesn't apply to Owen Sound.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

MUNICIPAL ENUMERATION

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the Minister of Revenue what action he took following the information from several municipalities, but mostly the city of Toronto, that the municipal enumeration, which is under his control, was so badly botched by the computers, or something, or somebody. What action has he taken to see that, for example, several railway stations have been removed from the lists of electors?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, Mr. Speaker, I haven't established yet that the enumeration is any more deficient than enumerations usually are.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Oh, come now. Churches. Stations. The deceased.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): It's terrible.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: And there have been churches and stations—

Mr. Lewis: They're all on there. They all have votes.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —and dogs and cats whose names have been included in enumerations in the past. We all, in this assembly certainly, have found enumerations that way because—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —of the fact that there's a human element—

Mr. Lewis: That is calculated deception.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): The minister can't slough things off like that.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Yes I agree. Some of them have been calculated. Many of the errors that crept into the enumeration have been caused by the computerization of the system and I'm not too happy with the way that has worked. We rushed into this thing. It had to be done in a hurry.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): You hadn't known about it?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Pardon?

Mr. Deacon: You hadn't known about it? Why not?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, as far as my getting into the ministry is concerned—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, that's the explanation!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It's no explanation at all. I have just said that I'm not satisfied it is any more deficient than most enumerations usually are.

Mr. Gaunt: It's worse this year!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: However, there have been mistakes which have cropped up and which in my view can be corrected. My staff has been directed to make certain as far as is humanly possible that as few of these mistakes as possible are made in the future.

I should add too that we have had letters and calls from clerks and mayors of municipalities telling us how satisfied they were with the enumeration. Some of them have said it's the best enumeration they have ever had in their municipalities.

Mr. Lewis: He always has letters!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, we do have the letters!

Mr. Lewis: He has more letters than any minister!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We do have the letters; we keep those letters—

Mr. Lewis: Commending the minister's department, whichever department he is in!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, any time the hon. member wants me to take time before the orders some day to read them into the House—

Mr. Lewis: Oh, I am sure he will without my prompting him!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It would be better than what he's doing now!

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): It's his humility that impresses me.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: We are constantly making sure that whatever improvements can be made, shall be made.

I must tell the hon. member that I have never been satisfied with anything that has been done by computer, because a certain impersonality creeps into computerization. I'm not happy with it all, but so far as it is necessary to have computerization we'll have to have it. And so far as it is possible to make sure that the human element isn't overlooked I'm going to make sure of that too.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Would it be accurate then to interpret the ministers' somewhat wandering remarks by saying that while he is prepared to accept the congratulations he is getting from some municipalities, he is rejecting the statements made by the elected members of council in Toronto and certain appointed members of the administration that the enumeration is by far the worst they have ever had and is totally inadequate and that those statements are simply gross exaggerations and unfair statements?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Grossman exaggerations!

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I would say, Mr. Speaker, that some of them are legitimate complaints; a great deal were grossly exaggerated because a couple of local politicians—and I can understand this during an election campaign—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: —came out immediately and said something about 50,000 being left off the list and so on, and that of course has not yet been established.

Mr. MacDonald: Why didn't you settle this at home?

Mr. Lewis: Don't bring family problems into the Legislature!

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): The minister didn't spank him when he needed it, and now he's paying for it.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: There's an element of truth in it as well as an element of exaggeration, and we're certainly taking cognizance of any legitimate complaints. Indeed, as I've tried to explain to the hon. member, we ourselves are not satisfied with the system as it exists and we are going to establish many improvements that hopefully will eliminate as many mistakes as possible.

REGIONAL GOVERNMENT GUIDELINES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister without Portfolio from Ottawa South. I believe it would come within the purview of his responsibilities if I were to ask him for some clarification of the guidelines that might lead to a regionalization of municipal government in areas where the population density is considerably below those guidelines established by his predecessor in referring to regional government. Have these guidelines now been abandoned or can areas such as Brant county, where the population is considerably lower than the minima established about four years ago now, forget those population minima?

Hon. C. Bennett (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, the question asked by the Leader of the Opposition does not fall within the confines of the portfolio I am answering for, which is North Pickering. I would say that it's still within the responsibility of the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario (Mr. MacNaughton).

Mr. Lewis: North Pickering?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Who is the member for North Pickering?

TRI-LEVEL CONFERENCE

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister what there was in the nature of the conduct of his delegation or what he said at the tri-level conference which led the media to report that his delegation practically scuttled the conference, and that if it had not been for the intervention of Senator Carl Goldenberg from Ottawa, who salvaged the conference, it would have been a disastrous shambles?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Again, Mr. Speaker, the question being asked by the member relates to the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs. The Treasurer was the head of the delegation for the Province of Ontario, and I think it is only appropriate that he should answer that question.

Mr. MacDonald: A fortuitous absence on his part.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, the hon. member who just deflected the question is a member of the ministry and he was a member of the delegation, obviously a senior member. Surely as a member of the ministry he can inform the House in the absence of the minister.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order, the question was not a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Snow: It wasn't supplementary.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have other questions?

WHOLESALE GASOLINE PRICES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, if the minister is not going to give us the benefit of his opinions in these matters, I would like to ask the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations if he has examined the file of information, which must be a very large one and a continuing one certainly, on the problems of the gasoline retailers. Is he going to press forward on the initiatives taken by his predecessor to examine the unfair practices of the major gasoline and oil suppliers which are putting impossible economic pressures on the individual retailers at the gas station or service station level?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, the matters referred to by the hon. Leader of the Opposition have been brought to my attention. We have accumulated a substantial number of briefs, letters, and various documents in connection with those matters—

Mr. Lewis: For years. For years and years.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Apparently for years. I am only talking for days and days.

Mr. Lewis: Right, that is a pity.

Hon. Mr. Clement: But, in any event, I hope to be able to bring this matter to the House in the fairly near future. I am presently getting some information from people in my ministry, and I will have to report back on it. I just don't know the full implications of it at this particular time.

Mr. Deans: That is what the minister's predecessor and his predecessor said.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Is the minister personally aware? I suppose he does gas up his own car from time to time or maybe his airplane. He would find out under those circumstances that a major oil supplier such as Shell Oil will, in fact, provide gasoline at supposedly a wholesale cost for a distributor, at a price which is at least as high as it can be bought retail at a gas station operated by the same oil company, except without the name Shell, just a couple of miles down the road. How can these people possibly compete against their own major supplier? Surely there has to be some action in this regard.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, from my own general experience I know that a good number of dealers working for various companies, perhaps some of those the hon. leader has already mentioned, are buying gasoline and petroleum products as a result of a contractual relationship entered into by them individually and the supplier of the gasoline. I cannot interfere at this stage of the game in those individual contracts. These matters have been drawn very forcefully to my attention by the man where I do buy my gas, and for an automobile, not an aircraft.

Mr. Gaunt: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: May I ask the minister if he has considered, or any of his ministry officials have considered, applying a uniform price for heating oil across the province?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I didn't hear the last part of the member's question.

Mr. Gaunt: A uniform price right across the province for heating oil.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have not considered that at this time. I have not considered that in relation to the member's question at this time.

Mr. Gaunt: Would the minister consider that as part of the overall study?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I think I am obliged to consider all matters that pertain to this particular facet of the petroleum industry, yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: Can the minister tell us what has happened to the studies that were conducted by his predecessor and the predecessor to his predecessor? Why is it that he now has to conduct a study into something that has been studied half to death? Why is it that we can't come to grips with the problem since the problem has been brought to this Legislature floor a number of times in the last three years?

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): That is why they change ministers.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I was getting along so well with these fellows yesterday.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): The minister didn't expect that to last very long, did he?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am attempting to acquaint myself with these particular problems. I do have a great deal of information available. I have had the opportunity of reading some of these items of information and am trying to come to certain conclusions.

I think that I am prepared to state at this particular moment that there has been what would appear to be a fairly serious problem demonstrated to me—

Mr. Deacon: That is quite revealing, isn't it?

Hon. Mr. Clement: —and I hope that I shall be able to get back to the members. I haven't had as much time to get into it in depth as I would like to have had, but that is where it is at this particular moment.

Mr. Deans: One final supplementary question: Is there any guarantee that the minister will remain in the portfolio long enough to do something about it?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): The member will never make it, that's for sure.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister aware that the whole carwash industry is being jeopardized by Imperial Oil's policy of giving free car washes with any fill-up of gas or any purchase of gasoline within the city?

Mr. Speaker: I am not too sure it is really supplementary to the original question. If the minister wants to answer it he may.

Mr. Good: What do you mean? It is right on.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I understand that there are practices which have been carried on for some years across the province, whereby, with the purchase of a certain minimum number of gallons of gasoline, a free car wash is provided. Insofar as the impact of that on the independent carwash dealer is concerned, I have not received any briefs drawing this to my attention.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question: Does the minister consider it is within the responsibilities of his department and within the rights of his department to intervene if a gasoline company is selling gas to a franchised retailer at a higher price than it is selling it to another retailer down the street for retail purposes?

Hon. Mr. Clement: The problem as I see it is one of private contract between the gasoline company and the retailer involved. If a retailer enters into a contract to purchase a minimum number of gallons at a certain fixed price or on an escalating scale of price, I don't feel that it is incumbent upon me to demonstrate to that retailer that he has perhaps made a bad choice.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister has not dealt with my question. Is it within the powers of his department to intervene in unfair trade practices when the same oil company will sell to a franchised dealer—

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Surely that is federal?

Mr. MacDonald: Pardon?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That is federal.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay! I am asking the minister whether he deems this to be within the power of his department, because he is kidding us if it isn't within his power to intervene.

Hon. Mr. Clement: It is within the purview of my ministry, as I understand my responsibilities, to deal with the modes of distribution, in reference to petroleum products. Insofar as price fixing and those kinds of arrangements are concerned they fall within the responsibility of the federal government under the combines legislation which is presently in effect; I am sure you have read something about the proposed Competition Act that the federal government is now considering. The mode of distribution and the scheme of distribution might well be within the purview of my ministry. I am assuming that it is.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Deacon: I wanted to ask a question.

Mr. Speaker: Well, there have been—all right, one more supplementary.

Mr. Deacon: In view of the fact that the departmental report on this problem was tabled nearly 18 months ago, would the minister undertake to bring in his proposals for solving the problem before the end of this session?

Mr. Deans: If he is still a minister!

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am advised that legislation is in the process of being prepared with reference to franchising, and I think the hon. member for York Centre has some knowledge of that legislation.

Mr. Deacon: I am talking about this particular problem of gasoline retailing. Does the minister propose to bring in legislation to deal with this before the end of this session? The problem is cited in the ministry's report of some 18 months ago.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't think that the legislation will be ready by the end of this session.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

STATUS OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION COSTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question for the Provincial Secretary for Social Development. Now that we are in a phase of retrenchment with the cutting back in education costs and hospitalization health care costs, can he report to the House the status of the committee on the cost of education he established many months ago with the former Deputy Minister of Education as its guiding light and moving spirit?

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, I think retrenchment was an unfortunate use of the word. I think as the ministers in this policy field have been making their announcements they are talking about a deceleration in the rate of increase.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister likes it better. It is okay by him.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Confession of ineptitude.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I think that is important. And I think the budget will certainly indicate that we are meeting our commitments along that line.

But to answer the Leader of the Opposition's question with specific reference to the McKeown commission on the cost of education, it is my understanding that the Minister of Education (Mr. Wells) will in fact be tabling a report from that commission before this session is over.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

NEW COMMUNITY OF NORTH PICKERING

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can address a question to the Minister without Portfolio in charge of North Pickering: Under the articles of agreement between the federal and provincial governments, the federal government obligated itself to pay a share of the cost of the 25,000 acres which were being purchased by the provincial government. What share of that cost has the federal government agreed to assume?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, relating to the problems between the Province of Ontario and the federal government on North Pickering, the matters of financing and cost sharing are still in the process of being discussed. We would hope that come Monday we might get down to some more concrete positions with the new federal cabinet minister, whoever he might be, responsible for that particular portfolio that will deal with the North Pickering airport and the new community.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, has the federal government given any indication about possible percentage of sharing of costs, other than in dollar terms?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, not to my knowledge. I have not become aware of the percentage and I can only say further to that that it is still under discussion.

TAX CREDIT FOR MACHINERY

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Revenue: Would he be kind enough to bring to the House, early next week, a list of the major manufacturing industries which took advantage of the five per cent rebate on machinery and equipment, and the given amounts by which these major manufacturing concerns benefited?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I will certainly consider that. I can't see any reason why I shouldn't bring it here, except that there may be a reason—for example it may have something to do with policy in respect of divulging the business various companies are doing vis-à-vis their competitors. I am just leaving that opening in case that should be the case.

Mr. Martel: Afraid we might find there is a kickback?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: But on the face of it I see no reason why that shouldn't be made available.

Mr. Lewis: I should think so.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will certainly consider that.

Mr. Lewis: Thank you. I appreciate that.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, thank you. By way of supplementary, it would be very useful for the minister to give us an estimate of the jobs created on the basis of the rebate—I think that $30 million was the amount last year.

Mr. MacDonald: Or the jobs lost.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I can tell the hon. member, and he knows of course, that that is an impossible task. How can you tell how many jobs are created by this? Of course you can't tell.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): We understand that.

Mr. Deans: It better not be impossible, because the minister promised that.

Mr. MacDonald: That was his stated objective.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Your stated objective is when you do something to fire up the economy it will create jobs.

Mr. Martel: He fired it up all right.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: No one can tell in specific terms how many jobs were created. Obviously the hon. members know that.

Mr. MacDonald: He sounds like Jean Marchand.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary—this is beginning to sound a little like the minister's great housing announcement of a couple of years ago, that disintegrates under examination—how is it that the greatest job-making mechanism of that budget cannot give us some estimate of the number of jobs and give us a breakdown? What should possibly prevent this House from having a specific breakdown of every aspect of the rebate which an individual industry took advantage of?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, of course, in the first place I did not make an announcement in respect of how many jobs would be created by this particular—

Mr. Lewis: The Premier (Mr. Davis) promised—the minister indicated in the budget—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All right. The hon. member knows perfectly well that tax policy and the reasons therefor are announced by and are the responsibility of the Treasurer of this province so I never made any announcement in that respect, let's get that clear—except insofar as I am a member of the government, of course, I am responsible for the policy of the government.

Secondly, his reference to the statement I made about housing a year or so ago disintegrating. It didn't disintegrate at all, because all of those prognostications with respect of how many houses were built not only were carried out but were exceeded in respect of the estimate made in the particular announcement, so let's get that one settled.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, when he is bringing a report back to the House would the minister give us the substance of the Premier's claim just before the last provincial election that 6,000 new jobs had been created by the five per cent rebate?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I will look into that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Does the member for Scarborough West have further questions?

SECURITY GUARDS' LICENCES

Mr. Lewis: Yes, Mr. Speaker, a question, if I may, of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. Can he indicate to the House why Intercon Security Ltd. was granted a security guards' licence just a few months ago in what appears to be direct violation of section 10 of the Security Guards Act which does not allow for the transfer of licences—in this case from Canadian Specialized Security to Intercon Security Ltd?

And by way of supplementary, in addition, could he allow the House to know why it is the policy of his government to allow open strikebreaking groups to traffic in security guard licences?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have no knowledge of questions dealing with Intercon. I will obtain that information and get back to the member on it; I just don't know. All right?

Mr. Lewis: I would appreciate it.

MECHANICAL FITNESS CERTIFICATES

Mr. Lewis: One last question of the same minister, Mr. Speaker: Can the minister tell us if, within the next two to three weeks, he will introduce the legislation governing the issuance by mechanics of mechanical fitness certificates for automobiles?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't understand the member's question. I am sorry.

Mr. Lewis: The minister, I believe, has indicated that often false fitness certificates are signed by mechanics in the automobile industry and that there might be legislation to remove this possibility, or to levy fines.

Hon. Mr. Clement: No, I will not be introducing any such legislation within the next two or three weeks. The issuance of those mechanical fitness certificates is a requirement under my ministry insofar as the transfer of ownership of a car from a vendor to a purchaser is concerned. The regulations dealing with the mechanic who issues that certificate are not the responsibility of my ministry.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions?

Mr. Lewis: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: If not, the hon. member for Ontario South.

NEW COMMUNITY OF NORTH PICKERING

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister without Portfolio from Ottawa South regarding the project he is in charge of, the North

Pickering community development project. I would like to ask him when he intends to initiate expropriation proceedings in the area to start acquiring land; and the second part of the question, is he going to do some serious negotiation on purchase of this land before he starts expropriation procedures?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question, first of all it is the intention of the government to eventually get into the position of expropriation. The date of commencement has not been determined by cabinet at this point. Further to that, negotiations will continue until that time and will also continue after the notice of expropriation has been issued by the province.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Can the same minister indicate to the House whether the group of people charged with the acquisition of land is in fact using the threat of expropriation to achieve earlier settlements? And is he aware that one of their recent publications indicated that although 11 per cent had settled, they would use expropriation on the "holdouts"?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, not to my knowledge is the threat being used. I would say that the member for York Centre has brought to my attention on a previous occasion that someone had issued the threats.

Mr. Deacon: On several occasions.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: It is my understanding that the people who are negotiating the purchases for the province have indicated very clearly that expropriation is a possibility in the relatively near future.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Givens: I ask the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence): Is he not—

Mr. Deacon: Is this a supplementary?

Mr. Givens: No, this is not a supplementary, Mr. Speaker; of course not!

Mr. Speaker: Was there a supplementary?

Mr. Deacon: Yes, supplementary!

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry I didn't hear the hon. member call for a supplementary, I'll permit it.

Mr. Deacon: Will the minister, in connection with the expropriation, consider having a full hearing on the need for this Cedarwood project, and the viability of it, before he proceeds with expropriation, so that the various pros and cons of it can be fully debated before the government gets any further into it?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, I would say that it has not been the intention of the government of Ontario to hold any further hearings on it—

Mr. Deacon: Further hearings? They haven't had any!

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Pardon me; the hearing, Mr. Speaker, would come under the expropriation, and the hearing of the appeals that might be made by those who would be issued notice of expropriation. It is not the intention to have a hearing.

Mr. Speaker: Now the hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: This had better be good after all this.

ALBERTA NATURAL GAS

Mr. Givens: I ask the Provincial Secretary of Resources Development whether he is not alarmed at a policy announcement which was made by the Conservative Premier of the Province of Alberta, by which he intends to establish a two-price system for the price of natural gas? I ask the minister whether he intends to take any action at all on this very discriminatory, and probably unconstitutional, announcement, which is bound to have a devastating effect on Ontario industry? What is the minister going to do about it?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Well Mr. Speaker, I can report that the question is, of course, very topical, to the extent that yesterday morning our policy people spent a great deal of time on the Premier of Alberta's policy statement, discussing its implications. We are at the stage at the moment merely of assessing its implications. The Alberta Premier's statement is not that definitive.

We are also assessing, of course, the dollars and cents implications of different price levels insofar as Ontario industry and Ontario consumers are concerned. I won't be, personally, I think, announcing policy, because its significance is such that presumably the government will speak on this through the Premier of Ontario.

I can simply conclude by saying that it is extremely complicated insofar as figures are concerned, involving not only my policy field but Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs and the Attorney General's role; but what is, of course, extremely simple, is that any increase in energy costs for this province, whether they be natural gas or any other source, have direct implications that we have got to be aware of and react to if necessary.

Mr. MacDonald: Supplementary: Is this an interprovincial matter; to what extent, if any, does the federal government come into the picture; or is it going to be in the picture?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, the federal government is in the picture through the National Energy Board insofar as the implications of transportation of the gas are concerned; in the case of TransCanada for example. The federal government is involved also in relation to the stated oil policy of the federal government and control at the federal level, which I would judge no one else has, over international—that is Canadian-US, export of the fuel.

We're not—I don't think we are capable of it constitutionally—taking a particular position Ontario vis-à-vis Alberta. But obviously we have a very significant political position to take on behalf of the interests of our industry and consumers.

Mr. MacDonald: A final supplementary, if I might, Mr. Speaker. Has the federal government indicated either the desire or an intention to become involved in the discussions and the solution of the matter?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Not that I know of. But I cannot see, again, how the federal government can discharge its responsibilities without taking leadership in this field.

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary!

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary, all right.

Mr. Lewis: To the minister: Has this government expressed its urgent concern directly to the government of the Province of Alberta? Has there been a call from the Premier or the minister to Mr. Lougheed or his compatriots?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I can't answer that.

Mr. Lewis: Well, the minister can answer it for himself surely. Has the minister been directly in touch with his counterpart in Alberta to discuss the implications for Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: No, I have not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: That is most peculiar.

Mr. Speaker: I believe the hon. member for Port Arthur was—all right, the hon. member for Nickel Belt.

SACU TESTS

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Thank you, Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Colleges and Universities: What is the minister doing to bring some kind of logic to the whole university admission testing scene in the province? Has he directed the universities either to abandon the SACU tests or pay for the cost of administering themselves?

Hon. J. McNie (Minister of Colleges and Universities): Mr. Speaker, I'd agree with the hon. member there's a need for a decided improvement in the admission evaluation procedures being used today. We're not in the position, as you're probably aware, to dictate to the universities or colleges as to what kind of standards they use because this is an area in which we're trespassing; they consider it to be, and I think quite appropriately so, academic responsibility.

However, as you're well aware, I went on record three weeks ago expressing great reservations with the present testing method, which is referred to as SACU, because there seemed to be a decided lack of acceptance on the part of both teachers and students. I suggested at that time that the study which they had just undertaken of SACU should be expedited and that the universities should get together and decide for themselves how appropriate it was that half a million dollars be spent by students and their families on tests for which a very small number had any use. They were being used, for the most part, only in a small number of the larger universities to decide the entrance qualifications of people who were what they called marginal.

There has been agreement on the part of people like Dr. Evans and others that we have to find a better evaluation method and we're certainly encouraging them to do this, and to do this with as much speed as they can, hopefully, to introduce the more personalized considerations so that it isn't all predicated on a computer and on the test which, as I suggested, has lost credibility.

I'm not making any comment on the actual test itself. It wouldn't be appropriate for me to do this, but there are those who are much better versed in this, who suggest that it's outdated and that we should find other methods. Certainly, Mr. Speaker, we're encouraging them to do this.

We recognize that with the abandonment of the grade 13 exams, it is very difficult for the universities to determine the qualifications of some of the people who are applying. As you know, a shortcoming of the grade 13 exams, and I think this is all relevant to our discussion, Mr. Speaker, was that the tests weren't constant across the province. A mark of 85 from Red Lake might have been worth a mark of 65 in some other community or vice versa. But because the teachers were working on different courses and covering the courses at different speeds, it was very difficult to give uniform exams.

We'd certainly welcome any thoughts of any members on the other side as to how we might provide better evaluation procedures at the grade 13 level.

Mr. Laughren: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In light of the decelerated spending programme of the ministry, why doesn't the ministry absorb the cost of the tests for this year, and abandon them next year?

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): Lots of slush in the budget for it.

Mr. Laughren: It's a supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Well, I'd add the—

Mr. Laughren: The minister is not going to respond.

Mr. Speaker: Is there any response to the question?

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, as far as we're concerned we made very clear, to the schools and the school jurisdictions, the importance we attach to the SACU tests. We think this surely then became a matter between the student and the university as to whether or not it was appropriate to spend $11. We didn't think it was and, quite frankly, we don't think it's appropriate to spend the taxpayers' dollars on something that we don't consider to be worth $11.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Isn't it true that the school board recommends it, through the guidance teachers and through the individual schools, to the student? Surely, if the department felt that it was an inadequate test, there should have been some information given out before that. Is he aware, sir, for example, that some students brought home their request for the $11 payment on the very day that we heard the new minister murmuring over the radio that the tests were inadequate and probably not worth the money?

Hon. Mr. McNie: I was one of those parents who had the form brought home to me with a request for $11.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: But surely we must construe that the board recommended it. I mean the kids don't want to take it.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Excuse me. Which board is the hon. member referring to?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Brant County Board of Education.

Hon. Mr. McNie: The government made it very clear, about 18 months previously, what its views were when it withdrew its support. We had hoped that this indication would have resulted in the universities' abandoning this particular method for assessing the admissibility of the students, because it was only one of a number of criteria that were being used, including grade 12 marks, grade 13 marks and the recommendation of the principal. Quite frankly, we had hoped that the universities would have chosen not to use it and, as a matter of fact, most of the universities did choose not to use it. If the board at Brant felt that it was important to do it, maybe it should have funded the tests.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: Why did the ministry then not develop an adequate testing system in time, so that the students could receive a just application and consideration at the university level? Surely the minister is abdicating his responsibility by forcing the students to pay for inadequate testing.

Mr. Martel: It's the former minister's fault.

Hon. Mr. McNie: Mr. Speaker, in the first place I think the hon. member because of his profession would recognize it isn't quite that simple to develop that kind of an evaluation. It would certainly be generally acceptable; but at the same time I think that we should recognize that there's a—what was the second part of the member's question?

Mr. Foulds: I asked simply why has the ministry not developed an adequate testing system, because these tests have been in operation for over five years.

Hon. Mr. McNie: The answer to that obviously is, as I say, we didn't think it was needed. This was the whole point of the thrust. I think that the universities' response to it has been to indicate that it wasn't. But, so far as the development of other mechanisms is concerned, we are very happy to work not only with jurisdictions here in this province but with other provinces to develop a more appropriate evaluation. The most critical point is that we can't interfere, and I don't think you would want us to interfere in these kinds of judgements. This is something that is surely a matter of autonomy on the part of university communities.

Mr. Foulds: I would suggest that the minister get together with his colleague, the Minister of Education.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

LAKE ERIE HIGH WATER

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development. Could the minister inform me if there is any programme to control the high rise of water in Lake Erie, which is causing serious concern to many homeowners on the north shores of Lake Erie and also to the municipalities which have drainage schemes, dikes, and so forth, or will there be any programme announced for control of this high water?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Mr. Speaker, I can't speak of any programme until we find out whether there is any practical way of controlling the level. Ontario as a jurisdiction, I would judge, has very little power. We don't know from the point of view of engineering and science itself, whether Canada, the US, or both jointly, can control those levels. If we find we can, of course, we can then start to discuss a programme.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary of the minister: With the levels of Lake Ontario and also Lake Superior being controlled, is there not some consideration being given to any possibility of controlling Lake Erie and Lake Huron? Has the ministry made any representation to the United States with regard to Chicago, whose water was cut down from 10,000 cubic feet per second a number of years ago, to the 3,200 cubic feet per second that it is now taking out of the Great Lakes system? Maybe if this was increased on a temporary basis, it might relieve the situation somewhat.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: My understanding is that the International Joint Commission, which has the jurisdiction internationally, has been since, I guess—

Mr. Bullbrook: It has no powers; it might have jurisdiction.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: It does have real political power!

Mr. Bullbrook: No!

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Quite candidly, I can't think of any significant recommendation in the history of the International Joint Commission that hasn't been acted upon by the two governments. It has power through its prestige. And although I agree with the member that it has no constitutional or legal power to enforce its order, I think he would have to allow that its recommendations are very powerful in the political sense.

In any case, it has been studying water levels for many years, and my only comment on the last question—and this is almost personal—is that I think we should be very careful about putting ourselves in any position which in the long term would encourage substantial increases in the flow of water through the Chicago River. It would make me, and those of us who are concerned with Canadian water resources broadly, nervous—would that be the word?

Mr. Ruston: The minister ought to live down our way if he wants something to be nervous about!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West was attempting to gain the floor.

EDUCATION OF FORMER CROWN WARDS

Mr. Bounsall: A question of the Minister of Community and Social Services: Why doesn't the minister simply rule that Children's Aid Society wards between the ages of 18 and 21 who are attending secondary school automatically continue under the care of the Children's Aid Society rather than forcing them on welfare—or, the newest response he has taken, that an application be made on their behalf to Toronto and someone down here, who doesn't know anything about the student, will try to make a decision as to whether they should be continued or go on welfare? Why doesn't he continue them automatically?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, when the Child Welfare Act was amended last June it conformed to the age of majority legislation which came into effect, whereby those who attained the age of 18 were considered as adults. At the same time, what has happened is that at times the legislation perhaps has been too rigidly interpreted.

I have asked that the legislation be given maximum flexibility in its application and that those children who were former Crown wards and have now attained 18 years of age and are continuing their education, either in a high school, university or college, where it is in their interests that they be assisted, that this be done—and I believe this will be done. We have sent a memorandum to all the directors of the children's aid societies this past week to that effect.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period time has expired.

Before I proceed with the routine proceedings, the clerk has informed me that some hon. member has left with him a question which is an inquiry of the Ministry of Natural Resources—but it hasn't been signed. Would the hon. member identify himself?

Mr. Martel: That's me!

HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

Mr. Shulman moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Shulman: This bill was drawn up by the model bills committee of the Council of State Government. Its purpose is to control the driving of automobiles by persons under the influence of drugs. At the present time the law only affects those persons under the influence of alcohol.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The second order, consideration of the reports of the Liquor Control and Liquor Licence Boards.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that we will have a debate today on the provincial government's responsibilities for alcoholic beverages.

As a new minister who has just recently assumed responsibility for the Liquor Control Board and the Liquor Licensing Board, I have naturally been exploring in some detail the present legislation and the way it is administered. My review has included lengthy and informative discussions with provincial officials and representatives of the beverage alcohol industries.

I am now anxious to have the benefit of the members' advice and viewpoint in a broader forum; there is surely no better place to start than with the members of this Legislature.

To assist the members in their deliberations this morning, I would like to outline to them the prevailing policy objectives of the provincial government regarding the control, licensing and marketing of alcoholic beverages and some thoughts on how they may need to be reviewed for the future.

The present objectives of the Liquor Control Board can be identified as the following:

To purchase, stock and sell liquor in a manner that provides the best possible service to the people of Ontario.

To establish and operate liquor stores and supervise the establishment and operation of all brewers' retail stores and Ontario wine stores.

To raise provincial revenues by licensing breweries and wineries as well as their retail outlets, and by selling imported and domestic spirits, wine and beer.

To administer the Liquor Control Act and its regulations as they affect the general possession, sale, consumption, transportation and delivery of spirits, wine and beer.

To control the advertising and promotion of alcoholic beverages so that they promote brand preferences rather than increase use of alcohol.

For the Liquor Licence Board the objectives are:

To issue, renew, transfer, suspend or revoke licences for on-premises sales and consumption of beverage alcohol.

To issue and revoke special occasion and military mess permits.

To regulate advertising for licensed establishments.

To restrict the number of licences that may be issued in a municipality.

To administer the Liquor Licence Act.

In general the Liquor Control Board and Liquor Licence Board have met these objectives admirably.

Ontario's 475 liquor stores offer approximately 1,800 varieties of spirits, wine or beer. It is widely recognized that Ontario citizens have the benefit of a greater selection of products, better quality control and wider distribution than any other Canadian province and most other countries.

The number of liquor stores and brewery outlets has grown steadily. In addition, the Liquor Control Board maintains a policy of fostering agency stores in existing commercial facilities in the northern part of the province, particularly for recreational areas, and has initiated mobile outlets—there are now 10 in this province—and self-service stores. The objective again is convenient, economical service to the public.

The Liquor Licence Board has also shown considerable flexibility and initiative in its operations. With the board's encouragement many public houses have been upgraded and their licences converted to permit men and women, both escorted and unescorted, to consume alcoholic beverages in the same room. Barmaids have been added to the staff of men's beverage rooms and the range of permissible entertainment has been increased—all in recognition of the social nature of drinking.

The drinking age has been lowered and I can now say that there have been few, if any, harmful effects from the lowering of the legal age to 18. Young people affected have handled their responsibility well.

Special occasion permits, nearly 150,000 of which were issued last year, are now extended to cultural and ethnic festivals and other large social gatherings with great success. Patio licences are now available so that a social evening can be held outdoors.

These developments have been accomplished in response to public demand.

Our government has reviewed and improved its policies on liquor licensing, control and marketing on a number of occasions, but we have not undertaken a fundamental re-examination of the legislation in 25 years. In my own review of our present situation, I have seen a number of indications which suggest that a searching review of government policy may now be in order. It goes without saying that social attitudes and behaviour patterns have altered substantially in recent years.

Some of our basic objectives are at least partially contradictory. For example, the control of liquor consumption is somewhat at odds with raising government revenues, and our desire to protect Ontario agriculture and Ontario manufacturing may conflict with our desire to offer produce at economical prices.

We have before us the recommendations of the McRuer report, which deals in part with liquor regulations, particularly as they affect appeal procedures from board decisions. We have accepted many of these recommendations. At the same time we find that their implementation would involve many structural changes which require, and are receiving, considerable study. It is our plan, nonetheless, to introduce amendments implementing many of the McRuer recommendations at the earliest possible time, and at the latest by next spring.

Having considered how we might best proceed toward resolution of these matters we have concluded that an overall policy setting out our priorities is needed.

I would like to announce to the House today our government's intention to undertake a thorough review of liquor legislation in this province and the establishment of a formal study group for this purpose. While I am not able to indicate to members at this time the precise nature of this study, I would like to assure the House of the fundamental nature of its inquiry and our objective of a long-term liquor licensing, control and marketing policy.

To that end I have already written to all members of this House requesting their views on this matter, and I look forward to our debate today as a further opportunity to share ideas and views with other members of the Legislature.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on this side we welcome the announcement made by the minister for a full, thorough review of the legislation governing liquor licence procedures and the activities of the Liquor Control Board.

The minister himself will no doubt recall that under the auspices of one of his predecessors who is presently Provincial Secretary for Social Development (Mr. Welch), quite a thorough cabinet review took place in which certain amendments were brought forward which had been approved on all sides—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Other things got lost though!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I think the minister is correct, however, in that a full and open consideration of the basic philosophy leading to amendments of our present statute, or hopefully a replacement of the present statutes, is in order.

In his statement he indicated in point form what were basically the terms of reference of the Liquor Licence and Liquor Control Boards. From lack of a philosophical approach, we on this side assume their philosophy is to buy the liquor as cheaply as possible, water it down, and sell it dearly.

They do this, as you know sir, through stores that are owned and staffed by the government of Ontario, which has a monopoly position in the sales of all of these items; with the exception of wine, and to some extent beer, which is largely under either direct or indirect control. The profits in this last year approach $200 million; and why shouldn't they be great since the government operates a monopoly this extensive.

The stores that the Liquor Control Board operate are often the finest edifices in some of the smaller communities, and even some of the bigger communities in Ontario. They have fantastically large sums at their command, and I suppose they could even make their net profit to the government higher if they chose to operate on a more economical base; but, really, as a business procedure they have it made.

There was a time when one of the great debates in this House was an attempt to find out from the responsible minister just what the consumption of water was at the main warehouse of the Liquor Control Board, and the ministry of the day guarded that as one of its most closely held secrets. In an effort to determine just how much water was used in the dilution of the original product purchased, often in casks from Scotland, the enthusiastic researchers in the opposition had to take the whole water bill and deduct that which would be used for washing and other purposes and come to a round figure, which was sort of an indication of how the value and clout of the product had been reduced.

The matters that concern us, however, are somewhat less sensitive, let's say than they were three or four years ago, certainly less sensitive than they were 10 or 12 years ago when there was no way a member of this House could express perhaps strongly held personal views on the control, or to use the word in its loosest form, the sale of liquor, without running afoul of very strong public reaction. Unless a member in this House on all occasions spoke for the most rigorous control, the strongest programmes to reduce its use, then certainly he would run afoul of public opinion.

There are members of the House who themselves have experienced this public opprobrium, and I am glad that we can at least discuss the matter more rationally these days than we could in the past.

I would like to reiterate, however, Mr. Speaker, one position that we on this side have taken now, consistently I guess since about 1962, which I sincerely hope will be seriously considered by the other members of the House, and that is to abandon this position that requires a local option before it is necessary for outlets to be legally available in a specific community.

We have heard the government defend the local option position as recently as two years ago when it was indicated by the government spokesman that the Conservative Party was unalterably tied to the local option concept and it would never be interfered with. But we know, sir, that over the last recent years local option votes have descended to the ridiculous in some communities where the whole enumerated voters' list would amount to only two names.

In a case in my own community involving a very famous and well-known restaurant, the White Horse Inn at Paris, and I trust that many members have availed themselves of its hospitality, that it was not possible for that particular restaurant to serve liquor. In order to change that it was deemed advisable that the small little slice of area upon which the excellent restaurant was situated be annexed by the town of Paris. Then there had to be a vote of the people living on that little slice of land, 25 or 30 people. They, in their wisdom, gave overwhelming support through the local option vote to licensing the premises.

It was a farce of democracy. I feel that we should abandon this approach entirely and leave the responsibility to the Liquor Licence Board or its successor to accept the objections from local citizens who might feel that certain applications should not be granted for a variety of reasons.

In my own community, which was dried up in the 1800s, one of the continuing problems that I am presented with as the local representative is the problem experienced by people who want to go to a licensed premises and who have to get in their automobiles and drive a minimum of 10 miles. Often it is easier to go to the premises than it is to return, and my experience is that when they are charged under the Highway Traffic Act one of their objections is, "Why can't we have some kind of a facility in our own community?"

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Dial-a-bus.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And, sir, the community is dry; there has not been a wet vote. You might say, "Why don't they have a vote?" Well, no one has taken the initiative and I don't intend to.

I think that we should just abolish this whole situation of local option. It is ridiculous. Even in a dry township like my own, South Dumfries, there are legal outlets associated with certain clubs. One has to be a member of those clubs if one is going to go and have a social and legal drink away from his own home.

The minister is aware that the iron clad local option position which the Conservative Party has defended down through the years has been breached in many other ways in certain areas which are designated as tourist centres. Whether the township votes wet, dry; yes or no; or anything—even Liberal I suppose, although that is another matter,—its designation as a tourist centre will permit the award of a licence.

In other words the hypocrisy of the government opposite has been obvious now for many years. They want to gain credit for maintaining this local option position and they also want to have the advantage of licensing premises where they see fit.

I believe it should be removed from the realm of that sort of politics and lodged with the decision of a board which would have the confidence of the whole community of Ontario.

In the minister's statement he referred to the reduction of the drinking age, which certainly was suitable. Not only as a member of this House but as a parent I wholeheartedly approve. My son became 18 almost on the very day that Royal Assent was given, so that he was not subjected to the social pressures of having to go along and have a beer with his friends while under the age of 21. I trust that, of course, he would have obeyed the law.

But, of course, we already have the same problem that we had before, and that is that it is obvious that underage drinking is still taking place. I remember when this reduction of the drinking age took place there were editorialists—at the time I thought they were out on the outer fringe of reasonableness—who said, "Perhaps we should remove the age requirement entirely." This wouldn't mean, I suppose, six-year-olds flocking into the beer parlours, but it would mean that we would be left without the problem of policing that line between the people who are 17 years of age and those who are 18. I am sure the inspectors for the licensing board and the control board—

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Is the member recommending that?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, I am not—am having the same problem that they had when the drinking age was 21.

I also believe there are many licensed premises which are catering—and I have a personal objection to this, but it is an unreasonable one—to the 18-year-old high school crowd; and these places I think can become centres of underage drinking.

I don't know what the minister is going to do about it, but the problems of enforcement are almost exactly the same as they were when the drinking age was 21. I believe the age of 18 is much more reasonable and I agree with what the minister has said in his statement, the problems still exist.

Actually when we assess the stress on society, not only on taxpayers but on society in general, of the use of alcoholic beverages we realize it is one of the major stresses with which we contended. It is not for me to list the statistics of the highway traffic accidents, the family breakups, or many of the situations that have a deleterious effect on the community and are a tremendous cost to the taxpayers, which are directly or indirectly associated with the use of beverage alcohol.

We made a commitment this year to the Addiction Research Foundation of close to $18 million, I believe, for all purposes in an effort to compensate, to do research and to improve the situation. We'll be discussing that commitment on another occasion, although I presume it would be in order here.

Many people are not so enthused with the workings of the ARF as they once were. We feel that some of the initiative, some of the gains in research, don't seem to be as interesting and spectacular as they were five or six years ago.

My feeling is that we must recognize the stress on the community. One of the objections that I want to express on a personal basis is the use of advertising for alcoholic products. This comes under the control of the Liquor Control Board or the Liquor Licence Board, and their aim is simply to permit advertising which will permit changes in brand choices rather than expansion of the use of liquor, beer and wine itself.

Obviously this cannot be done. The tremendous commitments to advertising in all the media certainly have expanded the use of liquor tremendously and, in my view, it should be put in the same category as the advertising of cigarettes, in that I believe it is equally harmful. Maybe it doesn't cause lung cancer or whatever it is we're concerned with in the tobacco situation, but the amount of bodily damage and social damage must be far greater than that which is associated with tobacco. The use of booze—liquor, wine and beer—is extremely widespread.

As a member of the United Church, I can even report to the minister that it is less adamant in its opposition than it once was. I know there are others in this chamber who could refer to the changing attitudes of organized religion much more effectively than I can. The community approach to its use has changed quite dramatically.

We look on the threats posed to the community by drugs in much the same way as we used to consider alcohol, but alcohol has been accepted by the community at large with, I believe in most instances, a realization of what its threat is and what its undoubted advantages are.

Mr. Shulman: It's a far more serious threat than drugs!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would say to you on a personal basis that we ought to consider the banning of liquor advertising in this province. I believe that it is of great concern, particularly when we have taken the responsibility of reducing the drinking age. All you have to do is conjure up in your mind those beautiful colour television ads of the crystal clear, cold stream flowing down over those bottles of beer placed there, just waiting for the boys to finish building the cabin so that they can then celebrate their accomplishments. It's great advertising, you know; even the songs are catchy—almost as catchy as the "Bill Davis jingle"; and, really, in that sort of context they are very similar.

Mr. Shulman: They are paid for by the same people!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Probably written by the same hack too.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I think we in this House should consider removing this pressure, this advertising pressure, which is added to the social pressure on our population at large.

I want to be as brief as I can. I have some specific points other than those I have brought to your attention. I want to raise again for the minister's consideration the anachronism of our Sunday drinking legislation, which requires in licensed club premises, particularly golf clubs, the ordering of a full meal in order that a cold beer can be enjoyed by the golfer when he comes in on a Sunday afternoon. The minister may also be aware that under the new chairmanship of the Liquor Control Board—

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Samia): Mackey?

Mr. Singer: Mackey!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —the law is being applied more rigorously, at least in the opinion of some people, than it was before; and I believe the chairman deserves credit for this. We have the responsibility to make the law; and if the law is incorrect or improperly understood, it is our responsibility. It is the chairman's job, and those people who work for him, to administer the law with an even hand and fairly.

Mr. Shulman: But they don't.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well I'll listen to the member's speech because I know that under certain circumstances there seem to be some serious anomalies. I'm simply trying to say that this particular aspect is being enforced more rigidly than it used to be, so we are going to have to change it. If you can't go out and play a game of golf on a hot afternoon and come in and have a cold beer in a licensed club without ordering a meal, then we've got to change the law if the liquor board is going to enforce that requirement as rigidly as it did last summer. It's probably a small point, but it certainly isn't small for those people who are affected by it personally. I for one am not, because I don't play golf.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In the same connection, I have had people write to me and say: "It is our custom to take wine that we buy or that we make ourselves out on a picnic, and on more than one occasion we have been told by enforcement officers that we are breaking the law and been forced to gather up our goodies in the blanket and take them back to our own home for consumption."

There are many of these areas which are bound to be a problem among the reasonable public as soon as the government rigidly applies the regulations and rules which the Legislature in years gone by and in its wisdom has presented to the board for enforcement. Many of these irritants are minor, but others are substantial irritants indeed.

I don't have to tell you, Mr. Speaker, about the changing composition of the people, the ethnic background and therefore the social customs of the people in this province. I think that it's just been a great, invaluable improvement and change in the whole ambience of life in Ontario. We've got to be very careful that our liquor regulations don't continue to embarrass and irritate those people and the rest of us who have followed their excellent example.

Another point, I cannot understand why it is necessary for certain establishments to wait for licensing privileges until they have gone through some sort of a refining fire of serving their meals without liquor, wine or beer for a period of time which would justify to somebody in the Liquor Control Board that they are good enough to be licensed.

Mr. MacDonald: Or clear the toll-gate!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: My hon. friend says, "or clear the toll-gate;" and I can't help but be cynical enough to believe that he is right.

We've been picking and pecking away at this for years. We haven't been able to do anything about the toll-gate. The people of the province don't seem to be concerned enough about it to change the government, so I suppose we can simply say that these establishments should not be put through the economic squeeze play of making the decision to open premises, which are obviously designed to be licensed eventually, to sit there with the napkin over their well-tailored arm waiting for the business to come in and have to go through six months, 12 months, 15 months of waiting until finally the piece of paper comes. They stock the bar, which has been sitting there with its indirect amber lighting waiting all this time, and then as soon as they become licensed, the word goes through the community and the people come in.

I've never known, for example, Holiday Inn to have to wait for a licence, although I understand that Four Seasons-Sheraton was almost late with its piece of paper. For one of the first major opening functions—it wasn't the Hadassah Bazaar or anything like that; Mount Sinai Ball, that was it—there was the crème de la crème of Toronto all waiting—not with their tongues hanging out, I am sure—then somebody rushed in with a piece of paper, they rolled the booze out from the back room and everything was all right.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that this approach is ridiculous. Obviously these new hotels and new restaurant facilities are going to be licensed. I can't see why there has to be a delay until the Liquor Licence Board decides to hold its meeting in a certain area or why it has to wait for a certain period of time.

Mr. Shulman: David Rubinoff gives nice big donations.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, Holiday Inn has a director from London too, who probably is in charge of seeing that they don't have to wait.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well that can be corrected, and frankly I've got confidence in the minister who is responsible for this matter that it will be corrected. I'd like to hear him say something pretty definite about the toll-gate situation.

Mr. Shulman: He doesn't know too well.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I know he doesn't know anything about it. I have a feeling that maybe we are going to wind that up a little bit. It is one of the few remaining areas where the toll-gate is so blatantly in operation.

The other little kind of dusty corner is the whole concept of personnel policy in the Liquor Control Board stores. Certainly if anybody comes to me and says that he is interested in a job, I can't say I'd send him to the member for Brantford (Mr. Beckett), but that certainly would be a wise decision.

When his predecessor, the NDP member, was in Brantford I used to say: "Well, why don't you go and see the president of the Conservative Party? He is a pretty reasonable person. Maybe he will deem it fit to give you a letter of recommendation."

I don't suppose you could have a competitive examination. I don't suppose it's really a skilled job, wrapping it up in those brown paper bags. But it's an offence, really, to anyone concerned with it, and probably also an offence under the law, that is to say, the government's present practice.

On open air facilities in general, the minister indicated we now have something called "patio permits". I think that obviously in a city like Toronto and many other centres, we're going to have sidewalk facilities available and open air facilities available. I can simply say that we would support the minister if he would improve that situation by not requiring special permits, but granting a licence for that purpose much more frequently.

There is just one other matter I want to raise. I think if we are going to continue to be in the monopoly business that we should not only give some help and initiative to our local wine industry, but we should also have other local products. I was glad to see an announcement that somebody is going to start the manufacture of Ontario cider, that is hard cider, partly fermented cider, which is a very popular product. It is ridiculous that we have been missing not only the availability of the product but the profits that would go to our farmers for this use of those apples.

The other thing I always felt that somebody with some imagination could develop is a maple liqueur.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I don't know what you would call it. Maybe you have one already. You could buy some absolute or some drug-store alcohol and dump in some syrup or some artificial flavour. I think we could market this around the world as a characteristic Canadian liqueur.

Why doesn't the minister get into the promotion? If they are going to have a monopoly responsibility, they can't just sit back on their heels and watch that $200 million come in. They have to really take some initiatives to help our own producers.

I don't mean Hiram Walkers, Seagrams and those other producers that are so helpful to the government. I mean some of the smaller operations.

Mr. Speaker, these matters that I brought to your attention, I think, are reasonable. I would just close by saying we welcome a full discussion of this. We will support the minister if in fact he undertakes a very far-reaching reform of the situation in Ontario. We would like to see more meaningful changes rather than have just small changes here and there to improve the situation where there are specific complaints; but in general the minister can count on our support if he accepts at least some of the recommendations put forward by myself.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. D. P. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, the thing, I suppose, with respect to alcoholic consumption, is whether one either regards it, or comes to regard it, as a form of medicine to cure all the ills of his particular world or whether or not it's simply an accretion to our general stance of joy and affirmation.

The situation in the alcohol world is extremely serious. The LeDain commission, as you know, claims that it is 100 times more serious than that of drugs, and without comparing apples and oranges I think that is certainly true. There is an ongoing increase in consumption. There is an ongoing increase in the numbers of people who become addicted. There is an ongoing increase in the total tragedy to society and to those who are caught in that snake pit or web—that merry-go-round which one gets started on in the process of alcoholism.

The government is caught in a crossfire. Its revenues are now a quarter of a billion dollars; the sum total of revenues in the province from all outlets selling liquor goes to $700 million. In other words, this is a big industry and a major source of tax revenue, not only from the point of view of the moneys that come from the Liquor Control Board to the provincial treasury, which was around $225 million in 1971 according to the report, but in terms of the approximately $14 million on top of that by way of the sales tax on these liquors.

The sums involved are very great, and the government cannot very easily abnegate those sums. It has proceeded then in the direction of increasing its revenue. My prediction is that after Jan. 1, 1973, the amount of tax revenue in this province with respect to alcoholic beverages will double.

The reason it will double, it seems to me, arises out of the Addiction Research Foundation's more recent statements.

They now believe and argue—although I have some stringent doubts—that there is a direct correlation between the total volume of alcohol consumption on the one hand and the number of alcoholics on the other. As a result of that, the way to attack it would seem to be to drive down the rate of consumption somewhat, but without losing the revenues; therefore, the thing to do is to place a very harsh and heavy taxation on alcohol. This, I suggest, is what we will see in the very near future—and this is mooted in the industry—as the way of solving this particular problem.

I say the problem is most tragic in the area of health abuse, in comparison with any other conceivable thing. It is said that one in seven of the population of this province is directly affected by the consumption of alcohol in the family and that its ravaging and destructive effects upon family life are uncountable.

We all experience it a bit, particularly after it is well launched in its highly radical phases. We know the person who is going overboard, who can't control his drinking, who is reliant upon the 3½ ounces or more of alcohol a day in order to keep moving. The legal profession is redundant, possibly because of the particular pressures and anxieties distilled in that profession.

In the general area of executive life and business life, this is so; as I say, this condition is not merely static, it is profoundly ongoing and getting worse—and it is not being attacked.

I think one of the methods of attack must be simply a continued restrictive mood with respect to outlets and the way in which it is done, with certain exceptions which I shall mention in the course of this speech.

The move to make the beer stores stay open later at night seems to me a backward one. I don't think the bootlegger was particularly being given a subsidy by the early closing. In other words, it seems to me that this has been found so lucrative a source of income that the liberalization process goes on apace.

With respect to the family situation, as I was saying earlier this only surfaces at a certain stage. It is a preventive mood that must reign in the industry. We can't pay off the families of alcoholics with the enormous, incredible social costs in terms of the welfare system and the psychiatric and health care needs that flow directly from the families of alcoholics. There is some correlation between the fact that a man is an alcoholic and what his children turn out to be. The tearing of family life, the schizophrenia caused in the family as a result of the department of the father or of the mother leaves profound effects. Not the least tragic of them is that despite the bitterness, resentment and fear engendered in an alcoholic's home because of the brutality and abuse that occur, the children themselves, by twisted logic, turn out to be alcoholics. This must be cut deep in its roots.

I say we can't pay it off as we have tried to do in the past, by saying that the liquor industry on one hand or the government on the other ought to come along after a man is an alcoholic and seek to remedy the ill. It's rather late in the day. It's the provision that causes the difficulty. Therefore clinics, places like Donwood, under Dr. Bell, must be set up and can only be set up under government auspices; others won't do it. Work is being done by that particular institution in its 28-day care plan for people. True, they usually come in at a stage when they are deeply addicted.

As I say, no one moves in at the stage when all the telltale signs of incipient alcoholism begin to generate themselves. Not much is done in terms of public education as to what those telltale signs are. The reaction within the family, the reaction of the wife, is invariably one of bitterness and hostility. She only adds to the difficulty by aggravating the husband in the course of the thing, nagging him to death. You can't blame the poor woman on one hand but she is not sufficiently informed as to the nature of the illness involved and she becomes ill herself, not of course, from alcohol but ill from a wide range of other things.

This, as I say, is a snake pit, a self-generating maelstrom that goes on from generation to generation and must be cut short. It must be done first of all by way of expenditures out of these vast sums of money which the government is obtaining for the general education of the public with respect to ads on television and elsewhere, making available the knowledge of what the signs are so that the alcoholic and the incipient alcoholic are the last ones to take a drink.

It must be people around the alcoholic who will operate in this particular way, who will tell him what the problem is, what lies in store for him before he gets too far. At that later stage it is an extremely difficult cure, and extremely costly to the public purse.

As far as the structure of the boards are concerned, I think it is in the cards that we will probably end up—and it does look this way, and I think it probably very sensible that it should—with one board, not two. As McRuer and others have pointed out on previous occasions, there is overlapping jurisdiction. The Liquor Control Board, as he says, doesn't control; the Liquor Licence Board does control, or vice versa. In some cases, licensing is done one way in effect, and control is done the other. There is an overlapping and muddled jurisdiction, about which he is rather savage in the course of his report, not only with respect to conflict with civil liberties, but with respect to the general department and use of the powers of the boards.

In this particular regard I think this could be accomplished. I would even go so far as to say, if I may mention personalities, that James Mackey should be maintained in a position of high leadership on the board. He is a man of absolute integrity—

Mr. Shulman: Too much integrity.

Mr. Lawlor: — who has a certain puritanical stance with respect to the thing. Against what is happening in our society with respect to addiction, a little hard-handedness seems to be very well deserved and needed in order for this thing not to burst wide open and cause a very thorough dereliction in the nature of responsibilities.

I would like in the course of these remarks to mention a few of the propositions put before the minister fairly recently by the Canadian Restaurant Association. I do not pretend to be a sponsor or spokesman for the Restaurant Association. It is all too evident in terms of their briefs—and they are very wrong in this in my opinion, for whatever they will take out if it—that they are self-seeking, self-interested and disclaiming of the rights of others, little heedful of other people outside their industry and as to what their rights should be with respect to it. But what they have to say in some respects seems to me eminently sensible and I will bring to the minister's attention that this theory of a joint advisory committee seems to have some relevance and may be of great assistance to a board, particularly if it were an amalgamated board.

The amalgamated board, of course, would have to have branches. I mean the whole business of distribution, importation and what not, would have to be broken down into various branches or units within the board. But surely that's a purely mechanical function which ought not to exercise the whole weight and necessity for a separate bureaucratic set-up or distinct agency of the Crown but could be operated within the ambit of the single agency.

I suggest the joint advisory committee since this would involve not only members from the restaurant industry but the general public and people who are particularly sensitive over the issue of excessive alcoholic consumption. These people certainly should have a voice and a public voice on this board with, of course, government representation thereon, so that a greater sense of sensibility, a greater awareness of what the general public's prevailing moods are, as to what afflictions are caused by this particular drug which is on the market, and an ongoing awareness generally.

All boards tend to become divorced from the ongoing life of the community. They do tend to become insulative and set themselves up in positions of authority which automatically cut them off from the life of the citizenry generally.

The other matter that they mention is the waiting lounge situation and the business that it was brought into being and then subsequently cancelled out. It is apparently at the present time—I am not certain—in operation.

The business of tying, by way of strict proportions, the consumption of food to consumption of alcohol seems to me not that sensible. There should be some relationship between the two, but in the case of the waiting lounge where somebody comes in, is waiting for dinner, and wants to have a drink, it was permitted.

It was quite a concession a couple of years ago that this new institution should have been brought into being. But when the strict correlation, the 50-50 correlation between food and drink, was lifted with respect to the dining lounge, it was considered that the waiting lounge no longer had a purpose and effect. I think that in that context it still does and that there ought not to be this particular imposition.

Obviously the theory is that if there is to be a correlation at all, then it is breached by way of the dining lounge privilege. Well, the position must be that if somebody wishes to have a drink he is going to get it, no matter what the stipulations and prohibitions may be.

The problem with respect to the drinking age is mentioned by them and a solution is put forward in the form of voluntary identification cards that the younger people, people whose age might be questioned, would be prepared to obtain simply to benefit. They need not if they do not wish to.

It would probably to some extent obviate the present difficulty—the cancellation of a licence on these grounds; the business of what is considered by the young a harassment in the various drinking establishments, particularly if they are over age, as a breach of their civil liberties by being constantly questioned and being forced to produce evidence. This might to some degree obviate the thing.

I understand that the recommendation asked the board to work out the nature of the card—what it would look like, whether or not it would contain a picture of the individual involved, and of course certain relevant information about the date of birth and place of birth. I can see no harm in that particular matter on the basis of its voluntariness and as a way of obviating a difficulty, particularly as the cancellation of the licence is a very dire consequence of a failure to discriminate between 17 and 18 as it used to be between the age of 20 and 21. So it is an ongoing problem.

There is the danger that once such a card came into being it would become mandatory. In other words, unless you possessed one you just simply didn't get served. These things generate their own arbitrary consequences. As I say it should be well understood in advance that this is not the nature of the beast nor the colour of its eyes. We all shy away from identification cards, I think, because of the effect that they have upon our privacy and our personal integrities.

As for the business of hours of operation, it seems to me that perhaps the Sunday hour could be extended to 12 midnight. I am not all that anxious to see the hours extended to 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning as is being asked for. This is one of the restrictions that I would think have some beneficial effect. If there is going to be a mid-afternoon closing as there is in Great Britain, then I think that closing should apply right across the board to all concerned.

I think personally there is no great fault in a mid-afternoon closing to allow them to be cleaned up, but it must apply to the cocktail lounges too. The rich can't be given favours and privileges which are not accorded to the rest of the citizenry. There ought not to be, and there is, a built-in class bias by and large in the liquor control system that has to be rooted out. To the extent that that kind of reasoning applies or that kind of benefit accrues to any segment of the consumptive industry, then to that extent it must be eliminated. The whole society must be treated in positions of impartiality and total fairness.

There are a couple of matters of some nitty-gritty nature that I wanted to ask the minister about, if this is the opportunity that we have during the life of a session to inquire. In the Liquor Control Board report of Mar. 31, 1971, there is a mention of a reserve contingency of $500,000. What is the nature of those contingencies and why should that money be withheld from the public purse? I mean while $225 million is turned over to the government there is still $50 million or so withheld from year to year—$51,824,000 in one year—and this seems to be the figure that it sticks at.

In the previous year it was precisely the same sum. While bank interest is accruing to the board because of these moneys being placed aside, and eventually the moneys will flow back into the provincial coffers, why are such large sums of money retained? Why is the reserve for insurance $1 million? Is it really necessary to maintain a reserve of that size?

I would take it that the board does not take out general insurance, particularly fire insurance or theft insurance from other sources, but simply self-insures the situation, as it should be. Is that a legitimate sum over against the fire losses or the theft losses or the casualty losses or whatever losses that may be accrued to that board over a number of years? Is that legitimate? I think not. I wouldn't think that the damages would be anywhere in that range and that these are sums of money which could be very well used. Think what $1 million could do to remedy the conditions of alcoholics by setting up preventive clinics and by moving into the area of education to a far deeper extent than is done at the present time, rather than have it in that particular locale. On page 24, the last page of the Liquor Control Board report, there is mention of grants in lieu of business taxes and in lieu of property taxes, which are very considerable grants. Why is this done? Is it because it's an agency of the provincial government?

I would also like, at some future time, to see just what moneys go from the Liquor Control Board to the municipalities of the province. Not only are these grants, I understand, but there is somehow a division of spoils within the system. I would also like to know, among the major municipalities in Toronto, how much money is placed in their coffers derivable through this particular instrumentality, namely the Liquor Control Board.

Finally, in this particular regard I notice substantial money, $450,000, has been paid out to the Ontario Provincial Police. For what functions and what acts does the Provincial Police, which of course is also a government agency, receive this money? What are these intragovernmental transfer payments for, and what is the justification for continuing them in that particular regard?

We have had before us, for two years at least, the numerous recommendations made in volume five of the McRuer report on which the government is very slow to move. This thing has been, it seems to me, sitting around interminably. Wishart, in his day, moved in the area of civil liberties; that was the man's claim to fame. When it came before him, he handed down legislation on the numerous other areas that had been left out of the legislative review.

There seems to be somnolence over on the other side, and I can only urge the government to move drastically in this particular area, because the ills are great. Nowhere in the whole report does greater venom, if I may put it that way, or a greater stiletto come into effect from McRuer in his judicial way. In reading between the lines, it's probably the most devastating attack of all upon the procedures and actions of both these boards.

In the case of the Liquor Control Board there are 21 recommendations, starting from the simple proposition that they don't even keep minutes. One wonders what the member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer) does. You can't question, you can't find out, because they themselves don't know from day to day; they don't keep even the most cursory record of their proceedings or what they do. McRuer is scathing in this regard. I hope the member for Dufferin-Simcoe has pulled up his socks and redeemed himself in this particular regard since the time of the issuance of this report, but I rather suspect he hasn't done very much about it.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Are the member's socks up or down?

Mr. Lawlor: He lives in sublime isolation from the rest of us mere mortals and that being the case, we couldn't expect too much. The fact that reasons are not handed down or given for the cancellation, suspension or refusal to give licences is castigated in the case of both boards under the headings of McRuer.

Touching on the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario, there are also 22 recommendations pointing out rather shocking and startling declensions from and deviations from the rule of law and from basic civil rights, operative within each of these boards. The interesting conversation that the commissioner had with that most estimable man, Judge Robb, really points out what goes on. The commissioner asks him at page 1854:

"Well now, when you have a hearing on a cancellation of licence or for a cancellation of licence, is there a court reporter present?"

"We have had on occasion but not very frequently."

"Then on an appeal if one is trying to apply the provisions of the Liquor Control Act mutatis mutandis to the appeal, how does the judge hearing the appeal deal with it?"

"I cannot answer."

"He couldn't, could he?"

"Well, that seems to follow, doesn't it?" Judge Robb says.

Here the appeal provision is given, but because no record is kept when you take the matter on a stated case or take it on appeal, there is no way of having the hearing because there's nothing before the judge upon which to hear it. And it isn't a hearing de novo, as sometimes happens with certain criminal appeals. It's a blank; so effectively there are no appeal provisions provided.

And the business of the failure of judicial review—what is called a privative clause, ruling out the review of the actions of the board by a higher tribunal—is profoundly rooted in the legislation. McRuer preserves a little of it with respect to interdiction orders, as when sometimes the wife or members of the family have written to the board and said that the father has gone too far, that the drinking is excessive, and would they please place an order against him.

In that case he doesn't think that would be subject to public purview or review because again of the dislocations and the continued aggravations it would cause inside a family. One has to agree that that is one area in which the public disclosure ought not to be made.

As I said, this report is before us. Its language is crisp and smart. If the government were half as crisp and smart in getting on with it—because it's laid out for it like a blueprint—then it would obviate a good deal of the difficulties presently obtaining within the board itself. But in the process of doing that, and since the government asked for this particular debate—I'm sure that we would have asked for it if the government hadn't—I think it should give much deeper thought to my recommendation with respect to the amalgamation procedure and the total restructuring of the board.

Once the government is about it, and since it has taken so long, let's do a job. Let's do it rather thoroughly and proceed in that line.

The last thing I really wish to mention this morning is the detoxification centres. We got a public release about them a little more than a year ago in June, 1971. These are a good idea if tied in with the preventive medicine aspects that I mentioned earlier today. Considering the havoc and waste that is being caused, the government should get on with them. I would like to know the present status of the centres. I understand two or three have been opened in Toronto. I would like to know how they are operating internally and whether they are having a beneficial effect.

They are really—and they ought not to be—drying out places. Unless they are expanded in scope and unless the government is willing to use some of the ill-gotten largesse that it has arising from alcohol, then I think it is betraying the purpose of the centres themselves and the people of whom we are feeding with respect to the revenues derived from this source.

I think again that mention of the Donwood Clinic is in order and some of its lessons and some of its deep personal psychology; the business about men thinking they are independent self-made men. Those who boast their independence the most, being the most dependent really. This business of the paradox that always occurs in things psychological. And the fact that by way of drinking, guilt complexes are engendered and the business of the resentment in the family—all working together towards a further lowering, towards a greater dislocation, an ongoing, downwards spiral that takes place.

Knowing all these things and knowing what depth of psychology is involved in this and has been generated by the Donwood Clinic, there is the application of the lessons derived from that source and from the Alcohol and Addiction Research Foundation, which has diagnosed and has tested the causes of alcoholic poisoning—and I use the word in a very broad sense.

Now, I think I'll simply end on an affirmative note. The whole of the society cannot be afflicted or held under bondage. It must be restricted, as I say, but the lessons of prohibition were enough to teach us that when you try to prohibit a thing—as vile as alcohol is in some of its ramifications and in the effect it has—the lessons of the days of prohibition were such as to preclude a harshly restrictive policy. You just are not going to get rid of the stuff. With that particular kind of thing in mind, I simply recommend to the minister that:

He feasts on wine and fasts on water,
And his honour shall stand sure.
God's almighty son and daughter,
He the valiant, she the pure.
If an angel out of heaven
Offers other things to drink,
Thank him for his kind attention.
Go and pour them down the sink.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. J. R. Rhodes (Sault Ste. Marie): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do wish that I felt I was as well qualified as other members of this Legislature to speak on this particular subject. Certainly, I found that the knowledge of the two members I am following is great. I don't know how it was acquired, whether it has been through practice or great reading but it certainly was evident that they are well versed on this subject.

However, Mr. Speaker, I think that one of the things I would like to do, first of all, is congratulate the minister on having the foresight to approach this subject, although it be new to him in his particular ministry, with a view to looking at legislation and with a view to coming up with new legislation which, I hope, will improve the situation in this province as it relates to the Liquor Control Board and liquor licensing.

This is a very difficult area, I think, for all of us who are involved in the legislative assembly and, in particular, the minister and the people who are working with him in his ministry. There are two really divided camps in this province. Perhaps I'm being a little extreme. Perhaps there is, I should say, the white, the grey and the black.

There are those who will advocate the complete or almost total prohibition of the sale of alcoholic beverages. There are those who will tell us that we should have greater and more control. And, of course, we have those who would suggest that we go to the absolute opposite extreme of removing all controls completely. I suppose it's very simple for us to be hypercritical of the minister who is in charge and as well as of the members of the two boards that are charged with the responsibility, because we all have our own approach to the subject. I think this is probably one of the areas in which we can become very parochial as it relates to our own specific areas.

What I am concerned about is those people who are advocating that there be more control and I urge the minister—and I think, from what he has done so far, he will follow this—not to be led along by people who want to put more control on the sale and the outlets and the disposition of alcoholic beverages. We might just as well accept now as a very hard fact that the people in this province and the people in this country and the people in the world are going to get alcoholic beverages if they want them.

The hon. member for Lakeshore said that and I think he is absolutely correct. You can do all you want with prohibition. It was tried and we know what happened. People will get alcoholic beverages. What I am concerned about is that when you have these prohibitions or you have these limitations, people will go to the extreme of the bootlegging situation. As a former police officer I have had some experiences during the times when the bootleggers were thriving in northern Ontario in particular. I think my friend from Sudbury East is probably very, very aware of the subject in that area.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): That is a slur on northern Ontario.

Mr. Rhodes: It may be a slur on northern Ontario but it is a fact. Why did we have the bootlegging? Because the outlets in northern Ontario were so far apart. They were so widespread that in order to get a drink a person went to the first outlet possible and it may have happened to have been your neighbour down the road. I don't want to see bootlegging come back into being in the Province of Ontario.

The first step to get away from this, the opening of the lounges, the opening of cocktail bars, practically cut out the bootlegging that was going on in this province. The revenues were going to where they belong, to the province. I think it's been a good thing. I would like to see more happen along this line.

I am not happy with the present licensing situation. I agree very much with what was said earlier by the two previous speakers. The situation is that you go in and you make a big capital investment and you provide a beautiful facility. Then you go cap in hand to the licensing board and say, "Please, gentlemen, could I have a licence to operate this facility that you told me I should build." Then after you hang around for a couple of months or so, someone tells you "Oh, my goodness, you have suddenly got the experience to provide meals and you have proved that you are a pretty good business man, despite what your background may have been in other business areas." Then they will decide whether you get a licence or not.

I feel that the plans for the facility, the proposed operation and the basic history of the background of the business ability of the people applying for the licence should entitle them to be told before the fact that they are going to be licensed, so that they can go into business and be ready to operate with the full facility. I agree very much with the Leader of the Opposition when he said you will find an establishment open. I like a drink—I make no hesitation about it—and I prefer to go to those establishments that will give me a drink with my dinner. I have found some establishments that were very, very attractive that I would not go into until such time as they got their licence.

Then we put the owners of these establishments through the process of going around and getting petitions and signatures. And what happens to those? They are then sent to the hon. member who represents them by someone who says, "Please will you take this on my behalf to the Liquor Control Board or the Liquor Licence Board?" You trot off down to see one of these gentlemen. It is an exercise in futility, it isn't necessary.

Mr. Shulman: All you have to do is send a cheque.

Mr. Rhodes: All we have to do is get it straightened out. Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I cannot speak with any authority on the sending of cheques. The member for High Park is more knowledgeable in sending cheques. He has the ability to write them and the bank account to back them up. I don't have that.

Mr. MacDonald: The member should ask his fellow Conservative candidate in North Bay to give him authority.

Mr. Rhodes: Mr. Speaker, I would like to see the regulations changed very shortly to provide for people by licensing of dining rooms, to expand on those licences to dining rooms, and to make these places more pleasant to go into. I say that for this reason. I would like to see outlets where a man can take his wife and family and can go into a nice atmosphere and sit down and order a drink with his dinner.

I think there is where your basic education will start. We are concerned about the excessive drinking among our people, and I think very justly so. We are all very aware of the problems of alcoholism, but one of the problems is we for many years forced people to go and hide when they wanted to drink, or to drink to excess because the doors were going to be closed at a certain time. But if you could have dining lounges in these areas, where you can go in with a family and where the parental influence is there and youngsters can be taught that alcohol isn't something that you sit down and guzzle, one drink after the other, until you are intoxicated and must be carried home; that it can be consumed as a beverage with a meal, the same as coffee or tea or any other beverage, then there is an area for education, and it can be done in a nice outlet.

Do you recall what used to happen—the member for Sudbury East is too young to remember but there are others here who are older—when we used to close the beverage rooms?

Mr. Martel: Thank you.

Mr. Rhodes: We used to close the beverage rooms at 10 o'clock, or there was a limit on how much you could drink. I have seen them coming out of the plants, and I am sure all of you have, and charge into the beverage room at 11 o'clock at night, drink as much as they possibly could and then stagger home or drive home and get involved in accidents. I wanted to see more outlets. I speak specifically of northern Ontario where great distances have to be driven by people to go to get a sociable drink.

Members will recall what happened in the Elliott Lake area in that stretch of highway from Elliott Lake down to Blind River. There was wholesale slaughter, not because of the condition of the highway, but because of the condition of the drivers. They were coming from Elliott Lake back down to Blind River and getting loaded up on booze and then trying to drive back home again because there were no outlets between. The place was jammed in Elliott Lake and Blind River didn't have enough of them. I think the time has come for us to look at it in a more realistic way. Let us not talk about prohibition and cutting down on the hours; let's not talk about worrying about whether or not there are too many licensed outlets in an area or not.

Let me touch on that for a moment. An application is made to get a dining lounge licence. The first investigator who comes back says, "Well, there are 14 or 15 outlets in the area anyway, you don't need any more." But no one takes the time to see what type of outlets they are. They are beverage rooms that sell nothing but beer, and which cater to a certain type of clientele, or there may be a very small bar that is only selling liquor over the bar.

There is no dining room licence; there is no lounge; there is nothing. But a person who is applying to supply a very good outlet that will serve the community and provide a facility that the community needs is deprived of the licence because someone says, "There are too many outlets anyway."

I think the quality or the type of outlet that is being provided should be what is taken into consideration, not whether there is a large number of outlets or not. We might just as well accept the fact that there is going to be drinking. Let's make it reasonably easy for people.

I question the need, for example, for clubs. We talk about wanting to control drinking, yet we say to a club—a social club, a golf club, a curling club, whatever it may be—"If you want a licence you must open from 12 noon until midnight," or whatever the hours may be. For what purpose? There is nobody in the blessed places until the afternoons. In many cases during the winter months in curling clubs there is very little activity until the evening.

Why couldn't they open those clubs according to the hours they want to operate? Why do they have to have them open, losing revenue, losing money by paying staff, and being open for no earthly reason at all? This applies in many areas that I am familiar with.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to go as well to one other area, and that is the packaging of the product. And I am speaking now perhaps of beer.

I don't understand why the brewing companies in this province are restricted from going into imaginative packaging of their product. It is my understanding, and I think it is correct, that there is a definite regulation as to what type of packaging may be used, and that there must be uniform packaging, and that no particular brewery will have an advantage to the type of packaging that they can use.

I am also not too sure why we are not permitting beer to be sold in the large grocery outlets where they have ample storage space; they have ample refrigeration facilities. I am not suggesting at this time that it should go into the small corner stores, but I don't see anything wrong with it going into the large supermarkets. It is done successfully in the States.

Mr. Shulman Holy smoke!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Give it to the small corner store rather than the big ones.

Mr. Rhodes: All I am suggesting is the outlet. If it is more appropriate in the corner store and they can supply the proper refrigeration facilities and the proper control, great, I am all for that. I am simply saying get it out of the straight brewers' retail store. Make more outlets and make it more easily available.

Mr. MacDonald: The member had better talk to the member for Eglinton (Mr. Reilly). He has been trying to get it into the small corner stores too.

Mr. Rhodes: I am sure I could go on for a long time talking about all the problems I have had with this, and there are many of them other members have had. But I do urge the minister—and I say urge him because I think he is looking in this direction—to make it just a little more easy for people to enjoy the beverages they want to buy and are buying. Take away some of the problems that have been created by restrictive legislation, and I think as well make sure that the policies added on by the various boards be looked at a little closer. In particular I do hope that a real good look will be taken at the licensing regulations as they are now, and how new outlets can be licensed in this province.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo North.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say a few words on this subject, and congratulate the new minister on his appointment, and trust that his work will be as efficient in the job of ministry as it was as chairman of the select committees when he held that office.

First of all, I think one has to realize that the whole operation and control and sale of liquor in the Province of Ontario is somewhat perhaps jaundiced by the fact that it produces our fifth highest source of revenue next to personal and corporate income tax, retail sales tax and gasoline tax. This minister is responsible for putting into the coffers of the province perhaps—what?—$200 million a year? Undoubtedly, many of the decisions made are going to be affected by the need and the fact that this is not only a matter of management of the sale of alcoholic beverages. Colouring the whole aspect of it has got to be what effect will this decision or that decision have on the ultimate amount of money that comes into the consolidated revenue of the province.

I would like to say that the member for Lakeshore dealt at some length upon the aspects of the problems created in the province by the industry. I think that when cabinet does meet and looks at the huge sums coming in from these sales, the ministers are going to have to take a little better look at the minimum amount of money being passed on to the Addiction Research Foundation, whose work is very important if we are going to keep the whole matter of alcoholic beverages in the province within reason.

I know and we all know that you can't legislate morals but you can, I think, provide sufficient funds to help do the research and deal with the problems that arise from this particular thing in our province. I suppose it is probably part of our Puritan heritage—the fact that we do use alcohol at all as a source of revenue. Let's face it, we are using it as a source of revenue whether it be right or whether it be wrong.

We are now reducing, on a progressive basis, the business tax associated with the distilleries and breweries in the Province of Ontario which deprives the province of no revenue but will deprive the municipalities of revenue. I fought this strenuously in committee and rather than have one large reduction, we had the then Minister of Municipal Affairs reduce it by 10 per cent per year. I think in five years the distilleries will be paying 100 per cent business tax rather than 150 per cent business tax. But if the province can use it and has no compunction about using the liquor industry as a source of revenue, there is no reason the municipalities should be deprived of the same openings.

I have just a few things I would like to talk about. First of all, one wonders at the procedures that must go on at the headquarters of the Liquor Licence and Control Boards when you get a hurried, frantic call from a person in your riding who says, "I just had my application to enlarge the dining room at my hotel turned down." "Give me a copy of their letter," I said. I looked at the letter—this happened to me—it said, "We can't increase the capacity of your dining room by 145 per cent in one application. We just don't allow that type of increase."

When I finally got the relevant facts I found that this particular hotel in New Hamburg had a dining room licensed for 19 persons and they wanted it increased to 43 because the Lions' Club had 35 members and wanted to meet in their dining room.

I am sure there must be some way in which a person sitting behind a desk at the Liquor Control Board doesn't have to work on percentages to decide on the validity of a request. There must be better methods than that, surely, of deciding on a request.

We had the same frantic situation develop when the steelwork of our new Waterloo Motor Inn was being put in the ground. A $500,000 mortgage was dependent upon the licence. There would be no problem getting a license. Suddenly the letter arrived: "Sorry, we can't approve your licence as applied for. The city of Waterloo in no way can support this large operation."

Of course, they don't know that we have been trying for 50 years to get a decent hotel in the city of Waterloo, a new one. We have no motels. This is our first one and it seems that the people in head office are not aware of all of the local situations before they hand down their decisions. Fortunately both of these problems have been resolved.

Just a note about brewers' retail stores. I have had two complaints about them in the last year. The minister can take them for what they are worth. The first is a personal complaint that the one in Warton closes for an hour and a half for lunch and the second one is that the one in Kitchener won't deliver to the University of Waterloo, to the students boarding there.

I will go back to a complaint that I dealt with years ago with the then chairman of the board and that is the lack of uniformity of inspection. This has to be a complaint that does have some validity in spite of the fact that the minister keeps saying that the laws are the same all across the province.

Mr. Shulman: They are the same all across the province. They are capricious.

Mr. Good: I feel personally that the uniformity of inspection is not there. One can go into places in holiday areas and find a completely different atmosphere that wouldn't be tolerated in another part of the province, in a larger community or larger city. I must say that the new chairman, Mr. Mackey, was most hospitable and helpful to myself and the member for Kitchener (Mr. Breithaupt) when we met with him on certain problems. The problems turned out to be mainly problems with present regulations over which he had no control; so I'd like to bring some of those to the attention of the minister this morning.

First of all, I would like simply to say I was pleased to note that all members of the Legislature had a letter from the minister, and he didn't single me out personally as one capable of relating the problems of the alcoholic beverage industry in the province to him. When I got the letter I wondered why he singled me out, but I am glad to note everybody got the same letter.

Mr. MacDonald: We are all qualified.

Mr. Martel: Some more qualified than others.

Mr. Good: One of the problems I think that develops is the Liquor Control Board and the licensing people have taken upon themselves to try to maintain a balance in the economic affairs of the hotels, the restaurants, the veterans' clubs and the ethnic clubs or other types of clubs which dispense liquor. When you do something for one group, the other group complains. If you do something to make it a little easier for them, then you have the restaurant people complaining and you have the hotel owners down your neck. I am sure this must be a major part of the problem. I think the matters have to be dealt with on the individual merits of each problem as it arises and not necessarily on how it will affect a competitor to that particular person.

The member for Kitchener and myself meet annually—sometimes more often—with all the veterans' and social club groups in our municipality and we get a lot of complaints. Some complaints, I think, have been dealt with very satisfactorily in the last year or two. But others are a matter to which the inspectors feel they have to close their eyes. We've been told, for instance, technically a person's wife going into a veterans' club should really sign the guest book. Technically she should every time she goes in there with her husband, because she is not a member of that club. This gets to be a ridiculous situation, where members of the Legion or the air force wing or army and navy want to take their wives several times a week and where they feel as much part of the atmosphere and the club as the husband. This is being overlooked, which is fine, but why should there not be something in the regulations so this wouldn't just have to be overlooked?

There is the matter of special-occasion permits. I think the whole matter of special-occasion permits in veterans' clubs is a very basic thing. We have to recognize the fact that they are dependent on this source of revenue, but yet we know that the Act says that one can't use a special-occasion permit to make money. They can advertise the fact that they are having a dance on certain nights for members but they can't say members and guests.

In my view, this is cutting the thing pretty fine, when you have to say you can advertise the dance at the wing or the Legion for members, but you can't advertise for members and guests. They can bring guests and sign them in if they wish, but they can't advertise. There must surely be some better way so the inspector for the area doesn't have to look through the coming events column of the paper every night and say, "Aha, I have found one that shouldn't be there according to this section and that section of the regulations" and then start phoning up some woman of the auxiliary or something and tell her, "Your ad in the paper has to come out tomorrow night because only members of the club are allowed in there."

I suppose the whole matter of special-occasion permits—I think there were about 130,000 of them issued last year, and they weren't all for weddings, they couldn't have been; some of them had to be for other things—is wrapped up in the fact that, frankly, as the minister knows and as I know, they're held to raise money as well as to provide a social evening, but of course the Act says you can't make a profit on a special-occasion permit.

Mr. Martel: You can't advertise it.

Mr. Good: That's right. And if we're going to allow social clubs and veterans' clubs to hold this type of thing, I think we will have to draft our regulations a little less rigidly in that regard. I know we're going to get flak from the hotel owners' association if we do—and that's probably the main reason these things are as they are—but I think there has to be a certain amount of study and a little more realistic approach to some of these matters.

Under-age drinking was mentioned, and I think this is a very serious matter, although it is scoffed at now by police chiefs, who say, "Well, we do check periodically." I think there should be a better way. Now that we have the legal age down to 18, I for one just can't see these 16- or 17-year-old kids being in the beverage rooms on Friday night as has happened in our own locality—and I know it happens. It just shouldn't be allowed, in my view.

I think the onus has got to be placed somewhere where it's going to have more teeth, and I think there has to be more of an educational approach to it. We don't need a lot of raids to round up these kids, but I think that in some manner or other we've got to get these 16-year-old girls out of the beverage rooms on Friday night. It just doesn't make any sense to me.

Well, I have covered most of the complaints I've received and the things that are on my mind. In all, I agree with the government control of the sale of liquor. I think that, relatively speaking, a good job is being done, but there are areas where there could be some improvement.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to present my views on this problem. First of all, on the general situation of alcohol, speaking as a physician, I don't think it's realized by many of the people in this chamber just how serious a problem this is becoming. Not just in people becoming alcoholics, in the loss of time, in the loss of family life or in the ruins incurred there, but in the fields of crime and car deaths.

We now know that more than 50 per cent of the deaths occurring in automobile accidents are as a result of alcohol. We now know that a much higher percentage of violent crimes are as a result of alcohol. And for a suggestion to come from Sault Ste. Marie or anywhere else that we do more to promote the sale of it or that we do less to control it, to my mind is just leading to further and greater disasters in our society.

I think we have to control this drug, because it is a far more serious danger to our society than all of the pot, all of the LSD and all of the heroin in the world. We hear a great deal about the dangers of drugs and of kids smoking pot, but it doesn't amount to a hill of beans compared with the human loss that's taking place as a result of alcohol—and I think we have to take steps to control this.

I think the first obvious step—and the member for Brant was quite right—is to stop this advertising. There's very little we can do about the people we see in front of us: whatever habits they have, they've been formed. But the advertising is directed to people who are just beginning to drink, the 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds and younger, I'm sorry to say—they're the ones we can still help to protect.

It used to be, not too many years ago, that we used to have advertising in the schools warning of the dangers of drinking and the dangers of alcohol, and what could come of it. Well, that's all disappeared. Now we have, "Have a Red Lager or you're not one of the boys," and according to these ads, unless you have a glass in your hand, filled with beer or liquor, you're just not with it.

I don't think they should be allowed. I am very well aware of the minister's problem. I know how much money the liquor companies give the government. I'm aware that it is very, very difficult for him to move against them, but somewhere along the line the needs of society are going to have to take precedence over the needs of the Conservative Party—especially their immediate needs.

Incidentally, I must give a word of credit to the minister. I don't think he can be responsible because he's now here. It used to be you had to pay $10,000 for a listing. The price has come down considerably. In fact, the day before yesterday I heard of a chap who got a listing without having to pay a penny. I don't know whether it is inefficiency on the part of Mr. Kelly or whether the minister is changing his policies but in any case, for that I give him credit.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Tell us a little more about it. I'd like to make some notes on that.

Mr. Shulman: Ask Mr. Kelly. He's a friend of the Premier (Mr. Davis). He could give the minister all the details, all the payments, who pays what, who gets how many listings, but—

An hon. member: He could even fly the minister. They could do it together.

Mr. Lawlor: We never did get a resolution on the vouchers. That was the last schedule.

Mr. Shulman: It's a 43-minute flight up to Port Severn. The member might take same and Mr. Kelly can fill the member in on the way.

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): Tell us a little more about it. You know it all.

Mr. Shulman: Perhaps I could get you an invitation. I'd like to go along. I asked if I could see the log to find out who went along—I presume your predecessors have been in on those trips—but they didn't want to let me see the log.

Anyway, a word about local option. The member for Brant suggested this should be abolished because of certain farcical situations that have developed in the past year. The one for Formosa Brewery of course was absolutely ridiculous. But I must point out to him and to you that there are areas of the province where local option is of extreme importance to the people who live there.

My own is one such area. We are dry at the present time. We are having a vote in a week and a half as to whether we should remain dry and this isn't a farcical situation. There the people are deeply concerned about the problem of liquor outlets.

I believe that a very high majority of the people in High Park drink in moderation. I also believe that a very large majority of the people in High Park wish to retain their area of homes as an area without liquor outlets because of the abuses that come in areas where there are liquor outlets—the drunks on the street, the increase in crime which invariably follows them, the numerous social problems that occur when there are local outlets. We don't have to go that far out of High Park to get a drink if we want one. There are certainly outlets surrounding us at all the edges as it's only a very small area, and I would urge the government to maintain local option.

Surely if the majority of people in an area do not wish to have liquor outlets in their area they should be given that privilege? I certainly—

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): They can't do much about the clubs.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Temple used to say it better.

Mr. Shulman: No, they can't, but that's a very limited membership. Mr. Temple is more knowledgeable on the subject than I am but I agree with Mr. Temple on that particular point.

I'd like to say something now about the administration of the Liquor Licence Board and the Liquor Control Board, because to me the most constant irritant since I have entered public life is the way in which the boards are run.

To begin with, let me say that I think Jim Mackey is a fine gentleman, a man of high moral integrity. He made the best police chief this city ever saw; perhaps this country ever saw. I think he is responsible in very great measure for the fact that our streets are probably the safest in North America. I think he was a hell of a good police chief. I'm just sorry he didn't remain a police chief, because the problem that has developed since he has become the head of the Liquor Licence Board is that he is so efficient, he is so good at his job, he takes it so seriously that he carries out all the nutty regulations that have been passed down over the years.

It used to be we had a delightful old man who was in charge of the Liquor Licence Board and he had a good sense of humour. He realized a lot of these regulations were nutty, so he passed the word down to his inspectors, "For goodness sake, don't enforce this and don't enforce that because we are going to look damned foolish."

Jim Mackey takes his job a little more seriously, and he believes that what comes from here is all gospel. Unfortunately he does what is written down, and the result is that he and his board and you, the minister, and us as the government—and we are all a part of the government—look like damned fools because of the foolish things that are done in this province in the name of government.

I could go down a long list of things that have happened since I've been in this House, starting with telling Honest Ed he can't serve hotdogs because it's undignified and if he insists on selling hotdogs he is going to lose his licence; telling Julie at Julie's Mansion that he can't let people have a drink standing up because that's immoral, and they have to drink sitting down.

Of course, the best is last year in the pubs that put in the darts. We've heard the story of the darts. The dartboards had to go, because dartboards are immoral in some way. Actually, we found out afterwards from the previous minister what it was. It had been a spelling mistake, if you recall, and that's how darts come to be banned.

Mr. MacDonald: The government is against the British way of life.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: The situation hasn't changed. They continue to do nutty things. The Stratford Festival, which is very successful and brings a lot of prestige to this province—and brings in a lot of tourist money—again had a nutty Liquor Licence Board regulation a few weeks ago. The day that the live shows stopped and the film festival began, they had to stop serving alcohol. I have some difficulty in understanding where film is more immoral than live shows.

Now, this type of foolish regulation that is passed on by the Liquor Licence Board makes them, and us, look like we don't have much up top. I suggest that either the government is going to have to withdraw all the regulations, or else it is going to have to get a less efficient head of the Liquor Licence Board, or it is going to have to modify things. As things now stand they are carrying out all these nutty regulations.

They went into one of Raoul Brammer's bars downtown, the Boiler Room, and said: "Oh, there is one table too many in here." He replied: "Fine, as soon as closing time comes we'll take one out." They said: "No, it's got to come out now. It can't be there another minute." So they made people get up from the table—can you believe this—they made people get up from the table where they were sitting having a drink, and took the table out while they were there. The people were stunned. Then the people were standing with a drink in their hands which, of course, is against the law. So, of course, the owner was in danger of losing his licence, so they had to put the drinks down quickly before the whole world fell apart.

Enough for the Liquor Licence Board.

The regulations are nuts. The way things are now the chief gives licences more easily than he did before, I must give him credit for that. You don't have to wait a very lengthy time, sometimes years. You don't have to hire the right lawyer any more. It's been bad for Eddie Goodman's business.

But the reign of terror has continued and the reign of terror is by the inspectors. There is not a licence holder in this province who isn't fearful of making a complaint because, rightly or wrongly, they have the impression from the inspectors that if a complaint goes in, the inspectors are going to be back keeping a very close eye and making sure that there are no regulations broken. It's almost impossible not to break a regulation.

The chief, when he took the job, said, "We are going to make licences easier to get and harder to hold"—and he has done what he said.

For this I give him no credit, at least not for the second half of it. Surely, this board shouldn't be run like a chief of police runs a police force. It's meant to be run as a bureau of the minister's department, not as a junior police force. And it is becoming a junior police force. They're hiring so many policemen as their inspectors. Anyway, we'll leave that for the moment.

The Liquor Control Board is run in the same uniform way across the province as the Liquor Licence Board is. That is, completely capriciously. They do a great deal for the government. They bring in huge sums of money because they sell it for a modest markup of 100 per cent-plus. More than 100 per cent.

The result of their policies is that a bottle of wine—and I'm not going to talk about alcohol so much now, because there are two types of drinkers in this province. It may be hard for most of the members to understand, but there are a few people in this province who drink wine with their meals to enrich the meal. I know this is an unheard-of thing.

I went down to our licensed dining room and I asked for a bottle of wine the other day. They said: "Wine? Members of the Legislature don't drink wine. They all drink hard liquor. We had a couple of bottles here, but we didn't sell them so we took them back down."

Anyway, we know it is going to be hard for most members to understand that, but there are some people in this province who are not interested in getting drunk with alcohol—but they are interested in drinking wine with their meals to enrich them. And the policy of the Liquor Control Board has been to discourage this as much as possible. They mark the foreign wines up way out of proportion. A bottle of French wine that you can buy for $3 in Buffalo will sell for $6.50 here in Toronto.

Mr. Martel: Beaujolais for $6.50.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, that's absolutely ridiculous. And outside of the fact that its mark-ups are so huge and so bad, there is exactly no rhyme nor reason to the relative prices. You can go in and spend, I think, $15 for a bottle of Chateau Mouton Rothschild, which is the top Bordeaux that is sold here; and you can spend more than that for a second-grade wine since, I guess, they just got a new supply in so they marked it up to the limit.

They don't stay in tune with the market. They don't pay any attention to what is happening in this big world around us—they don't have to. They have no competition, they have a closed shop, they have cut off private imports—there's something else.

Mr. Havrot: Sounds almost as good as medicine.

Mr. Shulman: It is even better, although the way we are going, medicine may be better soon.

The thing that really bothers me, is when they decide they are going to do something, they don't wait for a ruling to come down from here; they are a law unto themselves. The Liquor Control Board in their wisdom, without any direction whatsoever from this Legislature, a few months ago decided there are too many people importing fine wines from abroad; they had better stop that. So did they come to the minister and say that perhaps he should have an amendment go through the House, perhaps he should go through the cabinet? No they didn't. They had a little private meeting down at one of their wine tasting parties—they have wine tasting parties, you know; they invite certain special people. Have you ever been invited yet, Mr. Minister?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): No, I haven't.

Mr. Shulman: The minister hasn't been invited and I haven't been invited, unfortunately, but I get the reports. They have certain special people who get invited to these lovely wine tasting parties. They had one last week; I would give the guest list, but I don't want to get off on that.

They are a law unto themselves, our wine tasting friends down there—I see the general is looking at me. They decide, "We had better stop these people who are doing private importation. We will fix them." So what they did was this:

There used to be a sensible system where, if you wanted to make a private importation of wine you would pay the duty, you would pay the transportation costs. You couldn't import it yourself—that would have been a little too much for them to allow—but they did allow you to import it through the special order department of the Liquor Licence Board. So you would tell the importer over in Bordeaux or wherever, "Please send this wine to me c/o of Mr. Hartley, special order department, Liquor Control Board", and then the board would put on their charge. If it was hard liquor they would charge you $3 a bottle; if it was wine they would charge you $1 a bottle, and you ended up getting the wine at a fairly civilized price—only double what it cost over in France, so it wasn't too bad.

This was not good enough for them. They found that this was becoming a serious danger, as they put it, to their sales in the stores, to the profits—what was it, $200 million only last year? This huge loss of income, I believe, might have been as much as $15,000 last year, if they had had the full markup and this was a great danger. They didn't carry these wines, so they wouldn't have made that money anyway, but I guess they figured if wine drinkers couldn't bring in the fine wines, they would drink the modern Beaujolais the board has here or Andre's Zing, or the other stuff that you people like to promote.

So in their zeal to make more money for the government they cut off all private imports. No order from here; that was their private ruling, and they announced it by sending a little letter out to anybody who ever made any importation in the past. "As of June 1 you are cut off, so let us know if you have any on the way and we will allow that in, but after that goodbye, no more." I wrote them back a letter and said, "You know, there are some people who like to drink wine with their meal. It enriches the meal, and don't you think that perhaps wines that are older than the stuff you sell, that is six months, or perhaps six years, should be allowed to be imported since you are not doing it?"

It is done, as you know, in New York State. If you want to buy a fine wine you go to a wine store, to a wine merchant, and they will have a great selection, but not here. I presume it is what General Kitching likes to drink that we have in our stores, and I don't like his taste particularly, you see. He likes 1973 Beaujolais—

Mr. Foulds: Or 1972 Zing.

Mr. Shulman: That is what they give them at the tasting parties. I was very upset; I thought I was losing something when I wasn't invited to tasting parties. Then I found out what they were tasting and I was glad they hadn't invited me.

In any case, since they see fit not to import a broad selection of fine wines at a reasonable price, for goodness sake why don't they let those people import them who do wish to have them? What right do they have to pass regulations without the authority of this Legislature? What right do they have to decide by themselves that henceforth this will be done and this will not be done?

What right do they have to hold special sales once a year to which they notify their friends; they don't give any public notification. Once a year, suddenly there is a long list of delightful things that go on sale—vodka, brandy and various wines that are suddenly at a half or third of their price and there is a huge line-up in front of the store the day it comes out. I was partially responsible for the last line-up. I got so annoyed at this little notification going around to all the good friends of the Conservative Party: "Monday morning is the sale, be sure and be there." What kind of a business is this? Why doesn't the minister advertise it publicly? This isn't a private little club.

Mr. Martel: It is run that way.

Mr. Shulman: It is run that way—but it isn't one; it shouldn't be one. It is bad at the top where they take the donations. It is bad at the bottom where the little guy gets his little bit by letting his friends know when the sales are going to be. It is bad throughout. There is no department of government that is run worse than the Liquor Control Board and, in the other direction, the Liquor Licence Board. I don't want to belabour this any further.

There is one more thing I would like to say. The dangers of alcohol have not been appreciated by this ministry, by this government or by this House. We are contributing incredibly to the sale of hard liquor, to the ruination of this society. The government is increasing its earnings by many millions of dollars each year.

I have a suggestion to make to the minister. Take a fixed percentage of that increase—10 per cent or five per cent of the profits that the government received—and donate it to research and control in the use and abuse of alcohol. We are giving tiny amounts—less than one per cent of the profit each year—to investigation and control.

There is nowhere in this city where we can send people for treatment of alcoholism. The beds are always full. You phone the Don-wood; they are full. You phone the Clarke; they are full. It is because the problems of alcohol are overtaking our facilities and the reason is that those profits are going for all sorts of government purposes but they are not going where they should, which should be to try to help control and prevent the abuse of this drug.

I suggest to the minister if he is going to do one thing that is going to have any lasting effect—he will do a lot of things that have minimal effect and we'll argue about them; it'll hit the headlines—but if he is really going to care if someone remembers him 10 years or 20 years hence, he should divert a portion of that fund to help those who are suffering the effects of liquor abuse.

That will be far more important than all the other things that we talk about. We talk about the funny, silly things they do down there and the abuses that they cause, but those are minor. This is the major problem; the minister should direct himself there and he will really do something worthwhile.

Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: I believe the Conservative Party is next, is it not? The hon. member for Wellington South.

Mr. J. Root (Wellington-Dufferin): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with great interest to this debate and I am not going to take very much time, but I want to make one or two comments.

There has been a suggestion in the debate that the principle of local option should be abolished. I cannot agree with that. The riding that I have the honour to represent has 14 municipalities where the people, by their own choice have decided that they do not want liquor outlets in those municipalities. I have six municipalities that now, by their own choice, have decided they want certain types of liquor outlets. When I was first elected there were five.

I am not going to try to impose my own personal feelings on anyone, but I do think the people have some right to decide what type of municipality they want to live in. I have had wet municipalities. I have supported the applications for liquor stores and the various types of outlets because that was the decision of the people in those areas.

I think the dry municipalities have an equal right to express their views. If the time comes when they want liquor outlets, let them say so and they have the means under the local option legislation to make that decision.

I want to make one suggestion. I have listened with great interest to the comments along some of the same lines as the member for High Park. I have watched liquor advertising and it is very attractive. But what I have in my files are the problems created by the overconsumption of alcohol which is altogether different from liquor advertising. I can always tell the heavy drinking areas from the thickness of my files on municipalities.

People lose their drivers' licences. They come to me asking, "What am I going to do? I have to have a licence to drive." Maybe there is a motor accident. Somebody is critically hurt and they are in the hospital; or maybe there are convictions. All these problems are associated with it.

It seems to me, to be fair to all sides of this question, I would like to suggest that the minister look at the possibility of having the liquor interests contribute to the health programme the same amount of money that they contribute to advertising their products.

Mr. MacDonald: We were suggesting that 10 years ago! Why didn't the government put it in effect?

Mr. Root: I am making my speech now and I am saying this that—

Mr. MacDonald: That is the gestation period for a good idea on the government side of the House.

Mr. Root: Well—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): It is the only side that ever has an idea.

Mr. Root: Mr. Speaker, I suggest this because the health programme has to pick up the effects or the byproducts of the liquor advertising and the overconsumption of alcohol. I don't think it is fair to the people who don't consume alcohol that they have to have their premiums raised to take care of the byproducts of a trade that increases the load on our hospital facilities. I think that this is one way that we could give some reasonable compensation, to ask the liquor industry to put the same amount of money into our health programme that they put into the advertising of their products.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why not stop advertising?

Mr. Root: Well, that's another idea then. I think if they had to put that kind of money in, they might be a little more careful of the type of advertising that they use. This is putting a penalty on the liquor industry and it will be a recognition of the fact that the excessive consumption of alcohol does create problems. I make that suggestion.

I cannot agree about what has been said about the Liquor Licence Board and the Liquor Control Board. They are dealing with a matter that causes great concern and causes problems. I think that they are trying to do the best they can with a very contentious subject.

I just make these two or three suggestions: Don't abolish local options. I think that the people have some right to say what kind of municipality they live in. Ask the liquor industry to put the same kind of money into our health programme that they put into their advertising. Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Speaker, I rise and support the position taken by my leader with regard to this whole question of local option. I personally worked very hard on two occasions to oppose the granting of liquor outlets of any sort in the area in which I live. But once the province imposed on us those outlets by allowing clubs to have licences, it made a farce of the whole business. We should recognize that instead of saying that those who have the money to belong to a club can have drinks in areas, even though the people don't want those drinks. Unless we do recognize that hypocrisy, then we are making a great mistake.

I suggest to the member who has just spoken that he should realize that any person who has money to join a club in his area is abusing the rights of the people he is pretending to defend by insisting that local option continues. When that change was made, we changed the rules of the game in this province. We are just kidding ourselves until we eliminate this whole business of local option, which causes a great deal of heated debate and yet has no real effect when you get down to the analysis of it.

Mr. Root: In other words, the member wants it thrown wide open, right across the province?

Mr. Deacon: I also endorse wholeheartedly the view that my leader expresses with regard to the prohibition of advertising. We did prohibit advertising before. As a result, a great deal of money for promotion was directed to what I felt in many cases were very good causes. The liquor outlets were doing all sorts of things—and you might say in a hypocritical manner—but they were doing all sorts of things to gain public support. Labatts got a great reputation for doing all the tire-changing on highways in the province for free and there were various methods used by different organizations to make the public more fond of their particular brand.

I think this whole business of diverting the advertising money to other means of promotion is not hypocrisy but a subtle way of getting a lot of good jobs done.

Mr. Drea: Time magazine and Weekend would get it all.

Mr. Deacon: Well, Time magazine publishes in this country and we would have the ability to make any of that advertising non-deductible or something of that sort.

There is another item that has bothered me with regard to the Liquor Licence Board though, and that is with regard to the hearings they hold. For example instead of being in the area in the evening, they are held in Toronto, making it much more difficult for local people to listen to what is going on. I think it is very important if we are going to eliminate the political interference that some people claim occurs, we certainly should be sure that the hearings are open.

In my own experience I have not encountered this so-called political interference. I think one of the things I have noticed, though, is that it takes a great deal of persistence with the various inspectors and those involved to get clearances. But if one is persistent one usually can achieve the objective of getting a licence for those establishments which one feels would do a good job in controlling their operations.

The last point I wanted to make, Mr. Speaker, in regard to the Liquor Licence Board, is the matter that was raised by my colleague from Waterloo North, and that is the variation in inspection. I can recognize that it is always difficult to have one standard of inspection, but perhaps more effort could be made in this case.

I know a physician in Woodbridge who has recently given up his practice in the town, because of problems related to the operation of the hotel across the street. He has written to the local police in our area about the problem and he has done all sorts of things over a period of years, but in one manner or another this particular establishment in Woodbridge seems to have been able to continue to be a source of a great deal of row on the streets and noise at night. It seems to be a cause of annoyance to many of the local citizens and nothing happens about it, whereas in other cases what seem to be well-established and well-operated establishments do encounter difficulties with the inspectors.

An hon. member: Because the door swings the wrong way.

Mr. Deacon: Well, that may be the reason.

The other point I wanted to deal with is that of the leases and the properties acquired by the Liquor Control Board. I noted that in response to an inquiry of the minister by my colleague from Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) he gave him a list of the various stores that the Liquor Control Board leases—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Essex-Kent (Mr. Ruston).

Mr. Deacon: Essex-Kent, that's right. Chatham-Kent is the Lord High Man himself.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The former Lord High.

Mr. Deacon: He gave him a list of the various stores that are leased and some properties that are owned by the Liquor Control Board; and I see in the answer to the inquiry was mentioned the name of the person, for example in Barry's Bay, who sold the land to the Ontario Liquor Control Board in connection with the store there.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Barry's Bay?

Mr. Deacon: If one inquired further into the person of Thomas A. Conway of Barry's Bay, one would find he is the brother-in-law of the member for that riding. One would find he also was very active in the sale of the property in connection with the liquor control store in Renfrew.

It is very important in these cases that we introduce almost the same rules that we have with conflict of interest as far as cabinet ministers are concerned. It may be that the proposal put forward by Mr. Conway was in fact the best proposal, but certainly the people in that community feel that it was only done because he was the brother-in-law of the member.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): If the member can't do anything, the members of the family can't do anything, is that right?

Mr. Deacon: I would say again, the way—

Mr. MacDonald: Is the member against these rules, these guidelines?

Mr. W. Hodgson: Pardon?

Mr. Deacon:—anyone deals with this is that there should be open hearings—

Mr. MacDonald: Is the member against these guidelines?

Mr. Deacon:—or there should be open tenders and applications and full justification for selecting properties, particularly when members of the family of members of this House are connected with the transaction.

Mr. Lawlor: The member is for insider trading is he?

Mr. Deacon: I think a survey of the operations around the province will reveal there are similar cases of people connected with active members of the party. It's most important we try to eliminate this source of cynicism—and justifiable source of cynicism—on the part of the public. I am sure that those who are managing the Liquor Control Board and those in charge of the Liquor Licence Board do not appreciate allegations of this sort, and for that reason I think it's important that the minister ensure that procedures are adopted which will keep these matters as open as possible and free from such allegations.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, there's a couple of points that have been bugging me about the operation of the Liquor Control Board. As was stated earlier, there are a lot of nutty regulations, but the more you look into it the nuttier they get. I'm speaking specifically about the sale of draught beer in that part of this province called northern Ontario—north of the French River. For about 40 years there was sort of a gentlemen's agreement in that part of Ontario that no one could sell draught beer in northern Ontario unless it was manufactured in one of the breweries located in that part of the province, and owned by Doran's Breweries. There was one in Sudbury, Sault Ste. Marie, Port Arthur and another town up there.

Now, all of us believed during this period that this was by regulation, but it finally came to pass that it was by gentlemen's agreement that this independent brewery would have exclusive monopoly on the sale of draught beer in that part of the province.

Well, lo and behold, the big operators—Canadian Breweries—finally came into northern Ontario and they did buy out the local breweries in that part of the province. At this stage of the game the other major breweries located in southern Ontario saw fit to try and get a piece of the market. This precipitated a study by this government, headed up by Mr. Wishart, and he looked into the problem of this monopoly which had existed in the northern part of the province, and he determined that the monopoly, to some degree, should be maintained. He came down with a recommendation, and it was adopted by the government, that no one would have access to the sale of draught beer in northern Ontario unless they did manufacture that beer in that part of the province.

Now, with some reluctance, I had to go along with that finding, because what it did have the effect of doing was preserving about 200 jobs in northern Ontario, and everyone knows that we need as many jobs as we can get up there.

But subsequent to that directive, another event happened in that one of the southern Ontario brewers put on the market draught beer for home consumption.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): Why the reluctance?

Mr. Germa: Without any direction from this government, the board saw fit to interpret Mr. Wishart's study to infer that draught beer could not be drunk in the homes of northern Ontario, but it would be allowed in the homes of southern Ontario.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Discrimination—terrible!

Mr. Germa: At no point in the study as conducted by Mr. Wishart had he made reference to this situation. So unless certain anomalies exist in the laws of the Province of Ontario which cause them to be capricious, then I think they should apply right across the province. I have had numerous representations made to me by residents in my riding of Sudbury, and they do want to have consumption of draught beer in their homes and in their camps, and wherever it is allowed in this part of the province. Mr. Wishart—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member would observe the time and find this an appropriate point to break his remarks and move the adjournment of the debate?

Mr. Germa moves adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, on Monday I would ask the House to prepare itself for any of the legislation outstanding on the order paper.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): In what order?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I am not prepared to give the members that as yet, but—

Mr. Lawlor: You're an awful guy, Eric!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That's okay; they say the same thing about the member. I think I would start off with item 5.

Mr. Lawlor: Try to be a mite more specific.

Mr. Deans: I wonder if the House leader could tell us whether this debate that's going on today might be continued next Friday.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Next when?

Mr. Deans: Next Friday morning?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We'll have a look at it, but I would say that's not unreasonable.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, before the House adjourns I would ask the minister if we could get off on the right foot in this short session.

There are a number of bills on the order paper which require considerable thought and discussion. It is just not possible for the members of the opposition to be constantly ready to debate each and every bill on the order paper. Surely it's not asking too much from the ministry to give some indication, not necessarily of the precise order, but of the groupings of bills which would be dealt with, say on Monday and Tuesday of next week. I would also ask the minister if he would advise us whether the House will be sitting during evenings next week.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: In regard to the first part of the presentation that was made, some of the bills standing in the order paper right now are not of that great a significance. I have enough confidence that the hon. member would be able to deal with the balance.

My difficulty this morning is that I did have a list of bills to proceed with on Monday, but unfortunately that minister is not here so I cannot confirm that order. But be sure that, as I have in the past, I'll endeavour to inform both parties of precisely what the order will be on Monday at the earliest possible opportunity.

In regard to the second question, I do not anticipate evening sittings next week.

Mr. Lawlor: Couldn't we have 12 hours' notice before the ministries bring in a bill?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 1:05 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Once again we are pleased to have visitors with us today. In the east gallery we have students from Herron Valley Jr. High School of Toronto, from West End Secondary School of Toronto and from Royal York Collegiate Institute of Toronto; in the west gallery we have students from the R. J. Lang Jr. High School of Willowdale.

I am also very pleased today—it gives me a distinct pleasure—to inform the House that we have some special visitors with us in the Speaker's gallery. We have with us Mr. Kenneth Fraser, Mr. Paul Phaneuf and Mr. Alfred Croisetiére, who are members of the legislative assembly of the Province of Quebec. Mr. Ronald Tetrault, who is also a member of the Quebec assembly, will be joining us shortly; and we have also Mr. Roberto Wilson, who is Director of Parliamentary Relations in the Province of Quebec, and Mr. Jacques Lessard, Assistant Secretary of the National Assembly. I am sure you want to extend these gentlemen a welcome.

I might say to the hon. members that the presence of these gentlemen is a result of a programme of exchange visits between members of Legislatures under the auspices of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association. You may recall that several of us from Ontario visited with the Quebec assembly members last year, and this of course is the second in the series of exchange visits.

Statements by the ministry.

TRI-LEVEL CONFERENCE

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would like to report briefly to the House on the tri-level conference, which as members know was held last week in Toronto on November 20 and 21. As background to my comments I will table today the four items provided to the conference by the government of Ontario.

Item one is the background paper called Ontario's Approach to Urbanization, and gives details of our established policies and programmes.

Items two, three and four are the remarks I made to the conference on each of the three agenda items, which were: 1. The Problems and Challenges of Urbanization; 2. The Roles of the Respective Levels of Government; and 3. The Design of Effective Machinery for Intergovernmental Co-operation and Consultation.

In addition, I will table for your information the communiqué issued by the co-chairmen at the conclusion of the conference.

In assessing the results of the conference, I think it would be useful to consider the following points:

1. Tri-level consultations can have two objectives—doing and talking—both of which have their value given certain conditions and at particular points of time.

2. The understandable concern of the people of Ontario, whether they live in cities, towns or in the rural parts of our province, is with finding answers to the problems of urbanization.

3. To meet this understandable concern, the Ontario government has had, since 1966, its policy framework called Design for Development. As you know, this is a continuing integrated programme of regional development, local government reform and provincial-municipal fiscal reform.

4. Our experience has shown that Design for Development must be implemented jointly by the province and its municipalities. Therefore, we have developed two major mechanisms to encourage regular and effective provincial-municipal consultation. These are the provincial-municipal liaison committee and the projected provincial-municipal regional planning advisory councils in each of Ontario's five planning areas.

5. We recognize that the economic and fiscal powers of the federal government and many of its other functional responsibilities have a significant impact on urbanization in Ontario. To meet our particular urban priorities in Ontario, such as rapid transit, pollution control in the Great Lakes or housing and urban renewal, will require the complementary support and co-operation of the federal government.

This recognition formed part of the Premier's statement on Nov. 22 when he asked the federal government to join with the province in financing our new medium capacity rapid transit system. Similarly, this recognition was the reason why, on the second day of the tri-level conference, I invited the federal government to participate in Ontario's Design for Development. The prompt federal acceptance of my invitation is, I hope, evidence that the government of Canada also believes that as far as this province is concerned the time for talk has passed, and the time for doing has arrived.

6. It is obvious that the—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): The minister has been doing all the talking; they have been doing the doing.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): That's a laugh.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): The Leader of the Opposition is starting off the week well.

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): That's a good statement; it's got through to them. It's a good statement, obviously.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Very humorous; very humorous statement.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We have listened to this baloney for three years.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well, they didn't do very much on Oct. 30—but we won't bother with that—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They are still the government in spite of the minister's best efforts.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: To continue:

6. It is obvious that the process of urbanization affects every province of Canada while, as I said at the conference, manifesting itself quite differently in each of them. In such circumstances, we believe that each provincial government has the responsibility to deal with the consequences of urbanization in the manner it judges most appropriate to its particular conditions. It is equally obvious that the magnitude and kinds of urban issues which we have in Ontario are not the same as those in our sister provinces and require, therefore, a different approach. Moreover, we are fortunate to have a mature strategy to deal with our concerns.

7. In view of the different conditions in each province, and because in Ontario we have long since passed the stage of general discussion, we suggested at the conference that to be meaningful the tri-level consultative process should be concentrated at the regional or provincial level and designed to fit the different needs of each province. This is why we invited the federal government to join the existing machinery of the government of Ontario and the municipalities of this province so that there can be effective co-ordination of our urban activities.

8. At the national level, we shall continue to support meaningful exchanges. Our point here—and this was repeated by many spokesmen at the tri-level conference and reinforced by our experience there—is that such national meetings are simply forums for general discussion. From time to time, there may be matters of concern to several regions which could usefully be discussed at such large gatherings.

However, given the scale and well-known nature of the urban issues facing us in this province, given the time available to resolve them, and given our limited human and financial resources, we would prefer to concentrate our energies on effective tri-level machinery at the provincial rather than the national level; that is on the doing rather than the talking. As I said at the conference, our objective is not to get machinery for machinery's sake or machinery that is superimposed on that which we already have; our objective is simpler: to get the machinery which works.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

TRI-LEVEL CONFERENCE

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question to put to the Treasurer, in response to the statement that he has just made. Would he not feel that the fact the other provinces did not see fit to follow his and Ontario's lead in the tri-level conference just completed—in stopping the federal participation in municipal programmes directly—might lead him to reconsider the strategy which he himself refers to as mature?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I can only say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that his observation that we tried to stop the consultation process is not correct.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Since it's very difficult for us to determine what went on at that conference, since it was closed and the minister would not respond to our request to be included, would he care to comment to the House on press reports that indicate he was left stranded, high and dry, on the archaic policy of restricting the federal involvement only to assisting the provinces and not to assisting the municipalities?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): What is the minister for?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Well Mr. Speaker, I can't say I'm particularly for the member for Rainy River, but—

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: —that's another story.

I would say to the Leader of the Opposition and to you, Mr. Speaker, that is why I made this statement today. I have already stated that some of the observations of the Leader of the Opposition, which followed the statement, are wrong; and in this instance I say that the press reports were wrong. That's why I will table—

Mr. Reid: We took the minister's word for it.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That's why, Mr. Speaker, I indicated in the statement I have just made that our papers will be tabled when that order comes up in the House this afternoon. I'll leave it to the hon. Leader of the Opposition to decide then, after having read the papers that were presented, whether the observations he made with respect to his own views and those expressed in the press were, indeed, correct.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Why was the conference in camera?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I'm sorry, Mr. Speaker, I didn't—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why didn't the minister let anybody in to observe the conference?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Let me say, Mr. Speaker, if I may respond to that, and I'm sure the Premier (Mr. Davis) will forgive me if I do, I recall certain questions were asked of him and a question by the Leader of the Opposition to the Premier was: why was the tri-level conference held in camera?

This was basically a decision of the three-man committee, representing the federal, provincial and municipal delegations, which was authorized to plan the conference and whose reports were distributed to and accepted by all conference participants. I would refer members to the report of the tri-level interim planning committee, dated May 17, which was tabled in this Legislature by my predecessor on May 19.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Givens: Since the Treasurer has indicated further discussions will probably be taking place between the three levels of government, is he prepared to promise us now that the opposition parties are represented so that these mistaken media releases will never take place again? These terrible lies that they wrote about it, that he almost scuttled the conference—

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): It would probably be worse.

Mr. Givens: Does he promise that he'll give us representation; that he will see to it—

An hon. member: It will get worse.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I am in no position to promise anything along that line. I personally would be quite prepared to see representation from the opposition—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's good.

Mr. Givens: Would the minister request that?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: If the member would permit me to finish my answer!

Mr. Speaker: I would be quite prepared to see that but I must say to the hon. member for York-Forest Hill that that decision will not altogether rest with the representation from the Province of Ontario. The other provinces will be obliged to concur.

I repeat; I've just stated that if members go back to May 19, they'll find that the decision was described in this Legislature at that time. It comes as a bit of a surprise to me that the issue is raised only now.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege, it isn't raised now. Does he remember that I requested his predecessor—

Mr. Speaker: Order! There is no point of privilege.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Sure there is!

Mr. Givens: Sure there is! He said why is it being raised now? He's accusing me of—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There is no point of privilege! It is simply an argument.

Mr. Givens: A supplementary question: Does the minister remember that I requested of his predecessor that the opposition parties should be represented at the tri-level conference, and his answer was that he would look into it? Was the message not passed on to this minister when he had to leave so suddenly?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: No, it apparently wasn't, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It wasn't even acknowledged.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

REGIONAL GOVERNMENT GUIDELINES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the same minister. Can he clarify the situation with regard to the population guidelines established by his predecessor, referring to the implementation of new regional governments? Does he realize, for example, that in the case of Brant county the maximum population of the whole county, including the city of Brantford, does not come up to the minimum standard established by his predecessor for a reformed local government?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, while I wasn't here, I'm aware of the fact that the Leader of the Opposition asked this question of the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Bennett); so I do come prepared to answer it and I hope in a manner that is satisfactory. I say, Mr. Speaker, I am certain that the commissioner who is now reviewing local government in Brant county is aware of the provincial criteria and guidelines for regional government.

I believe the members of this House will agree too that it would be inappropriate for me to comment as to their possible applications to Brant county and its area before the commissioner has made his recommendations.

That would be my answer to that question.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I apologize—it's only a coincidence that this matter pertains to my own area but I do feel it's of importance to all parts of the province.

The minister really is giving no further information on the guidelines set down by his predecessor, which said that a regional government would have to have a population of at least, as I recall 180,000 residents, when in this case the same government has established a local government review where the population is considerably less than 100,000.

Surely he would not be trespassing on the prerogatives of the commissioners if he made it clear that there would be some possibility of their recommendations for a reform of local government being implemented, without the old guidelines simply striking it off.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I don't think I stated that I would be trespassing on the prerogatives of the commissioner. But I did say, Mr. Speaker, I'd like to see the commissioner's report as to what he thinks constitutes a viable area for regionalization in Brant and its neighbouring municipalities, if they are to be taken into context, and then see how the population relates to the general findings of the commissioner.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Could it be that the reason for the unusual delay in the implementation of regional government in the Hamilton area has something to do with the fact that there are insufficient numbers of people in the Brant area, and therefore it may necessitate using some of the land studied under the Steele commission report and some of the population normally attributed to the Hamilton area to make up the total number required?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I can't say that's particularly or specifically the reason. It could be related, because I suppose any regional government has a relationship with the local municipalities and the regional government areas around it. So wherever we do this, it has to be taken into context. I think the answer I gave the Leader of the Opposition is about all I can say on that score, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A further supplementary: Does the minister's answer then mean that the decision in the Hamilton-Wentworth, Haldimand-Norfolk and Oxford areas will be delayed until the commissioners in Brant make their report?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: No, Mr. Speaker, I'm not saying that at all. There's work going on in each and every one of these areas and each and every one of these regions. I can't in all honesty say that there is any activity in terms of regional government going on in Oxford. But on the perimeters of all these—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: There is a study; surely, the minister is aware of a study?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes, I am.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Aren't they doing that for some purpose?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I am sure they are, but let me say that around the perimeters of any area proposed for regional government are considerations that flow over those boundaries. So it's important that the commissioners study these and then in those terms, relate them to the population requirements.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: If the minister is saying that the matter of the formation of a region in Brant is not the reason why the Hamilton area study has not reached the point of being implemented, then what is the reason? What's the holdup?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I don't know how far I'm supposed to get into these situations that are being dealt with. May I simply say to the hon. member that we're pursuing and studying the matter of regional government in areas east and west of Metro. I would simply suggest that at this point in time we believe we've got enough to do it. If it's to be done properly. We can't go too far.

Hamilton-Wentworth is under study now. I can't go any further in terms of making statements of a committal character to the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do want to ask the minister a further question in regard to the regional government in the Hamilton-Wentworth area, since it's been raised. Is it the intention of the government to make an announcement before the end of this year in regard to the boundaries for the Hamilton-Wentworth-Burlington region as set out by the Steele commission report?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Not necessarily, Mr. Speaker.

INCO'S POLLUTION CONTROL SCHEDULING

Mr. Deans: I would like to ask a question of the Minister of the Environment. Is it the intention of the minister to extend the deadlines established for Inco for reduction of the sulphur dioxide emissions beyond the year 1978, as requested by International Nickel?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): In a word, Mr. Speaker, no.

I presume that the hon. member is referring to a request by Inco for certain changes in the scheduling. I wrote back to Inco about two weeks ago indicating that because of the study on the water now going on between ourselves, the Ministry of Natural Resources, and other interested ministries, and the fact that we have not yet established the effectiveness of the high stack—which is an interim measure in the first instance anyway—we weren't prepared to make any changes at the present time.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth—

Mr. Deans: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have lots of questions of the new ministers. I need them. They are not the ones I want to—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth North has a question.

Mr. D. W. Ewen (Wentworth North): I have a question of the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Bennett). I would like an explanation of what happened to his Ottawa Rough Riders who were beaten by the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Hamilton yesterday?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

An hon. member: The minister will have to answer that.

Mr. Speaker: The question doesn't qualify under this question period. The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): That's the best contribution the member has made in the debate.

ARTARIO 72

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development. Did the Ontario Council for the Arts check with his department or other ministries under his aegis before its non-profit art project, Artario 72—that's an instant gallery in a box—was put up for sale and distribution throughout Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Yes, Mr. Speaker. That particular exhibition, sponsored by the Ontario Council for the Arts, was cleared through the Ministry of Colleges and Universities, which is the ministry through which the arts council reports to this House.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister's department approve of all of the participating displays and objects of art?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I think I might just correct this. There is no department; this is a secretariat for which I am responsible. The Ministry of Colleges and Universities would be the ministerial structure through which the council would report. No doubt there would have been some discussion with the officials of that ministry with respect to the concept and the idea. I know the ministry would always respect the fact that it is a separate council which would assume some responsibility for determining certain aspects of its programme. I couldn't in the absence of the Minister of Colleges and Universities (Mr. McNie), give the member an answer as to whether or not there was specific discussion dealing with specific artists whose work was to be included in this particular exhibition.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary?

Mr. B. Newman: Is the minister aware that object No. 4 by John Boyle, "Moose Brand Strike Everywhere Matches," contained a matchstick with a Canadian flag, the purpose of which is to burn the Canadian flag?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Obviously, Mr. Speaker, I wasn't particularly—

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): The minister was directly responsible for that! Don't forget it.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The Canadian flag? The Canadian flag or the burning of it?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Strike the match!

Hon. Mr. Welch: I would think that I would be glad to refer that matter to the arts council. I don't know whether that is the object of those particular matches or what the object of the display is, but now that the hon. member has brought that to our attention, I certainly will ask the Minister of Colleges and Universities to obtain some explanation from the officials who in fact chose that particular contribution for the exhibit.

It is not the policy of this government to burn the flags of any country.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

CONTROL OF FIREARMS

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Is the minister considering—and if not, will he consider—introducing a system for the registration and licensing of the manufacture, of the sale at wholesale and retail levels and of the ownership by citizens of guns, other firearms and other offensive weapons to protect the public and assist the police in controlling crime?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I believe that in so far as control and registration of firearms is concerned, it is within the purview of the federal government. In so far as retailers of, I presume, small arms or hand guns are concerned, I have never had any suggestion put to my ministry that we do undertake the registration of them. I will consider it.

Mr. Renwick: By way of supplementary, if the minister can register the ownership of and license automobiles, doesn't he agree that regardless of the provisions of the Criminal Code he is able to institute an effective system of registration of the manufacture, sale and ownership of guns and the other items to which I referred?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I would think that the manufacturing of firearms is within the sole purview of the federal government. In so far as distribution is concerned it might well be that it would be the responsibility of this ministry if a need existed—and I am open-minded, Mr. Speaker, as to whether such a need does exist; I am not asserting or denying. I know that very often they do play a major role in crimes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

STATUS OF O.P.C. OFFICER

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Solicitor General.

Could he explain to us what duties are assigned to Mr. Thurston of the Ontario Police Commission, now that he has been denied access to the security files of the Police Commission; since he was apparently a senior officer in charge of intelligence in the Police Commission?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I didn't quite catch the significance of the latter part of the hon. member's question.

Mr. Singer: Does the Solicitor General want it repeated? What use is Mr. Thurston to the Police Commission since he is denied access to the files?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That is a little at variance with the original question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deans: How can the Solicitor General tell if he didn't hear the original question?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the duties of Mr. Thurston are in a state of suspension and the matter is presently in the course of consideration. However, this will not be completed until a formal communication has been received.

Mr. Singer: By way of a supplementary question, could the minister tell us why his duties are in a state of suspension, if he is receiving salary while he is in this suspended state and whether his suspended state relates to the discharge of Mr. Gary Rolfe, who used to be employed by the Police Commission?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I think I will answer this question more fully at a subsequent time.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of further supplementary, does the minister not believe that the members of the Legislature and the public are entitled to find out what goes on in the Police Commission either by direct answer or by the production of the Ontario Police Commission annual report, which was due 11 months ago and which we still haven't seen?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: The answer to that question, Mr. Speaker, is yes.

Mr. Singer: Well, why doesn't the minister tell us then?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, is it not actually a fact that Mr. Thurston was suspended from his duties because he commented to the other members of the staff that Eric Silk's IQ was below 80?

SNOWMOBILE LICENCE FEES

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): I have a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications. Could the minister advise me what the rationale was behind the 500 per cent increase in the registration of snowmobiles from $2 a year to $10 a year? What does he propose to offer to those who are going to contribute by way of indirect taxation to the province? Does he plan specifically to spend some of the revenues that he will get from this source in northern Ontario, as he is doing in southern Ontario, by providing trails for such vehicles?

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, first I would point out that the fee, which is $10, is comparable to many other jurisdictions in Canada. They range from $8 to $10.

Basically the reasoning behind it is simply this: With the large increase in numbers of snowmobiles it is essential there be registration for the purposes of tracing them in the event of theft or loss, with respect to the insurance companies. Keeping the file and making up the plates and the work that is necessary in conjunction therewith in these days of rising costs does take a fair amount of money. I suppose, transcending all of that, it is an additional source of revenue for the province.

Insofar as the point that the member makes about spending it on snowmobile trails in northern Ontario is concerned, obviously I can't make any statement about this. This would be a matter of government policy. The funds go under the consolidated general revenue fund and they are distributed accordingly. It may be that some of those funds would be spent on roads in northern Ontario.

Mr. Stokes: As a supplementary: Isn't it reasonable for people to expect something in return for a direct tax such as that? The minister obviously hasn't any plan for reimbursing them; why single out them particularly when boating registration is absolutely free?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Well in addition, the boating regulations will be a subject of further discussion, probably later on.

Mr. Deans: The minister is going to put fees on that too, eh?

Hon. Mr. Carton: I must also point out that in addition to the registration and keeping of the files, there is a considerable amount of enforcement necessary with snowmobiles, which of course there was not prior to the very large use that they are put to now. So having regard to all these factors and the rising costs involved, I really don't think that is out of the way.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: There was a supplementary over here, I believe.

All right. The hon. member for Sudbury has a supplementary.

Mr. Germa: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary of the minister: Is the minister considering a rebate on the highway tax on gasoline used in snowmobiles, as these machines are not used on highways?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, we are not considering this. This would, I believe, come under another ministry, but I would point out that snowmobiles in some cases are used on highways.

Mr. Shulman: Unfortunately.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary; the hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: Is the ministry considering exempting that population, say north of the main CNR line, from this increase in snowmobile fee, considering they receive absolutely no services from the government for the payment that they make?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Again, Mr. Speaker, they do receive service because in fact they are registered, and in fact as I mentioned they can be traced if they are stolen. If there is damage done to them, the insurance companies have to have some way of identifying them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is not worth $10.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Again I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that the policies of this government are certainly not ones that are applicable to certain regions of Ontario, they are universal across the province.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Speaker: I believe there have been sufficient supplementaries on that question.

The hon. member for Waterloo North.

PROPERTY TAX CREDITS

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): A question of the provincial Treasurer, Minister of Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): And so on!

Mr. Good: Will the minister inform the House if the benefits under the new property tax credit plan will apply to persons living in married students' apartments at the University of Waterloo, who were denied benefits under the old basic tax shelter plan?

Mr. Givens: No vote on it!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, all I can say at this point in time is I wouldn't see why not.

Mr. Good: Could the minister investigate further and give me a definite answer? These people were denied benefits under the tax credit plan because of arguments over ownership of the building, and whether or not the city was receiving full tax. They were paying in excess of $150 a month rent and receiving no benefits.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I will attempt to firm it up. The new tax credit plan is based on income almost entirely. It has already been stated that there will be a formula to deal with rent because it is assumed that rent is a form of paying taxation through the landlord. How that could exclude the type of tenants that the member is speaking about, I am not aware. I will pursue it and find out; but I don't see why they would be excluded, I can't see why.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

SNOW REMOVAL REPORT

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of the Environment regarding his announcement last April that a committee was being set up to study snow removal operations in Toronto and that a report could be expected by this winter: The question is, is winter here and is the report here?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, I will leave it up to the hon. member as to whether or not winter is right here, or wherever it is. The committee produced an interim report, at which time it was recommended that the committee be reorganized with representation from certain other different parts of the province. The committee is still meeting. There has not been a final report.

In the meantime, our ministry has notified all the municipalities that once again we don't want snow dumped into rivers, and that where they may expect emergency conditions and might have to dump in rivers for any one of a variety of reasons, they should get in touch with our people. Actually we wrote them, I think about three weeks ago or longer, so that we would be aware of what emergency disposal methods they might be taking.

Mr. Good: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. Good: How many municipalities have you given permission to dump snow into waterways for this coming winter?

Hon. Mr. Auld: So far we have given permission to none; and the suggestion is that where they consider they might have to use a watercourse they should get in touch with us now, so that if there is an emergency condition we can deal with it expeditiously.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

FEDERAL CABINET APPOINTMENTS

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, if the House would permit me to make a statement. If it isn't urgent, I believe it is of interest. We have word of certain appointments to the federal cabinet that everybody might be interested in, sir.

Mr. Speaker: Agreed!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The first bulletin gives notice that nine new cabinet appointments are to be made today and the first to be reported are these: Mr. Munro moves to the Labour portfolio from Health and Welfare. The Minister of Transportation and Communications may wish to take note of this: Mr. Don Jamieson takes over the Department of Regional Economic Expansion from Jean Marchand, who takes Mr. Jamieson's place in Transport. Marc Lalonde, formerly Mr. Trudeau's principal secretary, becomes Minister of Health and Welfare.

The next bulletin brings us up to date a little more. Some wisdom being shown—a woman has been appointed to the federal cabinet in the person of Mrs. Jeanne Sauve, appointed minister responsible for science policy.

The third bulletin reveals that Alastair Gillespie, former science minister, becomes Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce in place of Jean-Luc Pepin. Jean-Pierre Goyer has been moved out of the Solicitor General's office to take charge of the Supply and Services Department, and Warren Allmand becomes Solicitor General. Maybe this will reverse the observation of Mr. Diefenbaker who said that under Mr. Goyer it was easier to get out of jail than it was to get in.

Mr. Speaker: I regret that I cannot permit questions about that statement. The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, the minister I wanted has left the chamber.

Mr. Speaker: All right. The hon. member for Rainy River.

ONTARIO DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL

Mr. Reid: Thank you. I have a question of the Treasurer, etc., etc.

In view of his statement earlier, can the minister indicate why the government has disbanded and dissolved the Ontario Development Council, particularly the Northwestern Ontario Development Council, which was led to believe that it would retain its identity and function in the new changeover? Has the government had any second thoughts about that policy?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I believe the proposal, as members of the Legislature should know, is that the former regional development councils as they were then constituted will disappear and new municipal planning committees will represent the five economic regions of the province.

These would be the north—and it may well be that the two elements of the north will have some split jurisdiction, I can't tell the hon. member what that is yet—the east, the central part of the province and the south-west. So if there is to be some form of split or joint jurisdiction between northeastern Ontario and northwestern Ontario, then the five economic regions would be covered.

The reason for that is that as we approach implementation of many of the programmes of Design for Development it now becomes important that representatives of the local governments and/or regional governments become involved. That's really basically the change in the structure that took place.

Mr. Reid: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Surely the Treasurer is aware that this is exactly what the Northwestern Ontario Development Council was composed of, the individual municipalities within that region. It is my understanding, and I put this question to him, that he is destroying the democratic people-base of the regional development plans and substituting a bureaucratic civil servant-orientated council.

Mr. Speaker: Was there a question in that statement?

Mr. Reid: Is he not destroying the democratic base of his development council in doing away with the representation from the individual communities within the region and substituting what appears to be a bureaucratic civil servant organization in its place?

In fact is that—

Mr. Speaker: You are getting repetitious now.

Mr. Reid: —not just contradictory to what the Treasurer just said?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I got the message the first time but it appeared to be in the form of a statement rather than a question. The answer to the hon. member is no, we don't believe we are.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. Cassidy: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: Could the minister say, since it is now six months since the regional development councils were given the death sentence, when he intends to appoint the new super-regional councils or advisory bodies that were proposed by his predecessor?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, that is in the process of consideration now. We have agreed, let me say, that it's reasonable and fair at least to allow the regional development councils as they are presently structured to phase out, and this may take that process right through to the end of the current fiscal year.

Mr. Stokes: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary, the hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Yes, thank you, Mr. Speaker. How does the minister rationalize the moving of a consultant to the provincial-municipal liaison committee which is going to take the place of the Northwestern Ontario Regional Development Council, when the consultant of that committee is a resident of Toronto? How is he going to assure the people in northwestern Ontario that their best interests are being served when the consultant for that committee is going to be a resident of Toronto?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I am not totally aware yet that he will be obliged to reside in Toronto.

Mr. Stokes: He is residing in Toronto.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: He is residing in Toronto and he came from the north?

Mr. Stokes: Yes.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Then, having come from the north to this big city, surely he'll never forget his broad interests as they have served the north in the past, I would hope.

Mr. Stokes: But how is he going to liaise with the people who are going to be responsible for sitting on the provincial-municipal liaison committee if he is going to be operating out of an office in Toronto?

Mr. Deans: That's how the government's done it for years, and look at the BNA Act.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I can't believe, Mr. Speaker, that that will be an insurmountable obstacle to the performance of his duties in the light that the hon. member refers to.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: One more supplementary.

Mr. Foulds: Will it not be particularly difficult for him to communicate with north-western Ontario via telephone as the government lines are always busy because they are so few in number?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I can't perceive, Mr. Speaker, that we will restrict his communications to those that he can accomplish by telephone.

Mr. Speaker: Was there someone on the government side attempting to gain the floor? If not, the hon. member for Windsor West.

FEMALE LAB TECHNICIANS' PAY

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A question of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker: Is the women's bureau, in its role of administering the section of the Human Rights Code on equal pay, looking into the situation pointed out by Sylva Gelber, the director of the federal women's bureau, that female lab technicians are paid 5.2 per cent less in salaries than male lab technicians in Ontario? If this is the case, then isn't the government permitting violations of its own legislation?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member for Windsor West, I can assure him that our women's bureau have been very active in this field in recent months.

Now I am not aware of this particular case. I would be glad, of course, to get in touch with the women's bureau and find out if it did receive a petition from the above group. However, I can assure him I will have an answer for him shortly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

RAIL TRANSPORTATION OF BEEF CALVES

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Agriculture and Food.

Has the Ontario Beef Improvement Association or any of its members made a formal or informal presentation objecting to the rail transportation of beef calves from the west this year? Because it appears as though the transportation is even worse this year than last, despite promises to the contrary.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised to hear that statement in the form of a question from the hon. member, because all the information that I have is quite to the contrary. The information that has come to me from the Ontario Beef Improvement Association is that the transportation of beef cattle from western Canada is the best it has ever been. I have heard this from several shippers as well as officially from the OBIA in conversations I have had with them.

I have no other knowledge of any presentation made either to our office, or to either of the railways, contrary to that opinion.

Mr. Gaunt: I will get the minister a few examples.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

PITS AND QUARRIES REGULATIONS

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is of the provincial Treasurer.

There has been a divisional court ruling that the province can license a gravel pit, even though the local municipality—and in particular Caledon township—had adopted an official plan and passed a bylaw which said that the area was to be for residential use only. Further, the court held that non-conforming uses in effect before the adoption of the official plan could continue under the Planning Act; and that the Pits and Quarries Act does not overrule that.

Will the minister be prepared to amend the Pits and Quarries Act or the Planning Act to ensure the local government's wishes are not violated when provincial licences are being issued under the Pits and Quarries Act, even if this means that non-conforming uses are denied the rights to continue?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, we are aware of the situation expressed by the hon. member and discussions are taking place now between the officials in the Ministry of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs and the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has a supplementary?

Mr. Gisborn: A supplementary: Does the minister think himself that the ministry in charge of licensing pits and quarries should, as a principle or policy, overrule the decisions of official plans of the municipalities?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: It was the intention when the Pits and Quarries Act was introduced, discussed and certain amendments were made to it that certain restrictions on the matter of pits and quarries had to be controlled. There were certain situations which were not pleasant, I believe, to those members of the opposition who expressed themselves, and the Act was amended to take care of that situation.

I am not prepared to comment on what we will do until the examination of the relationship of the two Acts that is presently under way is completed.

Mr. Speaker: Can the hon. member for York-Forest Hill now place his question?

PROHIBITION SIGNS ON METRO STREETS

Mr. Givens: I have a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications.

Has his ministry approved the erection of scores and scores of total and partial prohibition signs on scores of streets in the much-suffering northwest quadrant of Metropolitan Toronto? If so, what is the theory behind the erection of these signs?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of these signs, but I will check into that for the hon. member.

Mr. Givens: They are in the minister's riding.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

ONTARIO SECURITIES COMMISSION'S FAILURE TO LAY CHARGES

Mr. Shulman: I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, Mr. Speaker.

Why did the head of the Ontario Securities Commission instruct the employees of the commission not to lay charges in the case of the official who was proven to have lied to the commission as to the source of the funds which he had used to buy shares of Silver Shield? And in the course of the investigation, did the minister's commission determine if any official in the provincial Department of Natural Resources had purchased or been given shares of Silver Shield or International Mariner?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I'm not aware of any such instructions emanating from the chairman of the Securities Commission, and at this stage I must say I doubt very much whether any such instructions were, in fact, issued.

Mr. Shulman: They were given.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have called for a report, which I understand will be available to me very shortly, from the Securities Commission pertaining to Silver Shield, and I'll know at that time.

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. members like to hear the final bulletin on the federal cabinet changes? Agreed!

An hon. member: Bulletin number four.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Bulletin number four, correct: James Richardson, former Supply Minister, moves up to the Defence Ministry. Eugene Whalen was named Minister of Agriculture replacing H. A. Olson.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The next one starts off by saying Gerard Pelletier moves out—and I wish I could stop it there, but I can't—he moves out of the Secretariat of State into the Communications Department, while Hugh Faulkner takes over as Secretary of State; Dan MacDonald of Cardigan, Prince Edward Island, comes into the cabinet as Minister of Veterans Affairs; Andre Ouellette of Montreal Papineau as Postmaster General; and Stanley Haidasz of Toronto Parkdale becomes the Minister of State, and that seems to be it.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions? The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

LEGISLATION IN HOME REPAIR AND CONSTRUCTION FIELD

Mr. B. Newman: A question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, Mr. Speaker: In light of the numerous complaints in the home repair field, as well as in the home construction field, does the minister plan on introducing some type of legislation governing the licensing of individuals in that type of business?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, many months ago a study was undertaken by representatives of various industries, including the construction industry. A preliminary report has been completed and is now being revised, updated and screened by the committee itself, ready for presentation to me.

I made an announcement in Thunder Bay some four weeks ago to the Ontario Association of Municipal Building Inspectors to be prepared to have this report available and to get some input from them, some contribution. They were represented on this overall committee. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that in the spring session a bill will be introduced along the lines suggested by the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Time for one more question. The hon. member for London North was attempting to gain the floor.

CRIMINAL CODE AMENDMENTS

Mr. G. W. Walker (London North): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications. I wonder if the minister can indicate to us whether the matter of Section 21 of the Highway Traffic Act will be brought into reconciliation with the recent Criminal Code amendments, vis-à-vis conditional licence suspensions for impaired driving?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I'm knowledgeable on this matter, but I defer to the Provincial Secretary for Justice.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Mr. Speaker, the whole matter of the amendments to the Criminal Code, dealing with restricted licences, is something that our secretariat will have to consider. There was really no consultation with the provinces before the Code was amended, and now with the confusion resulting in the conflict between the Traffic Act and the Code as far as suspensions are concerned, it's just a matter of meeting with the officials in Ottawa.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question, if I may: Is the provincial secretary aware of the situations which are presently in the courts, where drivers, having been found guilty are not having their licences lifted in court, but rather are being informed that they can continue to drive until they're notified by the Department of Transport, and the Department of Transport claims that their licence is automatically suspended?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, basically the procedure has been that in many cases when there is a conviction for impaired driving the accused will be notified by what is now the Ministry of Transportation and Communications.

Mr. Deans: On which date does the suspension take place?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The main reason—if the hon. member will let me finish—the main reason for this hiatus at the present time is there are cases before the Court of Appeal dealing with the confliction that exists between the federal amendments and the Highway Traffic Act. Many magistrates feel that until this is resolved there is no suspension by them and that it's up to the provincial government if it wants to go ahead.

Mr. Deans: Are they entitled to drive after they have been found guilty?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, not if they are suspended by the provincial Ministry of Transportation and Communications.

Mr. Deans: But in that period—?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: In other words, if we invoke the Highway Traffic Act their licence is suspended regardless of the amendment to the code—and that happens to be our jurisdiction, not the federal government's.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has more than expired.

Mr. Singer: Supplementaries are like kicking after the penalty has been awarded!

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, now that the reports have been distributed, I think I should table them with your concurrence.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

The hon. member for Windsor West.

EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS ACT

Mr. Bounsall moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Employment Standards Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Bounsall: The purpose of this bill, Mr. Speaker, is to plug a loophole in the Act that allows an employer to terminate the employment of a person without notice irrespective of his or her length of service during a lockout or strike such as occurred recently at Acme Screw and Gear. This bill plugs that loophole and ensures that employees will receive their due benefits under the Act.

Mr. Deans: It should have been brought in by the government!

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

FIRE MARSHALS ACT

Hon. Mr. Yaremko moves second reading of Bill 226, An Act to amend the Fire Marshals Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought this bill might have been introduced at the same time as the one changing the Corporations Tax Act, since the two are closely allied. This one deals with the Act on the fire insurers and I think that it can be best dealt with when we are debating the Corporations Tax Act, which we were expecting today or which may come forward tomorrow. As far as we are concerned, that transition is a valid one and we can support it.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the minister, in commenting on this bill, to indicate to us the extent of the revenue which was derived under the Fire Marshals Act as it stands at present, the reason the rate is reduced from one per cent to one-half of one per cent and, thirdly, whether the expenses of the fire marshal's operations are in any way to be defrayed by any separate fund.

The Act, as I understand it at present, imposes a tax of one per cent. The new Corporations Tax Act reduces that to one-half of one per cent. That is, of course, apart altogether from the two per cent tax which is imposed at present on the gross premiums of insurance companies in Ontario under the Corporations Tax Act.

We here are always a little bit sceptical when the rates of tax on the insurance industry are varied by this government because they generally tend to be reduced. In this case, the tax, as I understand it, is reduced from one per cent to one-half of one per cent.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, as to the rate of tax, is it not two-thirds of one per cent? In any event, it was brought into effect just before the Second World War and taken over by the federal government at two per cent of gross premiums directed to fire insurance on property only, and then subsequently returned to the Province of Ontario.

It was really to be earmarked for the purposes of the fire marshal's office for expenditures on fire protection in the Province of Ontario, but has always gone into the consolidated revenue fund. It does bother me that the tax, being eliminated from the Fire Marshals Act and transported into section 143, subsection 2, of the Corporations Tax Act, is reduced to one-half of one per cent.

The same question arises, as with my friend; does this bring in the same revenue as on previous occasions? Or is it a substantial reduction of tax? I take it also that the minister has given due consideration to the nostrums advanced by the Smith committee on taxation, at page 299 of volume 3 of their report, from which I shall quote.

First of all, the Smith committee said:

This tax ought to be abolished but only in return for a sales tax levied on fire insurance premiums [which I shall come to in just a moment]. Once the sales tax is levied on services, as we proposed in chapter 29—

Which this government hasn't done anywhere along the line; it has completely subverted or ignored the recommendations made by the Smith committee and by and large, we affirm, by the select committee of this House. However:

—as we proposed in chapter 29, it is possible to justify a tax on insurance premiums on the basis of equity.

Insurance, like dry cleaning, is a service for which many people are prepared to pay. The premium or charge for the service can be thought to be comprised of two parts: the amount that pays for all administrative costs and profit and the amount that is pooled to pay claims or is allocated as savings. It is the first portion of premiums that should be treated as a charge for taxable service. The portion of premiums that is used to settle claims or is returned or credited to policy holders as dividends or savings should not be taxed as it is not an expenditure comparable to other expendable taxation, or proposed for taxation under the sales tax.

We have tried to determine the part of premiums that would be taxed if insurance were brought under the retail sales tax. For insurance, other than life insurance, this involves establishing the portion of the net premiums retained by the industry after deducting all amounts paid or reserved for claims or losses. For life insurance, the process is somewhat more complicated because the savings element must also be removed in order to arrive at the true service portions.

The April 15, 1966, edition of the Canadian Underwriter gives Canada-wide figures indicating that the following proportions of premiums written are retained by the industry: life insurance 47.5 per cent; fire insurance 45.2 per cent; automobile insurance 33.3 per cent; and casualty insurance, other than automobile, 35.4 per cent.

These figures suggest that it might be appropriate to apply the five per cent sales tax to 45 per cent of premiums for life and fire insurance and to 33.5 per cent of those other classes of insurance.

I suggest that there are considerably greater sums of money involved in that particular context than anything envisaged within the terms of the present reducing legislation. I would like the minister to comment on it, and give the facts arising out of that situation as to whether that type of assertion made by me is justified or not. Only he knows, on the basis of the figures within his department.

I don't think we would oppose this legislation, but we do take very severe umbrage if it means a substantial reduction in tax, as it is felt by the Smith committee and others that it is a justified tax which might bring in added revenue.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the amount of tax that is involved is approximately $1 million, and without going into the niceties of what has taken place in relationship to the change in percentages, I am advised that there will be no loss in revenue to the province by virtue of this change.

As I indicated, on first reading this really is of a housekeeping nature and doesn't go to the question as to the quantum of taxation of fire insurance premiums. It is just that in the Corporations Tax Act there has been a consolidation of the classes of insurance, which includes fire, so it was deemed feasible that since it is going to be taxed under that section, it should be taken out of the fire marshal's.

The other course would have been not to have made any change, not to include it in the new—

Mr. Lawlor: How can the minister cut it in half and still have the same return?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That can be directed toward the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Crossman). I am advised that there will be no loss in revenue, and I point out to the—

Mr. Lawlor: This split in jurisdiction is ridiculous.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Surely the minister could give us an answer to that question. He is palming it off.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I am not palming it off; I am answering the question. I am advised there will be no loss in revenue—that is what concerned the member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Cassidy: We would appreciate an explanation as to just how this can be done.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I am saying that the arithmetic with relationship to this can be discussed with the minister who has charge of the new bill.

Mr. Cassidy: Can the government see its way to halving the provincial income tax with no loss in revenue?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that there will be no loss in revenue to the province.

I bring to the attention of the hon. member for Lakeshore that this grouping of sections is headed—

Mr. Lawlor: Liability for special taxes.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko:—liability for special taxes. I think that his argument which he has put forward as to imposing the sales tax on premiums is really something apart from this. At the appropriate time he could restate his position—

Mr. Lawlor: No, it isn't.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko:—that not only fire insurance premiums but maybe a host of other things exist which he feels should be included as being subject to sales tax, which will be above and beyond this particular tax which is a special tax.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if it is agreeable with the minister, it would be most helpful if this bill could be referred to the same committee and at the same time as the Corporations Tax Act, 1972, is referred to committee. I understand it is the intention of the government for the Corporations Tax Act to go to a committee, and this bill, since it is a complementary one to the other, could usefully be discussed in that committee. Perhaps the House leader would confirm whether that is possible?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I would concur that whatever happens to the Corporations Tax Act, whatever course is followed there, then this bill will follow, because this amendment really is complementary to the other one and will only take effect if and when the other one goes through.

Mr. Speaker: You have no objection then, Mr. Minister, to the bill going to the committee?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I don't know. No, what I am saying is that the House leader and I are agreeable to this bill taking whatever course of action is given to the other. Now, I do not recall, or am not aware, what course of action the other one is following.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): But it will be dealt with in similar fashion.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: They will be dealt with simultaneously from here in.

Mr. Speaker: I am instructed by the clerk this has to be referred to a specific committee before it can be recorded in the vote that it was carried.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We will raise it at the time of the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Speaker: As the clerk has mentioned, it should be referred to a specific committee at this time; because it can't be recorded as a vote until it is referred.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, subject to whatever change may be made subsequently, I would ask that it be referred to the—is it the administration of justice committee? Is that the appropriate name?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Yes, And that is based on the fact that it is subject to change.

Mr. Renwick: Right! It could be changed.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: And subject to the fact that the other bill will be going.

Mr. Speaker: Agreed.

BUSINESS CORPORATIONS ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 180, An Act to amend the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting bill that dots some t's and crosses some i's—and tightens up quite a few things that were left a little loose.

But it was another one of the efforts made by the government to bring glory unto itself—along the line of the famous law suit against Dow Chemical; along the line of stopping Spadina; and along the line of nationalizing or Ontario-izing our business.

The government says, or the Premier (Mr. Davis) says, or whoever is over there says: "Aren't we wonderful! We are going to say that Ontario companies must have Canadian directors."

Well, I suppose on the surface—and this was applauded by all of those deep-thinking newspaper editorial writers and political commentators—this was a great idea.

Except that the minister must realize—and this particular minister who is now carrying the Act must know full well—that this is a completely meaningless gesture; that there is no problem at all if Americans, or other aliens, want to keep control of Ontario companies. It is the easiest thing in the world to have the director nominally a Canadian, and the real control to lie wherever the real control lies beyond the borders of Ontario, or beyond the borders of Canada.

If the government was in fact serious, or if the government wanted to make this kind of provision meaningful, surely it would have followed down the trail. There is none here who has any knowledge either of the legal aspects of dealing with companies, or the financial aspects of dealing with companies, who doesn't know how easy it is to circumvent this provision that is in the statute.

In fact there are many, many companies today which parade under the guise of having Canadian directors—where in fact the control lies far beyond the borders of Canada.

I wonder why the government—well I don't really wonder why. It is politically expedient, that's why. It is politically expedient for the government to put this kind of a phrase in one of its statutes.

I suppose my real wonderment comes at why the government thinks that it can continue to pull the wool over the eyes of the people of Ontario and make them believe that this is really going to effect the change in control of companies.

I ask this minister—I have had something to do with him over the past few months, and he is quite an intelligent man for a Tory cabinet minister. I wonder why he wouldn't begin to expand on this theory if, in fact, he and his colleagues mean what they say.

Why doesn't the government put its statute where its mouth has been, and expand on this area and talk about the beneficial ownership, or the real directors. It would take very little ingenuity of the legal draftsman to follow this kind of a section down the line. That's the leading comment that I want to make in connection with this statute.

There are certain provisions here about conflicts of interest. My question is whether the government has gone sufficiently into all the ramifications of conflict of interest and whether or not it spells out, either in the other statute or in the amendment that it is now adding, in sufficient depth where these conflicts might lie. The tippees are just as much insiders as those people whom you can identify as insiders.

Again the minister really isn't going to be seriously able to convince many knowledgeable people that by talking only of a narrow definition of insiders that he has in fact eliminated the evil that he trying to get at, because when good old insider A doesn't want to appear on the record as having profited, the inside information is as easy to convey as it is for him to reach for his telephone. He reaches for his telephone and he phones up his good friend Z. Z, a tippee, then knows in advance the good news or the bad news and can buy the stock about which good news is coming or can sell the stock about which bad news is going to be revealed shortly.

There really has been no effort at all, Mr. Speaker, to get at this additional aspect or prolongation of the effect of insiders affecting the market, taking unfair advantage, and so on. In other words, what I am saying is that the government in these two particular aspects and others should go more than across the surface. There's really no indication in these statutes that the government has decided to do anything more than to treat the surface symptoms when the disease lies not too far below the surface. It isn't even a hidden disease; the disease is there, and you have made no attempt to wrestle with it.

Hopefully, you think you are going to get away with treating the surface symptoms, but I say that's not good enough. I wonder—and there have been some articles on the financial pages of the papers recently—about the practice that has existed with new issues, the allocation of them, the length of time that underwriters hold on to the new issues, whom they offer new issues to, the quick rise in the first day of so many new issues and the fall the following day. Who makes the profit out of that? What are the underwriters' procedures? Is it left substantially to the underwriters alone to do it? I think it is. This is again a form of benefiting from insider information or insider connections, and I don't see the government wrestling with this kind of a problem at all.

There is a question about loans in here. There is a section authorizing loans. I wonder why the government seems to bar, if my reading of it is correct—and it was a reasonably quick reading—if it is barring, loans from companies to employees to acquire shares. It seems to be that that's what it is, I think that it is taking away an important right of companies to encourage employees by lending them money to buy shares in the particular company they work for, so that they can have some interest in the advancement of the company and actually profit, in addition to their salary profit, from the increase in activity and profit to the company by buying shares which can or perhaps should, be financed by loans from the company. If, in fact, the government is barring this kind of loan, I wonder if the minister could tell us what the reasoning is and why it wouldn't be well to reverse it.

Substantially, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of points. It is a detailed Act and I've made notes on a variety of sections, which I don't intend to deal with on second reading. I would suggest to the minister that this statute be referred to the standing committee, so that the sections can be discussed in detail. I know there are many members of the financial community who are interested in it. If the minister refers it to the standing committee sufficiently in advance, so that adequate notice can be sent to the lawyers, to the accountants, to the stockbrokers, underwriters, and so on, there can be a full, and I am sure fruitful, discussion in the committee. I would like to think this statute, unlike so many others, is not necessarily a fixed matter of government policy and we can get the best out of many things by having as complete and full a discussion after the bill has been introduced as we could have before.

There are many good ideas in here. There are many that need cleaning up. There are some that I think are quite wrong. I would hope that the discussion about this can go on long enough so that we can get as good information as we can before this statute becomes law.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, the bill, as the member for Downsview said, contains a great number of amendments to the Business Corporations Act which can very well be dealt with in committee. I think on the second reading of the bill there are only two or three items that need any specific comment from me.

My friend the member for Downsview used the phrase "tightening up in some areas." Well, there is one area of the bill which has opened wide the barn door again and this is my judgement is one that will have to be scrutinized with the utmost care when the bill goes to committee. I raise it on second reading so that between now and that time the minister will have an opportunity to reconsider the specific amendment that he brings forward in connection with the provisions of the Business Corporations Act dealing with the responsibilities of trustees under trust indentured securities which are issued to members of the public.

I know that the member will recall that the provisions as they now stand in the Business Corporations Act, while perhaps not elegantly drawn, were nevertheless inserted in the bill when it came before the Legislature a couple of years ago as a result of the collapse of the Prudential Finance Corp. Prudential Finance Corp. had a trust indenture, had a trustee named and appointed in that trust indenture—the Metropolitan Trust Co.—and the trust indenture was completely devoid of those protective provisions called, in the language of the statute, "conditions precedent to the trustee being required to take certain action," such as the certification and delivery of securities under the deed.

The framework is extremely important to the security of the financial market and that is that good trust indentures, properly drawn, always contain in them a detailed series of conditions precedent which must be complied with before securities can be issued and before a number of other corporate actions can be taken by the issuing company.

The bill as it stands at present very carefully—perhaps not elegantly, but very carefully—extends the net broadly enough to prevent the trustee from having the advantage of acting in good faith on the basis of certain documents furnished to him, if in fact he is required to take some positive action. That is contained at present in one of the sections of the bill and I will refer to it specifically when we get to the committee.

But when one examines the proposed amendment that the minister has introduced, we have the words, the famous words, "if any"—"conditions precedent," if any, contained in the trust indenture," and then very elaborate provisions that if there are provisions requiring certain things to be furnished to the trustee, detailing what they should be. But the door, I would suggest on my reading of the statute, would permit, either intentionally, or by sloppy draftsmanship, or for whatever other reason, a trustee appointed under a trust indenture to escape his responsibilities in the same way as it was impossible to fix any responsibility upon the Metropolitan Trust Co. for its failure to act when it was trustee under the trust indenture of the Prudential Finance Corp.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the matter be reviewed again with the representatives of the trust companies and I would specifically ask that the representatives of the trust companies see fit to attend before the committee, if they so desire, in order that we can thrash out again what we attempted to accomplish in the provisions which exist in the present bill and to make absolutely certain that we have not now again opened the door to the kind of activity or failure to act which was evident in the whole of the Prudential Finance catastrophe for so many people throughout the province.

I say, Mr. Speaker, in a technical statute one cannot be absolutely certain of the interpretation and meaning of these clauses without extended discussion, but my interpretation of that section, as compared with the existing section, is that it does just exactly as I have stated: it opens the door wide for a duplication of the fiasco of the Prudential Finance Corp. security issues.

That, for practical purposes, is one of my two principal comments about the bill. I specifically would hope, Mr. Speaker, that this particular clause in the bill be carefully reconsidered by the minister and his advisers prior to the time of the committee meeting; then at the committee meeting we can thrash out the whole matter again.

At the risk of a minor degree of repetition, I want to assert that the security of the financial markets in the Province of Ontario depends to a great degree upon the extent to which the trustees, under trust indentures securing debt obligations of companies, are required by the document and by their position as trustees of that document for the benefit of the security holders to have a positive role to play, so that the trustee has a responsibility in return for the fees which he earns to make certain—to the extent that it is possible to do so by the language of the trust indenture—that the security holders are in fact protected.

As I say, in drafting the clause, the words "if any" have been put in, other words have been dropped out, the section has been rephrased; then we have as an ancillary matter the introduction of the definition of the phrase "event of default," and a very restrictive limitation upon when the trustee is under an obligation to advise the security holders of the happening of the event of default. I am specifically referring to the delay period between the time when an event occurs and when, by the elapse of time, it becomes an event of default.

Perhaps the minister and his advisers would take those points into consideration before the bill comes to committee.

My second point is the point to which my friend, the member for Downsview, referred; that is, the question of a clear understanding of the extent to which the provision inserted in the bill—that a majority of the directors of Ontario companies must be resident Canadians—assists in the protection of the Canadian economy from decisions made abroad.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it is perhaps only a marginal improvement. I am not at all certain that a Business Corporations Act in fact can have the provisions which will reflect a determined policy of the government with respect to the control, elsewhere than in Canada, of the industrial economy of Canada.

It may not be appropriate but I think that there is some advantage to it and for that reason we will support the amendment; we consider it one of the major principles of the bill that's been introduced. We do think that the requirement that there be a majority of Canadians on the boards of Ontario companies will assist in a Canadian viewpoint being asserted. Now, let me just explain what I take to mean by a Canadian viewpoint.

It does not alter by one iota the responsibility under our statute of the obligations of the directors. The directors are persons who have a duty to the company on whose board they sit, regardless of their nationality. There is not something called a specifically Canadian interest that can be asserted. I think, therefore, that the only advantage, marginal as it is, helpful as it is, is that by having a majority of the directors of Ontario companies be Canadians, those directors can assert what might otherwise be overlooked—that is, the consideration of some aspects of the problems which have a peculiarly Canadian content to them.

Within that very marginal degree, we think that the amendment is helpful. We would prefer to have it than not to have it. I would suggest, however, to the minister that it would have been quite possible for that same principle to have been extended without any breach of the constitutional provisions of the responsibility of the federal government as distinct from this government.

It would have been possible for this government to pass a law of general application requiring every company, whether it is incorporated under this statute or whether it's incorporated in any other jurisdiction—federal, foreign or in the jurisdiction of another province—which has a permanent establishment in Ontario to have a majority of its directors Canadian citizens. That would have brought into the ambit of the bill the principle the Premier enunciated just about a year ago, I believe, when he spoke in Ottawa to the Canadian Club; it would have indicated an awareness of the need to make certain that this provision would extend to all companies which carry on substantial activities in the Province of Ontario.

One could readily import in such a statute of general application the phraseology of a permanent establishment as set out in the Corporations Tax Act to ensure that in any such company, be it foreign, Canadian—in the sense of being incorporated under the federal Act—or under the jurisdiction of one of the other provinces, as a condition of carrying on its business in the Province of Ontario—whether by way of a Canadian company, whether by way of a branch organization or any other organization—a majority of the men in charge of that operation in Ontario would be Canadian citizens. It would be possible to frame such a statute in a sufficiently definite way as to have made the policy of the government considerably more embracing than it is at the present time.

Therefore, we would, as I say, support it for what it's worth. We think that the government could have gone much further within its own constitutional jurisdiction to have made it rather more all-embracing. We again point out that the duty of the directors of a company is not to Canada. The duty of the directors of these companies is to the company itself. A peculiarly Canadian viewpoint might, of course, be a matter of discussion which would otherwise be overlooked by the board of directors of a company if we did not have this proposed provision. But in substance it's not going to basically alter the decisions which those corporations will make. Unless, of course, it just simply leads to opening the eyes of directors in other countries who sit on boards of Ontario companies to the facts of life in the Province of Ontario, which otherwise would be overlooked.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, only one other comment in speaking to the bill. I think that the Business Corporations Act has been through a long period of gestation, going back now several years—at least to 1964 or 1965. I think most of the wrinkles and problems in the bill have, or could in a very short time, come to light.

I would suggest that the minister, while he still has the dual role of chairman of the select committee on corporations, along with holding the ministry which he now holds, could indicate to the select committee his desire as minister to make certain that the remnants of the work of that select committee related to business corporations be wrapped up. That any further changes that may be necessary to the Business Corporations Act itself be introduced during the coming session next year, so that by about June 30 we could tidy up the Business Corporations Act and simply say: "Let's give it a rest for five years; let's settle down and see how it works over an extended period of time."

This would give all of the people who are governed by this statute an opportunity to familiarize themselves with all of the changes that have been made over several years now and to become acquainted and familiar with its operation over an extended period of time.

The select committee, as the minister knows, has ample work to keep it busy in other fields. The advantage of the Business Corporations Act, it seems to me, is as a basic statute governing the substantial part of the business community in Ontario; and it should now be left alone.

I think it's quite a good statute. We could keep making minor amendments to it indefinitely. But I think for the next four or five years after these amendments are through—after the remaining work of the select committee is completed insofar as this Act is concerned in the spring of next year—we then give the Business Corporations Act a rest and go on to other areas.

Mr. Speaker, the first point I raised is one of immense concern to me. I would like the minister particularly to pay attention to that portion of my remarks related to the obligations, the role and the position of the trust companies mainly, but other trustees as well, who act as trustees of documents under which securities of corporations carrying on business in Ontario issue their securities to the public.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa-Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: I'm not about to say too much about this, Mr. Speaker.

The members to my right and my left, and the minister himself, are much more qualified than I to speak on it. I'd just like to say one or two words on one area. This is the section which now attempts to fulfil the promise of the Premier a few months ago. It was that in future "Canadians" would be in the majority on boards of directors of Ontario corporations. I'm learning, Mr. Speaker, from my time in this House that the ultimate action taken on a promise by the government is never quite as much as it's billed in the first place.

It's a bit like those commercials for children's toys on television, which we've been seeing so much of in the last couple of weeks. Somehow when you get the toy home, it never works quite as dramatically as it did as seen on television. There is obviously in the toy world a special tribe of experts who work with these toys in order to give them the maximum performance for the TV commercials.

I would suggest that this may also be the case with the government. It seeks to get the maximum mileage out of its announcements in order to convince the public that it has dealt with the problem of insidious foreign influence on corporations in this province by ensuring that Canadians would be in the majority on boards of directors.

Of course, when you look at the Act and read the section you find that this, which is an important part of the bill, has not been fulfilled at all. It states that the majority of the directors shall be resident in Canada, which is rather different from being resident Canadians.

Mr. Renwick: It does say "resident Canadians."

Mr. Cassidy: It does say "resident Canadians? I stand corrected by my hon. friend. Does that mean citizens?"

Mr. Renwick: That is my understanding.

Mr. Cassidy: I see. Then perhaps the minister could comment, in fact, on whether "resident Canadians" means resident Canadian citizens, or whether it simply means resident in Canada, in which case the comments that I was making would hold.

I think the other point is that even if they are Canadian citizens, the minister, having been possibly engaged from time to time in this sector of the law, is aware that directors don't necessarily carry all of the power and trappings of their office. In fact, in the formation of a corporation there are innumerable legal secretaries and other people who may during the course of their lives, have been directors of hundreds of different corporations prior to their being taken off the assembly line and made from skeletons into real corporations.

The resident Canadians here may, in fact, be quite powerless. They can be secretaries, or junior executives, or other people like that who, if they dared to speak up during the course of a directors' meeting, would be firmly and tactfully told to shut up.

In other words, the effect of this section could very easily be simply to increase the frustration level of secretarial or junior executive ranks who tend to be recruited from within Canada, possibly convert them to the views of the New Democratic Party, or lead them to fight with their wives, or lead them to become nationalists and to join with Mel Hurtig and Walter Gordon. But at any rate, there is absolutely no guarantee that this can have any more effect than a mere piece of tokenism.

It's added to by the fact that the majority of meetings must be held within Canada, it states here. It doesn't say whether the business will be handled there, or whether they will be pro forma meetings.

Not only that, but the section that delights me is the fact that provided that the majority of the members talking in a telephone meeting, which is now permitted, happen to be within the boundaries of Canada, the meetings shall be deemed to be held within Canada. In other words, the executive jet can take off from New York, or Philadelphia, or some place like that, and touch down at Malton. The passengers can sit at a phone there for a few minutes, possibly without even leaving the cabin of the aircraft, and then go back on to Chicago or Los Angeles, or wherever they wish to go. Clearly, if one wishes to—and one has the suspicion that many corporations will not take these provisions very seriously—there are innumerable loopholes which have been left in this rather halfhearted attempt to deliver on the promises made by the government.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Just a word or two on it, Mr. Speaker.

My colleague from Riverdale has as usual covered the major points with great affluence and searching wisdom and the matter will go before the committee where we can discuss it.

There are two or three things. One is the business of resident Canadians on the boards. As has been pointed out, it is a gesture. It could be a merely nugatory one, having very little effect on the whole position. During the committee hearings I would hope that we could put more enforcement and teeth behind it.

I want to make mention too concerning corporations that the definition of "insider" has been elaborated and made broader with respect to a corporation buying its own shares and having an interest in those shares, or selling the same. The role of a corporation with respect to purchasing its own shares in terms of redemption of those shares, again is given greater scope in this legislation. I consider that to be a move that is beneficial and in the right direction.

In other words, this is not merely a refurbishing or housekeeping statute. It is quite searching in many of its departments and making moves of great perspicacity along the line. The business that we went to England over and which is still up in the air—the role of a shareholder who feels himself aggrieved because of selectivity by the corporation of the shares which it cares to buy up, leaving him out or leaving him to the end, and not proceeding in certain ways which are beneficial to those shareholders who are dissenting in this regard—is a matter that we are continuously concerned with; which recommendations I trust will be coming forth in the very near future to this House, and I would take that to be part of the regimen or the work that we have yet to do, which the member for Riverdale mentioned, in cleaning up and giving this Act its full scope and validity.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I would first like to make a general statement, if I might, and then I would like to deal with some of the comments which some of the members of the opposition parties have made with reference to Bill 180.

In introducing this for second reading I should like for a moment to go back to the beginning, the 1967 report of the select committee on company law, and to the Business Corporations Act, 1970, which flowed out of that report.

There are two distinct themes in that report and in the Act. First and foremost, the position of the individual shareholders of Ontario corporations is heavily reinforced. Full disclosure by management of the financial affairs of the corporation; accountability of officers and directors and other insiders; power in the shareholders to initiate changes where management refuses to act, and powers in the shareholders to bring an erring officer or director to account where management refuses to do so, are dealt with therein.

Secondly, there is a recognition that a corporations Act is an enabling statute to authorize business people to organize and operate their business, large or small, with the advantage of the corporate mechanism. The Business Corporations Act is drawn with a view to facilitate the efficient management of businesses and ready corporate adjustment to the needs of change. Under the Act, almost all fundamental corporate procedures, incorporation, amendment of articles and so on, are as of right and can be speedily effected.

These two things are continued in the amendments which we are now proposing. When the then Minister of Financial and Commercial Affairs introduced the Business Corporations Act in 1970, he indicated to the House that the Act would be amended regularly as the need arose and to keep current the law of Ontario in this important area. We are performing that undertaking. Of the 60-odd sections of the bill many are of an updating nature as a result of administrative experience. There are, however, a number of amendments that I do wish to bring to the attention of the hon. members:

1. Rules for disclosure of interest by directors in respect to their dealings with a corporation are tightened;

2. Dissident shareholders are given access to up-to-date lists of shareholders and registered warrant holders;

3. Provision is made for conference telephone meetings of directors and executive committees;

4. The carry-forward of pre-Business Corporations Act charter provisions is cut off effective Jan. 1, 1975;

5. A new requirement that a majority of the directors of every Ontario corporation be resident Canadians, and it is defined in section 1(23)(a) of the Act: "A resident Canadian means a Canadian citizen who is ordinarily resident in Canada."

Collateral amendments require the presence of a majority of resident Canadians at every meeting of the board of directors and of executive committees of Ontario corporations, and that a majority of the meetings of the board in any financial year be held in Canada.

Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned in opening, timely adjustment to the needs of change in the law under which business corporations operate will contribute significantly to this province's continual commercial pre-eminence. I should add that since the bill received first reading on June 15 last, my officials have received many thoughtful and helpful suggestions on the bill, both from professional associations and from private individuals. Some of these suggestions and others resulting from our officials' continuing experience in administering the Act will be reflected in minor amendments to the bill which I will move before the committee.

As the law now stands there is no requirement, insofar as Canadian residents are concerned, pertaining to acts under the Business Corporations Act. The member for Downsview raised a question as to beneficial ownership and I suggest through you, Mr. Speaker, that is it most difficult to ascertain really who is the beneficial owner of any security. There is the registered owner and there is the owner who holds perhaps a share in straight form, not necessarily the registered owner; there may be that document or that share. The securities may be pledged to a lending institution or to an individual.

Many of these documents are almost of the same ilk as cash and they are passed from bearer to bearer or they are pledged, as I have already mentioned. Therefore, it is very difficult to ascertain who the beneficial owner of any share happens to be.

There must be some responsible group to which the public at large and the government—particularly my ministry—can look, which is responsible for the conduct of the affairs of that particular corporation. That, of course, is the board of directors.

I would be the last person to argue that the board of directors of any company act independently of their shareholders, that they go ahead on their own initiative because this is not the fact of the matter. Boards of directors are invariably selected as representatives of the shareholders of the company and, presumably, reflect on that board the interests of the particular group of shareholders that they represent.

In the event that their representation may be too parochial, too easily identified with the beneficial owners that they represent, the Business Corporations Act has incorporated in it certain rules of conduct—in essence saying these are the ground rules—so that members of the public who are purchasing and investing in that corporation may have some assurance that the affairs of that corporation will be conducted in a responsible and honest, straightforward fashion.

Mr. Singer: Then why go through this charade of Canadian citizenship and residency when the minister is saying himself that it doesn't mean anything?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am not saying that it doesn't mean anything at all but my experience has been—

Mr. Singer: It means very little.

Hon. Mr. Clement:—that you must have someone within the jurisdiction of this particular country that you can get to, in the event that there has been any breach. If you have directors of Canadian corporations or Ontario corporations who are resident in the United States or other jurisdictions and they have committed infractions, perhaps even of the Criminal Code but they are not subject to extradition, there is no way we can bring them back to this bailiwick to have justice meted out to them in accordance with whatever legislation may require.

Mr. Renwick: You can't get a Canadian citizen if he flees, either!

Hon. Mr. Clement: You cannot get a Canadian citizen if he leaves; you cannot get anyone if he is not within the country and you cannot locate him.

Mr. Singer: Maybe the minister should padlock all the directors to their desks.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Great idea. Raise their pay and lock them up!

Hon. Mr. Clement: There was a question about who makes the profits on underwritings. I suggest to you that this is a matter which really should be dealt with under the Securities Act and is not pertinent to our discussions here today.

With reference to the comments raised by the hon. member for Riverdale as to trust indenture provisions, I would like to withhold comment, because of the technical nature of those provisions, until the matter is discussed in committee. I concede that they are of a highly technical nature.

I appreciate the comments that he has made as to perhaps what might appear at first to be a conflict of interest on the part of the trustee. But I must point out the proposed amendments to the Act imposing statutory obligations on the trustee who owes a duty to the issuer and the holder or the owner to exercise good faith and due diligence, and also the statutory obligation on the trustee with reference to the other side of the relationship, that is, between the transfer agent and the issuer. I must make clear that the transfer agent's duty of good faith and due diligence is owed to the security holders as well as the issuer.

The question that the hon. member for Riverdale raised as to having a law of general application that would extend to all companies, I submit, is extremely valid, because this would satisfy a great deal of difficulty in this particular area. It was considered by members of my ministry at the time the bill was being drafted. The question arose as to the constitutional problems if such was encoded or enshrined in our own statute. I am advised that the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) of this province rendered an opinion that the same would be unconstitutional and therefore of no value or effect.

I must echo the concern raised by the hon. member for Riverdale as to wrapping up the Business Corporations Act and hopefully next session codifying therein the recommendations of the select committee on company law, particularly as they pertain to those matters discussed this past year by that committee—takeovers, mergers, amalgamations and those items. I think for the interest of the business community, and I share his concern, that, other than perhaps the odd little thing which must be tidied up, we as a government would be well advised to let the Act live by itself for a period of some years so that the business community can get along with the business of running the province, of running its own affairs, and not constantly changing it in depth, because this poses problems on various professions. It poses problems on the community, the business community as a whole.

May I point out, Mr. Speaker, that while some people may not share that view, the Companies Act of the United Kingdom, as I understand it, has not been amended since 1948. I don't commend that to this Legislature per se, because I think that's gone too much the other way; but I think a piece of legislation that is not crying for any change or is not working any hardship on the public should not be constantly polished and honed, unless of course someone is being harmed. If the public interest is being entrenched upon, then we have to take a look at it.

It is our obligation to correct any injustices that might be occurring to the public but, other than that, I hope that after the new year, in the next session, we can incorporate into the Business Corporations Act the recommendations, or the bulk of them, of the select committee and perhaps leave the statute for some time, so that the business community and the province as a whole can know the nature and quality of the thing with which they are obliged to deal.

Those are the only comments I have to offer at this time, Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): No.

Mr. Renwick: It should be ordered to committee, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Singer: Committee.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I propose that the bill be considered by committee of the whole House.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, surely the suggestion put forward by several members, including myself, that it go to standing committee has a lot of merit, so that we can have the financial community, the lawyers, the accountants, and so on, there and we can listen to what they have to suggest.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments—and I do not treat them lightly—of the hon. member for Downsview, but this is a short session of this Legislature; if the matter is referred to a standing committee of this House it may well not be dealt with until following the New Year.

Mr. Deans: Why?

Hon. Mr. Clement: As I understand it, the committees are only sitting on Wednesdays, and unless the matter got on right away and was dealt with right away—

Mr. Singer: We can do it a week from Wednesday.

Hon. Mr. Clement: —we might not conclude this bill until after the New Year. That is my reasoning for having it dealt with by committee of the whole House.

Mr. Singer: We can do it a week from Wednesday.

Mr. Speaker: The minister wishes this bill to go to the committee of the whole House. Agreed?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the rules say on the matter, but I know that if a request is made that it go to committee, then it must go to committee. Is it not possible that it can go to the standing committee? I don't know of anything that prevents the standing committees from meeting on a day other than Wednesdays.

The bill is a technical bill. I think it is an imposition on other members of the House to have a bill of a technical nature dealt with at some length and pre-empt the time of the House. I think it would be much more efficient for the very reason that the minister gives—the shortness of the session—if it were dealt with in committee and did not pre-empt the time of the whole House.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Speaker, if I may speak to this too, I don't know the volume of legislation that is before the standing committee, particularly regarding legal matters—the only one I know of is the Land Titles Act at the present time—

Mr. Speaker: I think the member for Lakeshore is out of order.

Mr. Lawlor: Well, we have all been out of order for the last 20 minutes. I would ask the minister—

Mr. Speaker: I'm informed the decision is the minister's. The minister wishes the bill to go to the committee of the whole House—

Mr. Deans: We are only trying to help him.

Mr. Singer: We're trying to help him. He's a new boy and should know better.

Mr. Speaker:—so Bill 180 will revert back to committee of the whole House.

Clerk of the House: The third order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. B. Beckett in the chair.

BUSINESS CORPORATIONS ACT

House in committee on Bill 180, An Act to amend the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, on clause 1, items 3 and 4 of the bill, I appreciate the need to provide for an efficient method by which special bylaws and special resolutions of corporations can be passed. We already have in the Act a provision which I think is in itself quite adequate, that a special bylaw or a special resolution may be confirmed in writing by all the shareholders of a company, and I see no need whatsoever and I see harm which may flow from the provisions inserted in sub-clauses 3 and 4, providing that the attorney of a shareholder may sign in place of the shareholder.

The illustration I want to use is a very simple one. That is, the shareholder himself may very well give a general power of attorney to another person—there is no requirement that that other person be a shareholder—a general power of attorney under which very important powers could be exercised by the attorney.

And it is not a sufficient answer to say: "Oh well, that is up to that shareholder. If he wants to appoint an attorney and give him a blanket authority to act on his behalf, he should be able to do it."

I simply say that that is not a sufficient protection for the company, for the creditors of the company, and for all the people who are involved with that company, to now extend this provision for the signing of a special bylaw or a special resolution by the attorney of the shareholder.

I would ask that that widening of this informality in the affairs of business corporations in Ontario not be extended this far. There is no evidence whatsoever that there has been any harm done to anybody, any inconvenience to anybody, by the present provision.

It may well be that on odd occasions a special bylaw or a special resolution finds some shareholder out of the country, or unavailable. And I simply say that the answer to that is that it doesn't preclude the corporation from taking further steps. They can either send the document to him for his signature, or they can convene in the normal way a meeting of the corporation for the purpose of passing a bylaw, or passing the special resolution by the shareholders.

I think it is an unnecessary relaxation of what up to now has been an efficient and informal way of carrying on business, and can only lead to very sloppy and unsatisfactory corporate practice.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Chairman, I submit that it is a very logical provision, because you can vote by proxy. This has been entrenched in corporate law in Ontario for many, many years. You can vote by proxy—and all that this now permits is that one can sign by proxy, in effect, through his attorney.

Mr. Renwick: The point I think is very clear. The minister in a later section covered it when he was dealing with directors' meetings by telephone—that everybody had to be around and that everybody had to hear what was being said.

The problem with having an attorney sign on behalf of shareholders is that shareholders don't know what the attorney is doing. That's not just the responsibility of the attorney, because actions of that attorney can affect the corporation.

My answer is very simple. If the shareholder has the document in front of him he is required to manually sign in order to give effect to a special bylaw or a special resolution, then I am quite prepared to say that they now don't have to meet together.

But the suggestion that the corporation as such—for which we have provided special bylaws and special resolutions to guard the corporations; to see that certain formalities are done in order that action can be taken in accordance with that provision—to now relax it to the extent as shown by the addition of this authority to be granted to an attorney of the shareholder, seems to me to defeat the very purpose that we intended to insert into the Act to provide an efficient way of carrying on business; but not a sloppy way of carrying on business.

I do not know of any single instance that I have heard of of any inconvenience under the present system. It seems to me that it is an over-elaboration, which has lost the principal point that we were after when we permitted the signing of resolutions and by-laws by shareholders.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Chairman, nor has anything come to my attention. I would be most interested in learning from the hon. minister what overtures have been made to him. Have numbers of Bay Street lawyers, corporation lawyers generally, been in touch with him to say that gross inconvenience has been caused to clientele? Or it would rectify the absence of a client, that he have the power to substitute himself—probably on the written instructions, of course, of that client? Is it designed to ease the path in some way past something that is causing some irritation or disruption at the present time?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, as the hon. members well know, a good number of people execute powers to attorney for a variety of reasons. And in those—particularly the general powers of attorney as compared to special powers of attorney—people have the authority to sell real estate, buy, mortgage, pledge, hypothecate and do everything else that the person signing the power of attorney, the grantor, can in fact do.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): He can give it to his lawyer.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I must submit to you that the reason that those words were added was because it was recommended by the corporation law committee of the Canadian Bar Association. They demonstrated to people in my ministry a number of cases whereby the inability of a person to sign a special bylaw caused all kinds of hardship, particularly when people were absent from the country, or they were otherwise engaged in other activities. It was at the behest of the corporation law committee that these additions were made to these sections, permitting people to execute, under a special bylaw, by their attorney. And, as you well know, not necessarily one limited to practising law, but someone holding a power of attorney in the proper form.

Powers of attorney are executed daily. I'm sure those of us who practice law have taken powers of attorney from very valued clients as they go away on extended holidays. Some people as they get a little older execute a power of attorney in favour of the opposite spouse; in the event that they are institutionalized the spouse can carry on the day-to-day activities of running a home and carrying on the business affairs pertaining to that home.

I think the rationale was that, as I mentioned earlier, the proxy provisions have been with us in corporate law for years and years and years, and if one can vote by proxy, why cannot one, in effect, sign by proxy? The attorney is always liable for any negligence or any excess in carrying out his authority under the power of attorney. And I suggest that in these instances they may well be a limited power of attorney pertaining to special bylaws and things pertaining to the corporation only.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, at the risk of labouring the point, the analogy that the minister put forward doesn't hold. We are all aware that people often give powers of attorney to others to act over their own property—general powers of attorney or specific powers of attorney—and the attorney is responsible to that person.

The distinction, of course, is fundamental insofar as the corporation is concerned. The shareholder, by signing a special resolution, is dealing not with his property, but is dealing with the property of the corporation. The property of the corporation may be his sole property, and he may be the only shareholder, but I think that's not the kind of situation that we're attempting to deal with here.

If the property of the corporation belongs to the corporation the shareholders can, by special resolution, undertake, for example, to sell it. We require a special resolution which requires a certain high percentage of the shareholders to participate. We then say they don't have to meet in order to do that. They can all sign it.

But now we're going to say that the shareholders can sign a general power of attorney and, without having the specific matter that they're dealing with in front of them, they can authorize someone else to go ahead and deal, not with their property, but with the property of other people, when, if they met together, the decisions might be different.

Or the disparate number of shareholders each sign the identical piece of paper agreeing to the same action. Now that extension I agree with, but I disagree with going back on the extension of that principle and now saying that one shareholder has no recourse, even if for whatever reason, ill-advised or not—and many cases of being ill-advised can exist in corporate law—he gives the power of attorney to somebody who joins with other persons or holds all the powers of attorney and sells off the assets of the corporation. The shareholders can say to him, “I didn’t know that you were going to sell the whole of the assets of this corporation when I gave you that power of attorney.” The shareholder has no recourse against his attorney in that situation because he has granted the authority. The corporation has sold all its assets but there is no recourse.

I ask the minister to seriously consider the substantial distinction—that is, this power of attorney is not to deal with the shareholders’ property but it is to deal with, and can deal with and affect, the very life blood of the corporation itself.

I think the proposed amendment is most ill-advised. I can certainly understand, when the minister indicates the origin of the amendment, why the corporate law profession has been anxious for years to get it down to the point which is most convenient to them as corporate practitioners.

Let’s be reasonable about what we’ve done. We have a very workable system. If there’s any marginal difficulty there is no need whatsoever to provide that these wide powers by special resolution and by special bylaw can be exercised under general power of attorney. I say the analogy does not hold nor does the analogy hold with respect to the exercise of proxy at a general meeting.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, may I point out to the members that we are dealing here with shareholders. We are not dealing here with directors allocating their powers to someone of similar ilk sitting on a board of directors.

The section reads that a special bylaw is not effective until it’s passed by the directors and approved by at least two-thirds of the shareholders. It says:

Confirmed by at least two-thirds of the votes cast at a general meeting of the shareholders of the corporation duly called for that purpose or such greater proportion of the votes cast as the articles provide; or, in lieu of such confirmation, by the consent in writing of all the shareholders entitled to vote at such meeting or their attorney authorized in writing.

The attorney is, in effect, stepping into the shoes of the individual shareholder to give that consent. If the attorney did not wish to give that consent or had any second thoughts, the consent could not be signed. A general meeting of shareholders would have to be called and particularly in large corporations, where there are some several thousand shareholders, there’s a very substantial cost involved.

The principle of the whole amendment, in adding the words “or their attorney authorized in writing,” is flexibility. This is set up to help the individual shareholder and, I submit, properly so.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 2 stand?

Mr. Renwick: No.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Carried.

Mr. Renwick: It is clause 1, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Clause 1 of section 1.

Carried.

Are there any further comments to further sections?

Mr. Renwick: Clause 2, Mr. Chairman. I assume that the amendments to the Act dealing with granting a number as the name of a corporation is to give statutory authority in the department for a practice which has grown up over a period of time. I don’t have any specific objection to a corporation being incorporated with a number as the principal ingredient of that corporate name. I know that the Act requires that the word “Ontario” be included in it as well as one of the limiting names—limited, corporation or incorporated. If there’s any other reason, perhaps the minister would give us his thought about it.

Mr. Chairman: In section 2, Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Section 2 of Bill 180? I take it, Mr. Chairman, that we are dealing with the section pertaining to section 6. I’m advised that the provisions of the present section 6(1) may now be found in section 10. Subsections 6(2) and 6(3) have been deleted as inconsistent with the power of a corporation to use a name other than its corporate name and the provisions for registration of business names under the Corporations Information Act.

The new section 6 is, as anticipated by the hon. member, to give statutory effect to the existing practice which has been carried on, I understand, over the past three years in the ministry with respect to incorporating under numbered names. I'm not aware of any difficulties that have arisen as a result of incorporating under the use of numbers, and therefore I submit that it is a very workable sort of situation. I think all of us are aware of the difficulties in obtaining corporate names and the delay that is caused in trying to clear them with the ministry.

Mr. Lawlor: I know of instances where we use street names and things like 1361 Bloor St. Ltd. and that sort of thing. To what extent have numbered names been used and what number is the minister at?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I'll get to that in a moment as soon as I'm advised, but I must point out that I happened to incorporate a company several years ago in which I had a financial interest, and still do. It's been disclosed so you don't have to concern yourself about it. The street address was 700 St. Clair Ave., Niagara Falls, and it was incorporated as 700 St. Clair Ltd.

That is just fine, everything goes along well, we get the charter and then two years ago the city of Niagara Falls, in its wisdom, renumbered the whole city. So the letters patent, as I understand, say that it is limited to the use of holding the premises and those adjacent thereto in the event of subsequent purchase known as municipal number 700 St. Clair Ave., Niagara Falls, Ont., which has raised the question, in my mind, as to whether we are, in effect, authorized to hold the premises that we do now own or must we obtain supplementary letters patent. This is a problem that has arisen.

With reference to the member's initial question, I am advised that we are now in the series of 200,000, so apparently some 800 companies have already been incorporated using a series of numbers.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I would say this, that there has been great care over the years, to the extent that it was reasonably possible, to avoid confusion in the use of corporate names. With the numbered companies that I've seen it is very difficult to know on occasion just what company one is talking about, whether it is 647854 or 647856, and there is an element of possibility of deception which is involved in the use of numbers for companies. I'm quite prepared to go along with it because it has been the practice, but I would ask the minister to keep an eye on what is happening and make certain that it is not used in a deceptive way.

I happen to have a specific instance in mind. I think, in the particular instance I have in mind, that deception could have existed without the numbered company being a numbered company, but the fact of the matter is that was an element in the deception.

I think we should probably go along with it, but I would just issue that one word of caution and perhaps the minister, a year or two from now, would review what has happened. If necessary, it's very easily remedied, because you can simply order them to change their names and give them six months to come back to some more distinguishable name than simply a numbered company name.

Mr. Chairman: Section 2 agreed to

Mr. Renwick: I have nothing more, Mr. Chairman, until clause 5.

Mr. Chairman: Does the member mean section 5?

Mr. Renwick: Clause 5 of the bill, section 5.

Mr. Chairman: Please continue.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman on section 5—it's probably a picayune point—I would think the reservation of the name for 60 days is ample time for the people who have reserved the name to make up their mind whether they are going to go ahead and use the name or not. Again this extension of the reservations to 90 days is rather lengthy. Of course, if you just charge the $5 for the 60 days, and then charge $50 to extend it for an extra 30 days, I imagine the practice of wanting a longer period of time would quickly stop. Perhaps the minister can give some reason other than ultra convenience to extend the 60-day period for a reservation of a proposed name to 90 days.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that this was requested by the legal profession generally and not officially by any particular group representing the legal profession in that, with certain financing problems companies find themselves involved in from time to time, they found that the 60-day rule locked them in. If they didn't get their financing completed, or whatever programme they had in mind, they stood a distinct possibility of losing the name that they had reserved for the 60-day period.

With some companies which go into quite a substantial expense in developing a logo or a type of motto, they take the position that it is very costly. They would like to be able to lock in the corporate name, and then find whether the name is available and check with other jurisdictions also to see if it is conflicting with them. This was increased, or proposed to be increased in this section, from 60 to 90 days as an accommodation to the public who find themselves in this particular position.

Mr. Chairman: Section 5 agreed to. Any further sections?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Section 6, Mr. Chairman. I touched on this in my comments in connection with second reading. What is proposed now is "where authorized to do so by a special resolution and by additional authorization as the articles provide"—no, I didn't touch on it; this is an additional point—"to sell, lease, exchange or otherwise dispose of all or substantially all the property of the corporation for such consideration as the corporation thinks fit."

This is generally an expansion of what exists, but I hearken back to a point that I made several times on the select committee. Why is it necessary to continue with objects and bulky legislation that relates to the objects of corporations? What danger is going to ensue if we admit that the corporation has all the powers of a natural person subject to whatever restrictions we put on those powers in the Business Corporations Act, in the Securities Act and in the other applicable legislation.

There hasn't been, since I have been here, a statute dealing with the Corporations Act that doesn't attempt to put some new refinement on the powers of a corporation or a business corporation. I think that we would save the time of a lot of people, the expense of a lot of complicated legal advice, and save the expense of a lot of complicated litigation, if we came to the conclusion once and for all that a corporation should have all the powers of a natural person.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I don't recollect having any discussions with anyone in the ministry pertaining to this very matter touched upon by the member for Downsview as to the purpose of having objects in any charter, as we used to know them, or now certificates of incorporation. The only practical problem that I foresaw, as the hon. member was asking his question, was there's no question but there is a certain holding out to the public if we put certain distinguishable words in a corporate heading. If we have John Doe Real Estate Ltd., I think the public is entitled to rely on that being a real estate company. I think that the objects tend to narrow that down and give some kind of restrictive character to the directors of that company.

If, however, there were no such restrictions, then John Doe Real Estate Co. might well be a butcher shop or any other type of organization. And while we are now matching apples and oranges and the distinction is very, very clear, as you get into related activities the character of the business becomes closer. If you have John Doe Real Estate Ltd. and you have John Doe Development, and John Doe Holdings, and you find that they are not anywhere nearly engaged in that type of activity, then I think the public is being misled as to the character or the use of the name that is appended to the company.

That is the only reason I can visualize at this particular moment why people would be tied down. I presume historically that this or something similar to it was the reason for the objects clause.

I know a good number of us would be confronted with problems daily in our practice if we didn't have before us the Ontario Corporations Manual or another similar type of textbook to give us the objects and assist us. I used to find it extremely upsetting to take a set of objects out of that manual, include it in my application, send it in and find out it was objectionable. I am sure we have all had that problem. It is very very frustrating to the practitioner and I am sure to members of the public.

But other than those comments that is the only reason, or something similar to it—that the public might be misled if we called it John Doe Butcher's Shop and it turned out to be John Doe's massage parlour. There might be some confusion.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Chairman, what the minister says really has little relevancy, but I think if you think of the surnames of many members of this Legislature, I am sure that someone who preceded Mr. Taylor was a tailor at one point or other. That identified his occupation. You could go through in that vein the surnames of most of the members here, and at one time or other their surnames were chosen to identify their trade.

Nobody pays any attention to that now. If the government changes its approach I don't think anyone really is going to pay too much attention to the exact connotation of the words in the title of a limited corporation.

What I am pleading for is a little adventuresome spirit in those who are responsible for writing our corporation laws. Let us admit that we are awfully close now to having our objects so broad that most companies can do anything.

It is certainly not beyond the bounds of possibility that John Doe Realty Co. can have subsidiaries that are in the butcher's shop business, and they really are not going to be confused by anybody—except that if he hangs John Doe Realty in front of his butcher's store, his customers might want to worry, so he will figure out some other way around it, and he will carry on in partnership owned by the limited company.

This was one of the pleas that I made, as I say, when we did the major recommendations which resulted in the Business Corporations Act, and I repeat it again seeing paragraph 6 here of Bill 180.

Mr. Lawlor: When was the last time you sang a song?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have been advised, Mr. Chairman, that the companies branch will be looking into the objects problem after the New Year, in 1973. Apparently they are aware of it and I was not at the time of our discussion.

My personal feeling is that the public should not be misled and I think the hon. member for Downsview has probably had an opportunity of reading, I think, the most recent Law Report whereby Scott Young, a Toronto journalist, brought an action against one Scott Young Window Cleaning Co. Ltd., or something—

Mr. Singer: Mr. Justice Moorehead wept copious tears as he dismissed the action.

Hon. Mr. Clement:—and the action was dismissed for a particular reason set out there. But the plaintiff attempted to demonstrate to the court, albeit unsuccessfully, that he was now the subject of ridicule and that he was being associated with a window cleaning or a building cleaning company.

Mr. Singer: It was Mr. Justice Moorehouse.

Mr. Chairman: Do any members wish to comment on section 7?

Mr. Singer: Yes, Mr. Chairman. On section 7—that was the one I wrongly referred to when I started to talk about section 6. I see no reason why an employee should not be allowed to have a loan so that he can purchase shares of the company. I am not quite sure if I am reading that section correctly, but it seems to me if I am that this would seem to prevent a loan to an employee by the company, so that the employee can purchase shares of his company. The object of that I think is a sound one—to keep employees interested, to let them have some share in the action. This should be allowed. Is this section, together with what is added, going to prevent it; or going to continue to prevent it? Or is the whole thing allowed?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, the provisions of this clause required, as the member for Downsview stated, some consideration. It is a substantial enlargement of the power under the Act.

The first point, as I understand it, is that anyone who is the beneficiary of such a loan, or other financial assistance, might find himself having received a benefit from a corporation under income tax law. Perhaps the tax considerations can determine the extent to which it will be used.

The other items relating to shares of the company refer—indeed, the three preceding subsections refer in italics to bonafide employees of the corporation and in two of the cases whether or not they are shareholders or directors; and in one case excludes the directors from the benefit of receiving loans to assist them in buying shares of the corporation to be held by them by way of beneficial ownership.

This next clause does not deal with employees at all and leaves it open to the corporation to provide funds or other assistance by way of guarantee, or otherwise, to any of its shareholders or its directors to enable them to buy issued shares of the company; but presumably not to subscribe to shares in the company.

I think my concern is why is it limited to issued shares if there is validity in extending this loan provision to shareholders and to directors; and why shouldn't it be to enable them to subscribe to shares of the corporation if it is by way of loan or by way of guarantee? It would seem to me that extension would be just as justifiable as the one which is presently inserted.

My other concern is whether or not it is intended that this is to benefit individual shareholders, rather than corporate shareholders, and whether or not there shouldn't be a distinction as to whether or not this power of making loans to shareholders or directors should not be extended to those shareholders who are other corporate shareholders of the company.

Those are the two points that appear to me to require clarification.

In summary, if there is justification for the extension of the loan—provision to shareholders and directors, whether or not they are employees' then I don't know why it limits them to purchasing only issued shares of the corporation, rather than subscribing to shares of the corporation. The other point is simply whether or not it should be limited to persons who are individuals—rather than corporations—who might possibly be shareholders of the company providing the financial assistance.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, it wasn't so many years ago that the totem and taboo in corporate law was that corporations ought not to sell shares of their common stock to their own shareholders, or finance that particular purchase, because it was felt to be some kind of conflict; and certainly the arm's length motivations and distinction between the corporation and the shareholders did not obtain in those concepts. Now, this has been gradually eroded over the years and sensibly so, by and large.

What I wish to say under the clause is perhaps just simply to put what has been put forward in a slightly different way. So far as the present purchasing or subscription is concerned, if the trust device is used, then the shareholders, the directors, and other employees who are neither, all fall under the umbrella; and all, by using a trustee, are quite free.

This is a widening of this particular privilege or commendation that has been made, and the question devolves as to why it is restricted in this way, whereas the other clause, clause (c) has very wide implications. If this clause is brought into being, then I think it would materially alter the wording and application of clause (c). If you were going to buy directly, you wouldn't utilize the trust device. Why, therefore, isn't (c) altered accordingly in order to bring it into line with the new and wider provisions in this clause (e)?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, under the existing legislation, section 17(1)(d), a corporation is authorized to make loans to bona fide employees of the corporation, other than directors, to enable them to purchase shares in the corporation. Now (e) is extended to cover the same situation in those companies not offering its securities for sale to the public; in other words, the old private company concept. As far as extending is concerned, the idea was to extend that privilege to that class of people, and basically—and I don't think anyone here will argue with this—it's a good idea to enable employees to do this.

It has been asked why the proposed amendment covers issued shares only. I must look you in the eye and say I don't know why they should be restricted to issued shares as opposed to issued and/or treasury shares.

It may be—and I will look into this and report back on it—that the idea is to encourage the employee to purchase those shares that are already issued so that he may have an opportunity not only to invest in his employer's company but perhaps to assume some degree of management or control—and he can only do that in relation to the issued shares. I don't know the rationale behind it. But I suggest that I will look into it and find out why it is restricted to issued stock only.

Mr. Chairman: Any comments from 8 to 15?

Mr. Singer: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Which section?

Mr. Singer: Section 11. Did the hon. member for Riverdale want to comment?

Mr. Renwick: Just for half a second if I may. I have a question on clause 9 of the bill.

Can the minister explain to me how this right of the shareholder to require the redemption of preference shares at his option is going to work? As I understand it, at the present time it's traditional and customary with preferred shares to provide that they be redeemable at the option of the corporation. As I read clause 9 of the bill amending section 27 of the bill, it will now be possible to provide in the preference share provision that a shareholder can, at his option, require the redemption of his shares.

It would seem to me that we would have situations where shareholders would be vying to get their money out, and I don't understand the situations under which a shareholder should be given his right to call for his money by requiring the corporation to redeem his shares. It would seem to me that we might very well precipitate a run on the bank in that particular company if more than one person exercised that option to have the company buy the shares. It seems to me that you also have the problem as to who takes priority. Is it first come first served, or how is it worked out? I frankly don't understand the reason for the proposed additional right which may be included in the bundle of rights and privileges attaching to preference shares.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, again I am advised that this was recommended by the corporation law committee of the Canadian Bar Association, the rationale of it being to give flexibility to closely held companies—that is, to the shareholders in those particular types of companies. That is the only explanation that I am able to give at this time. Presumably what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and to give some kind of reciprocity this was recommended by that particular committee of the Canadian Bar Association.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Needn't be so saucy about it.

Mr. Chairman: Clause 11, the hon member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: On section 11, yes.

Mr. Chairman: Section 11.

Mr. Singer: Yes. Section 11, Mr. Chairman, purports to limit the mutual fund corporation to one class of shares. Someone has inquired of me as to what the rationale behind that is, and quite frankly I don't know. I hope the minister will have something more to say than that it was included in a brief that was submitted to him.

Mr. Renwick: I also have a question I don't understand. The last part of the clause seems to me to be contradictory. Perhaps it's simply because I can't read it properly. The clause says: "and where a corporation to which this section applies has one or more classes of mutual fund shares of which one class has attached thereto no conditions, restrictions, limitations or prohibitions on the right to vote, the corporation is not required to have any other class of shares." It seems to me that there is some contradiction in that provision where it refers up above "a corporation to which this section applies has one or more classes of mutual fund shares."

The draftsmanship seems to me to be less than clear.

Mr. Stokes: It wasn't a meticulous grammarian.

Mr. Singer: Particularly when you read it together with the explanatory note.

Mr. Renwick: Yes.

Mr. Singer: The minister is confused too.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I'll have to look at that. I share the member's concern.

Mr. Deans: That's the advantage of going to committee.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, on clause 13—

Mr. Singer: No, I have one on clause 12, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Clause 12, the member for Downsview.

Mr. Singer: On clause 12, where the corporation is being allowed to purchase its own shares, which idea has been discussed and which I think has some merit, there are certain safeguards that are put in here—three, four, five and six to some extent—but I am still worried as to whether or not the safeguards are in fact sufficient. I wonder if, without several more safeguards, this doesn't allow manipulation of the shares of the company by the majority of the shareholders to the disadvantage of the minority.

Suddenly, the majority may vastly increase, and the small minority who may have been the troublemakers or the objectors or the insisters on the use of the letter of the law and so on, find themselves in such an insupportable minority position that the ball game is all over. I wonder if there shouldn't be additional protection in this, when this heretofore-not-allowed procedure is going to be allowed to take place. I am worried that there could be abuses of this once it is allowed, and I don't think the precautions or safeguards that are put in here are sufficient in nature.

Hon. Mr. Clement: On a question of clarification, are you relating this to your section 13 of the bill—

Mr. Singer: Clause 12.

Hon. Mr. Clement: —or 12 of the bill?

Mr. Singer: Oh, I am sorry. I meant 13. I didn't read my own markings. It was 13; yes, that should have been 13.

Mr. Renwick: Perhaps I could comment on clause 13 as well. The item in clause 13 that bothers me is the introduction of corporate incest into the Business Corporations Act.

It strikes me that if we're going to permit a company to buy shares of its holding company you come back to a very vexed question of corporate law as to whether or not that's an unauthorized reduction of capital. Certainly on consolidation those shares disappear, as I understand the accounting procedures, and it does, in fact, amount to an unauthorized reduction in capital.

I think, in the absence of this provision in the bill which is being introduced for the first time, there was at least a division if not a preponderance of opinion which indicated that one company could not hold shares in its holding company or parent company, however you want to designate it. I don't think that the problem is simply solved by stating that those shares held by the subsidiary company, or whatever lesser number of shares are held by that company, are to be non-voting at any meetings. Nor, is it sufficient, I think, to say that they're not entitled to receive any dividends or other distributions.

Frankly, I just don't know the answer but there must be some specific reason for it being indicated that one company can buy the shares of its holding company. I would like the minister to elucidate on that and explain it to me because otherwise I would feel that it was unwise to introduce that into the bill. Unless, of course, that particular section of the Canadian Bar Association thinks that it's an added necessity for their continued interest in flexibility in the operation of business corporations which my friend, the hon. member for Downsview, perhaps is frightened might verge into manipulation rather than flexibility.

Mr. Lawlor: That's a sacrosanct word. No, no; go ahead!

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I think the old rule still stands—that a corporation cannot buy its own shares if the company or the corporation is insolvent or the purchase of those shares would render it insolvent.

I'm advised that to provide that a corporation may purchase the shares of its parent under the same safeguards as the current provision pertaining to a corporation purchasing its own common shares, the safeguards are that it must be solvent, as I've mentioned; private deals are prohibited; no voting or receipt of dividends; the corporation becomes an insider and it must disclose the purchase in its annual financial statements.

These recommendations have been made by—this time I can add another institute, although the corporate law committee of the Ontario section of the Canadian Bar Association suggested it. The present provisions provide that a purchase by a corporation of its own common shares must be out of surplus. The Institute of Chartered Accountants said that this provision causes all kinds of internal accounting problems. Since any protection to the shareholder arises from the stipulation that such purchases may not be made if the corporation would be rendered insolvent, and no protection arises from the provision as to the surplus, the requirement as to the purchase out of the surplus has been removed and the stipulation as to solvency has been retained.

I'm advised that the federal proposals for a new Business Corporations Act are similarly worded.

Mr. Renwick: Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, I could give a simple example. I understand that a corporation cannot buy its own shares if, by doing so, it would render it insolvent or if it were insolvent at the time it decided to buy the shares.

Doesn't this provision extending the right of a company which has a holding company up above it giving that lower company the right to buy shares of the upper company, leave itself wide open to abuse? If my friend, the member for Lakeshore, for example, held shares in the top company and the top company itself was insolvent and therefore couldn't buy his shares, but if the subsidiary company or a company with a lesser degree—not necessarily a subsidiary down below—was not an insolvent company, and if on consolidation the two companies would be insolvent, then don't you leave it wide open for the lower company to bale out the member for Lakeshore—

Mr. Lawlor: To buy those shares.

Mr. Renwick: —by buying those shares out of the funds which are available in the lower company, and then saying, "Well, we're sorry but the whole operation is now insolvent"?

That's only one example. These provisions with respect to when the corporation may buy and how it may buy I'm quite satisfied to take with respect to its own shares, but the introduction into the bill of this kind of a provision seems to me to verge upon the kind of manipulative action that we've been trying for years to eliminate.

I don't support it on the principle that it would be terribly flexible to permit them to do it. My objection to this clause is limited solely to this provision about a corporation buying shares of its holding company. I use the very, very simple example of how that could be fraudulent, but still strictly legal, if we permit this to take place. Not only would my friend, the member for Lakeshore, get his money, but he'd get it at the lower rate of capital gains tax as well. He could walk away from this little group of companies that he's controlled with the bundle. Without some really tangible explanation of it, I don't see how we can support the introduction of that principle into this bill. As a matter of fact I am prepared, subject to stacking the motion, to move that the words in subsection 2 of section 39 of clause 13 of the bill "or may purchase any of the issued shares of its holding body corporate" be deleted.

Mr. Chairman: Do you want to give me that in writing?

Mr. Renwick: Yes, I will.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman!

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Chairman, if the member would care to adjourn the debate—

Mr. Lawlor: Yes, I will adjourn the debate.

Mr. Renwick: Just before we rise, may I give the Chairman the amendment so that we will have the amendment when this matter is next resumed. It will just take me a second to complete writing it out.

Mr. Chairman: The Clerk of the House says he will put it in the bill as soon as it comes to the table. It will be contained in the bill.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report progress and asks leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, before we continue with the next item of business, I wonder if I could have some opinion from the House whether members would care to proceed further with this tomorrow to bring it to its conclusion. Would that be satisfactory?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): We're in the government's hands; whatever they like.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I throw that out.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): That's the most frightening thing I've ever heard.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): That is satisfactory.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member for Rainy River knows that's not true.

Mr. Renwick: We are anxious to get on with the denturists' debate.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Thank you. Then I shall call it for the first order of business tomorrow.

NOTICE OF MOTION

Clerk of the House: Notice of motion No. 12, by Mr. Miller.

RESOLUTION: That, in the opinion of this House, as a measure to assist in the reduction of air pollution and to promote physical fitness, the government should give consideration to reducing or repealing the sales tax on bicycles and implementing any other measure which would encourage the use of this healthful means of transportation.

Mr. F. S. Miller (Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I move resolution No. 12.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Muskoka moves resolution No. 12.

Mr. Miller: Mr. Speaker, the resolution that I have moved for consideration by this House is both specific and general.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): You can't do better than that!

Mr. Miller: I'm learning from the opposition.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): He's covering all the bases.

Mr. Miller: It asks the province to remove the five per cent sales tax now paid by a purchaser of a bicycle, and in addition it recommends that the province should encourage the use of these healthful, pollution-free vehicles. In a sense, they are our third intermediate form of transportation. I would like to give reasons for both of these requests and to solicit the support of the House for the detailed means of encouraging bicycle use that I intend to submit to the hon. members.

First, of course, I must convince the House that bicycles are healthy and that their use is worth encouraging. I have a new interest in health lately, and as a nation we offer some of the best health services in the world. At the rate of acceleration of the use of these services, perhaps we need them more than any other nation, except perhaps the giant to the south.

Our demand for health services is partly traceable to our affluence: Money buys convenience and convenience usually eliminates exercise, so we become short of wind, round of shape and not too healthy.

Recent research indicates that the key to health is regular exercise, which develops the capacity of the heart and lungs. For years we went on the basis that 5BX was the best system to get healthy—you did a little bit of everything every day. But doctors today have decided—it is called “aerobics”—that is if you develop the carrying capacity of your circulatory system and your lungs you are going to be basically healthy.

Complicated tables have been worked out to show how much swimming—which is probably the fastest way to keep in shape each day—jogging, walking, bicycling or anything else is needed to maintain our capacity once we are in shape. For example, if you jog 12½ minutes a day, your lungs and heart are supposed to be in shape—most of us would collapse after about three minutes. However, any combination of these regular health exercises will, on a regular basis, keep your blood and heart in shape.

The prescribed amount for a bicycle is three miles and 11 minutes twice a day; and to me the bicycle not only allows you to keep in shape physically, but it can save you time. I find it very frustrating, for example, to stand in a spot for 11½ minutes in the morning and jog; but if in fact you ride your bicycle to the House it might have a useful purpose, you get here on time.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Macaulay did it all the time!

Mr. Miller: As a matter of fact, I ride my bicycle back home, but I admit I haven't got the courage to ride it in Toronto yet.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): The member rides it back and forth?

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): That is the one built for two that somebody else pumps.

Mr. Miller: Yes; I sit in the back and my guest rides in the front.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): The last member for Muskoka had a chauffeur-driven Cadillac to drive up and down.

Mr. Miller: Well I don't aspire to such heights, a bicycle will do me.

Now its side effects are so beneficial for the community as its direct effects are on the individual, and they are obvious: A reduction in noise, in auto exhaust pollution, in capital requirements for expressways, negligible parking costs or space requirements in the downtown core.

I was in Los Angeles last week and I think they have more of that city reserved for vehicles to ride upon or park upon than they have for people to live upon, because the vehicle has taken over completely, the car.

Most important, though, perhaps, is that it uses a renewable source of energy—you, instead of the increasingly scarce fossil fuels.

As a matter of fact, you know, we have recently implemented a whole series of regulations, or the United States has, to clean up the exhaust pollution of cars. It seems rather strange to me that we have now put equipment on vehicles, on cars, that double the rate of gasoline consumption in an attempt to cut down on air pollution. Experts say that by the year 2040, roughly, we won't have any fossil fuels left, we may be riding bicycles whether we like it or not.

Mr. Foulds: Some people may consider members of this Legislature fossil fuels.

Mr. Miller: No, I think we are solar energy rather than fossil fuels; most of us on this side are very bright.

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): That is right!

Mr. Miller: I shouldn't be all inclusive.

Mr. Cassidy: Something mysterious happens when you cross to the other side though it seems; the sun burns out.

Mr. Miller: Roughly 1,200 calories an hour are burned when you are riding a bicycle, by the way.

Bicycle sales are soaring. This year they tell me that sales of bicycles exceed sales of automobiles in numbers. In fact, if the figures or projections are accurate, almost one million bicycles will be sold in Canada in 1972. About half of these are made or sold by the one Canadian company in the business—CCM.

I personally bought four of them this year for my wife and I and my children. I think the average selling price for all types of bicycles is probably about $80, so on that basis the loss of provincial revenue is about $1.6 million if we give away the sales tax.

The budget of the Ministry of Health the last time I saw the estimate was $2.028 billion for this year, so we only have to be one-tenth of one per cent more healthy to justify the removal of the sales tax on a cost benefit analysis alone.

Admittedly four dollars probably won't stop many people from purchasing a bicycle, but it is one of those steps that would create an atmosphere that allows them to be used. The publicity alone, in my opinion, is more important. The climate of social acceptability for the bicycle is the key.

If we could convince our provincial government to eliminate the five per cent sales tax, it is altogether feasible that the federal government might eliminate their 12 per cent sales tax. This would run between $4 and $8 per bicycle, because of course it is added to the manufacturer's selling price not the retail selling price.

Bicycles will be used more if we make it more convenient and safe to ride them. Now I believe the member for Prince Edward-Lennox (Mr. Taylor) is going to talk more on safety I hope, later on in the debate, so let me discuss convenience.

We should, for example, close places like High Park off to all but pedestrian and bicycle traffic all year. I believe it was done for part of the summer season.

We should create bicycle lanes in cities. A lot of people are afraid to ride a bicycle downtown today. But I just came back from a vacation in Australia and New Zealand, a week ago Saturday.

Mr. Foulds: Travelled quite a bit by bicycle, haven't you?

Mr. Miller: Well, I have a bicycle that goes across water.

I was astounded to find the bicycle is still a major source of transportation in New Zealand. You find old people trotting them out and going downtown. You find young kids using them virtually as their sole means for getting to school.

But in particular I was impressed by their method of making the bicycle safe on streets with heavy traffic. Between the parking section and the curb they left about a three-foot path for bicycles. The cars, in some cases, parked just a little further out from the street.

Now, although this isn't feasible in Toronto's rush hour traffic, I think that we could experiment with bicycle lanes in some streets. We might, for example, even take a street like Shaw St., a north-south street too narrow for much vehicular traffic in the daytime, and allow bicycles to use it for a couple of hours each day. Now, when you do get to work we have to provide inside storage, because of the rate at which bicycles are being stolen.

Mr. Lawlor: How about using unfinished expressways.

Mr. Miller: Pardon?

Mr. Lawlor: That's okay!

Mr. Miller: At the rate bicycles are being stolen, we do need to provide some safe place for them. I think the provincial government should make a members' bicycle lounge. I am sure all hon. gentlemen would ride them if it did.

We should also make a lot more bicycle trails. I may have mentioned that earlier. The city of Ottawa has come a long way, I believe, on the bicycle trail route. They have made it very attractive for people to use bicycles within the city for recreational use.

I think there is a resolution here from the corporation of the county of Peel, resolution 72142, that in part says:

Resolved that the Province of Ontario, through the Ministry of Transportation and Communications, be requested to adopt a policy of providing bicycle pathways along main roads, and subsidizing same.

That is a resolution that deserves some thought. I certainly can see that a laneway along Highway 400 north—not immediately adjacent to the highway, but some distance back—would be useful.

In fact, most of us think that riding a bicycle any more than five or six miles is pretty physically exhausting. However, I can well remember in 1942, when I was 15, riding my bicycle from Toronto to Orillia in some six hours, and back again two days later.

We should encourage more bicycle clubs to be formed. In Denmark they have gone even further. Denmark promotes bicycle travel tours. It has hostels conveniently located where people can stop overnight. They advertise them by sending out attractive brochures. Holland, of course, has many, many bicycles in use in the central core of the city. I believe at one time they actually got to the point where they left free bicycles on the street. People could use these bicycles to ride from one point to the other and then just leave them for someone else.

Mr. Lawlor: They still do!

Mr. Miller: Bicycle travel is fun. Like skiing, it is a family activity.

Mr. Foulds: Especially in the winter!

Mr. Miller: Yes. At my lodge I have two tandem bikes, which at least two members here have used, maybe three. Certainly some of them didn't do too much work on them; and some of them were out of shape very quickly after they tried them.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Miller: Yes. They are, however, probably the most utilized recreational device I have at the lodge. My guests go crazy over them. And you know in many instances, it is just because they are away from home and haven't got any position to worry about.

Above all we need to make the daily use of bicycles socially acceptable; and I think that is where members come in. I am sure more of us would ride a bike, as I do quite often, if we weren't just a little bit embarrassed.

But you know, in my opinion, if the opinion-makers can make us all yearn for second Cadillacs, they can make us all relax and accept a bicycle for what it is—a healthful, economical, pollution-free mode of transportation.

Some of our members have done quite a bit to encourage bicycles. The hon. Minister without Portfolio (Mrs. M. Birch) who represents Scarborough East, has taken part in bikathons, giving publicity to the bicycle, and has personally gone around and delivered many safety messages to students in the schools.

Let us, above all, do our part in the community and here in the House by endorsing this resolution. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the resolution introduced by the member for Muskoka but in reading the resolution, one is led to believe that the bicycle is going to be the sole means of supplying or providing an individual with the means of becoming physically fit and, likewise, that the bicycle is going to eliminate or minimize the pollution problem.

Unfortunately, this is not the case. When it comes to pollution, look at the European countries and you will find that at one time they did ride bicycles but they, too, have gone the way of the North American communities. They have eliminated the bicycle generally for the motorcycle and in turn for the automobile; when you get into Holland and Denmark today, you don't see the bicycles that you saw there five years ago. Their people have become North Americanized. They have become a little indolent in their approach to fitness and have gone to the use of motorized bicycles, motorized means of conveyance, including the automobile. If one wants to get oneself physically fit, the bicycle is probably one of the means by which he may become physically fit but it is not the best method.

If one wants to approach the problem of being physically fit, one should simply not look upon it solely from a physical standpoint, from bulging biceps and a trim waistline. One should not look upon it from the idea that only the younger folk can partake in that type of exercise because there are other types of exercise including simply card playing by senior citizens that can make them both mentally and physically fit.

Mr. Speaker, back in the first days when I was elected to the House, the first comments that I made in the House were on physical fitness. I think today that the remarks I made then are just as appropriate and I intend to read some of them into the record, to alert maybe those who have so conscientiously given to us the presence of themselves in the chamber to listen to these remarks. I know they wouldn't care to go back to the Hansard in 1960 to read them.

Mr. Foulds: Sure. Just give us the reference.

Mr. Lawlor: Is the member serious?

Mr. B. Newman: It would probably be a lot better but the fact that they are going to listen to the comments may add a little bit to the physical fitness they would normally get. At least the fitness may come into the auditory portion of the body.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Nothing like healthy ears!

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, what is physical fitness? If I asked that question of every member in the House, were they here, I would probably get 116 different answers. Physical fitness to one may mean, as I said earlier, the ability to run a mile inside five minutes. It may be to others, to be able to walk the mile, let alone run the mile. You can't come along and describe physical fitness by any one series of terms. However, physical fitness generally is defined:

As the ability to function at a high level physically, voluntarily, emotionally, intellectually and socially. Physical fitness depends upon the extent to which our physical efficiency potential has been developed and is affected by the type of body we inherit and the health status we enjoy.

The sedentary person fails to get enough vigorous physical activity to provide the power needed to keep him functioning at the level where over-fatigue and tension can be avoided. Persons living close to the limits of their acquired capacity perform at a low quality level, fatigue prematurely, recuperate slowly and are tension-prone. Needs and demands, which differ considerably from person to person, set the quota each individual requires.

Individuals possessing even an average amount of basic physical efficiency use less energy, tire less frequently and easily and recuperate from effort more quickly and retain a higher energy reserve for the enjoyment of their leisure.

It is often said that North Americans are "energy spendthrifts and endurance paupers." Sedentary living challenges us to find new ways to enjoy the wonders of the twentieth century and to balance them effectively with a supplement designed to keep physical powers at a reasonably high quality level.

Our civilian society is faced with the missile-age disaster and cannot depend on military measures to protect it. Space-age warfare is waged on the doorsteps of the civilian population [as we noticed in the conflict in the Far East].

Listen to this. Even if civil defence measures proved to be effective, the bulk of the population so affected would not possess the physical strength and endurance needed to endure the privations of improvised living. When disaster strikes these lacks become apparent. Surely the observant and thoughtful can see these same lacks sapping the nation's energy and wasting the country's human resources in the normal course of current living.

Let us think about premature aging, psychosomatic diseases of prosperity, increases in cardiovascular deaths in the 40 to 55 age group, increase in accident proneness, increase in mental illness, increase in education retardation and so forth. The cost of these is fantastic and rapidly mounting. If really constructive action were taken it is estimated that within five years the above could be reduced by 30 per cent.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): If we ride a bicycle.

Mr. B. Newman: To continue:

Physical efficiency—the ability to produce power to move and the skill to control it—is assuming new and unsuspected importance. Its significance in respect to hard labour, military training and athletic competition has long been recognized. However, its basic relationship to emotional stability, to intellectual acuity and to volitional control are just beginning to be appreciated.

Furthermore, it is reasonable to assume that if improvement in physical efficiency is basic to therapeutic and rehabilitative treatment, it is equally basic, if not more so, to preventive measures.

Anyone doubtful of Canada's interest in fitness should note the number of slenderizing machines, the number of health salons, the number of home saunas and the number of various exercising devices that are now being sold across the country.

We have one of the highest standards of living in the world, some of the best of foods, some of the best doctors, the latest in drugs, some of the best health services, and yet we are physically illiterate. We have tutors for every subject taken in our schools, teachers for our sick and ill students, yet our children have never been taught to develop their power and to mobilize their energy. They do not know the right reason for doing the right thing physically. Test after test shows we suffer from the degenerative diseases of prosperity. Mr. Speaker, can we afford this?

Mr. Lawlor: The member certainly cannot afford prosperity. His speeches of 10 years ago were longer than they are now.

Mr. B. Newman: It goes on:

We do have physical recreation but not enough physical education. Our physical education programmes should educate to help build vigorous and skilful bodies. We need a programme of research to cut down emotional instability, which in turn would lessen the necessity for more mental institutions.

Dr. George W. Calver, physician for the Supreme Court and the United States Congress, outlined 10 commandments for keeping these men fit. He is referring to the members of Congress and the court. Two of these commandments are: "Exercise rationally" and "Play enthusiastically."

Dr. Calver counselled: "Give five per cent of your time to keeping well and you won't have to spend 100 per cent of your time getting over being sick."

The worth of exercise rests upon the basic principle "the law of use." Hippocrates called attention to this many years ago when he said: "That which is used develops, and that which is not used wastes away." Modern medical practice recognizes the laws of use. Doctors get patients out of bed and into action as soon as possible.

We are well acquainted with the toll of sickness, Mr. Speaker, the seriousness, the sometimes tragic consequence of the neglect of physical care, the dreariness of being half well. Would it not be nice to accustom ourselves to the thought and experience of being positively fit?

Mr. Speaker, are we content to be merely free of sickness, or do we wish to be heartily healthy? When asked "How are you?" do we reply, "Not so bad", or would we like to reply enthusiastically, "Wonderful" or "Grand"?

I see you smiling, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, after I had made those comments back in the 1960s, the Minister of Health at that time then appointed a committee to look into physical fitness in Ontario, and they produced a report called the Ontario Physical Fitness Study Committee. The report made a whole series of recommendations.

By the way, the report was actually completed in 1961. It was kept out of circulation up until one year later, 1962, and then it was introduced into the House. Now, why it was delayed in presentation into the House one can only surmise.

However, one of the recommendations of that report was, and I read, Mr. Speaker: "That all publicly owned facilities, including school buildings and park areas, should be made available for broad community use; and the government subsidize local boards for additional expenses involved."

This, Mr. Speaker, was in 1961. Following that the government appointed a committee headed by the present Minister of Correctional Services (Mr. Apps), the select committee on youth. They introduced and presented their report. That same recommendation was made once again to the Legislature. The select committee's report was in March, 1967. That is some six years later. The government still did not act.

In 1971 a select committee of this House was appointed to look into the utilization of educational facilities, the greater use of educational facilities. As we travel about the province, we hear exactly the same comment: "We would be more than pleased to put our facilities to full use, except that stringent regulations of the budget prevent us from doing so to the extent that we would like."

So the same recommendation will more than likely be made by the utilization of educational facilities committee as was made some 11 years or 12 years prior by a committee appointed by the government.

Mr. Speaker, this government talks fitness but is not as concerned about fitness as it talks. You can recall that at one time they contributed only $35,000 to assist amateur sports to help make our youth physically fit. In this last year they have upped that $35,000 to some $200,000; but by the same token they give $1.9 million to keep racehorses physically fit. The show a greater concern for the well-being of those who will wager $2 on the nose of some nag at one of our race tracks in the province of Ontario than for the many athletes and youngsters, as well as elderly people, who would like to have the ability to partake in some type of physical activity.

And when I say physical activity I don't mean pushups, I don't mean the exercises where necessarily muscles are involved to a great degree. It could be, as I had said earlier, square dancing; it could be card playing. It could be simply socializing, where the individual gets away from his present environment and goes into a new type of environment.

Today, with high-rise living—am I over extending, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Bullbrook: No, continue on; it's great, great!

Mr. B. Newman: Today, with the high-rise method of living, more than ever the idea of physical fitness is of extreme concern. Just recently I can recall seeing a television shot of an individual who was trapped on one of the upper floors in an apartment building, and because of a power failure, and likewise possibly because some physical deficiency or some illness, he was not able to leave the apartment. Maybe in this special case there was a heart condition that precluded the individual from leaving.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, we have to take by far a greater interest and concern with the physical well-being of people throughout the nation, rather than be solely interested in removing a five per cent sales tax from bicycles. As meritorious as this recommendation is, it doesn't even scratch the surface because many people can't ride bicycles, many people are deathly afraid of bicycles, and with today's traffic hazards you can't blame them for being afraid. Government in some countries has made bike driveways, but those driveways in those countries are not used to the extent that they were originally meant to be used. They were used when people in those countries were more concerned with driving bicycles. Today, no longer are they concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I don't intend to take up any more time of the House.

Mr. Bullbrook: Good speech!

Mr. B. Newman: I appreciate the fact that I have been allowed to extend beyond my time limit. I sincerely hope that you, Mr. Speaker, with the other members of the House will convince the Minister of Government Services (Mr. Snow) to provide, at least for the members of the House, some facility here where we could exercise after a fashion. We don't have to have a trampoline in here to get that joy of bouncing and free living, but we could have some type of physical fitness equipment in the legislative chambers so that the hon. members could make use of the showers that are there now. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well said! I'm going out for a run. Be right back.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa Centre.

Mr. Cassidy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Seldom, I think, has such rhetoric been built on the slender structure of two wheels of a bicycle, which, I believe, was the departure point of the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville. I really want to talk for a second about the purposes of the hon. member for Muskoka in introducing this resolution. It worries me, frankly, that private members' hour should be devoted to subjects which are worthy and with which people are generally in favour, such as the bicycle, but which, I am afraid, do not come to grips with the real problems of the province, which, the hon. member for Muskoka, as new assistant to the Minister for Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton), is in a position to directly influence—

An hon. member: It's the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter).

Mr. Cassidy: I beg your pardon, the Minister of Health. Well then, he is also in a position to directly influence it there. Granted that one of the functions of this House is to ventilate matters of public concern, and there are some concerns and some things that can be said about bicycles, I have yet to hear a Conservative member, in putting forward a resolution, try to come to grips with the problems of people on welfare, or the problems with tenants paying high rents, or all of the other problems that affect so many people in their day-to-day activities in such a way that they, are not open and available to them to participate in such healthful and meritorious recreations as the bicycle.

I'm going to talk about bicycles. That's what the subject of the resolution is here. I want to talk first about taxation, since that's the main point that's made in the member's resolution, but I really do question the abuse of the private members' hour when there are so many other things that we should and ought to be talking about.

An hon. member: A very good point!

Mr. Cassidy: I recall the hon. member for St. David (Mrs. Scrivener), I think, with a motion that was debated in this House to create a Toronto historical foundation, or something like that. Again, meritorious and possibly worthy of being ventilated within the House, but surely not the primary things that we should be talking about in this Legislature, after so many years of neglect of so many sectors of Ontario society by the government on the other side of the House.

The members' subject is meritorious; the members' proposal is not. It is a typical response from a member of the government. He sees a problem and he wants to encourage it. He says, "Let's do something that looks nice. We'll take off the sales tax," at a figure which he estimated to be $1.5 million a year, at a figure of maybe $3 or $4 or $5 per bicycle. I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the principle of finding something that's good, and then giving it a slight concession through sales tax, is basically a bad one. It's a principle that says, "The market will take care of it; let's give them a few bucks. We can handle this problem in a financial manner just with bucks." That simply isn't good enough.

The fact is that as a general principle of taxation it is wrong to erode our tax base, be it bicycles or other things that are deemed to be meritorious or deserving. It's just plain wrong, because we then have to raise our taxes on other things which may in fact be equally necessary or desirable for the people who are affected.

Had the member got up and suggested a reform of the tax system which happened, among other things, to make bicycles cheaper, fine. But we certainly could not support, were there to be a vote, which there won't, the principle that there should be a reduction or repeal of the sales tax on bicycles. It really is a Mickey Mouse, if I dare use the word, kind of proposal. If we do bicycles, do we do trampolines? Do we do Exercycles? Do we take away the sales tax on footballs which surely, per dollar of purchase, give more healthful exercise than the average bicycle?

Mr. Lawlor: And on playing cards.

Mr. Cassidy: And on playing cards, for that matter; as the member for Windsor-Walkerville says, they have quite a healthful impact.

Do we in fact lay off the dogs on, let's say, the efforts to collect tax from brothels, which also provide a certain form of healthful exercise and change of environment such as is advocated by the member for Windsor-Walkerville?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Would you repeat that? Would you repeat that?

An hon. member: What do you know about that?

Mr. Cassidy: Well, this is reported to me.

Mr. Foulds: Members of this Legislature wouldn't know about such things.

Mr. Cassidy: Yes, I hear about it from my friends on the other side of the House.

Mr. Foulds: Which House?

Mr. Cassidy: This House.

I would like to make a few positive proposals, which I think the government could consider with the $1½ million it gets now in sales tax on bicycles and possibly with some other funds as well.

Certainly the aim of encouraging means of improving physical fitness without people having to work at it is a very good one. I do happen to ride a bicycle and so do all my children; I'm delighted to go out with them and so on and so forth—I don't want to go into that part of the speech, which I'm sure anybody in the House could make.

There are some real problems, though, with the tremendous increase in bicycle use by adults in recent years. One is very simple: theft. Thefts of bicycles have gone up apace; there has been no action by the government directed to this particular area. It becomes more and more difficult and more and more expensive for people to ensure against theft.

I've had some personal experience of this. My nephew has lost two bicycles in the last 12 to 14 months, and I know many other people who have lost them as well through organized bike theft rings. Obviously if one makes an $80 or $100 investment with the risk that it may be taken away very shortly and in an unpredictable fashion, through theft, then people will get concerned.

I think the province should look very seriously at a means of positive identification of bicycles that is more permanent than the present serial numbers or the existing system of municipal bicycle licensing. In other words, every bicycle should probably have embossed or burned into it, and identification which cannot be removed, can be seen at a distance and can positively identify any bicycle.

The member for Muskoka has mentioned the question of parkways and bikeways. We have these now in Ottawa and they have been a tremendous influence in encouraging people to use bicycles. If you go out on one of the parkways in Ottawa on the average

Sunday, when they are closed to traffic, you will find literally thousands of individuals and families out there taking advantage of it.

Much of that is in the municipal sphere. But, on the other hand, one wonders whether the province, in its provincial parks and on the Niagara Escarpment and other scenic areas, could not create networks of bikeways in order to encourage longer-distance bicycle travel.

On another matter, with the really desperate efforts by the men and women who sell bicycles to get enough to meet the demand and with the entry into the bicycle market of some people who may not be as ethical as older, established dealers, there has been a problem of the proliferation of the various brands and kinds of bicycles that are available.

It becomes very difficult for the consumer to know whether this Italian brand or that Japanese brand or this Canadian brand or that Czech brand is in fact a good product or not. I think some assurance, which could be achieved through the means of provincial testing, would be very desirable in order to ensure adequate safety and durability as far as bicycles are concerned.

One might consider—I'm not sure whether the province would want to go into this or not; I throw it up as an idea, though—the need for ensuring that when children begin to ride bicycles, they are either under the supervision of their parents or else have had some training in rules of the road and in the way to drive a bicycle.

I think that the province should also look carefully at the safety problems created by bicycles when they are being carelessly ridden on the roads. I am thinking particularly of the style of racing bicycles, which are very popular nowadays and often are not adequately equipped with rear reflectors, tail lights or headlights. This is a real problem for drivers. Any bicycle rider confronted with the question would admit that he ought to take care of these things, but the province has been so lax in enforcing regulations that nothing can be done.

I think I'll close off there, Mr. Speaker. I was interested in the rhetoric of the member for Windsor-Walerville on physical fitness. I felt that it may have been that his copies of the speech of 1960 had run out, and that motivated him to give that speech here today.

However, as a general kind of thought, I think that the government needs to do far more than it is doing in the area of physical fitness, both in encouraging more modern forms of training for amateur and semi-amateur sports. And also by ensuring a greater diffusion of these techniques and for ensuring that in the school system we aren't simply teaching physical fitness in a way which turns children off for life because of excessive pushups, and that kind of thing.

I think also in the health field, where the member for Muskoka is now involved, that there should be very serious consideration as to just who is responsible for physical fitness and how we bring that responsibility home.

There has been in our health care the concept that, in the same way as you take your car into the garage to get it fixed, you take yourself into the hospital to get fixed. In fact, more and more people are recognizing that the responsibility for health and physical fitness has got to rest with the individual. That's where it has got to begin.

The government, the health services, the paramedicals, the physical fitness people, and so on, ought to be available, ought to be encouraging, ought to be there in an advisory capacity.

But the concept that an individual may be responsible for his own physical fitness and, in fact, has the ability to tailor his own programmes to look after himself, and so on, is not something that this government has talked about. It's yielded to some of the more powerful medical empires in terms of the things that they wanted to do, rather than putting money into the preventive and social programmes; the physical fitness programmes and the other programmes that would help people to stay in good health, rather than simply repairing them the way you repair a broken-down car.

For the reasons I've given, we couldn't support this resolution because of its rather unjustified reference to the sales tax system. Obviously, like motherhood or fatherhood, it is difficult to be opposed to bicycles in general. With this subject having been ventilated, I hope that the government does look a bit more closely at ways it can use provincial jurisdiction in order to provide more facilities for bicycling. This, in turn, will be the most positive way of encouraging their greater use, particularly by adults.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. J. A. Taylor (Prince Edward-Lennox): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the resolution; certainly in principle, if not fully in fact.

There is an aspect of this which concerns me as I must confess, it concerned the hon. member for Ottawa Centre, and that is the elimination of the sales tax.

I would think that if the sales tax was to be removed in regard to bicycles, surely it must be removed in regard to canoes, probably hockey equipment, lacrosse equipment, and sporting equipment of all kinds. Then I could see a very unfair approach to all of these modes of exercise which, I am sure, would benefit the people of the province as a whole.

Mr. Foulds: Pogo sticks!

Mr. Taylor: Well, there you are—and what would the opposition do without pogo sticks?

Mr. Foulds: Right! We know where you use them.

Mr. Taylor: We think that the physical fitness aspect of the resolution should be promoted, but in my respectful submission I think it should be promoted to the provision of bicycle trails throughout the province, just as we have canoe routes. I think that all off-road transportation should be considered in this way, whether they are all-terrain vehicles of one kind or another or whether they are bicycles. They should be considered and dealt with apart from the automobile because this is the problem; it is the conflict, the impact, of the bicycle with vehicular traffic.

I think it essential that a master plan for the Province of Ontario dealing with recreation in general should be considered and devised so that we could have all of these recreational aspects available to the public on a provincial-wide basis. We would have then complete systems of bicycle paths, trails for hikers, trails for snowmobiles and for all-terrain vehicles so that we would not mix the horses and the people with the automobile. This is the danger today when we have pressures of population building up to such an extent that we use the same roadway or path for all types of vehicles which were not intended to mix.

That is why we require more licensing. That is why we require more changes in the types of structures, and the continual revision of equipment to implement safety measures which only up the price of this type of vehicle. Surely, today we need bicycles that have reflectors on them; lights should be mandatory. This type of thing is necessary because they are designed to travel on the road and unless we have a master plan for the province as a whole for this type of device or vehicle, I don't think we have very much to offer.

Mr. Lawlor: We have a very defective government in this province.

Mr. Taylor: As my friend from Muskoka has said there are many people who are reluctant to ride bicycles for the very simple reason of attitude. In other words, they are not like one of the former more eminent members of the Legislature—and a cabinet minister—who used to ride his bicycle, I think, to the parliament buildings, probably with his plaid jacket on.

Mr. Lawlor: He quit when he became a corporation lawyer!

Mr. Taylor: You see, not all of us would attempt to do that because we feel that we might be conspicuous or we might be criticized or we might not be held in esteem by our fellow man.

It is important to get these trails off into the woodlands, especially in Prince Edward county and in Lennox where we don't have to worry about the people on Bay St. booing and where we can welcome even members from the opposition to experiment in the art of bicycle riding on our trails; so they can view the majesty, the beauty of our country and enjoy the vistas which are so prominent throughout the riding of Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Foulds: The last time this member spoke he wanted an airport in his riding. This time he wants a bicycle trail—what a come-down there is!

Mr. Taylor: There is no question when we are talking in terms of a master transportation plan for the Province of Ontario that we should not have dial-a-bicycle or dial-a-boat in Picton. There is not a thing wrong with that, and we would welcome any of these experiments to take place, of course, in the riding.

Mr. Foulds: Especially in bicycle riding.

Mr. Taylor: Well, bicycle riding—our riding, of course, is very broad-minded and it is a riding from all points of view whether it is horse riding or bicycle riding or Prince Edward-Lennox riding! It is all a great riding and they are great people. I do think that my friend from Ottawa Centre was rather extravagant in his language in calling this debate an abuse of the private member's hour.

There is no question that this art of bicycling is important to the people throughout the entire province; no question about that at all. When you look at what is offered in the way of not only industry but the enjoyment of our young people, if you can look at bicycle sales, it is a wonderful thing to have this activity being increased.

We have heard about the way of life in different parts of the world and other countries. It is not such a bad idea to have something similar here, where we can get out of the motor vehicle and get into the fresh air and use a little muscle power. I think it is a great thing.

But I think that the means of implementing and encouraging the use of the bicycle should be through the promotion of these bicycle paths and bicycle trails. To do that takes money and I don't think that is consistent with taking the sales tax off the bicycle. But it would certainly be inconsistent with taking the sales tax off the bicycle and not off other recreational vehicles.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Essex-Kent.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): Mr. Speaker, I rise to participate in this debate to replace one of our members who was sick today. I assure you I am not going to be very lengthy. I am proud to stand up today, and I also was proud to hear of the appointment as the federal Minister of Agriculture of a man from my riding. It makes me feel very good to be here today and hear the announcement that Mr. Whelan was appointed Minister of Agriculture for Canada.

Mr. Foulds: There is an irrelevancy in this debate if I ever heard one.

Mr. Ruston: It is a great feeling, so I am sure you won't mind, Mr. Speaker, if I just divert for a minute. It is a nice feeling to know that you have been in friendship for a number of years with a man who has worked hard, who started in political life when he was 21 years of age, and who has now been appointed to one of the highest offices in Canada. I just wanted to mention that.

Mr. Ferrier: Does he ride a bicycle?

Mr. Ruston: Yes, they have bicycles in his area, yes.

With regard to the resolution, Mr. Speaker, in reading it over—of course, this has already been mentioned, I think by the member for Ottawa Centre—I noticed where it says to exempt them from sales tax. If you are going to exempt anything from sales tax you had better exempt shoes and boots, because that is the best exercise there is. It is a shame that someone would get up here in this Legislature and say that we should take the sales tax off bicycles to encourage their use—well, at the same time take the sales tax off shoes. It is absolutely ridiculous, and I am surprised. I think the member who presented this is a pretty reasonable member and I am really surprised.

Mr. Taylor: That is putting the boots to them.

Mr. Ruston: However, this hour is generally an hour of futility, although I recall that I did have a resolution on the order paper at one time and we spoke on it for the usual hour, and only three or four months later the Minister of Agriculture acted upon it. So, probably you have to use these hours to bring to the attention of government and people that there is some room for expansion. The member for the great riding of Prince Edward, that grows the great apples—and I thought—

Mr. Taylor: See, it is coming through.

Mr. Ferrier: We'd like some more apples.

Mr. Ruston: —I thought that would be a nice profession, to be riding a bicycle and eating an apple at the same time, because—

Mr. Foulds: Prince Edward-Lennox.

Mr. Ruston: Prince Edward-Lennox—yes, we don't want to forget Lennox.

An hon. member: He won't get an apple for that.

Mr. Ruston: Yes, an apple for Lennox.

The important thing in this, I think, is that we should maybe be looking for trails for bicycles, and Ottawa has been mentioned. In my travels in Ottawa, I understand there are about 60 miles of bicycle trails and they go so far as to have them even underneath the roadway, and so on. They are very sophisticated trails they have, so I think it is a great thing for the people there.

I have been thinking that we should probably have on some of the secondary highways and secondary county roads, about a 3-ft. or 4-ft. strip at the side of the travelled portion for bicycles and walking. The member for Windsor-Walkerville mentioned they have this in some of the countries in Europe and they don't use many bicycles any more, but at least we could use them for walking purposes. It would be a safety measure as well for people walking.

These could be used in areas where a lot of towns are maybe three or four miles apart. I think this would be an ideal thing to have, where you could just strike out down the road on this strip. You would have your yellow line at the edge of it where cars aren't supposed to go over, although sometimes they do. That would at least be a safety factor and I think it would be a good idea to promote some of these.

We already keep the shoulders of the road up with crushed stone, and so forth. It wouldn't take too much extra care to have a little three or four-foot asphalt strip along there. It would encourage people to get out and use these areas, and it would improve their physical condition. Of course, there are lots of other things a person can do for improving physical condition or keeping in good physical condition.

I took a 50th wedding anniversary plaque down to a gentleman in one end of my riding. They were kidding him about being in pretty good physical condition and everything. They asked him what he figured were some of the things that made him feel so well and everything at this ripe old age. He said, "Well, I think hard work and plenty of sex."

I suppose there are other areas that all add up to good physical fitness but, however, as we think of the number of bicycles that are now in the country, there is no doubt about it that they are a great asset. I have one myself. It is not a 10-speed, though, and you have got to pump it pretty hard, but some of the rest of the family have some of the fancy ones. In fact, my son-in-law took off one time and he thought he was only going down a concession or two. He kept on going and he got a little lost. He got back that night at 10:30, and it was pretty dark. He came to the conclusion when he figured it up, that he had ridden 27 miles. With the new modern bicycles you can cover a lot of ground, but, however, you should know where you are going.

Mr. Speaker, that's about all I can add to it at this time.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other member wish to add anything to the debate? If not, this concludes the debate.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, before I adjourn the House, as agreed to earlier today, we will conclude the consideration of Bill 180 in the committee of the whole House. I understand the minister would then be prepared to proceed with 181 which is somewhat in relation thereto and, following that, Bill 222, standing as item 14. I will also ask the members to be prepared for Bills 203, 204 and 197.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6:00 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Again we are pleased to have many visitors with us in our galleries. In the east gallery there are students from St. Lucy's Separate School of Toronto, the Downsview Secondary School of Downsview, Queen Elizabeth Sr. Public School of Mississauga; and in the west gallery ladies from the Women's Institute of Louth County, St. Catharines, and the Etienne Brulé Ecole Secondaire of Willowdale.

Hon. C. J. S. Apps (Minister of Correctional Services): Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the pleasure of introducing to the members of the Legislature this afternoon a group of fine young people from Kingston, representing the Queen's University Progressive Conservative Club, who are attending the Legislature this afternoon. Members will find them in the Speaker's gallery.

An hon. member: You know they're for luck, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Not many of them!

Mr. Speaker: I regret the oversight. The names did not appear on my list.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): They are his majority, Mr. Speaker, better pay them heed.

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the Minister of Labour, in the absence of the Premier (Mr. Davis), when we might expect the statements that were promised by the Premier on provincial programmes for the initiation of employment projects in the Province of Ontario?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): In reply to the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps it would be preferable to ask the question of the Premier himself.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I asked the question of the Premier last week and he said we could expect the statements at the end of last week. I thought perhaps the Minister of Labour might be aware of what the delay was and could enlighten the House.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Labour was away for a couple of days last week.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): And the Premier is away for a couple of days this week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The targets are a little restricted, Mr. Speaker.

An hon. member: Here he comes, hurrah.

POLICY ON FUNDS FOR NATURAL DISASTERS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the Minister of Agriculture and Food recommending to his cabinet colleagues a change in the policy of the province by which, when natural disaster strikes in the farm community or elsewhere, the best Ontario can do is simply match, dollar for dollar, funds raised from other sources—rather than establishing a disaster fund which is obviously necessary in cases similar to the ones that occurred in southwestern Ontario a few days ago?

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): No, Mr. Speaker, I am not recommending any change, because the policy which has been followed in the past has worked, I think, admirably well. In the two instances that come to mind readily, the Hurricane Hazel disaster and the tornado situation of 1952, I believe there were ample funds provided by the province at that time. I might add we would welcome funds provided by the federal government, which has never seen fit to come in on the programme.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, if this government contributed a dollar, maybe it would!

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We did indeed, and it has refused to do so.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The government hasn't contributed anything.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: We'll match any dollar that is raised there.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why doesn't this government lead it off?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Whatever they raise we will match.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Wouldn't the minister agree with the mayor of Chatham—he's obviously got a lot of insight in these matters—that the present policy is inadequate in that it is very difficult to find somebody to put the first ante into the kitty so that a reticent, in fact hypocritical administration like the one the Minister of Agriculture is a part of, would then be forced to make a contribution of some significance?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Of course there have been some contributions already pledged in that area and we'll go along with matching them at any time.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): That's why they're coming to the government! They don't have the money.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Premier: Is he now prepared to make a statement to the House concerning the programmes that he promised would be announced here to assist in the provision of jobs over the winter months?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, it is my hope, and I think with some degree of—

Mr. Foulds: Some basis—

Hon. Mr. Davis: Yes, some basis of finality—that we will dot the i's and cross t's tomorrow at our regular cabinet meeting, and we will inform the House on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): By that time winter will be over.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): No cabinet secrets.

Hon. Mr. Davis: There are no secrets.

Mr. Deans: Now we know what they are going to talk about!

GRANTING OF RESTRICTED DRIVING LICENCES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I have a question of the—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Provincial Secretary for Justice!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Provincial Secretary for Justice; right, that's his title! Can he tell the House what action the government will take in light of the decision of the Supreme Court of—

Mr. Singer: Divisional court.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Pardon me?

Mr. Singer: Divisional court.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: My friend tells me it is divisional court; I read the Supreme Court in the Toronto Star—pertaining to a conflict that appears to be developing between the provisions of the Criminal Code and the Highway Traffic Act whereby judges may or may not have the power to grant the use of an automobile to an individual whose privileges to drive have been removed because of a conviction for impairment?

Hon. Mr. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Mr. Speaker, I understand that we will be appealing that decision. In the meantime, it could well be that the administrative arrangements with the registrar would have to be such that in cases where there is a conviction for impaired driving and the court allows a restricted licence we would allow that. However, as I say, the decision is being appealed and until we know the final outcome of that to the court of appeal I wouldn't think there would be any change in the application of the Highway Traffic Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Does it appear then that until the appeal is heard, those individuals who have been granted the right to drive under the Criminal Code provisions will be able to legally operate their automobiles? And a second supplementary: What would the situation be where an individual who had lost the right to drive under the Highway Traffic Act would enter into a similar appeal?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: In that case I would think he could appeal if the conviction is still within the 30-day period. However, if it is beyond that, I would think that the suspension would stand.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question: May I ask the Provincial Secretary whether he might be in a position to make a statement that would clear up once and for all the status of those people who have been convicted and who have not yet had their licence recalled by letter from the Ministry of Transportation and Communications? There is a tremendous disagreement at the moment, and the Department of Transportation and Communications has informed me that those people are not entitled to drive after they are convicted in court. Yesterday the minister informed me that they were, until they received a letter. For goodness sake clear it up and make a statement so that people know where they stand.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, the question probably should more properly be directed to another minister. However, it is my information and my understanding—

Mr. Lewis: Why?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Who?

Mr. Lewis: Is the minister unsatisfactory?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No, this involves the registrar. It involves another ministry. But—

Mr. Singer: It is ridiculous to expect that the Provincial Secretary for Justice could know anything about law.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: But—

Mr. Lewis: Why doesn't he run federally?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member is interrupting me!

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): Better still, the member for Scarborough West should run federally.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: It is my understanding that if the judge does not make an order at the time the conviction is registered, and the licence of the accused is not asked for or picked up by the clerk or the police at the trial, then that person can drive until he is so advised by the registrar of motor vehicles.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Renwick: By way of a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview was on his feet first.

Mr. Singer: How can the minister say that, in light of the very specific provisions of the Highway Traffic Act, which provide that on a conviction for a long series of offences the licence is automatically cancelled at the time of that conviction?

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Forthwith, forthwith is the word!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I am not talking about a long series of offences. I am talking about, for example, the first conviction for impaired driving.

Mr. Bullbrook: That is one of the offences.

Mr. Singer: That is one of them.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: All right! But if—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: If the court does not make any type of declaration or order at that time—the time the conviction is registered—or if the licence is not picked up, it is not an offence to drive until he is so advised by the Ministry of Transportation and Communications.

Mr. Singer: Oh, come on!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: By way of a supplementary question, has there been any alteration in the procedures followed by the clerks of the provincial courts who, traditionally, on the arraignment of a person on a charge of impaired driving, will warn the person that upon conviction of the offence, the Highway Traffic Act provides that his licence will be suspended forthwith? And has there been any alteration in the procedures of the court that where a conviction is registered in the provincial court—

Mr. Bullbrook: The member has not been there for long.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Renwick:—by a provincial judge, the police officer in attendance in the court immediately takes the licence? Have instructions been issued altering those procedures, which have been in effect for a long time?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware that any instructions have been issued altering those procedures. The hon. member is correct in that a warning is given to the accused that upon conviction of that particular offence his licence may be suspended. It is the practice in most courts, but not in all courts, that the police or the clerk will pick up that licence immediately after conviction. All I am saying is that to my knowledge it is not an offence to drive until that is done or until the accused is so advised by the registrar of motor vehicles.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question—

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, if I may, by way of a further supplementary question, is the—

Mr. Singer: Tell them, Bert.

Mr. Renwick: Is the provision of the Code not couched in the phrase that the licence shall forthwith be suspended by the Minister of Transportation and Communications?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: In the Criminal Code?

Mr. Singer: That's in the Highway Traffic Act.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: In the Criminal Code?

Mr. Renwick: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No.

Mr. Renwick: No, in the Highway Traffic Act.

Mr. Singer: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. Roy: Would the Provincial Secretary then issue instructions to police officers in the courts who subsequently take the driver's licence immediately after conviction? Would he issue instructions then, in the light of what he has said, that they not do that; that they don't have jurisdiction to take the licence away immediately in court after a conviction?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The hon. member is misunderstanding me. They do have the right to take the licence away immediately after conviction.

Mr. Deans: Let's be consistent.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary, what is the minister's definition of the word "forthwith?"

Mr. Bullbrook: One ahead of "fifthwith."

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Forthwith is immediately. But I'm saying, Mr. Speaker, that the actual act—and this is my understanding of the procedure in the courts and of the Highway Traffic Act—of taking the accused's licence and so advising him of the suspension, is necessary before his licence is suspended or before his driving privileges are withdrawn. That has to be done.

I'm saying that in many cases the magistrate does not make any reference, in convicting the accused and fining him, as to his driving privileges. He leaves that, in many cases, up to the province or to the registrar or the minister.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: I think this is developing into an argument. There has been a reasonable number of supplementaries. Does the hon. the Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question of the Minister of Health: Can he comment on the statement, quoted in the London Free Press and attributed to his deputy minister, indicating that in the next year 1,200 to 1,500 hospital beds, worth more than $60 million, will be closed down or put into mothballs in response to the minister's decision that we are going to cut back on health care delivery costs?

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I wouldn't say that they would be closed down. What we are actually saying is—

Mr. Singer: They won't be open.

Mr. Lewis: The minister would say it is an acceleration in the rate of decrease.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Maybe the member would like to answer. Maybe I don't need to.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, we would like the minister to answer.

Mr. Deans: That's always an easy way out when the minister doesn't have the answer.

Hon. Mr. Potter: There are approximately 1,200 to 1,500 active treatment beds that we feel are not necessary at the present time for the proper care of patients, if existing facilities are properly utilized. What we are saying to the hospitals in many areas is that in their particular hospital they may have 20, 30, 40 or 50 beds that we don't feel are necessary to provide active treatment care. We're asking them to review their budget, to cut out the costs for those beds.

It's up to them to decide how they've going to make their savings. Some of these beds will be used for other purposes. They can be used for extended care facilities, or convalescent facilities, or some other type of care, a lower grade of care than that given an active treatment patient. In other cases there will be beds that will be closed, yes; but not all of them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Wouldn't the Minister of Health, as a good, practical, hard-headed, country doctor, recognize the results of his policy statement last week as the most atrocious kind of waste of public funds—either that or an indication of the worst possible kind of planning by his predecessors?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I find it rather unusual. I go back to—

Mr. Bullbrook: Like community colleges also!

Hon. Mr. Potter: I go back to 1967, 1968 and 1969—

An hon. member: He's just slowing down.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —when I was making speeches in this Legislature about the need of reviewing and revising the delivery of health services and the fact that we should use other types of facilities for treating our patients—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why didn't they listen to the minister then?

Hon. Mr. Potter: —and, at that time it was the opposition that thought it was a darn good idea. Now that I'm here, and I'm trying to implement these ideas, they're getting up and saying, why are you doing them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary of the minister: Wouldn't the minister agree that while his statement is probably worthy of applause, in that his own colleagues didn't listen to his recommendation it is also a fact that this is an outrageous waste of public funds amounting to, according to one estimate, $60 million because of inadequate planning on behalf of this administration?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, it's not a waste of public funds. The facilities are there and the facilities will be used in the future as the need arises; but at the present time, when the need is not there—

Mr. Bullbrook: The government built them and now they don't need them.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —we are not going to pay $60, $70 or $80 a day for facilities that we don't need to pay for.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, isn't—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary to the minister, those of us who were listening to the minister and applauding him would now like to know what the alternatives are that he has to offer to the arbitrary cutbacks which he's announced. What are these facilities going to be used for and what programme has he to offer to Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, the programme has already been announced. We have for several years now been developing a home care programme. Ninety per cent of the population of the Province of Ontario—

Mr. Lewis: Oh come on; where is the alternative? Where is the home treatment plan of Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Potter: —are now covered by this programme. We also have covered the nursing homes under our health insurance programme. We are encouraging the hospitals to develop a convalescent type of facility. We're experimenting and we have established some other types of facilities where we are leasing—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister hasn't got his heart in this answer.

Mr. Lewis: The minister has no alternative—

Hon. Mr. Potter: Oh yes we have; we have self care units. We have the alternatives if they are used properly.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia, with a supplementary.

Mr. Bullbrook: I don't have a further supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary here, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary from the hon. member for York North.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): I would like to ask the minister, will the plans that had been approved for new hospital facilities proceed as scheduled?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, they won't.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Too bad!

Mr. W. Hodgson: The minister means where there is a need, they won't proceed?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Potter: At the present time, no active treatment beds are proceeding except those that are in the—

Mr. Speaker: Only one hon. member may have the floor at a time.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Has the hon. member completed his questions?

Mr. Deans: He's struck speechless.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

The hon. member for York North asked a question. I understand the hon. minister did answer. I couldn't hear it but perhaps he did.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Well, yes and no.

Mr. Deans: Now the member knows what we are up against!

Mr. Foulds: You win some and you lose some.

Mr. W. Hodgson: I asked if where there were plans for active treatment beds would they proceed? I'm thinking mainly about Newmarket Hospital where the plans have been in the mill for a long time. Are they going to proceed?

Some hon. members: No.

Hon. Mr. Potter: If construction has started, they will proceed, yes. If construction hasn't started, we are taking a new look at all of the approvals to make sure there is a necessity for the active beds that were approved on the old formula.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. W. Hodgson: Well, the parking lot is in, I don't know whether the minister calls that construction or not.

Mr. Bullbrook: What does the member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson) say about that? He is so shocked with it he doesn't come to the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask the minister now whether he can present to this Legislature the alternative uses planned for the 1,200 to 1,500 beds, or the specific alternative programme for health care throughout the province? I do not want a vague reference to home care, which doesn't encompass more than a few thousand people, but an alternative to the indiscriminate cutbacks he is making.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the alternative will be decided by the local administrators and boards of governors in each specific case.

Mr. Deans: They won't have any money.

Hon. Mr. Potter: It's okay. When they give me the alternatives—

Mr. Lewis: What does the minister mean, it's okay?

Hon. Mr. Potter: —then I'll be able to give it to the House.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, what kind of planning—

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: All right. What kind of planning is involved in saying: 'We are cutting off 1,500 beds across the province and after we cut it off the administrators will decide what to do with what they have left'? Is the minister pretending that's planning the health delivery system? That's making a shambles of the health delivery system, and he knows that. It's ridiculous!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: A very good question.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

The hon. member for Scarborough West.

SOCIAL ALLOWANCES

Mr. Lewis: I have a question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker. As part of his new re-ordering of priorities in the province is he going to do anything about the level of social allowances, particularly those which fall under the Family Benefits Act; and if so, when can we expect some action?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, obviously this would be a matter of government policy and we are not prepared to make any statement on policy in that field at the moment; but we shall be fairly shortly.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, am I to understand that the government can save money on hospital beds and save money on university construction and spend $135 million a year on transit systems, but the Premier can't yet announce an upgrading in the level of social allowances for those within family benefits?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't really think that's what I said at all. If I can interpret my own answer, my own answer was that policy will be announced in due course.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question: Is the Premier aware that it is nearly 2½ years since the last upgrading of the allowances of social and family services? Is he aware there's been a 10 per cent increase in the cost of living in the same period and does he realize that those people can't possibly make ends meet on what they are getting now and face the most critical month of the year in terms of their commitment to their families in the case of mother's allowance? Why doesn't the government do something about it?

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): The member should talk to his unions about it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in a very brief answer, I'm aware of the facts, yes.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): But the government is not doing anything.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): The government is not doing anything.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West still has the floor.

HOME-CARE PROGRAMMES

Mr. Lewis: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Health: Can he tell the House how many home-care beds or units, or how many people were covered by home care in the province and are covered now and will be under his new scheme? Can he tell us that?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker, 90 per cent of the population of the province is covered now by home-care programmes.

Mr. Deans: What was that—90 per cent?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Of population.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, can the minister tell the Legislature the numbers of people in Ontario who receive subsidy for home-care plans as an alternative to hospital care at present, and what his plans are over the next two or three years?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I can't give the member those figures right now, Mr. Speaker, but I will be glad to get them for him.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, can the minister tell the Legislature precisely the number of beds he has planned by way of extension for chronic and convalescent care over the next two or three years?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker, there is no limit on that. They will be planned on an area's need. As the need arises in the various areas of the province, they will be provided.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, does the minister concede there are such needs presently existing?

Hon. Mr. Potter: There is no question there is a need for chronic beds in the province. We are in the process of meeting these needs at the present time.

Mr. Deans: After the need arises.

Mr. Lewis: Then could the minister tell me what the projected figure is for chronic care and convalescent care coverage over the next two or three years?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker, there is no projected figure. Again, it is a matter of need, and the need changes every year.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, can the minister tell me what the projected suggestions are by way of community medical facilities; and in which parts of the province and of which kind over the next two or three years?

Hon. Mr. Potter: There are no projected figures.

Mr. Lewis: Could the minister possibly tell me how he cuts back the way he does on hospital beds without having any available projection at his fingertips to share with the House and the province about the alternative methods of medical care delivery?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the hon. member is aware we have been speaking for a long time on the need for re-educating the citizens of Ontario to get away from the hospital-orientation type of care we have educated them to become accustomed to—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Come off the moralizing.

Hon. Mr. Potter:—over the past 40 years.

Mr. Lewis: Never mind the homilies.

Hon. Mr. Potter: We have also—

Mr. Renwick: It is not the minister's job to re-educate the public in that field. It is his job to provide the service and he knows it.

An hon. member: Nor is it the member's!

Hon. Mr. Potter: We've also, Mr. Speaker, been explaining the need for other types of facilities besides active treatment accommodation.

Mr. Lewis: Where are they?

Mr. Deans: They are not being provided.

Hon. Mr. Potter: There is nothing new about it. We've been speaking about it for a good many years.

Mr. Lewis: What are the minister's plans? The Ontario plans?

Mr. Bullbrook: There is no planning at all.

Mr. Lewis: There are no plans. He works around it.

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me this is developing into a debate, a full-fledged debate, rather than a question period. Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions?

SANDBANKS TECHNICAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development: Can he tell the House what the new technical committee looking into the sandbanks and the quarrying of sand by Lake Ontario Cement will be doing, what this technical committee will be doing that—what was the gentleman's name at the Royal Ontario Museum?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): Tovell!

Mr. Lewis: Tovell—that Mr. Tovell did not do?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I don't think, Mr. Speaker, from my recollection of the investigation by Dr. Tovell, that he met with the union and the organization of the workmen as such. It seemed to me appropriate, that there would be the possibility of some useful development in having the technical people, not at the scientific level but those at the working level—the ones who actually operated the machines and were physically involved in the process, whether it be with the overburden or with the sand—putting their opinions forward, either in contradiction of or complementary to those of the company and those of the more scientifically oriented that the government had at its disposal heretofore.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary, does the minister mean to say that Dr. Tovell, after all those months and the two or three days he spent on the site and the $3,000 he was paid for that four- or five-page report, did not consult with the workers or the company about the implications of what he was recommending to government? Are we now doing that after the event?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: I am sure he consulted, Mr. Speaker, but it still seemed to me, as I met today with these men who are actually operating the machines, that what they had to say about current weather conditions and the actual soils they were working with, was relevant. How much impact it will have, I can't say, but I thought it was something that was relevant and would not have been completely covered—and certainly couldn't be topically covered—by a scientific report such as that of Dr. Tovell.

METRO CENTRE PLAN

Mr. Lewis: One last question, Mr. Speaker, of the Premier, then I will take my seat.

Am I right in thinking that ownership has now been established of the 55 acres in downtown Toronto—I guess south of Front St. between Bathurst and Spadina—which are important to the Metro Centre development; and if so, who owns the 55 acres?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member wrote me about this and I just signed a reply to him this morning.

I would have to say that it is not that clear-cut; I wish it were. We are still in the process of sorting out who in fact does have ownership. As soon as we have this resolved, unless it has to go into some form of litigation, I shall inform the House.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, if it turns out, as some of us believe, that the government of Ontario owns the 55 acres, it will surely not quit-claim that tremendously valuable property, but either use it or sell it in the public interest. I presume that is true.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. member can assume that if in fact we do have ownership of that 55 acres approximately, we will certainly deal with it in the public interest. I can assure him of that.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, is the Premier prepared to guarantee that his government won't simply quit-claim it and hand it over to Metro Centre without any provision for compensation?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, before dealing with the hypothetical I think we should find out who in fact owns the land. I would repeat that we will certainly deal with it, if in fact we do have clear ownership to it, in a way that reflects the public interest.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member have further questions? The hon. member for Ottawa East.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General.

In view of the Premier's statement last week on the Fidinam matter, indicating a contract and indicating a political contribution of $50,000 to the Conservative Party, and in view of the fact that there is a Telex message which clearly links both of these matters—

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): Put the question!

Mr. Reid: It's coming, it's coming. Just sit there, Bill, it's coming.

Mr. Roy: In the light of these circumstances, Mr. Speaker, would the chief law officer of the Crown in this province indicate why he has not undertaken an immediate investigation, in view of the fact that there appears to be a clear breach of section 110 of the Criminal Code of Canada?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, there have been no facts brought to my attention that would indicate such a breach at all.

Mr. Roy: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the Attorney General familiar with section 110, subsection 2, of the Criminal Code of Canada?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Yes.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, under section—

Mr. Singer: No, no—a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary? The hon. member for Sarnia.

Mr. Bullbrook: Do we understand the Attorney General correctly that, given the facts in my colleague's question, he will not undertake an investigation to see if that section has been breached?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I said, Mr. Speaker, that there had been no circumstances brought to my attention that would indicate a breach of that section at all.

Mr. Cassidy: Did the Attorney General seek them out?

Mr. Bullbrook: So that we understand unequivocally, Mr. Speaker, one further supplementary: Do we understand the Attorney General correctly to say that he refuses to undertake—

Hon. Mr. Bales: I did not say that.

Mr. Bullbrook: Please let me finish—to undertake an investigation to ascertain whether there has been a breach of that section, given the facts premised by my colleague in his question?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member's colleague prefaced certain facts and said that, or indicated that they, under that section, constituted a breach and would require an investigation. What I said to the members was that no such facts had been drawn to my attention, insofar as I had ascertained, that would warrant an investigation in that matter.

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): The country bumpkins are at it again.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, would the Attorney General undertake to consult the law officers of the Crown and to advise the House at the earliest possible opportunity whether, in view of the facts that are now a definite part of the record, there has been a breach of section 110 of the Criminal Code?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I have no facts before me to indicate that, but we will always be willing to consider these matters if necessary.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Attorney General again if he will undertake to seek the opinion of the law officers of the Crown and advise the House of their opinion in this regard?

Mr. Speaker: That is a repetitious question. The hon. minister answered it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary, and it may be put as a point of order, the hon. minister has said no facts have been put before him. What constitutes putting facts before the Attorney General? The Premier himself has said that a $50,000 donation has been made, and the fact is not in question that there was Telex communication between the company and the head office in which the $50,000 was linked with the government decision to award the contract for the Workmen's Compensation Board to Fidinam.

Mr. Bullbrook: No question of that!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Now there is a relationship there which surely the Attorney General should investigate under the requirements of the Criminal Code.

Mr. Bullbrook: Did the minister read the questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What does he mean that no facts have been put before him?

Mr. Breithaupt: He isn't looking.

An hon. member: He hasn't seen the sheet.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the member is talking about a Telex message. None of that has been placed before me. I have read about it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, investigate it.

An hon. member: Ask for it!

Mr. Cassidy: Or the effect.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Just a minute. I have been—

Mr. Singer: If the body is lying on the ground and the minister hasn't seen it, can't he look for it?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Bales: I have said that I have not had those things put before me. I have made certain investigations myself as to the information in the stories in the newspaper.

Mr. Cassidy: We have no confidence in those investigations.

Hon. Mr. Bales: If necessary, we will certainly take whatever steps are necessary, with my chief law officers, to look into the matter.

Mr. Singer: What would make them necessary?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Members have raised the question. I have no hesitation in having our law officers look into that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister will undertake to do that?

Mr. Roy: What has he been waiting for?

Mr. Reid: Is that a commitment on his part?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I said to the hon. member for Ottawa East that those facts he was speaking about had not been drawn to my attention previously in reference to that matter.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: The government had three caucuses about them.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I have looked at the news clippings myself and I am satisfied from what I have seen that there isn't any. I am quite willing—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They are now brought to the minister's attention—

Hon. Mr. Bales: The Leader of the Opposition, if his colleague—

Mr. Cassidy: The member for Scarborough Centre told the minister about it.

Mr. Lewis: The member for Scarborough Centre submitted the facts to him weeks ago.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Drea: Don't put words in my mouth!

Hon. Mr. Bales: I am quite prepared, as I have said before, to look into these matters with my chief law officers and we shall do so.

Mr. Speaker: There has been a reasonable number—order! There has been a reasonable number of supplementaries, surely, on this question?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, surely it is possible for us to elicit from the minister not only that he will have the law officers investigate but that when he gets their report he will indicate to the House what their opinions are.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister may or may not reply to any question. There has been a reasonable number of supplementary questions. The hon. member for High Park is next.

Mr. Singer: He doesn't know about the Telex. Nobody brought it to his attention.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. Roy: I have a point of order.

I want to bring notice to you, Mr. Speaker, under standing order 27(g), that I am not satisfied with the Attorney General's response. In the light of that, I am giving notice that I intend to raise the subject matter of this question on the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for—

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, under standing orders I have to give you written notice prior to 4 o'clock, and this I am doing now.

Mr. Bullbrook: Be here for the debate.

Mr. Singer: The minister might even bring the Telex or bring Miss McDonald to explain.

Mr. Bullbrook: We'll bring the Criminal Code.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The hon. member has not raised a point of order but I do accept for consideration his written notice under standing order 27.

Mr. Singer: We might even have a look at Mr. Kelly at the same time.

An hon. member: Yes, bring him too.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park is next.

JUDGES TO REFUSE GIFTS

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): I have a question of the Attorney General, Mr. Speaker.

Can the Attorney General explain why his department, over the signature of one Mr. Callaghan, sent a letter to every provincial and county court judge ordering them in future not to accept any gifts, or rather not to accept any more gifts? I ask specifically what gifts had been accepted—or, perhaps I am using the wrong word—what donations had been given that prompted this particular letter?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the questions from the hon. member, that was a routine notice that went out to the various officials in the courts. Inadvertently it did go to the county judges and it was followed by a letter from the Deputy Attorney General regretting that. As a matter of fact quite a number of the county judges wrote back and thanked him for sending the letter.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Solicitor General has the answer to a question previously asked.

SECURITY GUARDS' LICENCES

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, on Nov. 24, the hon. member for Scarborough West asked the question:

A question, if I may, of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations: Can he indicate to the House why Intercon Security Ltd. was granted a security guards' licence just a few months ago in what appears to be a direct violation of section 10 of the Security Guards Act which does not allow for the transfer of licences—in this case from Canadian Specialized Security to Intercon Security Ltd.?

And by way of supplementary, in addition, could he allow the House to know why it is the policy of his government to allow open strikebreaking groups to traffic in security guard licences?

Mr. Speaker, on May 23, 1972, the solicitor for Canadian Specialized Security wrote to the registration branch of the OPP terminating the firm's licence under the Security Guards Act. Termination notices were also received for all individual employees. On July 6, 1972, the companies division of the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations processed a change of name from Canadian Specialized Security Ltd. to Intercon Security Ltd.

On July 7, 1972, an application was received by the registration branch of the OPP for an agency licence from Intercon Security Ltd. Mr. Brian Legge, who made the application, produced a sworn declaration that he was the sole director and shareholder of Intercon Security Ltd. He also produced a certificate of the amendment of articles, changing the name Canadian Specialized Security to Intercon Security Ltd. Mr. Legge stated at that time that he had purchased Canadian Specialized Security Ltd.

There was no transfer of licence involved in the transactions and therefore no violation of section 10 of the Private Investigators and Security Guards Act. Mr. Legge purchased Canadian Specialized Security Ltd., whose agency licence had been surrendered in May, 1972. He applied for and was issued a new agency licence in July, 1972, for the purchased company under its new name, Intercon Security Ltd.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary—I don't know to whom to direct my second supplementary, Mr. Speaker; I presume to this minister—surely he sees that for what it is: a pretty squalid little piece of foot shuffling where you transfer—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is that a question?

Mr. Lewis: Yes, it is—where you transfer Canadian Specialized Security to Intercon Security just by doing in one company and transferring it to the other. By way of a further supplementary—

Mr. Singer: What was the first supplementary?

Mr. Lewis: Why is the minister issuing licences to the associates of Richard Grange and Canadian Driver Pool, all of whose objects he knows to be professional strikebreaking in the province of Ontario, which the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) has condemned, which the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton) has condemned, and which the Attorney General has frowned upon? Why is he giving it to the same people to do the same thing?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, that is quite a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, it is.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That is actually a speech that we have all heard in this House on several occasions.

Mr. Cassidy: From the minister's own side.

Mr. Lewis: From the minister's own colleagues.

Mr. Deans: It seems a shame, doesn't it, that it has to be repeated week after week?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the difference between the hon. member on that side and myself on this side is that there is no reason—

Mr. Lewis: There's a lot of difference.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: —there is no reason in law that the applicant, Legge, should have been refused a licence under the relevant Act.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, for what reason then did the minister hold up the previous applications for licence of Canadian Specialized Security and related companies, knowing full well that getting into licensing them was licensing strikebreaking? Don't play games in the House. No reason!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I am not playing games in the House.

Mr. Lewis: Sure he is. He just said that—

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: A citizen of this province applied for registration under a statute passed by this House. There was no reason in law to refuse him. The hon. member keeps bringing in the activities of other people.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, well—no, your people brought them in.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Yes, as a matter of fact, I as the minister was the one who gave the consent to the prosecution of Richard Grange for the offence for which he was finally tried and a conviction was registered. I don't have to apologize for any attitude with respect to the position on the activities of those people.

Mr. Lewis: Well then, don't license strike-breaking companies.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: All I can say to the hon. leader of a party of this province is that a citizen of this province applied for a registration, there was no reason in law that he should be refused, and it was granted.

Some hon. members: Change the law!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: What yardsticks the members would use, I don't know. If it would be the whim of the leader of the NDP—

Mr. Lewis: We would outlaw strikebreaking; we would change the law.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: —as to whether anybody should be licensed, that is the point of view of his party and not of the party that I serve.

Mr. Renwick: Make regulations, make regulations!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: The Minister of Labour says so.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River, a supplementary question.

Mr. Reid: If I may, to the minister: In view of his answer, is his department or the Ministry of Labour going to bring in any legislation in regard to outlawing the kind of practices that Grange and these people have been conducting?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, that kind of question, of course, cannot be answered. We don't outlaw practices, we outlaw in the Legislature, certain specific matters which we relate to being offences. We haven't reached the point of outlawing practices.

Mr. Singer: That is certainly very clear.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Singer: Not practices, but certain matters.

METRO STADIUM

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): When does the Premier intend to release the completed report by Project Planning Associates dealing with the feasibility, desirability and practicability of constructing a stadium in Metro Toronto; or will this report be a casualty of the new government policy of deceleration of the rate of increased government spending?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can only assume from the manner in which the question was asked that the member for York-Forest Hill, with complete enthusiasm, supports a strong provincial commitment toward some form of stadium facility here in Metropolitan Toronto and I'm delighted to have his point of view. Having heard his point of view—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What's the Premier's?

Hon. Mr. Davis: —I would only say the report will not be released yet for a period of time; it will not be buried.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Now we know why the Premier's hearing is so acute.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury.

NEW TORONTO AIRPORT

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier: Does the recent announcement relative to elevated transportation, which made no reference whatsoever to planning for the Pickering airport, imply that the government is coming to its senses and downgrading the concept of North Pickering?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Of course, Mr. Speaker, this government is always at its senses as it relates to North Pickering and the possibility of a second international airport there. That is a matter, of course, for determination by the federal government. I understand that some of the hearings started yesterday or today. I'm not in a position to comment further as to their plans.

As far as we're concerned, the development of the new community will proceed. If by some chance the federal government postpones or does not build a second international airport—and I'm in no position to comment as to whether it will or will not—it is our intention to proceed with a planned community in that general area in any event.

It may have to be altered somewhat as it relates to the proposal for urban transit.

If the hon. member will recall carefully, and I'm sure he will, there was the final proposed line which was called the Finch line. I think if one projected that normally in an easterly direction, he would find that taken in that direction it would not be too far from North Pickering. Whether for the planned community or the airport is very hard to say, but there is no set line, and that was already, I think, included in the presentation that was made a week ago. So I would only say to the hon. member that I can't help him with respect to the international airport any more than to relate what I have read in the past few days in the press myself.

Mr. Speaker: The oral question period has expired.

BUSINESS CORPORATIONS ACT

House in committee on Bill 180, An Act to amend the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Chairman: Yesterday we proceeded as far as section 13, but I think the minister was going to give a short explanation of section 11. I have an amendment for 13 if—

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Renwick) asked a question yesterday pertaining to sections 9 and 11. I undertook to get back to the committee and to that particular member in response to his inquiry.

Sections 9 and 11 generally deal with the redemption of shares at the option of the shareholders, and with mutual fund shares. Briefly stated, as the Act now stands, every corporation must have a class of common shares; that is, shares which have no rights, preferences or restrictions attached thereto. Mutual fund shares, of course, carry the right of the shareholder to turn in his shares to the mutual fund and receive his proportion of the fund's then net asset value.

For mutual funds the requirement of an underlying class of common shares is a nuisance and, for their shareholders, potentially misleading. Section 11 of the bill clears this up and will permit a mutual fund to have a single class of shares. You will note, Mr. Chairman, that this class of shares must have full voting rights. If there is more than one class of mutual fund shares, at least one of the classes must have full voting rights. Section 9 of the bill provides the same end result and is designed for special or preference shares in closely held corporations.

Mr. Chairman, the hon. member also expressed concern about a possible run on the bank. I would point out that both the purchase by the corporation of its own special shares, and acceptance for surrender of mutual fund shares, are forbidden under the Act if the corporation is insolvent or the purchase by the corporation would render the corporation insolvent.

It simply relates, Mr. Chairman, to mutual fund shares, which the hon. member is aware of, and I am sorry I didn't have the answer at my fingertips. I didn't know the explanation until I inquired of my people.

Mr. Chairman: Is it agreed that we'll move to section 13?

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Chairman, yesterday, I was on my feet, prepared to ask some questions in extenso of what my colleague had brought to the attention of the minister with respect to a corporation purchasing the issued shares of its holding company and the peculiar exercise in lust, called "corporation incest," which he spoke about. I simply wanted to make wider and even possibly fairly cosmic remarks under this particular head.

If the hon. minister at any time has perused Kenneth Galbraith's book on the causes of the great Depression, in 1929 and 1930, his central core as to why that Depression came into being was because of interlocking shareholdings, particularly mutual funds, which were variegated and abundant at that particular time. But even with respect to the interlocking corporations and the holding of shares in each, there was an advancing of the cost of these shares, the writeups, by way of these purchases. In other words, by way of internal manipulations, it was possible to have shares greatly overvalued, and even watered stock, in this particular regard.

I think that this particular move on the minister's part is a contribution to that end—not a massive one, but to the extent that it exists it is a backward and retrograde move, as far as you are concerned. How do you answer the proposition?

There is no insolvency involved in the purchasing corporation, but there is a holding company which may be in a very bad financial condition. In order to rescue it, this particular operation takes place. What, in fact then, is your justification? What is your rationale for moving in on this particular area and permitting this insider—and you designate them insiders, as you must do, in the very process of this particular machination—what was the rationale behind permitting this particular operation, which can have very deleterious effects, generally, on the economy?

Mr. Chairman: I have an amendment to section 13, moved by Mr. Renwick, that subsection 2 of section 39 of the Business Corporations Act, as proposed by section 13 of Bill 180 be amended by deleting the words "or may purchase any of the issued shares of its holding body corporate."

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, the minister has not so far seen fit to reply to my question. What's the reason for this?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Firstly, I would like to speak to the matter raised by the chairman, if the hon. member for Lakeshore will allow me to make reference to the motion to amend brought by the hon. member for Riverdale yesterday. I have had an opportunity to consider the suggested amendment by the hon. member for Riverdale. There is a new subsection 5 in section 39, laying down the allowable methods of purchase. I am in agreement with the amendment as proposed. I have no reason to disagree with it.

With reference to the hon. member for Lakeshore's question, it is the opinion of my ministry that all of the required safeguards are built into section 39, hopefully, as amended per his colleague's suggestion. As the bill now stands, we suggest that it gives the desired flexibility, tied in at the same time with the rigorous safeguards to prevent any tumbling, or financial failure on the part of the corporation. These sections, I might add, are similar to the new federal business corporations law and, in as much as possible, we are attempting, if they are not in conflict, to have them coincide with the federal legislation.

Mr. Lawlor: Mr. Chairman, I do take a bit of exception. You speak of the built-in safeguards. Well, the safeguards, I suggest to you, are largely directed to purchasing shares from the common shareholders of the corporation. As to purchasing from the holding company, there's only one reference to that, and that's in clause (b) of subsection 5. It's not based upon a tender method. It isn't necessarily based at the best price. It says "from bona fide full-time employees and former employees of the corporation, or of the holding body corporate." The other restrictions are not applicable in that particular context. And again you're opening up a hornet's nest of difficulties, in my opinion.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, can the hon. member indicate why he feels that? I'm not convinced, from his remarks. Could he demonstrate what he means by saying how we're opening up a hornet's nest? I fail to appreciate the point you're trying to make.

Mr. Lawlor: It seems to me that you get an inflated value of shares if you're dealing with a subsidiary of a holding company. The manipulations that can take place between those two entities are very wide, particularly if the holding company is very closely held by one or two people. The example my colleague gave yesterday where the holding company is itself insolvent is a case in point to which you haven't directed any attention or given any reply as to what you think in that particular possibility and as to how you forfend against that. It would be a rescue operation of the holding company. All that you do in what you call the protective or conditioning sections is to reaffirm precisely what you did in the main part.

Those shares may be bought from bona fide employees and former employees of the holding company, as I read the subsection. Of course they would be. Where else would they be purchased from, that's where the shares are, but what surrounds that?

What gives any protection to the shareholders of the purchasing company over against either inflation on the side of the holding company or because of defects in the managerial operation of the holding company? It seems there isn't any protection.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I would presume that the shareholders of the holding company would know at the time of their purchase or investment in that particular company of the closely held asset of the subsidiary company, if that's the way the shares are held.

Mr. Lawlor: Held by the holding company.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Held by the holding company. I would suggest that any purchaser of any shares in any holding company take a look at the assets of that holding company, which includes its subsidiary or subsidiaries.

Now the concern you seem to express, as I understand it, is that the closely held shares are going to be inflated, bought for more than value by the holding company, and in effect the assets of the holding company are watered down because of the low value of the subsidiary assets or the shares that are purchased.

If the directors of that holding company carry out their statutory duties and their legal obligations, then I suggest that will not occur. If they do not—if they decide to work a fraud upon the shareholders of the holding company—then, of course, we can never legislate against fraud, we can only punish in the event that it's practised.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, the obvious point is the basic point that once a company within a group buys shares of its holding company, you have taken out of the group of companies the number of dollars required to purchase those particular shares.

Up until this amendment was proposed in this Act, I would have assumed that the preponderant body of legal opinion would have been that it was an unauthorized reduction of capital. Now for practical purposes, any well run organization that would exercise its right to purchase its own shares, would in fact cancel those shares, rather than hold them available for resale. This would permit the company that is the subsidiary or below the holding company to buy the shares of the holding company. There would be no obligation to cancel them.

The simple fact, Mr. Chairman, that we are trying to get across is that we've spent many, many years trying to rule out from the corporate law of this province the open doors for manipulation of corporate finances. We tried, in addition, to make it clear and simple and we've seen a series of intrusive amendments introduced into the bill which are going to bring back into our corporate law the very things which we did our very best to rule out.

Without this provision which we are proposing in this Act, it's not a matter of an open question as to whether it could be done; in the opinion of most practitioners in the province, it would be illegal. It would be illegal because it opens the door to the financial manipulation that my colleague, the member for Lakeshore, has spoken about.

I intend to refer to Prudential in another situation but one of the things that Prudential Fund Management did was not necessarily in terms of buying its own shares—in that case it couldn't because the law didn't permit it—but using one of its subsidiary companies. The debentures of Prudential were held by the subsidiary company, because if they had been held by the top company, the trust indenture required that they be cancelled and not reissued. They used that to continue and perpetuate the fraud.

It would be possible in this kind of a situation for a company to use a company below it or one that it controlled for the purpose of buying the top company's shares in the market, taking that number of dollars out of the group company operations on the one hand; and, secondly, permitting the company below to hold those shares and to resell them as and when it saw fit to do so. There is nothing in here that I know of which indicates what price those shares are to be sold at if the company below purchases the shares.

It says that they can only purchase them at certain prices and, heaven knows, one need not have that kind of provision in the statute. Everybody should know that a corporation doesn't go out on the market to buy a commodity of any value without a resolution of its directors. But when they have bought the shares there is nothing to indicate the price at which they may be resold.

Again, using my colleague, the member for Lakeshore as an example, I will posit a situation in which, if I were to buy shares of the holding company and I were a director of the holding company and those shares were sold to me at a price below the market rate, I would be subject to income tax on what I received because the corporation would have conferred a benefit upon me by allowing me to buy those shares at a reduced price.

Now if you take a company below the holding company, which owns some of the shares of the holding company, and my friend, the member for Lakeshore, is a director of the holding company, there is nothing in this statute or anywhere else that would preclude that company from conferring a benefit for whatever reason—and it may well be that it would consider it a legitimate reason—on my friend, the member for Lakeshore and in my view, he would be able to escape tax. He would not only be able to escape federal income tax—of which the members in this House might say, “Well, that’s his privilege”—he would be able to escape our proportionate share of that tax for income tax purposes.

I can’t, Mr. Chairman, stand here and speculate as to all the possibilities that a man like Samuel Insull was able to dream up for the purpose of using manipulative provisions of corporate law for his own ends. I think we have given sufficient indication of the seriousness of the matter unless there is a specific request that has been made to the government by somebody, which the minister is prepared to read out to us so that we can consider why the request was made and to be certain that it has some substance to it rather than this nebulous wish for additional flexibility.

I am saying, Mr. Chairman, to the House, to the minister, to the men who have assisted so very much in the improvement of our corporate law in this province that this is not flexibility! This is opening the door to manipulation and there is absolutely no reason for it.

When one says that any corporate law book would tell you that without this provision it is illegal, I want to know why we are going to make legal something which is today illegal in this province, under an Act that we have spent an immense amount of time trying to get straightened out so that it will be a sound basis on which we can operate the corporate law of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Chairman, I support the position the two previous speakers have taken. I have never heard of any pressure or good reason why we should be making this new provision. It seems to me very important that—

Mr. Lawlor: The Canadian Bar Association wants it.

Mr. Deacon: —we eliminate these opportunities for corporate manoeuvrings to be carried out that can give advantage to outsiders, to the general public. I would hope that the minister would reconsider carefully the opportunity that he is now providing those who would like to manipulate to their own advantage.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, any purchase, as I read section 5— and I won’t read the whole thing—but where a corporation purchases shares under subsection 2, then going back to subsection 2 it is my understanding that there are certain safeguards pertaining to a corporation carrying on that type of practice.

The safeguards are: That the corporation must be solvent; private deals are prohibited; no voting or receipt of dividends; the corporation becomes an insider, it must disclose the purchase in its annual financial statement. And I hate to sound like a broken record but I have been asked to give the source or the group making this request and it was the Ontario subsection of the Canadian Bar Association that made that request in a submission to the ministry.

Mr. Lawlor: Now you become servile. Incredible!

Hon. Mr. Clement: Well, they demonstrated to my—

Mr. Lawlor: I wouldn’t trust those corporation tax lawyers.

Hon. Mr. Clement: —ministry at that time that you cannot legislate against immorality. You cannot legislate against fraud. You can only take those steps which you hope will preclude that from happening. You don’t like to set things up in such a way that people are tempted to follow this type of activity.

But I suggest to the hon. members that many of the matters which concern them here today—and I am not scorning them for their concern, I am grateful for their comments—are dealt with in the existing securities legislation. I am not prepared to discuss the securities legislation today, but I think some of the practices that some of the hon. members have described are in fact expressly prohibited by the securities legislation.

Should a company offering its shares to the public decide to embark on such a course as described, then once that course became known to the Securities Commission, steps would be initiated immediately to stop trading, to investigate, and if necessary to carry out certain criminal procedures against those who had worked such a hoax on the public. I stress that it is the securities legislation into which these guidelines and guards are built and if we put the same thing into our Business Corporations Act then we are only duplicating the legislation, and I suggest that we are completely emasculating it by the duplication.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, I don't accept the last argument given by the minister about it being in the Securities Act. There are many shareholders in this province to whom the Securities Act doesn't apply because their shares are in private corporations and stock trading doesn't affect them at all.

The companies are not offering the shares to the public. They are small, private companies where some who are in the control position can manipulate to their advantage. I think they are the ones we particularly want to take care of. So often you will find, due to some family situation, a minority group is out in left field. What we are doing is allowing others to take advantage of them.

I still can't understand the basic reason for the request of the Ontario chapter of the Canadian Bar Association for this change. I haven't seen any great need for it and would urge the minister to drop this.

Mr. Lawlor: I don't want to labour this, and this is the last time I will speak. I suggest to you that the Canadian lawyers submitting these submissions are part of the incest.

I have yet to hear from the minister, or from any source, what the purported advantages are of permitting this extension of the principle. I suppose it must be an analogy of the business of corporations buying their common stock, which, as was said yesterday, was taboo, in the immediate past but is opened up with safeguards. But this is a vast extension of the principle since it applies to closely allied corporations. I suspected that the minister was going to argue that the stock has to be purchased at the lowest possible price. But I suggest that is no safeguard either. Simply because of the number of people involved in most of these things, that manipulation is very easily overcome.

It is a retrograde step. And if the minister, carte blanche, accepts submissions from outside bodies who are self-interested in this regard, I don't think that is a very good reason; it may even be to some extent a dereliction on his part. That is why I would have loved to have this thing outside this House so we could hear these representations. Perhaps good points could be made. But on what the minister has presented to us thus far—he simply says that the self-interested people have presented this to him, he bows his head; he can see no reason against it, nor can he see any particular reason for it.

We can see reasons against it. They have to do with the whole economic structure, the intertwining of corporations and the cascading house of cards that is sometimes created by the purchasing of each other's shares back and forward. And while there are Securities Act provisions that make disclosures, if it is a very tightly held corporation, even if it is a public company, the disclosures are known by those involved. These boys know what they are doing; they devised the manipulations.

Why does the minister open the door to manipulations of this particular kind without having the most trenchant reasons for doing so?

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I think that the committee should make a real distinction between so-called public companies and private companies; that is, those offering their shares for sale to the public and those which are not. Perhaps for purposes of this debate we can distinguish them as private and public companies as we knew them in the past.

This legislation, as I understand it, is not in any way intended to create or preserve rights for minority shareholders in privately held companies, and I think that we are premature if we feel that is the purpose of this legislation. I am hopeful that the select committee on corporation law will bring in certain recommendations in the not too distant future that will protect the minority shareholder in a private company or a company not offering its shares for public sale.

Insofar as those companies offering their shares for private sale are concerned, which is what I am relating this debate to this afternoon, I put it to the hon. members that the shareholders in the minority position—and, goodness knows, in large companies there are many of them; most of them are in minority positions—have these safeguards built in, do have the securities legislation protecting them, do have the policing of the marketplace by the Securities Commission, in addition to those volunteer policings that are carried on daily by the particular stock exchange involved.

I did not personally play a part in the discussions with the Canadian Bar Association at the time this section was drafted—and I think the hon. members will appreciate that I did not possess the portfolio at that time—but my understanding of it is that, in view of all these safeguards, the Canadian Bar Association in its wisdom and experience felt that it would give greater flexibility to the companies involved, and I fail to appreciate the problems that have been described to me by the hon. members in view of my comments.

Mr. Chairman: No more comments on section 13? Since there are more amendments to come, is it agreeable that we stack the amendments and vote—

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I am agreeable to stacking that amendment, but the member for York Centre wants to speak.

Mr. Deacon: I still don't understand from the minister's comments why he felt that it was not necessary to look after the interests of minority shareholders in companies not offering their shares to the public, why it was not necessary to take care of situations such as the one I mentioned, say a family company where some of the people were on the outs with the group in control, and manipulations of this sort would be possible under this new legislation. I have been trying to look after those people. The general public, I accept, is looked after by the Securities Act, but aren't we concerned in this Act with the private company basis?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, there is no question about it. There is an obligation on us as members of this House to look after the rights of as many groups as we can, including minority groups in private companies and minority groups in public companies.

At the time that the bill was prepared it was my understanding that a select committee dealing with corporation law was in fact already constituted and embarked on its studies, which primarily related to takeovers, mergers and amalgamations and then on a secondary study, or an ancillary one, dealing with loans and trust companies.

In the course of the hearings of this select committee, I think it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of those of us who served on it by minority people in private companies that there were in fact certain practices being made against them resulting in harm to them, direct financial harm. We got submissions in writing to this effect describing certain practices. We also had the opportunity of having a woman attend before that committee and describe to us in some detail how she felt, because of the minority position in a private company, that she held that she had to sell her shares to the majority shareholder, in effect at a price less than their true value.

This bill does not profess to correct that situation, because I suggest to you that the matter is extremely involved and that the select committee has it under very active consideration at this time. I will not describe the matters that have crossed our minds on the select committee, but they are very much aware of it. I am convinced that the select committee will demonstrate its concern in its recommendations, whatever they might be.

A minority shareholder never really has any difficulty in his minority position if he or she enters into a shareholder's agreement at the time he embarks on the venture with the majority shareholder. But your knowledge of human beings and mine are such that people always start these ventures in a very optimistic way. Everything is going to be successful; everyone is going to be happy. They say, "I don't need an agreement with my partner," as they always refer to them, and of course those are the ones that go astray. There are hard feelings created. Then the minority person for the first time in that private company wakes up to the fact that he has no market for his stock, other than his majority bedmate with whom he has probably now become alienated.

We were very much concerned about it. I suggest, because of the study which has now been going on by the select committee—and that particular area of study has been pretty much concluded and we are now awaiting its report—that that situation will be looked after in that report, I am concerned about it, because I am sure that the hon. member for York Centre and myself and other members of this House know of many instances where this sort of thing has occurred. I think it is incumbent upon us now, once the select committee makes its recommendations, that we enact legislation to protect that sort of individual. I suggest at this particular point today that that is not our concern because of this other study and because the minority shareholder in the public company or the company offering its shares for sale, and the public are protected by the terms of this particular section as well as the overseeing policing by the Ontario Securities Commission.

Mr. Chairman: Any further discussion on section 13?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I just want to refer briefly to that section of the original report of the select committee on company law in 1967, section 5.2.9, in which this matter was concluded in a chapter related to it. We were all in favour of abolishing what is known in law as the rule in Trevor v. Whitworth.

My leader, the member for Scarborough West (Mr. Lewis), joined in the desire to abolish the rule in Trevor v. Whitworth, and I am sure many other members of the House are equally interested in abolishing that rule. But it then went on very carefully to make certain that it did not include in the provisions which we recommended, this provision related to the purchase of shares of its holding company by a corporation. There is no specific reference in the recommendations of the select committee on that question.

There is a specific reference to the fact that the outstanding common shares which are reacquired by a company under the recommendations we made—that they should be permitted to acquire their own shares—may either be retained as treasury shares or cancelled by the directors, except that common shares solely acquired out of capital shall be cancelled upon the acquisition. It was an attempt to indicate quite clearly that if the common shares were reacquired out of surplus they could be held and resold again; if they were reacquired out of capital they had to be cancelled upon reacquisition.

By the introduction of this provision—which I thought in discussions with the select committee had clearly been pointed out should not be included—what we in fact have is that the lower company, because the upper company is precluded from doing so because it would have to cancel them if it did buy them out of capital, is now permitted to buy them and then not to cancel them but to resell them. You get that problem, that what the holding company couldn't do without cancelling the shares which it reacquired, we are now allowing the other company to do—to buy them and resell them—because in their case it would not be a question of an obligatory requirement to cancel.

That's why the Canadian Bar Association wanted to do it—it makes life easier for them, but it doesn't solve the fundamental problem that where in the one case there would have to be a cancellation of those shares and a recognition that it was a reduction of capital, a way can now be found by the use of this system to circumvent what the select committee recommended. In recommending the abolition of the rule in Trevor v. Whitworth they did not positively assert—indeed did not wish to assert—the other consequence of the abolition of that rule; namely that a company could buy the shares of its holding company, which now, some long time later, has come back into the statute.

I can't say that I'm any happier with it now than I was when I first rose yesterday to oppose the inclusion of this additional right in a company.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have no further comments to offer on this particular section, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Thank you.

Mr. Renwick: We would prefer to stack the vote on that motion if that is agreeable, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Section 14 then, please.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, dealing with section 14, I move that section 14 of the bill be amended by deleting section 41 of the Act as set out therein, and the following substituted therefor:

Where a corporation purchases its issued common shares under subsection 2 of section 39, accepts a donation of any of its shares under section 43, purchases any of its shares under section 100, or resells them, the corporation shall be deemed to be an insider in respect of the purchase or resale and sections 148 to 152 apply to the purchase or resale.

This is a housekeeping amendment. This deems the corporation and insider in respect of any shares donated to it, or purchased by it, upon a shareholder's exercise of his appraisal rights; in addition to the present provisions attaching to the purchase of its own issued common shares.

I am presuming that my friends in the other parties have a copy of this amendment. If not, I will certainly see that one is made available to them right now. Perhaps they may wish a moment to look at it.

Mr. Chairman: Do any of the hon. members wish to speak to this amendment to section 14?

Mr. Renwick: We accept the amendment, Mr. Chairman, whatever that acceptance is worth to the minister.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Anything I get from my friend across the way is worth quite a bit to me, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lawlor: What the minister is doing, I take it, is spelling out in greater detail and making it very specific who the insider is. Isn't that right?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes.

Mr. Chairman: Does the amendment carry? Carried.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Just on a point of order before we proceed.

The hon. member for Riverdale indicated that his party wanted to stack the previous amendment. But it is my understanding that the chairman should put the amendment to a vote as far as the "ayes" and "nays" are concerned; and then if it's requested that there be a division, that it is stacked. I mean, actually that motion has not been put—and I think it should be put before we go any further.

Mr. Chairman: I appreciate the assistance of the hon. Leader of the Opposition. It was my understanding that they had all been stacked. That's my error.

So I would like to suggest then, in order to assist me in this House, then, that we vote on Mr. Renwick's motion that subsection 2 of section 39 of the Business Corporations Act, as proposed by section 13 of Bill 180, be amended by deleting the words, "or may purchase any of the issued shares of its holding body corporate."

All those in favour please say "aye."

Those opposed?

The "nays" have it.

The amendment is defeated.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, we would then stack that motion.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The hon. member needs five guys to stand up.

Mr. Renwick: Come on, stand up then.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): They always have fun.

Mr. Chairman: There will be a standing vote, which will be stacked.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We can never be sure whether it is a matter of principle with our friends, or not.

Mr. Lewis: Everything is a matter of principle—higher principle or lower principle.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 14, as amended, carry?

Carried.

Anything before 17, please?

Mr. Minister, you have an amendment on section 17, please.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes, Mr. Chairman.

I move that section 17 of the bill be amended by substituting for the word, "security," in paragraph (1) of clause (c) of subsection 1 of section 57 of the Act, the words "security interest."

I also move that section 17 of the bill be further amended by deleting subsection 2 of section 57 of the Act, as therein set out, and substituting therefor the following:

Sections 57 to 62 apply to a trust indenture, whether entered into before or after the date on which this Act comes into force, if, in respect of any of the debt obligations outstanding or guaranteed thereunder, or to be issued or guaranteed thereunder, a prospectus or securities exchange takeover bid circular has been filed under the Securities Act, or any predecessor thereof, or in respect of which a prospectus has been filed under the Corporations Information Act, or any predecessor thereof.

The word "security," Mr. Chairman, is a defined term in the Act, meaning a share, a bond, a debenture or note. The correct reference in section 57 of the Act, is to a security interest. We have added in that section 2 the following words: "or securities exchanged, takeover bid circular". That is the purpose of the amendment to that section. They've been added to bring within the scope of the Act debt obligations issued pursuant to a takeover bid, as well as those issued pursuant to a prospectus.

Mr. Chairman: All those in favour of the amendment?

Section 17, as amended, carried.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, on clause 17—I'm not going to move an amendment in connection with the matter—I think it's very important that the minister and the members of his department who have responsibility in this field make certain if securities are, in fact, issued as provided under this section in the Province of Ontario, that the co-trustee is, in fact, a co-trustee, if there are two of them.

I think we must be very careful to make certain that this is not used as a device for having the principal trustee, for example, in

New York City and only a nominee trustee for the purpose of conformity in the Province of Ontario. I think it was the intention when this section was introduced into the bill—that is subsection 3 of the proposed section 57—that it be perfectly clear that there be a responsible trustee resident or authorized to do business in the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Chairman: Has the minister an amendment to section 18?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I have just one comment before moving the amendment. In yesterday's debate, the hon. member for Riverdale appeared very much concerned by the phrase "conditions precedent, if any," provided for in the trust indenture on page 8 of the bill, in the fourth line in the new section 60. We have taken his comments somewhat under advisement. It seems to be a question of drafting. I'm quite agreeable to deleting the words "if any" if there is general agreement on it. I don't wish to make it a purpose of debate. I think there is a drafting problem there.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The member for Riverdale is a meticulous grammarian.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Oh, he's always been a respectable fellow as far as I'm concerned! Now, dealing with the—

Mr. Lawlor: He was not swearing at him.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't understand that big language. I'm just a country boy at heart.

Mr. Lawlor: Don't put on that hayseed air.

An hon. member: We get enough of that from the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter).

Hon. Mr. Clement: I move that section 18 of the bill be amended by deleting the word "security" from where it appears in the seventh line of section 59 and substituting therefor the words "security interest." I also move that section 18 of the bill be amended by inserting after the words "the evidence" in the first line of subsection 2 of section 60 of the Act, the words "of compliance."

My comments with reference to this are that since the word "security" is a defined term under the Act, meaning a share, bond, debenture or note the proper reference would be the words "security interest." The second amendment that I proposed brings subsection 2 of section 60 into line with the wording of subsection 3 and subsection 1.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?
Carried.

Mr. Renwick: On clause 18 in order to draw attention to my concern I used the presence in the statute of the two words "if any" to illustrate my concern, but in no way will the deletion of those words alleviate that concern. I want to take a minute or two just simply to try to express my concern again to the Legislature.

Mr. Chairman, the basic problem is that unless we require that there be conditions precedent to the taking of the action which is set out in the proposed section 60 of the bill, or unless we are certain that those conditions precedent are adequate for the purpose of carrying out those actions which are set out in the proposed section 60 of the bill, then we are going to have the identical situation which existed at the time of Prudential Finance. I want to take a minute to point that out to the Legislature.

Back in 1936 the Securities and Exchange Commission, when faced with this problem, conducted a number of studies on the matter. It came to the conclusion that trustees under these indentures be disqualified from acting or serving if they have or acquire conflicts of interest incompatible or inconsistent with their fiduciary obligations. And, of course, we picked that up in the bill and it's continued in the proposed amendments to this section in that bill.

But it then went on to say that they be transformed—that is the trustees—into active trustees, with the obligation to exercise that degree of care and diligence which the law attaches to such a high fiduciary position. It points out, of course, that in the exercise of trustee functions under personal trust that's a very high standard.

What we have arrived at here in the Business Corporations Act as it presently exists, is an indication that if a trust indenture—and I said yesterday the language is not all that elegant but it was intended to indicate and in my judgement was clear enough to indicate—that if there were a trust indenture that omitted conditions precedent to the taking of certain action by the company with the approval of the trustee, or if those conditions precedent were not adequate there was, in the language of the Business Corporations Act as it now exists, an opportunity for the trustee to require additional or other evidence.

Again I stress the fact that it was not elegantly stated, but the provisions with respect to the trustee were not all hinged upon him simply complying with the elements that were in the trust deed precedent to the taking of this action. He had to exercise some kind of judgement with respect to whether he would or would not take the action.

Now I'm saying that the whole of section 60, which is quite a lengthy one, falls completely apart—with the exception of two minor parts which have nothing to do with the point that I'm trying to make—if in fact the trust indenture's provisions are inadequate and insufficient. It's no answer to that to say that most trust indentures are adequate. If they are adequate, there's no problem in legislating the minimum requirements to make certain that all trust indentures have adequate provisions in them.

I want to refer briefly to the opinion which the then chairman of the Ontario Securities Commission obtained on this very question at the time of the debacle in Prudential Finance. And this is the opinion of Messrs. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt given to the chairman of the Ontario Securities Commission on Sept. 22, 1967. The chairman of the commission had asked specifically for that firm's opinion in a letter of Aug. 21, 1967, which asked specifically the questions whether the creditors of the company, that is, Prudential Finance, both secured and unsecured, or any of them, have any cause or causes of action and, if so, what against the Metropolitan Trust Co., the trustee for the debenture holders and secured note holders. It went on to ask for other opinions.

The firm of Messrs. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt then replied to that in the opinion to which I've just made a reference. It has this to say:

The trust indentures to which Prudential Finance was a party and in which Metropolitan Trust Co. was the trustee are as follows:

And they listed the three particular trust indentures. Then they went on to say:

As pointed out at page 26 and following in the report of Messrs. Clarkson Gordon and Co., the Clarkson report transmitted to you by a letter dated March 8, 1967, that trust indentures are deficient in provisions to protect the creditors. In this connection we understand that Metropolitan did not negotiate with respect to the provisions of the trust indentures but simply executed the trust indentures as submitted.

This is not an unusual practice for corporate trustees. However, this raises the obvious question as to whether the law imposes any duty upon a person about to undertake the position of a trustee under an instrument of this type to negotiate for or otherwise require the introduction of such protective provisions. We have not encountered any law that imposes any such duty.

Clarkson, in its report, to which the reference is made in the opinion of Messrs. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt had this to say

The trust indentures contained a provision setting a maximum relationship of secured indebtedness to subordinate capital as defined but did not otherwise place any limits on the total amounts of securities that Prudential Finance could issue. Financial covenants ordinarily required by investment dealers and institutional investors were not contained in the trust indentures. There was no restriction upon the payment of dividends.

The indentures did not require Prudential Finance to maintain any financial ratios often found in trust deeds of finance companies and it does not appear that the indentures defined what actions constituted default. The trust indentures placed extremely limited obligations on the trustee and required the trustee to accept the instructions of the company in respect of a number of matters.

The provisions of the trust indenture for the secured notes required the company annually within 120 days to have an examination and audit of its accounts and affairs and to furnish the trustee with the report of the audit upon completion of the auditor's examination. The trust indentures did not require Prudential to supply the trustee with interim financial information as to its financial statements except for such statements as it supplied to its shareholders.

The point is perfectly clear, that the Prudential Finance trust indenture under which Metropolitan Trust Co. was the trustee was very deficient in protective provisions with respect to the persons who might ultimately become the holders of those securities. If we were to permit the amendment, as it now stands, to pass by the House, it would mean in substance that we would be in the same position in the Province of Ontario that is stated as being the legal position as set out by the firm of Messrs. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt. I want to repeat that clause:

In this connection we understand that Metropolitan did not negotiate with respect to the provisions in the trust indenture. This is not an unusual practice for corporate trustees. The trust indenture provisions are deficient in provisions to protect the creditors. However, this raises the obvious question as to whether the law imposes any duty upon a person about to undertake the position of a trustee under an instrument of this type to negotiate for or otherwise require the introduction of such protective provisions. We have not encountered any law that imposes any such duty.

If I may just briefly again, Mr. Chairman, refer to the interim report of the select committee on company law in 1967, there was a provision which dealt with this matter.

The conclusion of the committee was that if parties to indentures cannot or do not strengthen and upgrade indenture provisions designed to protect the investor, the Legislature will have no alternative but to do by law what could more flexibly be accomplished by strengthening the indenture provisions in the interest of the security holders. We pointed out at that time that the trustee, as such, was a trustee for all of the holders of the obligations pursuant to the terms and conditions of the indenture.

Having put that on the record, I would like to summarize as concisely as I can what I have been endeavouring to say. We have in the provision of this clause 18 continued, as naturally we would, the duty of the trustee. That duty is expressed to be that the trustee shall exercise that degree of care, diligence and skill that a reasonably prudent trustee would exercise in comparable circumstances.

We had the opinion of Messrs. Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt which indicates very clearly that the extent of that degree of care as set out in that particular section of the Act is a very limited degree of care in situations such as this. In the sections which I have quoted they have not encountered any law that imposes any such duty on the trustee other than the duties with respect to the instrument. As is sometimes colloquially stated, he is a trustee of the instrument and not a trustee with respect to the creditors.

His only obligations are tied four-square within the terms of the indenture; if the indenture provisions are deficient all he has to do is to comply with whatever those provisions are. He has no affirmative obligation where there are deficient provisions or where provisions which should be contained in the trust indenture are not there. There is no legal obligation on him to see that the creditors are protected.

The result was exactly what happened in the Prudential Finance case and many, many people in the Province of Ontario, as the minister knows, were severely hurt financially in the losses which occurred under that provision.

Again for about the sixth or seventh time I refer to the inelegant language of the existing Act; but it is language which satisfied me that it accomplished what we wished. In that Act it said "Pursuant to any covenant, condition, or other requirement of the trust indenture," then it had these words: "or required by the trustee to be furnished to him in exercise of his rights and duties under the trust indenture."

That was a step toward the imposition on the trustee of that obligation referred to in the report of 1936, adopted by the select committee here in 1967, that there was, without imposing an unduly onerous role on the corporate trustee, an active obligation on him if there were deficient provisions in the trust indenture to which he was the trustee.

It would appear to me, Mr. Chairman, that what we want to avoid is a situation in which we are going to have to try in this Legislature to legislate minimum provisions for trust indentures. I think that is not a wise position for us to find ourselves in. I think the appropriate position for us to find ourselves in is the position which we were headed toward. This, in substance, was embodied in the present Business Corporations Act. It would indicate that if the trust indenture were in substance deficient in those normal precautionary clauses and provisions which exist in corporate trust indentures, that the trustee had of necessity to take an active position. He had to make certain that he wouldn't do any of the acts which required him to be satisfied as to the state of the company until he asserted his right to obtain reasonable information along the lines which he, as a corporate trustee with his knowledge of the operations of the financial community in the Province of Ontario, in downtown Metropolitan Toronto, would know were usually required in such cases. And to give a warning to anyone else who assumed the role of corporate trustee without adequate background and knowledge about it, that there was some positive obligation on him to deal with the matter.

The problem has arisen, Mr. Chairman, because there has been a transition from the position of trustee under the common law of England, exercised in the Court of Chancery, which indicated that the obligations of a person who assumed a role of trustee was of a high fiduciary order. It made no never mind to the Court of Chancery whether it was what could be called a personal trust or a testamentary trust, or whether it was obligations assumed by those persons in that kind of business with respect to creditors of companies holding bonds and other documents issued under trust indentures.

And you can still go to England and see that the equitable principles established by the Court of Chancery, still permit the business section of the City of London—the investment banking community and spread throughout the customs of that financial community—trust indentures which contain very, very few pages. They rely upon the active responsibility of the trustee not only to supervise that the pieces of paper operation of the trust indenture are complied with, but that the basic substance of protection exists for the security holders.

In the United States, for historical reasons, this tradition grew up of saying that the trustee had to act if he received certain specific pieces of paper; but otherwise he was not under any obligation other than to examine those pieces of paper and see that they were all right.

In the Province of Ontario we got caught between the two stools. There tended to be, in the corporate trust world, a movement toward the United States' method. That is, if you were acting for a corporate issuer and you had a trust indenture, and you went to the trustee and said you wanted to issue more bonds or debentures, or secured notes under this indenture, all you had to do was produce the right pieces of paper, and he was under an obligation to issue those securities.

You therefore meticulously prepared these voluminous pieces of paper and had the appropriate officers—usually someone down the line in some company—sign these statements; because otherwise the president of the company would be asked to sign things that no president in his right mind would sign.

You then took the pieces of paper across to the trustee and more or less said: "Here they are; now you issue them."

He took the papers and examined them. If he was satisfied that they meticulously followed not the spirit of the trust indenture but the actual technical language of the trust indenture, he then issued the security. His fiduciary obligation over and above that responsibility was gradually whittled away.

Some of the trust companies continued to have some sense of that obligation. They were usually considered a nuisance by those who were engaged in the actual operation of trying to issue the bonds and get them sold. Others of them tended to simply accept it as part of the practice of the business. As the Osler, Hoskin firm says, it was not unusual for a trustee presented with a trust indenture just to sign it and go about his business, collect his fees and do the steps which had to be taken relying upon the likelihood that it is not usually the language of the trust indenture that pays the principal and interest on the bonds anyway.

That's the kind of brainwork which was disastrous for the financial community in the Province of Ontario in a number of instances. I happen only to have referred to Prudential Finance, but I am saying to the minister that we should not alter the provisions of the section as it now appears, even though it may be more orderly. I approve of the clarity of the transfer of the sections because it makes a little more sense and in practice it has worked out, but we have taken out—and I am quite certain taken out at the request of the trust companies—that very specific obligation which we endeavoured to impose for the purpose of ensuring the security of the financial markets of Ontario by making sure that there was some reasonably sound positive role which the corporate trustee had to take.

I am not suggesting that he is to hold the hand of every creditor and I am not suggesting that he is the trustee of the funds and I am not suggesting that he in some way or other has to interfere with the operations of the company. All I am saying is that within the best corporate finance brackets, as practised by the institutional investors, the top ranking investment dealers in Toronto, the top ranking corporate law practitioners, the top ranking chartered accountancy firms, that the protections which the marketplace has built up are essential to the protection of security holders.

If we do not make certain that the corporate trustee, with his tradition of a high fiduciary obligation, carries out his role in that complex mechanism of the raising of capital and the distribution of it which is the guts and the heart of what the financial community is all about, then in this Corporations Act we will be leaving ourselves open to a very serious possibility somewhere along the line of the same kind of problem, either in the same magnitude, a lesser magnitude or a greater magnitude, that occurred in Prudential Finance taking place.

The fact of the matter is that in the Prudential Finance case it was so long after the trustee could have intervened that he felt obligated to intervene, when he did intervene it was just too late. I say this because I have used the name Metropolitan Trust, not in any criticism of that particular firm, but talking about the way in which the financial markets were operating at that time.

At that time one of the first indications that the note holders of Prudential got was a letter from the Clarkson company—this was before they were retained by the government to make the report to which I referred—in which the Clarkson company said to the note holders of Prudential: "The Metropolitan Trust Co., in its capacity as trustee for the note holders, recently approached the Clarkson company and requested its assistance in reviewing the affairs of Prudential in order to determine what action if any should be taken in the interests of the note holders."

That letter, of course, really meant that at the very last of this series of disastrous events the trustee got himself up and took an active step by consulting the Clarkson Company. Having done that, and with the opinion of the Osler, Hoskin firm, the law imposed no other obligation on him. Indeed, he wasn't even required to do this.

Therefore, I'm saying to the minister that somewhere in these sections we've got to have adequate provisions which ensure in the first place, for the corporate trustee accepting a trust indenture, that it does have the normal provisions which are accepted in the sophisticated financial market as being the kind of protective provisions that should protect the creditors. If they are not in existence in the trust indenture which he is administering as corporate trustee, the trustee must have a statutory obligation not to issue further securities, release mortgage property or take other steps which are involved in the day-to-day operation of these trust indentures without having the authority to ask for the information which he would normally request and normally get under a properly drawn trust indenture.

That's all that I'm asking. I'm not asking for some ultimate guarantee of responsibility by the trustee. But I am asking him to say that, in the best tradition of a secure financial market, every creditor who has purchased securities of a company under a trust indenture is entitled to say, whether the trust indenture provisions are adequate or not, that that trust indenture trustee is required to ensure that degree of protection which a properly drawn trust indenture would provide for him.

I am concerned because whether we take out the words "if any" or not will not make the difference in the section. The section constantly refers to "compliance with the provisions of the trustee." Whether it's in order to get the statutory declaration of the officer of the issuing company, whether it's to get the opinion of the solicitor, whether it's to get the opinion or report of the chartered accountant and other matters that are referred to in that section—all of it is hinged on whether or not the trust indenture instrument requires that information to be provided. There is nothing which indicates that there is any default on the part of the corporate trustee in acting under an indenture if those provisions do not exist or if those provisions are in some way very limited or inadequate, whether by design, inexperience or otherwise.

The proposed amendment which the minister brings forward is one which, in my judgement, is a backward step in the corporate law of the province. With that in mind, Mr. Chairman, I wish to move an amendment. I want to put a qualification on the amendment, if I may. The amendment, if it met with the approval of the minister, obviously would require some consequential changes, and I don't consider that I need to amend every single section in order to make my point clear. Indeed, if I tried to make all of the consequential amendments, it would probably confuse even more than I have the specific point that I have wanted to make to the Chairman.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The hon. member shouldn't raise these things without careful examination all of the ramifications, if any.

Mr. Renwick: That's right.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's a superficial approach to legislation.

Mr. Renwick: Now, if I may, Mr. Chairman, I would like to move that subsection 1 of section 60 of the Business Corporations Act, as proposed by clause 18 of Bill 180, be amended by adding at the end thereof the words:

Or if there are no conditions precedent provided in the trust indenture relating to the matters set out in items a, b, c or d, or if the conditions precedent are inadequate in the opinion of the trustee, such evidence as the trustee may require to enable the trustee to exercise that degree of care, diligence and skill required by section 58.

Mr. Chairman, I so move the amendment.

Mr. Chairman: Does the minister want to speak to this first?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I noted 746 points, and I'll get back to them one at a time.

Firstly, I wonder if I might point out to the hon. member—and I may give him some satisfaction and I may not—the Ontario Securities Commission did, in fact, participate in the rewriting of this particular section and is entirely satisfied with it. It was necessary to have their opinion on it because they are very much involved.

Mr. Renwick: They were such a great help in the Prudential matter.

Hon. Mr. Clement: At the time of the Prudential matter it's my recollection that the Ontario Securities Commission had in its full-time employ one chartered accountant. I think that came out in a report. Now I believe there are some eight or 10 employed by the Ontario Securities Commission.

Their responsibilities, as I understand them, is that the Ontario Securities Commission is there to regulate trade and to protect the public. This section in the Business Corporations Act that we are discussing right now involved the rules, the procedures, the statutory requirements insofar as the people involved in the underwriting are concerned. It has really little or nothing to do with protection of the public. That is the role which statutorily is imposed on the shoulders of the Ontario Securities Commission.

As I understand underwriting, the conditions are usually very, very, tough. The borrower and the underwriter are constantly negotiating, each attempting to get the best deal, depending on his point of view. If the underwriter intends, as in most cases he must if it is of any size, to contact an institutional customer, the customer then inserts conditions, precedents, certain requirements, before he is interested in participating in this particular type of undertaking.

If the borrower doesn't want to meet that covenant or condition, then the institutional lender says, "To heck with them, I am not going to put my institutional money into that kind of an arrangement." So the institutional lender has some input into that document. He negotiates tough covenants; the borrower is trying to have more relaxed covenants, the underwriter is in the role of trying to bring the two parties together and, in fact, to raise the capital required for the purposes of the borrower.

The Ontario Securities Commission oversees the prospectus dealing with the sale of the bonds or the debentures. That is the role cast upon them; they are there to protect the public. We do not wish, under the Business Corporations Act, nor should we, I submit, with the greatest of respect, start to dictate terms of contracts between parties.

Mr. Renwick: I agree.

Hon. Mr. Clement: As the member for Riverdale has pointed out, so often in other jurisdictions there have been just paperpushing projects, dotting "t's," crossing "i's," and all these things that you do one way or the other, reversing them. That's the way we do it in Niagara Falls; we dot our "t's" and cross our "i's," this way.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): You don't cross your "i's" and dot your "t's."

Hon. Mr. Clement: But, in any event, there is an old point to be made. I think that the hon. member has made that point in saying that there must be 20 copies of the contract or the trust indenture. If there are 19, it's against the law; if there are 20, you comply with the law. That is ridiculous; it's the terms of the agreement. I reiterate, we do not wish to get into the market place and tell the parties to that—the borrower, the institutional lenders, the underwriter—what we think the best terms are. Let them settle that between themselves and then let the Securities Commission protect the public with the filing of the prospectus and the assessment of that. Then let the individual make his choice, whether he wishes to participate in that type of investment or not.

May I draw to the attention of the members of the House, page 11, section 62, at the top. The member made reference to the fact that a trust company in the Prudential mess appeared to delay, or in fact did delay, before taking certain steps. There is a positive obligation on the trustee, on page 11 under section 62 of the bill, that he must or it must, within a reasonable period of time, under no circumstances to exceed 30 days, advise of the default. It is a specific and positive direction to the trustee who must comply with it or, of course, he will be in breach of it and perhaps in breach of his statutory duty and, in fact, his common-law obligation to the cestui que trust.

Mr. Renwick: But only if there is adequate evidence of default set out in the trust indenture.

Hon. Mr. Clement: That is true. Only if there is a matter of default which comes to his attention. The trustee cannot complain of those matters of which he is not aware, any more than we can be concerned at this particular moment in time with a bank downtown being robbed while we're standing here. We learn of it, perhaps, much too late.

Now, with reference to the amendment, with the greatest of respect, I must oppose the amendment and I must oppose it rather strenuously. Because if this amendment carries then we are having the trustee determine the covenants or the conditions that are to apply between the borrower, the underwriter and the institutional lender. The trustee will then end up not being in the position of, let's say a stakeholder. He will then be in the position of a principal in that he will only negotiate terms satisfactory to him. The wording says in part, "if there are no conditions precedent in the trust indenture, relating to the matters set out in terms a, b, c or d, or if the conditions precedent are inadequate in the opinion of the trustee." Here, if this amendment carries, we have the trustee setting the terms.

Mr. Renwick: Only if they're inadequate.

Hon. Mr. Clement: In the opinion of the trustee.

Mr. Renwick: Oh, of course now—I'll have my chance to reply to that one.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I would be disappointed if you didn't. But, I think that we must not cast the roles of the principals in this type of exercise in any position other than in the spot to which they belong.

If the trustee has the opinion that the conditions precedent are inadequate, why should that trustee be able to negotiate? Who does he negotiate for at that point? Does he negotiate for the borrower? Does he negotiate for the investor? Does he negotiate from his own point of view? I suggest that he should not be cast into the role of being a participant in any negotiations as to conditions precedent.

Secondly—and this, Mr. Chairman, may be a matter of drafting—it says, "or if there are no conditions precedent provided in the trust indenture relating to the matter set out in a, b, c and d." As I read it, there just won't be any underwriting unless there are conditions precedent. There must be conditions or there's no point to it. Any agreement between parties, the simplest of agreements, has conditions precedent. If I loan a borrower $10 he then will pay me back in a certain term, or something of this nature. There are always conditions if; if one does something, then the other does something in return. I submit that this may be just a drafting problem and I would be happy to hear my friend's comments with reference to my observations in that area.

In summation therefore, Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that we have here certain ground rules as to how these underwritings shall be carried on. We have in statute form here the prudent corporation which is rather refreshing. I think those of us who have read cases in law for years are always hearing about the prudent man and there have been some interesting articles written on the prudent man and the standards of care that he applies. Here we have a prudent corporation and I presume that by analogy the same tests would apply to a corporation as would to a reasonably prudent trustee.

I submit that we've everything in these sections that we had in the old sections of the Act pertaining to underwritings. We are, of course, not reaching outside this province; we are dealing with matters within the geographical boundaries of the province.

I must oppose the amendment for the reasons I've already enunciated. I would be more than pleased to hear the comments of the hon. member, unless he's hesitant to give them at this time. I would like, Mr. Chairman, to hear the hon. member's comments pertaining to the wording "inadequate in the opinion of the trustee."

Mr. Renwick: That is worth another brief comment. I remain, as usual, adamant and unconvinced by the minister's response. I think it is an extremely serious problem.

The Ontario Securities Commission, regardless of what one may think about it, at the present time owes no duty to the public, the breach of which would give rise to a cause of action against the Securities Commission. These are certain statutory obligations and it would appear that it is still at this time beyond the reach of an ordinary citizen of the province who believes that the Ontario Securities Commission has been negligent in the carrying out of any statutory obligation or other obligation to him.

As far as a corporate trustee is concerned, a corporate trustee, by this statute with the limitations which have now been imposed upon him, is placed in an extremely equivocal position.

The name trustee, as far as persons other than sophisticated corporate investors are concerned, means certain things in the parlance of the Province of Ontario. People who buy securities from a corporation which has a trustee protective clause expect certain things from the trustee.

I think it is quite clear that the conception I was endeavouring to get across is that the corporate trustee should have—by whatever the adequacy of the language is—an obligation at the time he enters into the obligations of a trustee to decline to enter into those obligations unless the deed contains what the financial community says is normal business practice.

The way in which you make him certain that he exercises that kind of care about the kind of document to which he attaches his signature as trustee is to impose upon him some kind of an obligation with respect to things that, in the course of the administration of that trust, he will be required to do. Then, he's not just a paper figure engaged in carrying out one administrative role but he has a positive role to play.

What I was endeavouring to say in this amendment was three-fold. The minister takes the view that the expression of the degree of skill, care and attention that the trustee must exercise is then to be cut down by the delimited provisions that, if he is acting in good faith, he can rely on whatever pieces of paper are produced whether there are sufficient clauses in the bill or not. All I want to do is, rather than leave that in a nebulous state as to whether he has a further duty, I want to see to it that the trustee then is not allowed to simply say: "Oh well, I can deal with it in this very formal way without exercising my care, skill and attention."

I want to reassert by appropriate language that over and above the pieces of paper the trustee has a specific role to exercise, in his traditional capacity of a fiduciary, within the framework of the corporate financing world.

I don't think by any stretch of the imagination that we can go so far as to impose upon him in this field the same fiduciary obligations that are in the personal trust field. I agree with that. But it's not sufficient to say that only the input of certain people is what is required, so that the financing documents are good financing documents. It requires the input of a number of people.

In the input which is required, you've got the issuer and the officers of the issuer. You have the issuer's corporate advisers, be they accountants, engineers or lawyers. You've got the institutional investors who, through the underwriters, exercise control over what's in the documents.

You have the legal and accounting advisers of investment dealers added to it in many cases, and it always seemed to me in the experience which I had in that particular field, that the corporate trustee should have had an input into those provisions. It's to get and to assert that obligation that I want to make certain that our law is adequate.

I think there is one other comment apart from that that I want to make on this whole section. That is since it, as the minister mentioned, deals with securities or prospectuses which have been issued under the Securities Act, and so forth, whether the company is a business corporation in the Province of Ontario is not the relevant determining factor. Somewhere, somehow, this section would appear to be more appropriate in some other kind of a statute, because persons issuing in Ontario securities under trust indentures of a company other than a company incorporated under the laws of the Province of Ontario may not actually have occasion to have this drawn to their attention at all. But that is a side point.

I'm not going to speak further on the amendment. I think that anything further would not clarify the issue or add to the debate. I feel sufficiently strongly about it that I'm going to ask that my colleagues agree that we stand and divide the House now on this particular motion and not stack it.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, in the minister's comments he brought out the role of the underwriter and the institutional investor and, of course, in the case the member for Riverdale (Mr. Renwick) has brought before us, the Prudential case, there was no underwriter. There was no institutional investor involved.

The minister may recall that at that time there were great advertisements in the paper advertising 10 per cent interest, or whatever it was, on a security offered by the corporation. So the deal was between the corporation and people who were not experts, who were not informed as to the precautions they need to take in selecting securities and investing their funds. They were just attracted by what was apparently a good rate of return at the time, by what would seem to be a well established company—a good name, Prudential; a trustee, Metropolitan Trust. It all sounded very legitimate. Everything should be in their favour. I can understand both the minister's problem and that of the member for Riverdale. The member for Riverdale recognizes we have to allow some sort of discretionary power for someone in a position of responsibility; because if the issuer intends to put something over, he can do it. If it does not go through an underwriter and expert institutional investors, he can get away with a lot.

The trustee is in a position where he has obligations that are now set out in whatever the document is. They could be very, very minimal, and they don't reflect at all the nature of what the investor thinks he has bought—here someone is taking care of his interests.

I think that there has to be some method of dealing with this. I have been trying to work one out while listening to the other speakers.

Normally, I would have suggested that the trustee should have to go to the Ontario Securities Commission for something of this sort. We are dealing with the Business Corporations Act, and for that reason maybe the minister doesn't feel that that is appropriate. But there should be someone who the trustee can refer to if there is to be some discretionary power.

I submit that because of the fact that there are many situations where there are no experts on the other side, that we should have this type of amendment in there—perhaps with some change in it that does refer to a responsible body, such as the Ontario Securities Commission.

Mr. Renwick: I would like, Mr. Chairman, to make just one comment, just simply out of what the member for York Centre has said.

It isn't just a de minimis problem that it happened that these were little barefoot boys from the country who got caught by a fast scheme—it wasn't that at all. Everything had been done in accordance with the laws of the Province of Ontario.

It is true that there were no investment advisers and there were very few sophisticated corporate investors in Prudential Finance—all of those defects existed. It was not all that exorbitant an interest rate; it was about 8 per cent at that time. But I use Prudential only as an example. The fact of the matter is that the Atlantic Acceptance default in this province included among the corporate investors in Atlantic Acceptance some of the most sophisticated investors on the North American continent.

It is also true that the indentures of the Atlantic Acceptance Corp. had the benefit of a lot of expertise, and so on, as to what would be included and what wouldn't be included in. It also had a long-time corporate trustee operating its affairs; in that case the Montreal Trust Co. was administering the various trusts.

I just wanted to correct the impression that it was the barefoot boy from the country who was the only one who could get caught up. The obvious answer to that would be: "Oh well, that is not going to happen again, because look what we have done to the Ontario Securities Act."

The fact of the matter is that from time to time, if we are not very careful in the Province of Ontario, there will be a repetition of some kind of financial disaster similar to Atlantic Acceptance.

As the minister knows, because he nodded his head, some of the most sophisticated investors on the continent got caught in the crunch of that collapse. And again, partly because of the fact that the role of the corporate trustee was not adequate. It was as if we had allowed the corporate trustee to play a very atrophied role, while others have had a predominant say.

I am asking that the balance be righted within the framework of the various people who are involved in these kinds of things. I am asking that the atrophied role of the trustee be improved and enlarged in a reasonable degree in order for him to take his place in an accepted role of responsibility for the overall governance of the financial market.

Mr. Chairman: Does any other hon. member wish to speak to this amendment? The hon. minister?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I just wish to offer one final comment, Mr. Chairman.

From a comment made earlier by the hon. member for Riverdale, I just want to make it clear that I am not in favour, nor would I be, as to the advantages of pushing paper and having the "20 copies you are legal and the 19 copies you are not," sort of thing. In no way can I endorse that. But I want to make it clear that there has to be some standard set out, and I suggest that the standards set out in this section are adequate.

I wish to reiterate once again that in my opinion the amendment is not necessary because if the conditions precedent are inadequate, no trustee is going to go anywhere near it, nor is the Ontario Securities Commission going to allow it to be offered under the prospectus. I submit, therefore, that the test is that a responsible trustee—a corporate trust company, if that is the trustee acting in this case—will take a look at the terms and say, “My God, those things are inequitable. We don’t want any part of it.”

We have the safeguard of the prospectus going through the Securities Commission. We have the safeguard of the responsible trustee looking at the terms before he undertakes to act as trustee in the indenture. We have the safeguard of, I would hope, a responsible underwriter and institutional investors.

There may be no responsibilities on the borrower per se, because he is trying to get the most money at the cheapest deal on the easiest terms; he is not concerned about his public image or his public interest. But the institutional investor is concerned about his image and the public interest; so is his underwriter, so is the Ontario Securities Commission and so is the trustee.

We can’t legislate love, nor can we legislate standards which the trustee is to impose. And if we abide by the amendment and allow it to carry, then we are going to have the trustee intervening and in effect being part of the negotiating team, looking perhaps only toward his own liability as opposed to his public liability set out under the terms of the section as drafted.

Mr. Chairman: It has been moved by Mr. Renwick that subsection 1 of section 60 of the Business Corporations Act, as proposed by clause 18 of Bill 180, be amended by adding at the end thereof the words:

Or if there are no conditions precedent provided in the trust indenture relating to the matters set out in items a, b, c or d, or if the conditions precedent are inadequate in the opinion of the trustee, such evidence as the trustee may require to enable the trustee to exercise that degree of care, diligence and skill required by section 58.

As many as are in favour of the amendment by Mr. Renwick will please say “aye”.

As many as are opposed will please say “nay”.

In my opinion the “nays” have it.

The committee divided on the amendment, which was negatived on the following vote.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the “ayes” are 31 and the “nays” 57.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, if it were agreeable and assuming that my friends on the right would support us on the other amendment, I would be prepared to accept the same vote on the one stacked.

Agreed.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House reports progress on one bill and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. A. E. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, I had moved the committee rise and report even though the hour was just passed 5 o’clock, so that you might rule on the motion or motions before you in regard to standing order No. 27.

Mr. Speaker: I shall deal with the notice which was handed to me in connection with standing order No. 27.

I have had an opportunity to delve into this matter very carefully. It is a provision which is rarely or seldom used in this House. Standing order No. 27(g) provides that where a member is not satisfied with the response to one of his questions he may give notice that he intends to raise the subject at the time of the adjournment of the House. The hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) had so given me notice prior to 4 o’clock as provided for in the standing orders.

The notice, of course, had to do with the hon. member’s dissatisfaction with the response to a question which he had asked. For the benefit of the hon. members, I have the question before me and I shall repeat the question so there shall be no misunderstanding:

Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General. In view of the Premier’s statement last week on the Fidinam matter indicating a contract, indicating a political contribution of $50,000 to the Conservative Party, and in view of the fact that there is a Telex message which clearly links both of these matters, in light of these circumstances, Mr. Speaker, would the chief law officer of the Crown in this province indicate why he has not undertaken an immediate investigation in view of the fact that there appears to be a clear breach of section 110 of the Criminal Code of Canada?

The question, of course, was pertaining to the provisions of the Criminal Code of Canada—why an investigation had not been undertaken.

The notice having properly been given under standing order 27(g), I accept that notice; it was given at the proper time and there shall be a debate at the adjournment time of the House on that particular question.

I should inform the House that I have also received three other written notices of dissatisfaction from three other hon. members. One of the notices I received was from one of the hon. members who gave notice that he was not satisfied with the Attorney General's reply to his supplementary question. For the benefit of the House I should like to inform the hon. members of that supplementary question. The question simply was: "Do we understand the Attorney General correctly that, given the facts of my colleague's question, he will not undertake an investigation to see if that section has been breached?"

Now that was the subject, the content of the supplementary question. Perhaps a very narrow interpretation of the entire situation would be that the original question and all supplementaries related to the Fidinam affair, which indeed they do. However, in view of the specific nature of the question raised by the hon. member for Ottawa East, I have no alternative—after having related these supplementary questions—but to say that the notice given to me is purely an identical question to the original question, having to do with an investigation pertaining to the Fidinam affair. Therefore, this second notice—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Come on, you are stick handling.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): He is doing it very well, though.

Mr. Speaker: This second notice, of course, is simply a notice of dissatisfaction with the same answers to the same questions and does not qualify for another debate.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): On a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I should finish my remarks.

Mr. Bullbrook: Well, may I just—

Mr. Speaker: Nothing can be out of order until I rule it.

Mr. Bullbrook: I don't intend, most respectfully, to debate the matter.

Mr. Speaker: Right.

Mr. Bullbrook: Could you edify me by relating to me and the House, are you referring to my question?

Mr. Speaker: Right.

Mr. Bullbrook: That's fine. I thought you were, but I wasn't sure.

Mr. Speaker: I thought it perhaps better not to indicate the hon. members' names, however, I will with the remainder of my remarks. I will do that.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Oh, don't hesitate. Don't hesitate to name them.

Mr. Speaker: I never do hesitate to name hon. members.

The second notice which was given to me by the hon. member for Downsview (Mr. Singer), indicated he was not satisfied with the Attorney General's reply to his supplementary question. The supplementary question raised by the hon. member for Downsview says:

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, would the Attorney General undertake to consult the law officers of the Crown and to advise the House at the earliest possible opportunity whether, in view of the facts that are now a definite part of the record, there has been a breach of section 110 of the Criminal Code?

In other words, this is entirely the same question, whether or not there has been a breach of the Criminal Code in connection with an investigation into the Fidinam affair. As I originally said, the whole matter deals with the Fidinam affair, which, in my opinion, is the subject of the question. However, in my view, the question raised, on which notice was given by the hon. member for Downsview again, in a like manner to that of the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook), is simply a repetition of the question raised by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy). However—now wait for it—another notice was served upon me by the hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nixon).

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Busy staff.

Mr. Speaker: For the benefit of the House—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Busy leader over there.

Mr. Speaker:—I would say that notice was received in the proper time. The hon. Leader of the Opposition indicated that he was not satisfied with the Attorney General's reply to his supplementary question. His supplementary question was—and he suggested it might be a point of order which, of course, it wasn't.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The hon. member has said no facts have been put before him. What constitutes putting facts before the Attorney General? The Premier (Mr. Davis) himself has said that a $50,000 donation has been made, and the fact that Telex communications between the company and the head office is not in question, in which the $50,000 was linked with the government decision to award the contract for the Workmen's Compensation Board to Fidinam. Now there is a relationship there which surely the hon. Attorney General should investigate.

On the one hand, it's a very similar question to the two supplementaries raised by the other two hon. members of the opposition; however, there is sufficient difference, and being in a generous mood today, I am going to permit—

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Generous to whom?

Mr. Speaker:—and accept this notice by the hon. Leader of the Opposition as a proper subject matter for additional debate. Therefore, at the hour of adjournment, after the motion to adjourn has been made, we will suspend that motion temporarily. The hon. member for Ottawa East will have an opportunity for five minutes—unless he wishes to share his five minutes with other members—to debate the question of the investigation and the hon. minister will have five minutes to reply. At the conclusion of those 10 minutes, another debate may ensue for a further 10 minutes in which the hon. Leader of the Opposition may put his case pertaining to his supplementary question, and a further five minutes will be allotted to the minister to reply to that.

This is my considered opinion in connection with the notices that have been placed before me. I simply inform the House at this time that this is what I propose to permit to take place at adjournment.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I heard your reference to the question by the hon. member for Ottawa East and also your reference to my supplementary question.

I would draw to your attention that the hon. member for Ottawa East addressed himself to the Attorney General insofar as the Attorney General should make his investigation.

My question was quite different. My question was addressed to the Attorney General in the form of a request that the law officers of the Crown—not the Attorney General, but his senior advisers—be instructed to investigate and to report, and that the report be made available to the Legislature.

An hon. member: That's right.

Mr. Singer: The Attorney General refused to wrestle with the substance of either of those questions, which were quite different from those questions put by the hon. member for Ottawa East. I submit to you, sir, that your saying that they were the same, or variations, is, with great respect, incorrect, and therefore that you should reconsider your ruling insofar as my grievance is concerned.

In the event, sir, that you cannot see the difference, it's with much regret that I would have to say that I'm going to challenge your ruling.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I wish to say that as your decision was given to the House, I am assuming that oral notice to the House of the request by the hon. member is not a requirement, so far as notice is concerned in bringing down your decision. I would simply like to say that I think as a matter of courtesy, as the question was handled by the hon. member for Ottawa East, that evidently should be used by any member who wishes to avail himself of the privilege in 27(g).

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Is the minister amending the rules?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: No, I'm not.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Just instructing us in courtesy?

Mr. Lewis: The minister can't interrupt the debate.

Mr. Speaker: Well, if I might reply first—

Mr. Sargent: What would that be in English?

Mr. Speaker: If I might reply first to the comments of the hon. House leader, the standing orders do provide that written notice must be given to the Speaker prior to 4 o'clock.

Mr. Singer: Whether or not it is given orally.

Mr. Speaker: That is right. I have received written notices from the hon. members concerned, which I consider to be quite sufficient, under the circumstances, for the application of rule 27 and the procedural rule 28, referring to rule 27.

Mr. Sargent: What about the oral request?

Mr. Speaker: With reference to the point raised by the hon. member for Downsview, it is my opinion, as I said, that both his question—his supplementary question—and that of the hon. member for Sarnia have to do purely with the matter of an investigation into the Fidinam affair. The similarity is such that I cannot find myself splitting hairs to separate or to find sufficient difference to justify a further debate on it. My ruling, therefore, will stand.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—and it's customary for you to permit this—because the hon. member for Downsview indicated that if your ruling did not go in his favour he would appeal the ruling, and since I'm sure that he is about to do that, I would like to explain to you, sir, why I and my colleagues will be supporting the appeal.

Because, sir, if you would cast your mind over not only the events in the House but your re-reading of the record, you will recall that the hon. member for Ottawa East had put the question to the Attorney General whether he, as the chief law officer of the Crown, would undertake the investigation and in fact lay the charge. But the hon. member for Downsview called upon the Attorney General to get an opinion from his advisers and report to the House whether or not there had been a breach of the Criminal Code.

There is obviously a difference of opinion here, but in our opinion the questions are clearly different and I think the difference will become evident when the Attorney General—who is no doubt consulting his advisers at this very moment—may very well come in and indicate that he is going to make a formal reference to his chief advisers and report to the House. Therefore, with regret and with respect, we must support the appeal.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the hon. Leader of the Opposition for his contribution. However, I did catch the very slight difference in the questions, and there was no indication to me, in any way, that the hon. Attorney General had indicated that he had not consulted the law officers of the Crown. It was, in my opinion, perhaps a supposition on the part of the hon. member. I still feel that there's insufficient difference between the two questions to justify a further debate, and to take the time in this House to further debate the same matter.

As I had said previously, the whole subject is the Fidinam affair, but I have chosen to accept the distinction as to whether or not anything relating to the Fidinam affair is a subject or whether all aspects relating to the Fidinam affair should be treated as separate subjects, which I had done. I have accepted two different questions relating totally to the Fidinam affair and I must reiterate that my ruling stands.

Mr. Singer: May I then say, sir, on a point of order, that I don't think the rules contemplate whether or not you are satisfied with the answer. They contemplate whether the member asking the question is satisfied with the answer, and I think you made that distinction quite incorrectly. However, sir, you've made your ruling; I'm not going to debate it any further. I challenge your ruling.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the Speaker's ruling will please say "aye".

Those opposed will please say "nay".

In my opinion the "ayes" have it.

Call in the members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! I have ruled that a notice given to me in connection with standing order 27(g) by the hon. member for Downsview does not qualify for a debate as provided under that standing order in view of the fact that, in my opinion, the supplementary question asked by the hon. member for Downsview was in the same nature as the original question asked by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Roy) and a supplementary asked by the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Bullbrook), which also was not acceptable. My ruling in connection with the notice of the hon. member for Downsview has been challenged.

The House divided on the Speaker's ruling, which was upheld on the following vote:

Clerk of the House: Mr. Speaker, the "ayes" are 73, the "nays" 17.

Mr. Speaker: My ruling has therefore been sustained.

Consequently, at the hour of adjournment, after the motion has been placed before the House, a debate will ensue in accordance with the provisions of standing order 27(g) in which the hon. member for Ottawa East may raise his points for five minutes, and the hon. minister may respond for the same period. At the end of the 10 minutes, the hon. Leader of the Opposition may also engage in the debate on his particular question for five minutes and the hon. minister may reply for a similar period. At 6:20, therefore, the adjournment motion shall be deemed to have been passed.

Clerk of the House: The third order, House in Committee of the whole, Mr. R. D. Rowe in the Chair.

House in committee on Bill 180, an Act to amend the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Chairman: On Bill 180, An Act to amend the Business Corporations Act, as I understand it up to section 18 has been carried. Is there anything before section 35? Any comments, questions or amendments; and if so to which section?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): A question on clause 28.

Mr. Chairman: Anything before section 28? The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Perhaps the minister would indicate to us why the record date for notice of meeting need be as far in advance of the meeting as 50 days. Surely 50 days is a very lengthy period before the meeting of shareholders to determine those persons who should get notice of the meeting.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Chairman, you called for anything up to section 28; I wanted to say something on section 25.

Mr. Chairman: Well, in view of the bit of confusion, we could revert. Shall we go back to section 25 first? Is that all right with the hon. member for Riverdale?

The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: Order. There is unnecessary noise in the House.

Mr. Deacon: In this new subsection in section 25 providing for the purchase of shareholders' shares, on what basis is evaluation to be worked out in a case when a shareholder is in a position of objecting to the change of jurisdiction under which a corporation is acting? On what basis will these shares be purchased, because certainly the value is something that could vary a great deal? Will it be book value? On what basis will it be worked out? There should be provision for some arbitration of the value if there isn't satisfaction between parties.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Chairman, I'm sorry, I didn't hear the section number to which the hon. member for Riverdale referred in his opening comments; nor the hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. Chairman: We are discussing section 25. Would the hon. member for York Centre repeat his question?

Mr. Deacon: I am wondering on what basis value will be placed on the shares if a shareholder requests a corporation to purchase his shares, that is if the shareholder votes against change of jurisdiction. Should there not be provision in here for some arbitration of value in case agreement is not possible between the shareholder and the corporation?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, with reference to the increase from 21 to 50 days, which I believe was the question raised by the hon. member for Riverdale, I am advised that the extension is to give reasonable time to the shareholder to make up his or her mind on the value of the shares.

With reference to section 25 of the bill dealing with appraisal values, Mr. Chairman, this too is a matter that the select committee is looking into at this particular time. We had discussions over a period of perhaps two days during this past summer as to the appraisal rights as they are set out in the Business Corporations Act.

In the United Kingdom we had an opportunity to have before us people who have given this a great deal of study, and the procedure in the United Kingdom is substantially different than ours. Their Act, I believe I mentioned yesterday in the debate, has been in effect since 1948, and they certainly demonstrated to my satisfaction, these people from the companies branch in the United Kingdom, that those sections in that particular Act need substantial updating.

While I can't make assurances on behalf of the committee—I am only a member of it now in name—I would hope that the select committee would bring in certain recommendations as to appraisal rights in the report which we anticipate will be received, hopefully some time shortly after the new year.

Mr. Deacon: With all due respect, it seems pointless for us to be putting in this right of a shareholder. It would permit a shareholder to require the corporation to purchase his shares when he votes against a resolution and actually the basis of this is very clearly spelled out. Yet the minister doesn't say anything about the value that shareholder will get.

Surely that is all-important in this? What's the point of our putting in this particular clause and right if we don't set out at the same time the basis of valuation for the purchase?

Hon. Mr. Clement: This section, Mr. Chairman, merely provides the procedures by which the shares of a dissenting shareholder are to be purchased by a corporation which intends to continue under another jurisdiction. Minor amendments are made to subsections 2 and 6 to make the wording consistent with sections 15(2), (17) and 100(1) as amended. I am proposing that section 100(5) be repealed; this provision for the resale of shares purchased from a dissenting shareholder is now in section 39 as amended.

Mr. Deacon: But the basis of valuation is not going to be provided for. How are we setting it out? When a shareholder has given notice under subsection 1 the corporation is required to purchase his shares and he is required to sell; but please explain to me, if you would, the price at which he is going to sell. How is it worked out?

Hon. Mr. Clement: My ministry could come up with a very erudite structure on how to appraise shares and the value which should be attached to them, and if the select committee comes in with an opinion diametrically opposed to that then our exercise on how to appraise shares is a nullity. For that reason the bill is silent insofar as the appraisal is concerned until we receive the report of the select committee.

There is procedure, as you know, in the existing Act dealing with appraisal of shares and there is reference made to applications to court. One of the matters that certainly was considered very seriously by this select committee on corporation law is what wisdom does the court possess that perhaps people in the marketplace don't possess?

The only way you can demonstrate to the court the value of a share is to bring people in from the marketplace presumably to convince the court, through their background and evidence as to their training and expertise, that they have some knowledge as to the appraisal value to be attached to a share. If the court followed their evidence and adhered to it, in effect it is the people in the marketplace who are setting the price for shares. There is no magic, insofar as the officer of the court is concerned, in his elevation to the bench, so that suddenly he becomes knowledgeable in the appraisal of shares.

As the hon. member knows, the appraisal attached to shares under these types of circumstances can vary and has to be done by people with knowhow. We have remained somewhat silent on it until the select committee has its opportunity to make its report. I think I can almost undertake on behalf of this House to incorporate that recommendation in the Act, to be amended shortly after the House reconvenes in the new year.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, I cannot see any point in bringing in this amendment which gives the shareholder this right until the minister has decided on what basis the right will be carried out. If there is a provision now in the Act for valuation and it goes to the courts, why does that not apply until you bring in an amendment which your ministry chooses to bring in, maybe to improve that on that basis? I still think we should definitely have clearly understood that the basis of evaluation will be that which now prevails in the Act; and it should state that in this clause so there is no question. There should be a clear procedure here in case of dispute.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, as the hon. member probably knows, under section 100 subsection 4—and there's no change proposed in this—the old subsection reads as follows:

The price and terms of the purchase of such shares shall be as may be agreed upon by the corporation and the dissenting shareholder. But if they fail to agree the price and terms shall be as determined by the court on the application of the dissenting shareholder.

Now that's remained in there for some time.

Mr. Deacon: Those rules will still apply?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I beg your pardon.

Mr. Deacon: Those rules will still apply?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes; until, hopefully, the new legislation is enacted after the report of the select committee.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 25 stand as part of the bill?

Section 25 agreed to.

Anything before section 28? The member for Riverdale on section 28.

Mr. Renwick: The minister has replied to my comment on section 28.

Mr. Chairman: Any other comment, question or amendment before section 35? If not the hon. minister has an amendment to section 35.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I move that section 35 be amended by adding before the word "directors" where it appears on the third line of section 132(2) of the Act, the words "board of". It's a housekeeping amendment to reflect the fact that the individual directors may be officers or agents of the corporation and transact business on its behalf. This subsection is directed to actions by the board of directors as such.

I wonder if I might advise the House at this time; earlier this afternoon during the debate I referred to a suggestion put forward yesterday—

Mr. Chairman: Order please! I think I should place this motion.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I'm sorry.

Mr. Chairman: Hon. Mr. Clement moves that section 35 be amended by adding before the word "directors" where it first appears in the third line of section 132 subsection 2 of the Act, the words "board of".

Does the hon. minister have an explanation?

Hon. Mr. Clement: It is just as I said, to demonstrate that the corporation business shall be transacted by the board of directors as opposed to the directors individually. It is in effect an oversight not having it in there.

Mr. Chairman: Shall this motion carry?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any other comments, question or amendments before section 60?

Mr. Deacon: Section 40!

Mr. Chairman: Section 40. Anything before section 40?

All right, the member for York Centre on section 40.

Mr. Deacon: I was wondering why, on this section, the liability is going beyond the actual loan. Is it because of implied losses as a result of an improper loan? Would it not be quite beyond any realm of justice to include any losses to the corporation, whether the source of them has anything to do with an improper action of the directors or not?

I can see there can be liability for losses if they are a result of an improper loan and other losses to the corporation can be traced to it. But it seems to me that in this section 40 we've broadened it too much so that the responsibilities of directors could be extended to a case in which they had no involvement or there was no intentional impropriety at all. Something was done, say through poor advice, and the company suffered a very large loss in its general operations; but it had nothing to do with a loan that was improperly made.

I think we're going too far in this section. I would appreciate the minister's comments on what he intended to do here and why he would want to broaden it as much as he did?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, this proposed amendment is to make the wording of the section consistent with section 17(1). It's to provide for the liability on the directors extending to any actual loss to the corporation—and that's just a comment pertaining to it—but I suggest to the hon. member that the reading of the section specifically ties it in to a contravention of clause (a), subsection 1 of section 17. Then it goes "or the giving, directly or indirectly"; and so on, contrary to section (b) of the same section 17.

They must be in contravention. If the corporation entered into what appeared at the time a bona fide transaction, it was not contravening section 17, and a loss was associated to the lender corporation, then I fail to see how the directors could in any way be held personally responsible.

I am the first to concede that directors should never be placed in any position of personally indemnifying the future of the corporation for which they are seized with the stewardship and responsibility of managing as long as they act not in contravention of the statute. If they do act in contravention, then this is in effect the penalty that they pay.

I wonder if I might just offer another comment. Earlier this afternoon I agreed to an amendment put forward by the hon. member for Riverdale pertaining to section 39(2). We agreed to that amendment, and I would like to advise the House that it consisted of the deletion of some words; and by having that deletion certain other adjustments will have to be done prior to third reading, Mr. Chairman, to make the bill tie in with the deletion of those words.

Perhaps the member for Riverdale might—I was just explaining to the Chairman that we agreed to your suggested amendment made yesterday, in 39(2), by deleting the words, "or may purchase any of the issued shares of its holding body corporate"; and by agreeing to that I forgot to mention at the time that prior to third reading there would be certain other housekeeping amendments we have to make by virtue of the deletion of that phrase, and you'll be apprised of them.

Mr. Renwick: I am sorry, would you repeat what you are going to delete?

Hon. Mr. Clement: You moved an amendment yesterday to section 13 of the bill, by striking from the substituted section 39(2) of the Act the words at the end of the subsection.

The words that you suggested should be deleted start near the end of the third line; "or may purchase", and so on. Now, the new subsection 5 of section 39, on page 5 of the bill, sets out allowable methods of purchase. We did agree to the deletion. There will be other adjustments required to certain other provisions prior to the third reading of the bill because of the deletion of the phrase that we agreed to, and I should have made mention of that at the time when I advised the committee that we were agreeable to the deletion of that phrase.

Mr. Renwick: Oh fine! I take it, Mr. Chairman, that the minister is saying that on consideration he accepted the amendment that we proposed yesterday?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Well, I realize we haven't made the amendments per se, but in order to bring the debate on that to its proper conclusion I advised of my intention, and I just wanted to make that clear.

Mr. Chairman: That's understood and agreed then?

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: I understand this will have to be held in committee until the amendments are actually made. Does that apply to many sections, may I ask?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Certain amendments have been moved, I believe, mainly by the hon. member for Riverdale. It was agreed they would be stacked, except one this afternoon that we've already voted on.

Mr. Deacon: I have further comments on section 40.

Mr. Chairman: Section 40, all right.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report progress on one bill and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I would like to say that on Thursday we will proceed with the consideration of the bill that's before us and, following that, item 13, Bill 222. I would ask the members then to be prepared for No. 6, Bill 197; No. 8, Bill 203; No. 9, Bill 204, and, if they're in a very generous mood, we can proceed with No. 14, Bill 224; 15, Bill 225; and 17, Bill 230.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Of course, before we actually decide on the motion, the hon. member for Ottawa East.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In answer to my question earlier this afternoon, the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) answered very simply, "Mr. Speaker, there have been no facts brought to my attention that would indicate such a breach at all." This answer, Mr. Speaker, I find absolutely preposterous coming from the chief law officer of the Crown.

First of all, back on Nov. 2, 1972, an article appeared in the Globe and Mail, fully outlining the transaction that had taken place. It outlined the contract with the Workmen's Compensation Board, which had received government approval. It outlined the political donation of $50,000 to the Conservative Party, and it outlined as well a Telex message which related the two. Where was the Attorney General at this time?

Secondly, the Premier (Mr. Davis) of this province, on Nov. 21, 1972—last Tuesday, Mr. Speaker—again confirmed the contract or the agreement between the government and this Fidinam company, and the donation of $50,000 from Fidinam to the Conservative Party, again confirming the transaction that had taken place.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Why isn't he here now? He should be here now.

Mr. Roy: Now, Mr. Speaker, in answer to our later question, the Attorney General mentioned as well that he was not aware of the Telex messages which related the two. For his edification I would like to present him copies of these Telex messages, if they might be delivered to the Attorney General.

The two Telex messages simply say this, Mr. Speaker. The first one, dated Nov. 23, 1971, states, "Please inform per Telex about cheque issued to Mr. Kelly July 23."

Mr. Sargent: From Switzerland.

Mr. Roy: Yes, this is coming from Switzerland or, from Fidinam Ltd., anyway.

The second message related to this simply said, "Payment out of this account July 23 was a political donation related UCPWCB, Upper Canada Place, Workmen's Compensation Board, will be repaid before the end of the year."

An hon. member: Shame, shame!

Mr. Roy: So, Mr. Speaker, these are the facts that I was relying on; and these are the facts of which surely the Attorney General should have been aware.

Now let's look at section 110, subsection 2 of the Criminal Code, which simply reads this way, Mr. Speaker:

Everyone commits an offence who in order to obtain or retain a contract with the government, or as a term of any such contract, whether express or implied directly or indirectly subscribes, gives or agrees to subscribe or give to any person, any valuable consideration [and subsection (a) states] for the purpose of promoting the election of a candidate or class or party of candidates to the Parliament of Canada or a Legislature.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, when you have this section, in light of the fact that it should have been drawn to the minister's attention, I suggest that all the ingredients of the offence are there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: First of all you have the contract, which again has been admitted by the Premier of the province. He suggested because a contract preceded the political donation, that made it free and clear. But I suggest to the Attorney General that the contract is still not complete and that the land apparently has not been turned over to this company. In fact, the money—the $15 million—the mortgage money has not been turned over. So, in that sense the contract is not complete.

Second, you have a political donation clearly made to the Conservative Party—this class of candidate.

Third, I think it is to be assumed that this donation was for the promotion of the election of these candidates.

Finally, the other essential ingredient of this offence is that covered by the section, "in order to obtain or retain a contract directly or indirectly"—and surely the Telex message relates to the intent involved in this.

So, I simply say this, Mr. Speaker, that if the Attorney General feels that there are no facts before him, either he is incompetent or naive and should not be the chief law officer for the Crown. Or the other alternative—and I would hate to think it was this—is that he was afraid of pursuing an investigation or the laying of a charge because he was afraid of the political consequences.

Mr. Speaker: Time has expired. Five minutes have elapsed.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, just at closing, if I—

Mr. Speaker: All right.

Mr. Roy: If I might just say this. I think two assurances are required from the minister at this time. Either that he start an immediate investigation and provide a full report for this House, or that he undertake on behalf of his department not to interfere in any private prosecutions.

Mr. Speaker, if we cannot receive this assurance from this House, he does not deserve to be the chief law officer for the Crown of this province.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister may now have five minutes to reply if he so wishes.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, there is a second member to speak, and I think that since it is on the same matter—

Mr. Speaker: No.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —I need not reply until the end.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Samia): The minister should have been here when Mr. Speaker made his ruling.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to say to the hon. minister that we had dealt with each of the notices as separate items—separate items for debate. Consequently the hon. minister may take his five minutes now, or he needn't do so until he replies to the hon. Leader of the Opposition. But they are two distinctly separate matters, according to my ruling.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I will reply after the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Speaker: All right.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Well, the defence must be pretty good when the minister gives up five minutes of it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister has not chosen to reply to the remarks of the hon. member for Ottawa East. Therefore, the hon. Leader of the Opposition may now have five minutes.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker; according to the rules, as I understand them, it's required that the minister reply to each question as it arises.

Mr. Speaker: If he so wishes.

Mr. Reid: He is not able to stack the answers.

Mr. Speaker: If he so wishes. I'm aware of the provision of the ruling.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The answer that the Attorney General gave the House that dissatisfied me was his statement that no facts had been laid before him. I then questioned him as to what means could be used to put facts before him in his official capacity, because, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Attorney General is by no stretch of the imagination to be considered a judge, nor to have any special judicial function. I believe it is his job as chief law officer of the Crown to see that the law is obeyed, and if it is not, to enter into prosecution where there is an obvious case that a breach has occurred.

For the Attorney General to say to this House that none of these facts, which have been reiterated by my colleague, the member for Ottawa East, were known to him, is very difficult for any reasonable person to believe.

Mr. Speaker, as chief law officer of the Crown he must have been well aware not only of the allegation that a $50,000 donation had been made by Fidinam to the Progressive Conservative Party but of the fact that the donation has never been denied. As a matter of fact, it has been affirmed with some confidence by members of the party.

Mr. Singer: By the Premier too.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The other fact associated with this matter which must surely have been known to the minister—as a matter of fact, he said that he had read about it—was the existence of the Telex communications which my colleague—

Mr. Singer: His silence gives consent.

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—has just put before him in the House once again, where the $50,000 donation on the part of the secretary-treasurer of the Canadian corporation itself was linked directly with the government contract for the Workmen's Compensation Board facilities, which have been under discussion here for well over a year.

Surely this public linkage of the two events, the $50,000 donation and the government decision to go ahead with the building under very generous terms indeed as far as Fidinam is concerned, should have been enough to make the Attorney General enter into an investigation and then bring forward charges.

The thing that concerns me very deeply, Mr. Speaker, is that even during the course of this afternoon, the Attorney General, after putting up what he might have thought was a fairly strong and bold front, retreated in answer after answer.

He began by saying on page 180-1: "I have no facts before me to indicate that [there has been a breach of section 110] . . ." He went on to say: "Mr. Speaker, the member is talking about a Telex message. None of that has been placed before me. I have read about it."

My dissatisfaction is how one presents information to the Attorney General unless he is accepting for himself some sort of semi-judicial status which is not a part of his position.

He went on to say: "If necessary, we will certainly take whatever steps are necessary, with my chief law officers, to look into the matter." He's beginning to retreat.

"I have no hesitation in having our law officers look into that." He's getting enthusiastic.

Later: "I am quite prepared, as I have said before, to look into these matters with my chief law officers and we shall do so."

The one final thing that was missing beyond his commitment to have his chief law officers examine this and report to him, was to make the report public here in this House. This is the step that he failed to take and which is basically the source of the dissatisfaction that is being expressed, at least by this party, from this side of the House.

The thing that really frightens me is that the Attorney General would put his political loyalties ahead of the traditional high responsibility and confidence that he must carry in his high office as Attorney General of this province.

Mr. Sargent: He should resign, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order! The hon. minister may now—

Mr. Sargent: He should resign.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister may now have five minutes in which to reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Ottawa East—

Mr. Bullbrook: No, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister did not take the opportunity to reply to the hon. member for Ottawa East—

Mr. Bullbrook: Can we not get that through to the Attorney General?

Mr. Speaker: —therefore, he may reply only to the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Very well, Mr. Speaker.

It has been inferred—and I do not have a transcript of the words of the hon. Leader of the Opposition—that in some way I would put my office as inferior to political or—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Party loyalty!

Hon. Mr. Bales: —party loyalty. That is not so, it never was so and shall never be so.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: A few moments ago—

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): We didn't interrupt the members! Take it easy!

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, there was reference made to a contract between the Workmen's Compensation Board and a company—and I do not know the exact name of that company but it was one of the Fidinam group.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): The minister had better find out.

Mr. Sargent: He has got to be kidding!

Hon. Mr. Bales: That contract was with the Workmen's Compensation Board and required concurrence by cabinet.

That matter received careful and thorough consideration by the board, was considered carefully by cabinet in the spring of 1971 and was approved in principle. In the spring of this year, that whole contract was discussed in detail before a standing committee of this House and my—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: My colleague, the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton), went into that contract in great detail before that committee—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): And that contract is—

Hon. Mr. Bales: And that contract—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Hear him out!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Do only the members opposite know about those things?

Hon. Mr. Bales: That contract was approved as being a desirable one for the Workmen's Compensation Board in all respects.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is irrelevant.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: It is not irrelevant, it is very important.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Tonight and within the last five minutes, two pieces of paper have been put before me—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Why not earlier? Where has the minister been?

Hon. Mr. Bales: It appears that these were Telex messages. Whether they are authentic or not, I don't know.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: But I accept them as being the same as in the newspapers. Mr. Speaker, the Premier—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Add this to the five minutes.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The Premier has made it very plain from his investigation of this matter that there was no influence from the party or party officials to make this contract. Certainly that was the case. We are in a stage of time when hon. members seek to raise witch hunts in this House and other places.

Mr. Singer: He hasn't told us anything.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He asked the treasurer of the party!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, if for any reason—

Mr. Reid: The minister has been sitting beside the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) for too long!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! There are two minutes remaining.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I might claim some extra time, Mr. Speaker, because the members couldn't hear, nor could I.

Mr. Speaker, if for any reason we in this government were to find a situation which we believe to be improper or in which an unfair advantage had been attempted or had been taken, we would want to act positively in such things.

Mr. MacDonald: Why hasn't the government acted?

Hon. Mr. Bales: But I am not prepared—

Mr. MacDonald: Why does the minister have to be pushed to do his duty?

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, I am not being pushed to do my duty. We can look at these things carefully and we should, because we are dealing with people and with their reputations, and not merely toying with questions inside this House. We have got to act on these matters properly and firmly. That is what my department is dedicated to and that is what it is going to do.

Mr. Singer: But why didn't the minister do so?

An hon. member: What action did he take?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: This debate has now concluded. I declare the adjournment motion carried.

The House adjourned at 6:18 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Again we are pleased to have with us many visitors.

In the east gallery we have students from St. Norbert's Separate School of Downsview. In both galleries we have students from the John G. Althouse Public School of Etobicoke; and in the west gallery a group of ladies from North Middlesex.

At 3 o'clock in the west gallery we will be joined by students from Oakville-Trafalgar High School of Oakville.

It gives me pleasure too today to introduce a very special visitor in the Speaker's gallery, the hon. Gordon G. H. Dowding, the Speaker of the legislative assembly of the Province of British Columbia, who is accompanied by his clerk assistant, Mr. George MacMinn.

Statements by the ministry.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would like to announce that the Ontario government will proceed with a $50 million winter employment programme. Despite generally good performance in the economy in 1972, the unemployment picture has improved only marginally. Consequently, we face the prospect of high unemployment again this winter.

I would remind members that it is the federal government which carries the primary responsibility for economic stabilization and employment generation. For several months we have held in readiness the programme I am announcing today, in anticipation of positive federal action to combat winter unemployment. To secure maximum impact it is important that our provincial efforts be closely co-ordinated with federal programmes.

It now seems clear, however, that no substantive federal programme for winter employment will be forthcoming. Consequently, Ontario must proceed on its own to provide temporary jobs and alleviate the hardships which accompany high levels of winter unemployment.

Our expansionary policies and large deficits over the past two years already represent a massive effort by the province to stimulate economic recovery and job creation.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Right, like the Treasurer's tax credit.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Nevertheless, we are convinced that further measures are required to reduce unemployment. Accordingly, we are implementing a $50 million programme geared to produce approximately 29,000 temporary jobs during the peak unemployment months.

Today I will outline the broad aspects of our winter employment programme, and subsequently individual ministries will provide complete details of their specific programmes.

First, because of its proven success last year, we are concentrating our 1972-1973 winter employment spending on the municipal employment incentive programme. As members will recall, this programme provides 100 per cent grants to local governments for hiring temporary workers who would otherwise be receiving welfare or unemployment insurance payments. This programme will again be funded at $35 million, which we anticipate will create 20,000 winter jobs. The programme will commence Dec. 1, 1972, and run to May 31, 1973.

I am confident that our municipalities will welcome continuation of this programme and will take full advantage of it, as they did last year. The municipalities are familiar with the programme from the experience of the past two years. In fact, we already have a large number of inquiries from the municipalities indicating their readiness to proceed with projects.

Second, the government is also initiating a number of projects which will be quickly activated within our own ministries. The total cost of these projects is planned at $15 million, which we estimate will create about 9,000 temporary jobs this winter.

Examples of provincial projects are: special grants to conservation authorities; improvements to provincial parks; and funding of labour-intensive activities in forest and wildlife management and transportation. Full details will be provided when supplementary estimates are tabled.

The experience gained from last year's programmes, both provincial and federal, will be valuable in ensuring an effective employment programme for this winter. The programme I have just outlined has been designed deliberately to achieve quick implementation and maximum impact in the peak unemployment period.

In conclusion, let me reiterate that I am very disappointed in the failure of the federal government to take the lead and bring in a positive winter employment programme. Last year the federal government did undertake a fairly comprehensive programme to combat winter unemployment. In Ontario alone, over $60 million was spent by the federal government on temporary employment projects and a further $26 million was made available for special employment loans.

This year, despite the prospect of continuing high unemployment, no comprehensive federal programme has been announced and it now appears that only about $20 million will be available in Ontario under the Local Initiatives Programme and manpower training programme.

Our 1972 programme will make an important contribution to the relief of winter unemployment in Ontario. However, our actions alone will fall short of achieving a substantial reduction in unemployment levels. I therefore must urge the federal government to join with us to create the necessary jobs this winter. This government will co-operate in every way, as we did last year, to ensure quick and effective implementation of any federal programme if the federal government sees fit to establish one.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth) Start on page one!

An hon. member: He's been reading that for a day and a half.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday last—

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Is that dictated by Dalton Camp or William Kelly?

Mr. Lewis: Drafted by Dalton Camp and revised by Dalton Bales.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Hon. Mr. Bales: On Tuesday last in this House some members of the opposition alleged that a criminal offence had been committed by certain persons with respect to the decision of the Workmen's Compensation Board to enter into an agreement with Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. Indeed, some hon. members opposite went so far as to suggest that I, as Attorney General, have consciously and willfully neglected my responsibility in failing to investigate this matter.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): It was hard not to feel that way.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Any such suggestion, when made by a member of this House, is of a grave and serious nature directed at the very foundation of the system of administration of criminal justice in this province. If left unanswered, it could undermine the confidence of the public in the administration of criminal justice, for which I, as chief law officer of the Crown, am responsible.

Mr. Speaker, this House will recall that on Tuesday Nov. 21 last, the Premier of this province, after examining the terms and conditions of the agreement and the actions of the members of the government and the Workmen's Compensation Board in relation thereto, reported as follows:

My examination of this matter has satisfied me beyond any doubt that there was absolutely no improper influence exerted either upon the Workmen's Compensation Board or upon the cabinet with respect to their decisions in this matter, that the decision by the board to enter into an agreement with Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd. was based solely on the merits of their proposal and that the terms and conditions of the agreement itself are in the best interest of the public in this province.

As head of the government, the Premier is responsible for the integrity of the actions of the government. As Attorney General I am responsible for ensuring that the public have confidence in the integrity of the administration of criminal justice. In assuming that responsibility, my first duty is to see that no one is prosecuted with all the majesty of the law unless I, as head of the bar, am satisfied that a case for prosecution lies against him.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): We asked for an investigation, not a prosecution.

Hon. Mr. Bales: A case based not on idle gossip or suspicion, but a case based on provable facts and supportable evidence.

Mr. Cassidy: Such as those facts given by the Premier?

Hon. Mr. Bales: There is no greater non-sense talked about the Attorney General's duty than the suggestion that in all cases the Attorney General ought to decide to prosecute merely because he thinks there is what the lawyers call "a case." It is not true, and no one who has held this office—

Mr. Roy: We asked for an investigation, not prosecution.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —supposes it is.

My duty in such matters has been clearly established by precedent; and so that there can be no misunderstanding, I feel obliged to restate it as both I, and, I believe, my predecessors in this province, have perceived it. In so doing, I can do no better than to adopt the words of Sir Hartley Shawcross who, as Attorney General of England, said in 1951:

The true doctrine is that it is the duty of an Attorney General, in deciding whether or not to authorize a prosecution, to acquaint himself with all the relevant facts, including, for instance, the effect which the prosecution, successful or unsuccessful as the case may be, would have upon public morale and order, and with any other considerations affecting public policy.

Mr. Lewis: Thank God for Hartley Shawcross. What else can the minister invoke—

Hon. Mr. Bales: To continue:

The responsibility—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Mr. Bales: To continue:

The responsibility of the eventual decision—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): As a matter of fact, the minister phoned him yesterday and asked for his opinion.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I was saying:

The responsibility of the eventual decision rests with the Attorney General and he is not to be put, and is not put, under pressure by his colleagues in the matter. Nor, of course, can the Attorney General shift his responsibility for making the decision onto the shoulders of his colleagues. If political considerations in the broad sense affect government in the abstract, it is the Attorney General applying his judicial mind who has to be the sole judge of those considerations.

With these principles in mind, I have this day instructed the senior law officers of the ministry to conduct a full and thorough investigation—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —to conduct a full and thorough investigation to ascertain whether or not there has been a breach of the criminal law, and to report to me thereon. In applying my "judicial mind" to their report, I would assure the House, Mr. Speaker, that there is one consideration which will be altogether excluded, and that is the repercussion of my decision upon my personal or my party's or the government's political fortunes, that is a consideration which never enters into account in any decision respecting the administration of criminal justice.

Mr. Cassidy: Would that we could believe that.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Shame! Shame!

Mr. Cassidy: Would that we could believe that from the minister. Another minister, maybe!

Hon. G. R. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Yes, the member is obviously a storefront lawyer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

An hon. member: Why doesn't the member get up and rebuke him for not telling the truth?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: If that was the case, he would have replied in this vein 48 hours ago.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, as soon as I have received—

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Or done something three weeks ago before he was pushed.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —the results of this investigation and determined my course of action, I will report to the House and to the public.

TAX REFORM PROGRAMME

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, today I will table four staff papers prepared by my ministry as part of the Ontario tax study series.

Members will be familiar with an analysis of income and property taxes in Guelph, which I mailed to them at home when it was published last month. It has also been sent to municipalities and has been the subject of widespread public discussion. I am sure it will be particularly useful in explaining the greatly increased equity in property taxation which will result from our new tax credit plan.

Today, I am releasing a study of federal-provincial shared cost programmes in Ontario. As members know, there is an urgent need for reform of the financing of shared cost programmes which together involved $1 billion in reimbursements from the federal government. This paper will assist all members to understand the size and complexity of these conditional grant programmes and the enormous leverage they exert on our own planning, priority setting and financing.

Mr. Speaker, I will also table two related documents, a review of issues in amending the Canada Pension Plan and PENSIM—Canada Pension Plan's Simulation Model—which is a highly sophisticated computer model for testing proposals to amend the Canada Pension Plan.

The last one is somewhat specialized and I have only provided copies to some of my colleagues and to the leaders of the two opposition parties. Although the printing is limited, my office will be pleased to make copies available to any other interested member.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Attorney General relative to his statement, which we accept as an honourable and proper one.

I would like to ask him if, in his submission of this matter to the law officers of the Crown, he will not equally emphasize—as well as what he has described as something based on gossip relating the government to Fidinam—the more important concept in my view, and that is that Fidinam itself has shown by its Telex messages that whether or not it got advantage it expected to get advantage.

I believe that is the essence of the information we put before the Attorney General yesterday. Can he assure us that this aspect of the case will be put before the law officers?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, in my statement I said it was to be a full and thorough investigation relating, of course, to the matter of criminal law. There is no limitation on it or upon my law officers. They are to make just that—a full and thorough investigation without any limitations from me whatsoever.

Mr. Singer: Supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, in view of the Attorney General's statement, is he prepared to advise his colleagues in government that the government should now halt all proceedings under any contracts that exist with Finnam until the report is made, particularly in view of the provisions of section 623, subsection 3, of the Criminal Code, with which I'm sure the Attorney General is fully familiar? If he's not, I could read it to him.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I don't have the wording of that section before me, nor can I recite it.

Mr. Singer: Is the Attorney General familiar with it?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I'd have to read it. I'm not at the moment familiar with that section.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, could I read it? Section 623 (3) of the Criminal Code provides that no person who is convicted of an offence under section 110—that was the section that my colleague from Ottawa East was referring to—has after that conviction capacity to contract with Her Majesty.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, an investigation has been ordered; such investigation is not completed yet of course. No conviction nor charges have been laid. So far as I am aware, there are no contracts or negotiations with Fidinam. There may be in other ministries, but I do not know of them. I shall certainly take into account the question of the hon. member, which I think is fair and reasonable.

Mr. Singer: By way of further supplementary, would the minister not consider, discretion being the better part of valour, at least until his investigations are complete, calling a halt to whatever might be going on presently?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I shall certainly make inquiries as to whether there are any other negotiations going on, and I shall take it up with my colleagues directly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West had a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: Would the Attorney General undertake to table in the House the actual report of the law officers of the Crown, rather than simply the opinion he forms as Attorney General on the basis of the material presented to him?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I would have to determine my course of action when I receive the report, because in some situations—

Mr. Cassidy: The minister's credibility is up on the block again.

Hon. Mr. Bales:—if I were to table the report, Mr. Speaker,—this is very important, not for me, but for others—if I were to table the report in those circumstances, I might prejudice the fair trial of some people.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): By way of a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, would the minister, in conducting the investigation, make certain that it is ascertained whether the $50,000 was deducted by Fidinam in calculating its taxable income under the Corporations Tax Act as an expense for earning its income?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the point raised by the hon. member will be brought to the attention of those carrying out the investigation.

Mr. MacDonald: Part of a full investigation, no doubt!

Hon. Mr. Bales: That's right.

Mr. Speaker: All right! The hon. member for Ottawa East with a supplementary.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Attorney General might advise when we can reasonably expect to have his report and his opinion reported to the House?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I have directed the law officers to carry out the report as expeditiously as possible, but I cannot put a time limit on it, nor would I.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. the Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I have a question of the Premier, Mr. Speaker. In view of the sensitivity and the undoubted importance of the matter brought to the attention of the House today by the Attorney General, would the Premier consider going the additional step in having the investigation upgraded to the status of a royal commission, so that in fact the investigation can be seen to be completely impartial—

Mr. Renwick: No way!

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—and so that it would seem to be done in the open rather than just for the benefit of the Attorney General, who then may or may not report not only his opinion but the findings to this House.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I would think there is some very obvious answers to that, actually outlined by his own colleague, the hon. member for Ottawa East.

We're dealing here—with great respect, and I've read the transcript very carefully—I think with statements that could even be described as allegations from the hon. member for Ottawa East that relate to a specific criminal charge. I would think, not being that knowledgeable in the law, that if one is to approach it from that standpoint, and that appears to be the relevant issue at this precise moment, that the only proper route is that route that is being suggested and decided by the Attorney General of this province.

CAMPAIGN FUND DISCLOSURES

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, if I may, in view of the foregoing, and regardless of what the Attorney General comes up with, would the Premier not agree that he should perhaps appoint a select committee of this Legislature to look into—

Mr. Lewis: Spare us!

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Why not?

Mr. Singer: We've had one for four years.

Mr. Reid: Well, my friends to the left have now become mind readers along with all their other attributes. I am suggesting a select committee to investigate and look into the entire matter of election and party financing in the Province of Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The hon. member has said enough.

Mr. Lewis: We have done that. We don't need a select committee. Just bring in legislation.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the member for Downsview has already made his observations, which would appear to contradict those of his colleagues seated behind him.

Mr. Reid: When is the Premier going to do something about it?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I can only observe to the members opposite that the question of election expenditures or expenses, the question of party financing, is a concern personally of mine and of my colleagues and the party that I head. I indicated to the press some two or three weeks ago that I personally was taking an interest in this matter. Just what route it will take, what structure may or not be developed I can not say, Mr. Speaker, at this point.

I must say to the hon. member that all the supplementary questions in the world on this occasion will not help me in that determination. I can only say, Mr. Speaker, that it is my intent—and I expressed this actually many months ago—that this matter would be dealt with. But it will be dealt with in a way that I think is constructive and proper. And as I say, it will not be determined here today—or perhaps for several days.

Mr. Lewis: In fact the events of the week are moving the Premier a little; that granite front is chipping.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Premier would be prepared to concede that his reference to the report of the committee that studied this matter—in which he inferred that the committee had approved of the change, of the purchase and investment—was in fact erroneous. That is, the committee didn't have before it the facts that are now being placed before the Legislature with regard to: (1) the $50,000 donation; and (2) the fact that it was used by the present Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton) before the committee that one of the major strengths of the Fidinam—

Mr. Speaker: What is the question—where is the question?

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I'm asking the Premier if he concedes that he was wrong in using these things to justify his position; that one of the strengths of the offer was the purchase by Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd., of the Workmen's Compensation Board headquarters, which was never consummated.

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, Mr. Speaker, I don't think it was improper at all. I would point out to the hon. member that if he is saying to me that in his responsibilities as a member of that standing committee in assessing the Fidinam proposal he came to a conclusion that was erroneous, that is his responsibility.

Mr. Deans: That's wrong!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, my statement was phrased—and it was phrased very carefully. When I—

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Carefully—that's right!

Hon. Mr. Davis:—when I indicated that I had been approached by a member of the press—Mr. Manthorpe from the Globe and Mail—two issues came to mind.

One issue was whether or not there was any influence, based on the reported statements in that particular newspaper, any influence on the cabinet or ministry as it related to that reported contribution.

The other issue came to mind as to whether or not the agreement between the Workmen's Compensation Board and Fidinam (Ontario) Ltd., or whatever corporate entity it is, was in itself a viable contract in the interests of the public.

Mr. Speaker, I did use the quotation from the standing committee, because that committee—of which the hon. member is a part—analysed that transaction and reported to this House that that contract in fact was in the public interest. There is just nothing inconsistent or contradictory in anything that has been stated.

Mr. Shulman: But they were misled.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): They were misled.

Mr. MacDonald: They were half informed.

Mr. Deans: On a supplementary question— one final supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: We'll let the hon. member for Wentworth pursue it with one supplementary.

Mr. Deans: Does the Premier agree that one of the major selling points as put forward by the present Minister of Transportation and Communications was Fidinam's agreement to purchase the existing WCB building, as set out on page 25 of the report of the committee of which I was a member.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I cannot comment as to the effect of the purchase or non-purchase of the property.

Mr. Lewis: That was integral to the agreement.

Mr. Deans: That was one of the main points.

Hon. Mr. Davis: What is relevant is that Fidinam was prepared—Fidinam under the agreement was prepared to purchase the building. No question about it.

Mr. Deans: And didn't.

Hon. Mr. Davis: But, Mr. Speaker, if there is an alternative use, and this was part of the cabinet decision, surely the hon. member for Wentworth isn't saying that if we can find an appropriate use at a price that is, as I understand it, somewhat below what market value would be, that we should not, in the public interest, avail ourselves of that opportunity—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The whole thing is a mess from the start.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Surely that would be completely inconsistent.

Mr. Cassidy: Did they pay the government $50,000 to take that part off its hands?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce, a supplementary?

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. The Premier is not smiling as much as he usually is. This might change his mind about his hearing.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I am always smiling.

Mr. R. K. McNeil (Elgin): Is the member for Grey-Bruce going to stay all afternoon?

Mr. Sargent: I'm going to try to.

Is the Premier aware that Mr. K. S. Thompson, the director of finance for the Workmen's Compensation Board, told me that he didn't know who put the deal through, that he had nothing to do with it? For a long time he has been in charge of all investments by the WCB. He doesn't know who put the deal through. Now could the Premier tell us who put the deal through?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I don't know Mr. Thompson. I have not discussed this with him.

The recommendation came from the Workmen's Compensation Board of the Province of Ontario, through the minister to the cabinet and was approved. I am not in a position to detail for the hon. member the assessment made by the Workmen's Compensation Board or what Mr. Thompson's role was or was not as far as that particular transaction is concerned. I am not familiar with Mr. Thompson.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: This will be the last supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: It was done by the general manager of the board. A safe chap named MacDonald.

Mr. Sargent: Right! In view of the fact that every investment deal goes through this man, is the Premier not concerned that he doesn't know and that the Premier doesn't know? And further to that I would like to ask the Premier, has the $15 million cheque been paid out yet? Those are my two points.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I shall endeavour to get the latter part of the information for the hon. member. I don't believe it has, but I shall find out.

Mr. Sargent: Does the Premier plan to hold it up?

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Treasurer if the programmes he announced this afternoon, particularly the municipal employment incentive programme, will allow the municipalities to go forward with capital works, or will the money available from the provincial government only be to assist in the actual payment of labour costs?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The money will largely be paid for labour costs. There may be some capital works involved at the municipal level, but the fund is largely for the employment side of the work. The work may be associated with capital works, but the fund is for the cost of the labour.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: The municipality then would put forward to whoever approves it at the provincial level a programme that could be, for example, the building of an arena, or a medical centre, or something like that, rather than simply an application for a certain number of dollars to employ a certain number of men. Is that right?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I may have some detail on the type of works that will be involved.

Mr. J. E. Stokes: (Thunder Bay): The Treasurer mentioned $35 million would be used for labour-intensive works. What is the other $15 million?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The other $15 million are for works by the various ministries.

This is the nature of the work that will be involved in the provincial-municipal employment programme—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If I might interrupt; would there be a copy of the statement for the use of the members since municipalities in our areas might be very much interested in what the Treasurer has to say?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes, I will see that the hon. leader gets one.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Then that will be good enough.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): A supplementary—

An hon. member: The hon. member didn't really want to know!

Mr. Speaker: Since the hon. Leader of the Opposition has asked a question and the hon. minister has answered it to his satisfaction; however, I think there can be supplementaries. He is going to get a copy of the report, is that not correct?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, supplementaries to my original question might surely be in order, if you would consider them in order.

Mr. Paterson: A supplementary on this question of financing, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I forget what it was, but we'll permit them!

Mr. Roy: It is a good supplementary.

Mr. Paterson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Are any of these funds in either of the two sectors specifically allocated to the disaster situation that occurred in my riding a couple of weeks ago, or should these municipalities enter into this programme outside this particular area of involvement?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: No, there is no relationship to the disaster and the disaster fund that is being developed now. They're separate programmes. I'm not too sure that I am aware yet, Mr. Speaker, what the nature of the supplementary questions were, but I'll send the details to the Leader of the Opposition as he requested.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have any other questions?

FARM TAX REBATE

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Treasurer how it was that his predecessor was able to send out the cheques last year early in October in payment to the farmers under the farm education tax rebate system and this year the cheques are not available as yet; and on inquiry his department said it would be several weeks before they would be paid.

Mr. Reid: There's no election this year!

Mr. Shulman: They're saving them till the next election!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why is it that his predecessor was so efficient at that and this Treasurer seems to be so lax?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I really don't know.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): It was election year. He had to do it last year; it was election year.

Mr. Stokes: It was a different situation!

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I said I really don't know how my predecessor was so efficient. I don't know the answer to that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well why doesn't the minister ask him so that the farmers will not look on him and this Conservative administration as simply playing politics with an important programme and with the farmers of this province?

They sent the cheques out a week before the election—

Mr. Speaker: Question!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Even "Wacky" Bennett wouldn't do a thing like that! This government has set a new standard.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They may not send them out for four years! Why not let them gather interest and send them out every four years?

Mr. Davis: Has the member got his cheque yet?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The members are aroused because of the foreign pressure lurking about the chamber, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald: Call in the Russian police!

Mr. Lewis: Alan Eagleson has been behind the benches, along with Kelly and Macaulay. They are all descending these days, looking toward the future.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Mr. Lewis: May I ask a question of the provincial Treasurer, Mr. Speaker? If my memory serves me right, last year's winter works programme won some $63 million from the government; then why are we spending $13 million less on this year's programme, given the relative unemployment figures?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure I can agree with the figure that the hon. member has stated. As far as I am aware, the programme that has been announced is very close in terms of dollars and nature of works to the one that was put into effect a year ago.

Mr. Lewis: I ask the minister to look at the discrepancy in the light of the non-contribution of federal funds.

May I further ask him whether he recognizes that if the unemployment level remains in Ontario at what it is now, at 5.6 per cent, then with his programme we will have 200,000 people unemployed in the months of February and March? How then can he bring in a programme of this kind, so lacking in numbers of jobs and in substance?

An hon. member: Good question!

Mr. Foulds: He can't answer that.

Mr. Deans: He's stumped again.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes, I think I am in a fair position to answer that. I suppose some of the related matters could be dealt with when the supplementary estimates to support the cost of this programme are laid before the House. I think that would be the time to discuss such matters, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: Fine! When will that be?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Very shortly.

Mr. Lewis: Later today, I suppose.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Not today. The member's motion, I am sure, wouldn't be in order yet.

Mr. Lewis: Not today? Well, we are waiting.

EXCLUSION OF UXBRIDGE TOWNSHIP FROM PITS AND QUARRIES LEGISLATION

Mr. Lewis: May I ask the Minister of Natural Resources, Mr. Speaker, whether he intends to apply the regulations under quarries legislation to Uxbridge township; and, if so, when?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Yes, Mr. Speaker, we hope to designate that particular township before this session comes to a close.

ZINC-LEAD SMELTER STUDY

Mr. Lewis: Thank you.

Can I ask the minister whether he yet received the report on the need for or the feasibility of a zinc-lead smelter in northern Ontario from Reimers and Associates Ltd.?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes, we have received that report.

Mr. Lewis: When will it be tabled?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, that particular report is being studied by the resources development policy field and a decision will be made known at the time we release it.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, since that report bears so heavily on the economy of the north at the moment, can the minister indicate to the House what its chief recommendations are? Should we not now know, since it has been completed?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Well, Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared at this time. It is being dealt with within the government and until they have had a chance to study it in detail, I think it will have to wait until that time is concluded.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has no further questions?

The hon. Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations has the answer to a question previously placed.

ONTARIO SECURITIES COMMISSION'S FAILURE TO LAY CHARGES

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, on Monday last the member for High Park asked the following question:

Why did the head of the Ontario Securities Commission instruct the employees of the commission not to lay charges in the case of the official who was proven to have lied to the commission as to the source of the funds which he had used to buy shares of Silver Shield? And in the course of the investigation, did the minister's commission determine if any official in the provincial Department of Natural Resources had purchased or been given shares of Silver Shield or International Mariner?

Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member is aware, a formal investigation into any matter relating to trading in the securities of Silver Shield Inc., by or on behalf of any person or company, is being carried out by the commission under section 21 of the Act. This investigation has been completed and a final report of the results of the investigation is being written for submission to the commission. The chairman has not received a report of the investigation and therefore has given no instructions whatsoever.

Mr. Shulman: That's not true.

As a supplementary, if I may, Mr. Speaker, has the minister asked the chairman if he gave such direction?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am sorry, I didn't hear the question. Did the member say, did I ask?

Mr. Shulman: Has the minister asked?

Hon. Mr. Clement: No, I have not.

Mr. Shulman: If the minister has not asked, how can he know?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have not asked the chairman because the chairman happens to be sick, and has been for the last 10 days.

Mr. Shulman: On what basis then does the minister give us his reply, if he hasn't asked?

Hon. Mr. Clement: On the basis of an inquiry that I directed to the commission in order to respond to the member's question of Monday last.

Mr. Shulman: As a further supplementary, if I may, may I ask the minister who told him the chairman had not given these directions if no one has bothered to ask the chairman?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I didn't say no one has bothered to ask the chairman. The member asked me if I had asked the chairman; I didn't ask the chairman anything.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Round the mulberry bush.

Mr. Shulman: As a supplementary, did any one ask the chairman if he had given such directions, and if anyone did, who did?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I presume that question was directed to the chairman.

Mr. Shulman: The minister presumes?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I presume it was, because I have a report in order that I could respond to the member's inquiry.

Mr. Shulman: Oh lord; that's pretty sick.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

ONTARIO FIRE CODE

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, I ask this question of the Treasurer with a serious sense of urgency and alarm. When will he implement the recommendations of the committee on uniform building standards for Ontario, which was set up by his predecessor, with particular reference to the adoption of an Ontario fire code, in order to prevent the kind of disaster that took place last night in New Orleans and two weeks ago in Chicago, and could happen in the big cities of Ontario at any time? That report, sir, was brought down in 1969.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Actually the question should go to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. The member should direct the question to my hon. friend.

Mr. Shulman: The member may have trouble.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, I shall direct the question; because we could have a disaster, sir, on any given day here, the same as they had there. I would like to know when this recommendation, which has been four years lying on somebody's desk, will be implemented. I consider the matter of grave and serious and alarming urgency.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Come on, John.

An hon. member: Look into it, John.

Mr. Givens: You'll have a fire tomorrow, John.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The question should be directed to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Mr. Lewis: He did.

Mr. Givens: I did.

Mr. Speaker: The question was so re-directed. The hon. Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations may respond if he wishes.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't know, Mr. Speaker, whether I am going deaf or it is noisy down here but I couldn't hear all the question. I understand it related to the building code, did it?

Mr. Givens: I will ask it again, sir. When will the minister implement the recommendation made by the committee on uniform building standards for Ontario—which was established by the former Minister of Municipal Affairs—and which the committee made, with specific reference to the recommendation, on the adoption of an Ontario fire code in order to prevent the possibility of the kind of fire disaster which took place in a high-rise building in New Orleans yesterday and two weeks ago in Chicago at the John Hancock building on the 79th storey? It could very easily happen in any big city in Ontario. I think it is a matter of great urgency and I ask the minister when he is going to implement that recommendation, which has now been sitting on somebody's desk for four years.

Hon. Mr. Clement: If I had known that the question was so long, I wouldn't have asked the member to say it over again.

Mr. Givens: The minister should have listened the first time.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member for York-Forest Hill is probably aware, we are in the process of studying a provincial building code. I think I mentioned this in the House a few days ago.

A committee was established shortly after that report; it was a committee consisting of people in the building trades, representing building inspectors and people in different crafts. The committee has completed a report which is now being reviewed. I hope to be able to advise this House more accurately later in this sitting when we might expect to have it introduced. It will be in the spring.

To be completely candid with the hon. member, I have not read the report in detail. It is my understanding there are certain matters in there pertaining to fire problems, but I will take that under advisement and refer back to him on whether it deals with it in any depth at all.

Mr. Givens: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I asked the minister whether he would not consider lifting the recommendations to impose a national or Ontario fire code out of these considerations and bring that in forthwith because of the fire hazard involved. If he waits for building standards to be discussed it will be another five years. The fire code should be adopted immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. minister wish to respond to the question pertaining to the fire code?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Speaker, if we had a fire code tomorrow, it doesn't mean that we won't have a fire the next day! The safety of this province insofar as fire is concerned has been under the supervision of the fire marshal's office and various fire fighting agencies. I submit that to bring in a code tomorrow, if we had one available, pertaining to fire problems only, would not resolve the problem. I am relying very heavily on the report of the people who are in the construction industry and in the building inspection industry to assist me in coming to that point.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: I have a question of the Minister of Natural Resources—

Mr. Givens: All the minister has to do is lift it out of the national code and put it in the provincial code. That's all he has got to do.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

RECONSTRUCTION OF OLD FORT WILLIAM

Mr. Foulds: Is the minister aware of—and if he is aware, is he prepared to investigate in detail—the reasons for the resignations of Dr. J. M. S. Careless of the University of Toronto as a historical consultant and Mr. Rempel as the engineering consultant to National Heritage Ltd., on the reconstruction project of Old Fort William?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of these resignations, but I will certainly make myself well informed of the circumstances.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary.

Mr. Foulds: Is it not true and is it not already well known within the minister's department that these two very well qualified men have resigned because the work is being rushed through without concern for historic authenticity, and that in fact $200,000 which the former Department of Lands and Forests already used—

An hon. member: Order!

Mr. Foulds: —to fund an archeological project in connection with the fort won't be of any use because the findings are not being used in the reconstruction of the site?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: As I said earlier, Mr. Speaker, I am certainly not aware of these charges and the reasons for the resignations, but I will make myself informed.

Mr. Foulds: One final supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister then agree with the president of National Heritage Ltd., one William Pigott, who has said that a company involved in such projects must "keep one's historical and one's business consciences separate"? Or is the minister willing to withdraw the contract from National Heritage Ltd. in view of the fact it obviously desires to turn Old Fort William into a Disneyland-like tourist trap?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, obviously I am not prepared at this time to comment on those remarks until I have informed myself fully of all the circumstances.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: I think surely there have been enough supplementaries on that topic. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

CIVIL SERVICE GROWTH

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I have a question. I don't know whether to ask it of Darcy or what; has he any authority there?

A question to the Premier, Mr. Speaker. How does the Premier justify the fact that the government is cutting back on hospitals and closing nursing homes when he and his empire builders here have increased the civil service? In the 10 years from 1961 to 1971 they increased their civil service 100 per cent? Why doesn't he start cutting back here and give the people the things they want back in the ridings instead of adding to his staff here?

Mr. Speaker: Question, question!

Mr. Lewis: And that is only in the Premier's department.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker I thought for a moment the member for Grey-Bruce was referring to the Premier's office, and I thought we might have had some lengthy dialogue on that particular issue.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): All in good time!

Hon. Mr. Davis: I'm delighted his horizons have been broadened recently—I could go on but I shan't.

I would be delighted to discuss this matter, or have the hon member make his very constructive observations, perhaps during the budget debate. I think to get into a detailed analysis of the reasons for the growth in the very dedicated public service of this province over an 11 to 12 year period, related to the growth in budget, the expanded government programmes which have been in the best interests of the people of this province, where they have demonstrated their support for this kind of programme over a number of years every four years—I think perhaps to do that we'd indulge ourselves in a very lengthy dissertation and debate which really, I say with respect Mr. Speaker, should not be part of the question period.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East was attempting to gain the floor.

DISCIPLINING OF MD

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker in the absence of the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) if I might direct a question to the Provincial Secretary for Social Development, he has been pretty quiet lately in that field. The question deals with this Dr. Jean Paul Drouin from the Montfort Hospital. Apparently he was found guilty of professional misconduct by the college, and I would ask the minister if he does not feel that the discipline imposed by the college is grossly inadequate in the circumstances, considering the consequence of his misconduct?

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, I don't feel qualified to discuss the results of the hearing before the college; but I'll be very glad to familiarize myself with the details. I would think the hon. member would be the first to know that in the delegation of authority here the college has jurisdiction in these fields, and of course this is how we in fact have had the matters of discipline in the professions dealt with in a number of areas. I assume the college, hearing all the facts, has dealt with the matter as they saw fit, through the deliberation of the man's peers.

Mr. Roy: If I might Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: I would like to bring to the minister's attention the fact that this doctor apparently was suspended, had his privileges suspended from the Montfort Hospital by the board of directors there, on September 22, 1972. I would ask him if in the light of these circumstances it is not high time there was more public input in this field?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member means more public input from the standpoint of the governing councils of specialists, then of course the hon. member will recall that last spring, prior to our summer recess, the Minister of Health did table legislative proposals with respect to the health disciplines legislation. In that particular package of course there is a great emphasis on the need to amend the legislation to provide just that particular point—more lay representation on the governing councils of the professions.

I might also say while I'm on my feet that I'd be very happy to discuss the hon. member's question with my colleague the Minister of Health in the light of the comments he has made this afternoon.

Mr. Roy: Will he report to the House?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

CONTROL OF FIREARMS

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): To the Solicitor General, Mr. Speaker: in the light of a report in one of the newspapers yesterday which gave it as a straight matter of fact, without qualification, that there are 200,000 pistols and revolvers in Metropolitan Toronto, of which only 80,000 pistols and revolvers are registered, would the Solicitor General investigate to see if such an incredible situation is true? And if it is true, what type of legislation or enforcement this House could bring in to eliminate at least 120,000 of those pistols and revolvers?

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, the matter of the registration of firearms comes with the jurisdiction of the federal government through the Criminal Code, which presently applies, basically, to the registration of restricted weapons. I would think the pistols and revolvers referred to by the hon. member would come within this classification. If there are 120,000 such weapons unregistered the owners of those weapons would be in breach of the law.

However, in the light of the question asked the other day, directed by the member for Riverdale to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, and I think in the light of the general public's interest in this matter, I would have a statement prepared on the details and responsibilities which lie in this field for our own edification.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

CHECKERBOARDING OF LOTS

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): To the hon. Attorney General: What does the government intend to do to rectify the situation caused by his going against his own legal advice arising out of the Forfar decision and the checkerboarding of lots?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, we did not go against our own legal advice.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister hired a firm which gave him advice.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I didn't engage any outside firm there at all.

Mr. Lawlor: The minister did too—Cassels.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The government, a year ago directed certain questions by way of a stated case to the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal in hearing that matter, advised it did not wish to deal with it until such time as the Supreme Court of Canada had dealt with the Forfar case and given its decision. The matter in reference to the stated case is now proceeding, and advertisements will shortly be placed in the newspapers so that all persons who are interested may appear when the Court of Appeal deals with it, and I anticipate it will deal with it in January next year.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

POLICE TREATMENT OF ACCUSED

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Solicitor General. Is the Solicitor General prepared to advise whether or not he will take action, as suggested by the civil liberties group who made a presentation this morning, and direct the police along the lines of advising accused people of their rights and their rights to silence, and taking reasonable steps to effect communication between the accused and their counsel, and instruct police departments and officials that they should conduct no custodial interrogations unless certain safeguards are first undertaken?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is aware that this was a presentation to the policy field committee. We had a very complete presentation. We also had a very thorough discussion relevant to points of view, because the petitioners were presenting one point of view; others of us asked questions. The matter will now be considered in conjunction with the members of the policy field, by itself and in the light of perhaps much broader considerations that have to deal with the total aspect of the administration of criminal justice. Then the government will deal with the matter and the instructions will proceed from that.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary: In view of the fact that none of the suggestions are new—all of them have been made many times in this House—has the Solicitor General no opinions in regard to any of these submissions, or is he going to start another unending series of consultations, investigations and appointing of committees?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, the Solicitor General does have opinions but he will only be part of the total consideration. It hasn't been kicked around—it hasn't been around for a number of years. It goes back to—

Mr. Singer: Oh, it has been around for many years.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: It goes back to 1066 and all that, as a matter of fact—

Mr. Singer: Well, even the minister should have had enough time!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Certain aspects of it, I think, will continue to go on for many years, but we will be dealing with these specifics currently.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A question of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister consider using his—

Mr. Speaker: Order please! The hon. member for Ottawa East has a supplementary, which I will permit.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary to my colleague's question of the Solicitor General talking about accused's rights. Has he ever sent directives to his police forces, subsequent to the Supreme Court of Canada decision, saying that an accused could call his lawyer before taking a breathalyser test? Did he ever send directives to police forces subsequent to that Supreme Court decision?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Roy: What were the directives?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I'd be pleased to provide the hon. member with a copy of the directive.

Mr. Speaker: Now the hon. member for Windsor West.

ELEVATOR STRIKE

Mr. Bounsall: A question of the Minister of Labour: Would the minister consider using the considerable power of his office to intervene now and personally in the almost three-month strike between the union of elevator contractors in the province and the elevator manufacturers in the province, as a result of which strike many buildings and apartments cannot now be occupied?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to my hon. friend, I can assure him that we're not only considering, but we are presently having talks at the top level of our officials. I'm sure he'll understand that this is a national strike to a certain extent, but we are dealing here in Ontario with the three locals of Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa; and talks are going on presently.

Mr. Bounsall: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Is the minister unaware that the union and the manufacturers across Canada have agreed that they will accept the Ontario settlement as the national settlement; and as such the responsibility lies very heavily on Ontario and the officials of the minister's department to arrive at an agreement with them.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I would hope that we should be able to do so. We would like to have a settlement as soon as possible. We are certainly not dragging our feet in this strike. We realize how serious it is, particularly for the apartment developers, and that it could eventually cost a number of jobs if it's not settled. But all I can say today is that we are actively engaged in calling meetings with top officials.

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has now expired. I regret that there were numerous members who wanted to get in on the question period but whom I could not get in.

Mr. Singer: He can hardly restrain his regrets.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton presented the Public Accounts report for the year 1971-1972.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The Treasurer gives the public accounts faster than his predecessor.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson from the standing administration of justice committee, in the absence of Mr. Carruthers, presented the committee's report which was read as follows and adopted:

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments:

Bill 209, An Act to amend the Land Titles Act.

Bill 210, An Act to amend the Registry Act.

Mr. Speaker: Shall these bills be ordered for third reading?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member doesn't mean it.

Mr. Speaker: Bills 209 and 210, which have been reported back from the standing administration of justice committee, shall they be ordered for third reading?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Agreed! I am sorry.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Keep him updated.

Mr. Speaker: Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko presented the report of the Ontario Police Commission for the year ended December 31, 1971.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

HOSPITAL LABOUR DISPUTES ARBITRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Guindon moves first reading of bill intitled, An Act to amend the Hospital Labour Disputes Arbitration Act.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the bill is to reduce delays in the arbitration process by abridging the existing time limits before arbitration begins and the duration of the arbitration, and by making the date of the giving of the arbitration award the date when the award is effective.

The bill also permits arbitration by a single arbitrator upon agreement and provides for multiple arbitration of several hospital disputes. It also limits the period of time an award is to be operative.

The bill requires the immediate termination of any strikes or lockout of persons employed in a stationary power plant that is operated principally for one or more than one hospital; that is in effect when the bill comes into force and requires arbitration of the matters in dispute.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

THIRD READINGS

The following bills were given third reading upon motion:

Bill 209, An Act to amend the Land Titles Act.

Bill 210, An Act to amend the Registry Act.

ROYAL ASSENT

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, His Honour awaits to give assent to certain measures.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario entered the chamber of the legislative assembly and took his seat upon the throne.

Hon. W. Ross Macdonald (Lieutenant Governor): Pray be seated.

Mr. Speaker: May it please Your Honour, the legislative assembly of the province has, at its present sitting thereof, passed certain bills to which, in the name of and on behalf of the said legislative assembly, I respectfully request Your Honour's assent.

The Clerk Assistant: The following are the titles of the bills to which Your Honour's assent is prayed:

Bill 190, An Act to amend the Legislative Assembly Act.

Bill 209, An Act to amend the Land Titles Act.

Bill 210, An Act to amend the Registry Act.

Bill 216, An Act to establish the McMichael Canadian Collection.

Bill 223, An Act to amend the Ministry of Agriculture and Food Act.

Bill 227, An Act to amend the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act.

Bill 228, An Act to amend the Separate Schools Act.

Clerk of the House: In Her Majesty's name, the Honourable the Lieutenant Governor doth assent to these bills.

The Honourable the Lieutenant Governor was pleased to retire from the chamber.

Clerk of the House: The third order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

House in committee on Bill 180, An Act to amend the Business Corporations Act.

Mr. Chairman: I believe there were to be some—

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): On section 40—

Mr. Chairman: Perhaps we should just wait a moment in order to clarify the numerous small amendments which I believe were indicated.

Mr. Deacon: Before 40? We were on section 40.

Mr. Chairman: We will be back to section 40. There were a number of amendments, as I recall, because there was an amendment to an earlier section which required certain housekeeping amendments afterward.

The hon. minister?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak to the question of amendments the other day. You will recall that the New Democratic Party agreed to stacking. Subsequently a vote was taken and certain amendments proposed at that time were defeated. It was not my understanding that all of them were stacked. I have spoken to the Clerk of the House about it.

The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Renwick) made an amendment referring to section 13 which I had agreed the following day during debate we would not oppose. I was under the impression that that was not included in the stacking, and in effect I think it was stacked.

I discussed it very briefly with the member and perhaps, should the House consent, he might wish to move that amendment at this time, referring to section 13, and then we would have it specifically on the record.

Mr. Chairman: Section 13?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Section 13 of the bill.

Mr. Chairman: This was a motion, as I understand it, by the hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, the amendment, if the House agrees to revert to clause 13 of the bill, would be to delete from the provisions of subsection 2 of section 39 of clause 13 of the bill, the words "or may purchase any of the issued shares of its holding body corporate," and I so move, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I just make one comment—that I assume the minister will move the sequential amendments required by the removal of that provision of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Clement: That is correct, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Shall this amendment carry?

Carried.

Does the hon. minister have amendments before 40 that relate to this? If not, we will carry on with the discussion of section 40.

Hon. Mr. Clements: My counsel is here; I will get some particulars from him on that, as to any other sections to which the change in section 13 relates, and I will advise you.

Mr. Chairman: I understand that it is a recurring phrase in various sections, and if the House would consent we will have it deleted from the printing for the third reading where it does appear in the bill.

Mr. Chairman: It is agreed to?

Mr. Renwick: Yes, we would agree with that so that when it appears it will be reprinted at the time of third reading.

Mr. Chairman: So noted.

Now, the hon. member for York Centre on section 40.

Mr. Deacon: Near the end of the debate last time, I was bringing to the attention of the minister the fact that as the wording now stands in section 40, subsection 146, the loss to which the directors would be jointly and severally liable would be any actual loss to the corporation; it wouldn't necessarily relate to the contravention that is described thereby. I therefore wish to move that the following words be added after the word "corporation" in the ninth line of section 40, subsection 146: "occasioned thereby." This would clearly indicate, Mr. Chairman, that there be no liability for loss beyond the actual loss arising out of the contravention.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Deacon moves that section 40, subsection 146 of the bill be amended by the addition of the following words after the word "corporation" in the ninth line: "occasioned thereby."

Does the hon. minister have a copy of this, would he like a copy of it or does he have any comments?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I can appreciate the concern of the hon. member for York Centre. I think, as I understand it, he wants to tie this down so that the liability would be limited to that arising out of the contravention. I have the benefit of my counsel here today, and I think the hon. member might consider withdrawing his amendment if I can use this wording, which apparently has some legislative value. The wording is "arising out of such contravention", after the word "corporation" in the ninth line. This is pretty much saying what the member is, but apparently there is some value to that, I don't know.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, I would be delighted because that was my original wording and I changed it to the other at the suggestion of the minister's counsel. So he can take his choice, as long as it is clearly designated. So, I'll amend that motion to where it says "adding the words 'arising out of such contravention'."

Mr. Chairman: Is the member for York Centre making the new amendment?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have no objection to that.

Mr. Chairman: Those in favour of Mr. Deacon's amendment?

Does Mr. Deacon's amendment carry?

Carried.

Any other comment, question or amendment to any section up to and including section 60? Nothing up until section 60?

The hon. minister has an amendment to section 61.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, I move that section 61 of the bill be amended by renumbering it as subsection 1 and adding a subsection 2 as follows:

Subsection 1 of section 272 of the said Act is further amended by adding after the words "that was valid immediately before this Act comes into force", in the third line of the subsection, the words "but which contravene this Act."

The purpose of this amendment is to make it clear that only those pre-1971 charter and bylaw provisions that contravene the Act, will become invalid after Jan. 1, 1975.

Mr. Chairman: Moved by the minister that section 61 of the bill be amended by renumbering it as subsection 1 and adding a subsection 2 as follows:

Subsection 2. Subsection 1 of section 272 of the said Act is further amended by adding after the words "that was valid immediately before this Act comes into force", in the third line of the subsection, the words "but which contravene this Act."

The member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Mr. Chairman, in this section—and it hasn't to do with this amendment—if I may speak to the section in general. Why is the date of effectiveness of this not until Jan. 1, 1975? Why do we delay that long? Why wouldn't it be Jan. 1, 1973, for example?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Mr. Chairman, it has been recommended that the transition provisions be cancelled within two years and hence the two-year period from Jan. 1, 1973, in effect to Jan. 1, 1975.

Mr. Chairman: Shall the motion carry?

Mr. Deacon: Just a moment.

Mr. Chairman: Sorry. The member for York Centre.

Mr. Deacon: Can the minister explain to me why it has to take that time? Why do we pass legislation now that doesn't take effect for another two years and two months?

Hon. Mr. Clement: I am advised that the purpose is to give sufficient time to corporations so that they can hold their shareholders' meetings in order to make the necessary changes.

Mr. Deacon: Doesn't this Act prevail over all corporation bylaws? Aren't we saying here if we make this effective forthwith, that in effect it would be binding the corporations, even though their own bylaws hadn't been amended? Why do we worry about corporations amending their bylaws, when in effect we have given the minimum standards to which we are agreeable? Not being a lawyer I don't understand these things as well as the minister might, and I hope he will explain it to me.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I have to just reiterate that it is necessary. It is mandatory under the Business Corporations Act that certain meetings, shareholders' meetings and so on, be held annually. It was felt by having the two-year extension period it would provide the time necessary to hold the meetings.

Now, there is no problem really in small companies—even in getting a shareholders' meeting together. But in some large corporations there are extensive plans that have to be made and a tremendous amount of printing prepared to send out and circulate to the shareholders, which sometimes number thousands of people. Rather than tie them right down and say they have to do it in six or eight or 12 months, we just arbitrarily picked the two-year period. There is no magic in two years other than it would give most of them adequate time, in the opinion of my ministry officials.

Mr. Chairman: Shall this motion carry?

Motion agreed to.

Shall this section as amended stand as part of the bill?

Section 61 agreed to.

Are there any other comments, questions or amendments to any later section of the bill? If not, shall the bill, as amended, be reported?

Bill 180, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves the committee of the whole House rise and report and ask for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill with certain amendments and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

MOTOR VEHICLE FUEL TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Grossman moves second reading of Bill 222, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate that the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) is present in the House while we have second reading of the bill because it removes a long-standing problem and irritation as far as the farmers of the province are concerned. Up until the proclamation of this bill it has been necessary for farmers to pay the full tax on every gallon of gas they buy, even though it would not be used on the highways but in the operation of tractors and other farm machinery.

The problem of sending in for a rebate of the tax has not been too great since some of the minister's predecessors have got away from the forms in duplicate and so on—it has been simplified considerably—although it is still necessary to very carefully append the receipted bills, giving the numbers of the invoices, the specific dates that the gasoline was delivered, when it was paid for and so on.

Farmers over the years have been trained—by the government, I guess—to keep careful track of this, but there has always been the complaint that even if you decide to apply for the rebate once a year, which is not sort of an impractical suggestion, you'll find that you do not get a full rebate of the tax for the gasoline you bought more than eight months ago. It has been an inconvenience, and we welcome the decision of the government to make it more convenient for farmers to buy fuels for tractors and other machines without paying the tax.

Once again the minister might recall that in days gone by when the fuel was available without tax, it had been the practice of governments to colour the fuel with dye—purple gas, as I recall—so that a farmer wouldn't make an oversight or a mistake and get any of the tax-free fuel in an automobile or a truck that would be using the highways, and therefore the fuel would be used illegally.

I'm not sure what precautions the minister envisages in this connection—and I trust that I have not misconstrued the principle or the intent of the section—but I suppose that the normal information would be required by the Department of Revenue; that is, what machines would be used and what acreages of land would be under cultivation, so that a normal assessment of the amount of gasoline would be quite readily undertaken.

Of course, as a farmer myself I can assure the minister that he need have no continuing or deep concern that anyone in the agricultural industry would trespass in any way on the regulations that he might put forward from time to time. We have an excellent reputation along these lines, and I think probably this is why the minister feels he can make this welcome change at this time.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): I trust the farmers.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right.

The other matter that I wanted to mention briefly once again is something that we can support; that is, that the government is taking measures so that it can control what might be construed as an abuse of the requirement that people using our roads pay the tax on fuel, where some of the large transport trucks using our roads to go from one section of the United States to another—let's say from Michigan through to Buffalo in New York State—could fill up their large tanks with fuel in the United States and travel the distance of the southern part of Ontario and never have to stop and buy a nickel's worth of fuel on which tax would be payable.

I welcome this change, which I think will give the Revenue people in the province a better opportunity to get the proper revenue which we should expect from these enormous, heavy trucks using our highway system.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Speaker, the recommendations of the Smith committee on this particular kind of taxation—and they went into it very thoroughly—was that some rough allocation of road user costs over against the tax ought to be established. That has been completely and totally ignored by the government to date.

The estimate made by that committee at page 273 is that using the method we have described, the Department of Transport has estimated the user responsibility for road costs at 68 per cent. This is the weighted average for all classes of rural and urban roads. A secret report which was held in very strict confidence by the government over a number of years, disclosed to us some years ago that the amount of the levy is 110 per cent, not 68 per cent, in this particular regard. I want to bring that particular onerous incursion to the attention of the minister.

Apart from that, we accede to the legislation as it stands. It widens the definition of fuel and brings into the fuel base the additives that may be used in this particular regard. Also to be commended is the granting of the new certification procedure, that certificates of exemption will be issued to farmers and fishermen of this province and it will not be necessary to go through the bureaucratic red tape and rigmarole of refunding this money in the future. That is a bright and progressive move on the part of the government, which will obviate a lot of internal paperwork and a good deal of irritation on the part of farmers and fishermen in this particular regard, standing around and waiting interminably for the government to get the refunds out. So that whole situation will be obviated.

There are two other areas that I wish to refer to. One of them is that for purposes of prosecutions the minister is now extending the power of action not only against the major oil companies or those people who do the collection of the tax—that is, the registrants; there are about 16 of them, I understand, who collect the tax and then remit it to the government—but to those who are purchasers. I had wondered a bit when reading it what the motivation of the government under this head was, whether it felt that the present legislation was not perfectly adequate to the need, and why not.

The last thing I would want to mention is the business of placing under regulation the preponderance and weight of the content of this kind of legislation. I particularly wondered what the minister specifically had in mind—in his exemptions under clause (f), which is very wide—in exempting from all of the tax imposed by this Act fuel that would be used by specified persons, or in a specified manner, or in a specified type of machinery or craft, and relieving registrants from their obligations to collect. Does the minister particularly have aviation fuel in mind, or is there a wider range of fuels and exemptions?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What section is that?

Mr. Lawlor: That is section 11, where you propose to do under regulation what you don't propose to do within the terms of the legislation itself. I wanted to check in second reading, because I think that this is an inadmissible principle, by and large. Regulations are to define the nitty-gritty. But in a manner that is drawn as widely as that, which has had as much substance going to the core of the legislation as that sort of thing does, my contention is that this ought to be contained in black and white, known to all within the terms of the legislation itself. But then, of course, I could be wrong.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Kitchener.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, I just have a few brief comments to make with respect to the bill, and those are on one particular area that comes up in subsection 9 of section 2.

It would appear to me most commendable that the minister is attempting to obtain tax for the people of Ontario for gasoline which is being purchased outside of our province and being used by vehicles, as my leader had said, which probably go from Michigan to Buffalo without using any additional fuel that is purchased within the province. But there is one thing that I am rather concerned about, and that is the enforcement with respect to Subsection 9. It would appear, that the minister is proposing some sort of border check-point system whereby vehicles entering the province have to have the volume of gasoline in their tanks recorded. If security for that tax which is otherwise due is on hand, it can be applied against the tax which, with the use of Ontario-purchased gasoline, would have resulted in a benefit to the provincial coffers within Ontario.

I suppose when the vehicle leaves the province a check will again be made on its fuel tank capacity and the calculation of the tax will then result. If the tax is paid, all is well. If the security is on hand, it can be used to cover the tax we should be receiving.

It would seem that in subsection 9, the minister is going to make some provision to have a member of his department or someone in authority enter the business premises of a person who is not a registrant but who has supplied gasoline—

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Which section was that?

Mr. Breithaupt: This is subsection 9 of section 2, at the bottom of page 2 in the bill. It would appear as though he were going to have some officer or agent of his department or of some force or other enter the premises of a supplier.

My question is, what happens if that supplier is, in fact, outside Ontario? How will the minister deal with the obvious problem of the suppliers of gasoline in Detroit or Buffalo, shall we say, who are obviously not going to have much interest in having provincial authorities from Ontario come into their business premises in the United States of America.

Perhaps the minister's collection of security is going to be sufficient to overcome any problems but I put it to him that the area in which breaches of this Act are likely to occur, deal particularly with the transportation of goods from one point in the United States to another through southern Ontario. If the minister is going to try to look into the books of companies supplying gasoline within the states of Michigan or New York, I don't think that he is going to have much luck. It would appear, certainly, that that kind of search of records in another state of the United States is not going to be a possibility unless, of course, the governments of those states are prepared to accept a responsibility in this area.

If the minister is attempting to have some form of reciprocity with respect to tax collection on the sales tax situation or the taxes that are going to be made available through the amendments in this Act, he could perhaps describe to the House what procedures are going to be followed in order to attempt to inspect books of companies outside Ontario which are supplying the gasoline.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, part of what I have to say is an extension of what the member for Waterloo has just said but in a somewhat different context.

I note in the bill that the minister has omitted the provisions which are in the present Act with respect to the confidentiality of information obtained in the exercise by his officers of any of the rights of entry and search and inspection for books and records. There is in the present Act a section which presumes at least to protect the confidentiality of the information which is obtained. The Act goes on to provide a section under which the minister may communicate information on a reciprocally confidential basis to other jurisdictions in Canada for the purpose of enforcement of the provisions of the Act.

It would appear to me to be advisable at the present time that the minister should seriously look at every one of the taxing statutes in the Province of Ontario, on this whole question of the confidentiality of the information supplied to government through the medium of tax returns, or through the medium of other methods by which a minister such as the Minister of Revenue has access to information about individual taxpayers of the province.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Excuse me, I wonder if the hon. member would clarify that? Do I understand him to say that we have removed this from the Act?

Mr. Renwick: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: What section of the Act was it in before?

Mr. Renwick: I was looking at section 19 of the present Act and I don't find a comparable section—if, of course, there is a comparable section, my comments are not as pertinent as that.

If the minister will look in the present Act at section 19 he will find that there is a specific provision that the information obtained under the Act is to be kept secret and confidential. It would appear to me that some such provision should be maintained in this Act, if I am correct in my perusal of the present bill that in one way or another it has been omitted.

I think it is fair to say that this whole question of access to confidential information furnished to taxing officers of the Crown is one of great concern to the individual citizen in the province.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Perhaps I could clarify this right at this stage. This is not a completely rewritten Act, but only some amendments to the existing Act. I don't have the old Act before me, but if the provision is contained within the old Act, it remains there—unless it's been amended here and we haven't amended it.

Mr. Renwick: I'm glad to have the minister's assurance about that.

The second point that I would like to make is whether the minister should not give consideration to some kind of a tax appeal tribunal, rather than providing for tax appeals to go to the Supreme Court of Ontario. It's an already overburdened court. It would appear to me that there is a place within the Province of Ontario for the minister to consider some more informal and effective method of tax appeal, rather than to require these appeals to go through the Supreme Court.

The third point that I would like to ask the minister about is identical with that of the member for Kitchener. That is, what is the procedure by which he intends to establish the tax which is payable by vehicles which have tanks in excess of 40 gal., because in that case we have again a provision inserted into the statute providing for motor vehicles to be stopped on the highway for this purpose.

There are other purposes for which one can be stopped on the highway—under the Highway Traffic Act and, indeed, under the Criminal Code—but I would ask the minister to outline to us the changes which are reflected in this bill which are obviously designed to bring into the taxing net of the province additional revenue from those persons who bring substantial quantities of fuel into the Province of Ontario in their vehicles.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Essex South.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a few remarks concerning this bill to the minister, whom I've always personally liked. Certainly in my eyes he has increased in stature with the introduction of these particular amendments to the bill.

Mr. Deacon: Don't be modest, smile! The minister used to like flattery.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): He doesn't know what the bill's all about.

Mr. Paterson: I don't know whether he's achieved an award from one of the oil companies or not; I can't quite see the badge he is wearing—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He is the farmer's friend.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Couldn't he wear a bigger pin?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I am working toward a doctorate in agriculture.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Another one?

Mr. Reid: Fertilizer production anyway.

Mr. Paterson: Mr. Speaker, I represent an area that possibly has more tractors per 100 acres than any other constituency in Ontario, and on behalf of the farming population in our area I would certainly like to commend the minister on taking these steps and removing the necessity of making an application for a rebate.

Certainly I and my colleagues have been requesting this for a number of years and—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Demanding it.

Mr. Paterson: It certainly is pleasing to see this come about.

Similarly, I do happen to represent the two largest commercial fishing ports in Ontario, the ports of Kingsville and Wheatley. These fishing fleet owners are similarly getting assistance in relation to this bill at this time.

There is one area that I wish the minister possibly could have moved on. I realize that it isn't contained in the principle of this particular bill. However, it does deal with non-road use, such as the self-propelled farm vehicles, and it involves commercial fishermen. However, no leeway was given to non-road use vehicles such as tugs, which operate on the Great Lakes, and the earth-moving equipment that is utilized by large contractors. I think the imposition of this tax early last year certainly placed a hardship on some of these people and I hope that the minister, in due course, would take a look at this particular section to see exactly what has happened to these two industries.

The second principle in this bill has to deal with the border situation and the entry of US vehicles. Here again, in my area, we have the most-used entry point into Ontario, or Canada, from the United States. Those of us who live along Highway 3 and close to 401 have been watching these huge transport trucks come through our province from Detroit to Buffalo for many years. We questioned exactly what was going on.

I do hope that the sections in this Act dealing with this particular matter have been achieved and will fit into some sort of a complementary agreement with our neighbouring states of Michigan, Ohio and Illinois. There is a fair concentration of transport vehicles emanating from companies based in Windsor and Essex county, which daily ply the highways in these three states and in fact from coast to coast in the United States.

I think we welcome this change. I know on occasions I've had conversations with officials in the gasoline tax branch concerning matters relating to Canadian-owned transport trucks which travel in the States. They have clarified the situation there to my edification, and I just hope that the amendments here are complementary and will in no way jeopardize our transport companies that utilize the US highways.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Rainy River.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just have a few comments in regard to this bill, somewhat in the nature of those that my colleague has just outlined—and that is relating to the fact that there has been what I would call an omission in the bill. The minister is providing a form for farmers and commercial fishermen for the tax rebate. But there are a lot of tourist operators and a lot of places, such as Indian reserves and isolated communities, where the main source of power is a diesel-fuelled generator. Diesel fuel is used in these generators to provide electricity, light and so forth, for these communities and for tourist camps especially.

I understand that under the present setup tourist operators, for instance, can apply for a rebate from the minister's department, but it is not the whole rebate that is available to fishermen and to farmers. I believe the rebate is something like 25 cents to farmers and fishermen. The tourist operator who is using diesel fuel to provide electrical energy receives a rebate of somewhat less than the full 25 cents.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Eight cents.

Mr. Reid: Eight cents, I am sorry. I wonder if the minister would be prepared to amend his bill to include tourist operators using diesel fuel. This would be the only place where they would use it.

As a matter of fact the minister's colleague sitting beside him might be able to provide some insight into that question. I think the Minister of Community and Social Services (Mr. Brunelle) would agree with me that this is of some concern to the tourist camp operators. I wonder if the minister would amend the bill to provide the full rebate also to tourist camp operators in those other isolated communities who use diesel fuel to produce their electrical outlets.

Mr. Speaker: Any other hon. members wish to address this bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank those hon. members who have given me a few crumbs of compliments. It is hard for the revenueur to—

Mr. Reid: The farmers of Rainy River thank you.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—satisfy anyone. It is nice to know I have satisfied someone here. The hon. members opposite may rest assured that we always have the concern of the farmers at heart and that we trust them implicitly. That is why we have been able to put this system into effect.

Insofar as the member for Lakeshore's comments regarding the Smith report are concerned—he referred to the user tax and the Smith report's references to user tax as against the present system—I am afraid that is one of those areas where I am going to have to tell the hon. member that it is a matter of tax policy. It is not within my competence, or at least within my jurisdiction, to discuss. He would have to discuss that with the Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton).

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The minister just collects it?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: That is a budgetary matter; that is correct. I just collect it. Insofar as questions and comments are referred to me in respect of the administration of the tax, I am pleased to answer those questions. What we are attempting to do in these bills is to make sure that the revenues of the province are collected in a fashion—

Mr. Stokes: I would like to know what the minister is going to do with the $2.5 million registration for snowmobiles.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—which will provide the revenues necessary, but at the same time not make it difficult for the taxpayer, and to make sure that we administer the tax in a fashion in which we should be expected to administer it. When the hon. member for Lakeshore discusses it with the Treasurer, I am sure that he will be told—and he might as well be forewarned—if we reduce the tax here we have got to make it up someplace else. I am sure he will have some suggestions for the Treasurer at that time.

I think it was the hon. member for Lakeshore who did ask a question about the matter of the amendment which deals with the actions that can now be taken against purchasers as well as vendors. I think I am correct in stating that the hon. member for Lakeshore asked that. The hon. member will appreciate, of course, that the motor vehicle fuel tax and the gasoline tax are very difficult taxes to administer. There are so many permutations and combinations in the handling of these fuels that, quite frankly, I think it could engage one's attention for months on end in an attempt to get a rational collection of these taxes, a rational formula, without arriving at a conclusion which could be considered 100 per cent rational. It is just impossible to do it. It is impossible to be consistent.

The hon. members may rest assured that with my temperament it isn't easy to live with this, because I like these things to be nice and tidy and clean but it is impossible.

Mr. Reid: The minister used to do that in housing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Actually it is necessary because of the possibility—indeed my staff tells me that there is evidence—of collusion in some cases. The only possible way to protect the revenues against collusion is to make the purchaser responsible and answerable as well for the purchases he has made. After all, we are not talking about someone going in and buying five or 10 or 15 gal of gas. We are talking about huge amounts of fuel. We are talking about 200, 300, 400, and 1,000 gal at a time. Therefore, any purchaser who may be buying this fuel without tax is obviously not doing it inadvertently and without the knowledge that he is breaking the law. I think that pretty well explains the reason for having to put that into the Act.

Now as to the question of the exemptions under section 11, essentially this is another positive approach to the collection of these taxes. It means that between the sessions of the Legislature, if it turns out that there is an injustice in respect of the administration of this Act, if there is something that has been unforeseen or some use that the tax was not designed for, then we are in a position to make an exemption.

I am sure the hon. members would want us to be in that position, because after all if we give an exemption that is an improper one, I am sure we will hear about it from the hon. members opposite. There is that control over it.

Mr. Lawlor: Not necessarily. It's pretty secretive stuff.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, I am sure we will hear about it.

The hon. member for Riverdale referred to the possibility of a more informal tax appeal against a tax assessment. I am sure the hon. member will appreciate that this is the first time we have put the right of a taxpayer to make an appeal into this Act. Heretofore he has had no such right.

I am advised that there was a sort of an informal appeal to the minister. That appeal really wasn't legislated for, and that's the kind of appeal I don't like. I think a person should have that right. He now has the right to appeal to the minister; and if he's not satisfied with that, he now has the right to appeal to the Supreme Court.

I am advised too that insofar as appealing in this manner is concerned, it is similar to the kind of an appeal that was suggested by the Canadian Bar Association to the Smith committee. I can't recall whether the Smith committee commented on that or not, or whether they approved of it.

If the hon. member can think of some more informal or less formal appeal that would do the same job, I would be glad to consider it. I wouldn't want to consider making a change in the Act at this time. It wouldn't be advisable, I am sure he would agree, until we gave it some considerable thought. However, if he has any suggestions, I would be pleased to receive them.

Regarding the other question, which I believe was asked by the hon. member for Kitchener, I am not too sure I caught the import of the question, but I think it had to do with the methods we intend to use to control the use of fuel by out-of-town truckers.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Out-of-province.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I should say, out-of-province truckers.

Mr. Breithaupt: Mr. Speaker, if I could, my particular point concerned subsection 9, where the ministry appears to be able to go into any supplier in order to look at the records and make sure that everything is in order. My question basically was, how are we going to have authority to go to the records of suppliers outside Ontario? Is the minister planning some reciprocity with the governments of Michigan and New York? Or just what does he propose to do? It would seem to me that he would not ordinarily have that right, and of course this is the area in which the greatest abuse could occur.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, no doubt there are some abuses, and this is one of the factors I was thinking about when I mentioned that it is a very difficult tax to control.

One method is to stop them and check their mileage, we know how far they have come, so that has some control. However, I am advised that where there is no reciprocity possible, in fact there is fairly decent control in respect of the arrangements made through the truckers. I am by no means going to suggest that this is going to solve the problem. It is another attempt to resolve the problem and hopefully it will work.

I want to thank the hon. member for Essex South for his kind comments about this bill. I should say to the hon. members, if they don't mind this bit of immodesty, that they will find that when I bring these bills forward as in respect of one of the tax bills—I forget which one it was at the first part of the last session—that we did make some changes, even though we had a battle with the federal government over the bill because we were dealing with a model Act.

Wherever possible, we want to make sure that nothing which is arbitrary or unnecessary to impose on the public is going to be imposed. We will give them the right of appeal in practically every instance where it is possible to do so and practical to do so. This bill I think shows some evidence of that. This is the direction in which we are moving.

In respect of the question from the hon. member for Rainy River regarding the tourist operators in some communities in the—if he doesn't mind my words—sparsely inhabited areas—

Mr. Stokes: Not only the tourist operators. Anybody who is in an area not served by Hydro.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I don't like using "remote" communities—who are using diesel fuel for generators. Again I am going to have to give him the answer which is becoming, I am afraid, a stock answer: That is a matter of tax policy. It is a decision as to whether we should tax fuel for that particular use, and that is a matter of tax policy, which is a budgetary matter.

Mr. Stokes: See the Treasurer.

Mr. Reid: May I ask the minister a question? If he feels that the policy should be changed, then might he spearhead that change? After all, the minister has to admit it is rather unfair that 90 per cent of the province is served by Hydro which the taxpayers support and have to supply their own electrical energy. They are paying, in effect, double taxation in paying for Ontario Hydro and then again paying the diesel fuel tax.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I may feel that way and I may not. The hon. member will appreciate that any input into the Treasurer's budget is, of course, a matter of government policy and any time in our ministry where we come up against situations which we feel need some correction, we so advise the Treasurer. From there on it's his baby.

I can't, of course, inform the hon. member in respect of what I am going to recommend, obviously. When it becomes a matter of government policy, it will be announced in this House.

Mr. Stokes: The minister will take it under advisement though.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Everything is under advisement, the member knows that.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): The minister is right. Everything is under advisement.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, of course. This is a government that takes lots of advice. If you don't take advice, you don't learn anything and that's why we are succeeding so well.

Mr. Lawlor: The government doesn't take much of our good advice.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I don't think I have any further comment on this. I appreciate the fact that the members of the opposition feel this is a positive step forward. We feel that way too. Perhaps we might move immediately to third reading.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Lawlor: There are still a couple of questions I have hanging over. The minister's bland and self-interested comments don't win approval over at this side. I would like it to go to committee.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. minister so direct?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Committee of the whole? Yes.

Mr. Lawlor: It will only take a few moments.

Clerk of the House: The third order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. B. Beckett in the chair.

MOTOR VEHICLE FUEL TAX ACT

House in committee on Bill 222, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act.

Mr. Chairman: Bill 222; any comments, questions?

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Chairman: What section please?

Mr. Lawlor: Section 7. It is a kind of mistake in a way to turn second readings into committee of the whole House—and that's what happened to me. One makes assertions, sometimes in the form of questions; or vice versa, questions in the form of assertions.

The reply of the minister with respect to widening the collection not only from the registrants but to the purchasers, stated that there were detected or felt to be detected possibly some forms of collusion—and that twigged me.

The registrants in this case are major corporations, very few in number—a mere handful—which makes very facile the operation of the statute. If the tax wasn't being collected, surely the weight should fall on that particular head—it should if there are good grounds for suspicion.

How is the government's position in any way altered, changed or benefited by widening it out to the purchasers?

I don't want to flog the issue, because it is not perhaps too bad a notion to rope in as many people as possible when seeking to collect taxes.

But I'm a little shocked to learn of the failure of the registrants in this particular regard. Surely the registrants are totally and completely responsible. If somebody is picking up 1,000 gal of gasoline and not paying the tax, then the people supplying it to them must be very much aware of that—or there's a special deal going on. In which case the full weight of the sanctions under the minister's legislation ought to apply, if what he says is true. I would like to hear what the minister has to say about that.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): In the first place, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member is labouring under a misunderstanding about who the registrants are. They are by no means just the big companies. I am advised that there are about 1,700 retail distributors, which includes also some of the transport companies. So they are by no means just all of the large companies. There are many relatively small ones; relative that is in relation to the huge companies that we are constantly thinking about.

So I think the hon. member will agree that when we are dealing with about 1,700, we are dealing with quite a bit of exposure in respect of the handling of this fuel. We should make every possible effort to see that they are paying their fair share and not benefitting at the expense of those who are paying the taxes.

Mr. Lawlor: I was speaking of collectors. It is okay in that other particular area. I have a further question arising out of—

Mr. Chairman: Which section?

Mr. Lawlor: Section 11, the last section.

Mr. Chairman: Anything before 11 please?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, I have one regarding section 7 of the bill. The minister has commented on the suggestion I made with respect to appeal procedure. I think the minister has to devise an appeal procedure, perhaps saving the appeal ultimately to the Supreme Court of Ontario as a final resort if necessary. He would have to devise an appeal procedure for all of our taxing statutes; something similar to the Tax Review Board system presently in effect under the federal income tax law.

I think we should have such a Tax Review Board for two principal reasons: One is that it would be much less expensive to the taxpayer and to the minister in the question of costs. Secondly, it could be much more expeditious; to say nothing whatsoever of the obvious third reason that you then could have in a single place decisions of the Tax Appeal Board of this province which would deal with the taxing law of the province.

The fact of the matter is that there is very little law related to the imposition of provincial taxes either because there has not been a right of appeal or because the right of appeal has been expensive. It has acted as a barrier, I believe, in many cases to the taxpayer taking a step toward having his rights determined on the question of the imposition of taxes.

I think that the structure could well be worked out to make it a uniform Tax Appeal Board for all tax appeals arising under any of the taxing statutes of the Province of Ontario. I appreciate that this is not an appropriate Act under which to make that suggestion but I make the suggestion for study by his department in the hope that perhaps in the new session starting next year he would give consideration to constituting such a speedier and more efficacious method of tax appeal.

Mr. Chairman: Section 11.

Mr. Lawlor: On section 11, the minister says he needs flexibility or room in which to move at any time whether or not the House is sitting. Generally speaking, that's what regulations are for. If one looks at this particular one, it says, "Section 21 of the Act as amended by the Statutes of Ontario, 1972, is further amended by adding thereto the following clauses"; he goes on with the continuing various forms of matters which may be included within regulations, and up to that point it is fine.

This one here is "(f) exempting from a part or all of the tax imposed by this Act, fuel that will be used by specified persons." It goes on. That is very broad. That is the kind of thing we take severe issue with over here with respect to the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier). He reposed in his sole desideratum the wide swathe of taxation on mining that he, by a flip of the hand, can dismiss out of the revenues of this province, and you are seeking to encompass the same objective.

It's made clear in our taxing legislation that no exemptions from taxes, by and large, ever ought to be allowed. Everyone should be covered universally and equally. If you wish to give any benefit, it should be by way of open subsidy or by direct contribution, where it is in the books of this House, where it is known for all to see. That is a general cardinal principle of tax policy.

To the extent that you usurp or arrogate to your own functions this exempting power, you have altogether too much of it over there. It runs against the whole grain, not only of taxing legislation but civil rights legislation, the whole bit, where within a democratic society things have to be open and above board and not sloughed off.

The fact that this is coming to our attention, you claim would be—well, I think you give the opposition somewhat more credit than is due. As to the niceties of the ramifications and machinery inside your department, we learn largely of them from tax reports that come to our desks, if I may say so. Don't give us too much credit for having a vital insight into these problems. I'm sure if we could spend a day or two over there and move around as freely as we'd like, we would come up with a great many dislocations and misapplications of the law and the real nitty-gritty of day-to-day revenue matters.

You know, if I may just say in closing, the minister is a man of far too great prowess to be sitting in the Revenue chair anyhow. It's ridiculous standing up here talking about what are really policy matters; anything you can say that seems half sensible is really directed toward that end. It was a grave mistake, of which I was also culpable when we recommended that this ministry be set up at all. When you are handling this kind of taxation measure, either you should take upon yourself the mantle of policy or our conversations are worth nothing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: As to the last part of the member's comments, I would only refer him to Hansard of the spring session. He would find that I am not too much in disagreement with him on that. I must tell him that I am not too happy getting up here when I have to answer many of these questions and saying that that's a matter of policy and it must go to another minister. The fact—

Mr. Lawlor: Everything worthwhile.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All right. I would think that tax policy is a very important function, but administration is also important. However, these are the facts and if the hon. member wishes to discuss that aspect of government structure there's another time for it, not during this particular discussion.

Mr. Lawlor: You are too good a man for that department.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Pardon?

Mr. Lawlor: You are too good a man for that department.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, I have a few other duties, I can assure the hon. member, a few other duties which I'm sure he's aware of.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): But you are not good enough for some of them. I don't want to get your head too swelled up.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Now, insofar as the regulations are concerned, I tried to explain—and I thought it was a reasonable explanation—that there are going to be some anomalies crop up. We hope they don't, but there are going to be some—history has shown us that—which we have not foreseen. This puts us in a position where we can make a regulation, which is not secret—a regulation is published in the Gazette. If government publishes a regulation which will exempt a certain class from a certain tax because of some situation that has occurred in the interim, it's public knowledge, and the members opposite are in a position to take the government to task for it if they don't think it's a proper one.

Mr. Deans: But there is no opposition input into the regulations.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Well, we're talking about the times in between sessions particularly. For example, there is a situation now which is being brought to my attention by some members of the House, on both sides I think, a situation which is very difficult to resolve, where the tax seems to be hitting certain aspects of the agricultural community, as a matter of fact, and we haven't found a way out of this for the time being. But we're working on it. It's not a terribly serious one in total, but it's important to those particular farmers concerned, and we're trying to resolve this.

Now if we can't resolve it and it requires a regulation, we're merely asking for the right to make such a regulation in the meantime to avoid an injustice. A regulation, as I have pointed out, and the hon. members know, is public knowledge, and you will know what we have done in respect of it. We're not talking about a regulation exempting a particular person or a particular company. We're talking about a regulation which would exempt a particular use. That's what we're talking about.

So the hon. members would be in a position to criticize that and take us to task if they thought it wasn't the right thing to do. But, in the meantime, I'm sure they wouldn't want us to allow an injustice to be done if there is some way of righting it without making a man wait too long.

Bill 222 reported.

Hon. Mr. Grossman moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill without amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

THIRD READING

The following bill was given third reading upon motion:

Bill 222, An Act to amend the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act.

MINING TAX ACT

Hon. Mr. Bernier moves second reading of Bill 127, the Mining Tax Act, 1972.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Rainy River.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I'll try to make my remarks brief but, as always, to the point.

My first remark is that while we have both the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier) and the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) here perhaps they could get their two heads together and explain to the House why the Minister of Natural Resources is bringing in this bill rather than the Minister of Revenue.

It is a taxation bill and it should be under the Minister of Revenue's jurisdiction rather than the Minister of Natural Resources.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): It doesn't bring in any revenue. That's why he isn't bringing it in.

Mr. Reid: We are going to get to that, too. The Ontario committee on taxation recommended that the Mining Tax Act be administered by the Minister of Revenue. It seems to be only logical, Mr. Speaker, that this be so.

Other than the logic of the situation, there are items in the bill that make it mandatory really that this bill come under the Minister of Revenue. I refer specifically, sir, to the fact that the mine assessor under the Minister of Natural Resources makes certain decisions as to what is taxable and what isn't taxable for purposes of this Act. It seems to me that the authority and responsibility both for making those decisions and setting the levels of taxation and collecting those revenues should not be in the same ministry.

It leaves the minister open to all kinds of charges of favouritism or unusual discretion in regard to decisions made by his department.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): He doesn't mind that because the favouritism is there.

Mr. Reid: However, Mr. Speaker, that is not the main purpose of my remarks on the bill. The minister refers to it as a house-keeping bill, but I hope that we will be able to debate the principle of the bill, especially as it relates to the whole field of taxation in regard to the natural resources of the Province of Ontario.

I would say, Mr. Speaker, that I commend to you and to the minister the speech of, at that time the Hon. Eric Kierans, called "The Contribution of a Tax System to Canada's Unemployment and Ownership Problems." This was a speech that Mr. Kierans delivered to the annual meeting of the Canadian Economics Association in St. John's, Nfld., in June, 1971.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): That was when he was a Liberal.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Is he still an authoritative source?

Mr. Reid: Well he has lost a little of his glow. But while I wouldn't as an economist, Mr. Speaker, agree with some of the points raised in Mr. Kieran's speech, I'd like to go over some of them briefly.

One of his points is that we do not derive enough benefit from the taxation of our natural resources in Canada. He was speaking of Canada specifically, and certainly Ontario has to be part of that as one of the largest mineral producing provinces in the country.

The second thing, Mr. Speaker, was that such things as depletion allowances and other such incentives for mine development distort the economy and cause funds that would otherwise be allocated to other sections of the economy to be diverted to the mining industry.

The third point he made in regard to this is that in fact Canadians are paying for the buying out of our own control over our own natural resources. Mr. Kierans' point to a large extent was simply that by the federal and provincial governments' providing the incentives that they do to the mining industry, these incentives were causing a distortion in the economy of Canada and the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Kierans' idea was that we would do away with these incentives. These funds would therefore be channelled into other productive means—in the Ontario economy—primarily, I gather, secondary manufacturing. As the member for Rainy River, as a member from northern Ontario, I cannot accept that particular part of Mr. Kierans' speech.

While it may or may not be true that this is his contention, it certainly would cause disfiguration in the economy of northern Ontario. Mining is one of the three major industries in northern Ontario. It provides employment for many people in northern Ontario and for many in southern Ontario. Personally, of course, I would like to see more of our minerals refined in the Province of Ontario and therefore see created more employment from the use of these minerals. But that is something, perhaps, that we've debated before and will debate again.

Mr. Speaker, the problem with this bill is really that it is a housekeeping bill. It does not change the rate of taxation on our natural resources, in this case particularly, mineral production. The rate of taxation, 15 per cent over all profits of $50,000 or over, is very little return to the people of the Province of Ontario for the use and using up of their resources.

Mr. Speaker, we had placed on our desks today the public accounts for 1971-1972. I would refer you, sir, to page 238. We see the revenues for the then Department of Mines and Northern Affairs, taxation on profits—I imagine they mean by that under the Mining Act—$13,322,701.

Now I would refer you to the opposite page, Mr. Speaker, page 239, Department of Mines and Northern Affairs statement of expenditure programme. The actual expenditures for 1971-1972 for the Department of Mines and Northern Affairs was $11,929,051.

A minor point, perhaps, Mr. Speaker, but it's obvious that the revenue derived from the Mining Tax Act is only slightly more than the cost of maintaining the Department of Mines and Northern Affairs. Very little return, Mr. Speaker, to the people of the Province of Ontario for their nonrenewable resources.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the minister. How can he justify the fact that this rate is so low? I would like to know from the minister, Mr. Speaker, if he considers the Mining Tax Act a royalty on mineral production in Ontario. If so, I cannot agree with it. A royalty is something that you put on something per unit output. The mining tax is a tax on the profits of a company solely and, in terms of economic jargon perhaps, can be referred to as an economic risk. That amount of money, over and above the normal profit that could be expected, that should be returned to the people of Ontario.

Mr. Stokes: Especially those that create the new wealth.

Mr. Reid: I would say, Mr. Speaker, that the rate is very low indeed. I would ask the minister if he could give us a summary of the federal and provincial taxes that a mining company in the Province of Ontario would pay—the rates of tax, the amount of taxes that these mining companies are paying. Because surely, Mr. Speaker, anyone taking an objective look at the revenues that we receive from this tax, some $13 million, sees that it is a paltry sum indeed. We in this party are particularly interested in learning from the minister what revenue the people of Ontario derive from the use of their natural resources.

I don't think we want to get into a long discussion as the minister will probably get up and say: "Well, after all, mining is a high risk venture," and so forth. "We have to provide these incentives."

I say that the federal government is going overboard in that direction in providing the incentives to mining companies. They have at least moved in the direction of reducing the depletion allowances from 33½ per cent of profits for income tax purposes to a point where the mining company is going to have to prove, or show cause, where the deflation actually came in.

But I say to the minister, the fact remains that the people of the Province of Ontario are not receiving a fair return for the use of their natural resources.

I could go on at some length, Mr. Speaker, but I would just like to reiterate to the minister three or four questions.

Firstly, why is this Act not administered, or switched over to the Minister of Revenue where it should belong for logical reasons—from a tax point of view, and also to avoid any possibility of a conflict of interest within the minister's department?

Secondly, why has the minister not raised the amount of tax, the 15 per cent over $15,000, on the profit of a mining company in Ontario?

Thirdly, and related to the second, does the minister really feel that the people of the Province of Ontario are getting their just benefits from these taxes when the total sum is only some $13 million? When we think of mining companies like Inco, Falconbridge and so on, and the fantastic profits these companies are making over and above the normal rate of investment return, then surely the people of the province are entitled to more than the return they are getting.

Mr. Speaker, I put those questions to the minister, and I trust he will reply to them. Also I can assure him that the Act as it is presently constituted does not meet with the approval of this party.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cochrane South.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, in introducing this bill, the minister stated, "We are not proposing to create any substantial change in the general principles of the Act and are basically re-establishing the policy that has already been established in recent years".

We in this party cannot support the principles of mining taxation as embodied in the present legislation: therefore we cannot accept this bill which, according to the minister's own words, is just a modernizing of the wording of this statute.

We believe that the minor amendments of this bill only perpetuate the privileged taxation position that the mining industry enjoys from this government. No other industry has been as successful in exerting influence over old-line party federal or provincial governments in gaining concessions and privileged status.

Mr. Lawlor: They sure are the darling boys.

Mr. Ferrier: As Minister of Finance, Edgar Benson capitulated early in the game to the mining industry; they exerted pressure on him to alter his proposals set out in his white paper on taxation. And this government across the way has been equal in its way in capitulating to the lobbies of the mining industry.

For years the Department of Mines of this province has been the handmaiden of the mining industry in writing legislation and tax policies to suit their interest. As an illustration, this Act is unique in that the taxes collected under this Act are not collected by the Minister of Revenue, as is common under other taxing statutes.

Mr. Lawlor: Now this minister is a handmaiden too!

Mr. Ferrier: A mining assessor is not a civil servant in the normal sense of the term, but provision is made in this statute for his appointment by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. Smith, in the Ontario Committee on Taxation Report, volume 3, page 343, states:

We think that the province will be better assured of its revenues, and the mine operators of fair treatment, if the collection of the tax were to be transferred to a department that is not involved in the promotion of mining.

As you see, Mr. Speaker, he easily identified the cosy relationship between the Department of Mines and the mining industry. He went on to recommend:

The collection of the mining tax should be a function of the proposed Department of Revenue. The controller of revenue is currently responsible for collecting corporate income tax from mining companies and is in a good position to ensure that the treatment given under the Mining Tax Act is, where appropriate, consistent with that under the Corporations Tax Act.

If, as we recommend, the collection of corporation income tax on Ontario's behalf is delegated to the federal government, the controller of revenue would still have income tax information from the federal government available to him which would be helpful in the determination of mining profits subject to the mining tax.

This government has made a great deal of noise about the wonderful reorganization it has been making and the wonderful work of policy review being carried out by the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development (Mr. Lawrence) and his ministers in this policy field. In connection with the job of reviewing Smith's recommendations as far as mining taxation is concerned, the government—in whatever form of organization it takes—has not done much of a job. As a minimum, the Ministry of Revenue should administer this Act, rather than the Ministry of Natural Resources; and the mining assessor should be an official of the Ministry of Revenue rather than a special appointee by the cabinet.

It seems to me that the government has rejected both the Smith committee and the select committee on taxation of the Legislature, as far as their recommendations go regarding taxation changes.

Mr. Lawlor: Completely!

Mr. Ferrier: Any change, no matter how minimal that might affect the mining companies in any way—

Mr. Lawlor: Right!

Mr. Ferrier:—just cannot be contemplated by this government, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lawlor: That is a fact! That is the truth!

Mr. Ferrier: It makes one wonder what kind of hold the mining companies have upon this government.

Mr. Lawlor: That is right.

Mr. Ferrier: In contrast—

Mr. Lawlor: Fidinam is nothing!

Mr. Ferrier: Fidinam is nothing. In contrast, it did not take Premier Barrett of British Columbia very long to tell Cominco—

Mr. Lawlor: Talk about icebergs.

Mr. Ferrier:—that it was not going to get the big provincial handout in the proposed construction of its smelter. A company like Cominco, with its kind of resources doesn't need that kind of a handout to build a smelter. It is a good thing that there are some premiers in this particular land who are not afraid to stand up to this powerful lobbyist and put it in its place.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Does the hon. member remember what he said about the Texas Gulf situation in Ontario?

Mr. Ferrier: Pardon me?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He was calling for handouts for Texas Gulf. Got them too!

Mr. Ferrier: Well, I have reconsidered my position on those handouts for Texas Gulf.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The member has been inconsistent.

Mr. Ferrier: I have grown in my understanding of the situation.

Mr. MacDonald: At least he has learned. We are looking forward to the day when the Leader of the Opposition might.

Mr. Ferrier: I have seen the light. I hope maybe that he will, too, and vote against—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I can see through the member; whether it is his light or the light behind him.

Mr. Ferrier:—and vote against this terrible Act that is now before us.

In his report, Smith stated that the basis for taxation of mines should be economic rent, which he described as:

The amount by which, on the average, the return on capital invested in mineral development exceeds the return where capital is employed in the best alternative areas of investment. [He qualifies his position in this fashion:] We think, however, that in a high risk industry it is both impracticable and imprudent for the province to attempt to recover the full economic rent accruing from the use of mineral resources, and our subsequent proposals as to reasonable levels of taxation have been developed in part in relation to the current taxation of such resources by other Canadian provinces.

My understanding is that we are rather low on our taxation of mines in comparison with other provinces of this country.

The reason for the taxation of mines and the rate that is to be calculated [according to Smith] should be governed solely by what is deemed to be an appropriate return for the use of the province's resource, and not by the revenue needs of the government. And that in our opinion the present tax, considering that it also incorporates a measure of municipal taxation, does not provide a reasonable return.

The present mining tax amounts to less than 2 per cent of the value of production from all of Ontario mines. It does not, therefore, represent a significant cost of mining.

This figure, Mr. Speaker, hasn't changed since Smith's investigation.

According to the annual statistical report on the mineral production of Ontario, 1970, the value of metallic minerals produced in 1960 amounted to $1,354,391,094. Under the Mining Tax Act this province realized in taxes $19,420,603, or about a 1.43 per cent return. In terms of total provincial taxes we received $22,259,104, or about 1.64 per cent of the total. The total taxes paid by this Ontario industry to the municipalities, provincial and federal governments, were $46,117,058—about 3.4 per cent. The public treasury, under the taxation system as continued in the bill before us, and the other taxation statutes that affect mining, does not get anything near what it should from the legislation, nor anything near what it should from these mining companies. The legislation provides loopholes, write-offs, exemptions and deductions that free mining from taxation in ways in which other industries are not favoured.

I concur with Smith when he says:

New mines are given an exemption from federal and Ontario income tax for a three-year period beginning when production reaches reasonable commercial quantities. We do not favour a similar exemption for mining tax purposes, its incentive effect notwithstanding.

The federal government has done a little bit about that but this government is still in favour of this three-year exemption.

In speaking about mines profit tax, Smith says:

We think that the tax should apply as soon as the profits exceed a reasonable return on the operator's investment.

Ontario's return for the use of its resources should not be sacrificed by exemptions to particular classes of taxpayers for incentive or other reasons. If incentives are required, they should be provided by way of grant or subsidy, both being subject to legislative control and review, and not by way of an exemption from tax that remains in effect at the pleasure of the government and that provides no opportunity for the Legislature to receive an accounting.

That's the position the member for Lakeshore was putting to the Minister of Revenue on the previous bill that was considered, and I think Smith is right at this point.

Another exemption that should be eliminated is the special allowance the mine assessor allows to nickel producers. The special allowance to nickel mines has substantially reduced the mining tax revenues of Ontario.

Mr. Lawlor: That's an incredible ripoff.

Mr. Ferrier: Both the Smith report and the royal Ontario nickel commission—and get this, Mr. Speaker—in 1916, state:

There are no special conditions affecting the smelting and refining of nickel ores that would justify the assignment of profits to these functions on a more favourable basis than is applied in the case of the processing facilities employed by other mines.

It is time the government took some cognizance of that report from 1916 and began to put those nickel producers in their place. But, with the hold that the nickel mines and Falconbridge seem to have on them, they don't seem able to stand up to them in any way.

Mr. Lawlor: It's only 1972.

Mr. Ferrier: This ripoff by the nickel mines of this province cannot be justified and should be discontinued forthwith. Yet I do not see where this bill will correct a longstanding abuse permitted by the Mining Tax Act.

Mr. Lawlor: It reaffirms it.

Mr. Ferrier: The bill continues the discretionary power granted to the minister since 1907 to remit the tax on profits of iron ore smelted in Canada. Originally it was to act as an incentive to establish smelting operations in Canada. According to Smith, the minister invariably remits the tax although the amounts are small. The total amount of tax remitted from 1946 to 1964 was $1,117,000. This amount does not suggest that the incentives has had any material effect on the expansion of Canada's steelmaking capacity.

Again to quote Smith on the principles of exemptions:

We do not favour exemptions in the taxation system for particular classes of taxpayers whether for incentive or other reasons. If incentives are required, they should be provided by way of grant of subsidy which is subject to legislative control and review. Accordingly, we recommend that the provision permitting the the Minister of Mines to remit the mining tax on iron ore smelted in Canada be repealed.

As a matter of principle we concur and are opposed to its continuance in the bill presently under consideration.

In Smith's study of mining taxation, he made recommendation to the effect that there would be two taxes on mining. First the mine service tax, in which all profits from the mine, whether mining or processing, should be subject to this tax, as this merely permits the mines to discharge their collective obligation to pay for municipal service. While the Assessment Act has been amended to allow municipalities to tax processing plants, nevertheless Smith has a cogent argument to include processing plants in this tax.

If the processing profits are considered to be profits from the operation of a mine for the purpose of income tax concessions, consistency requires that they should be similarly considered for the purpose of the mining tax.

While processing plants now pay municipal taxes in organized areas, nevertheless other aspects of the mining industry are such that the full value of their operation cannot be fully taxed for municipal purposes, so that the province continues to make mining revenue payments to mining municipalities according to a rather complex formula. There has been a great deal of improvement made in the last two years as far as the amounts of these payments to the mining municipalities are concerned. Nevertheless, mining municipalities have a lot of problems resulting from inadequate payment prior to 1971 and continue to need substantial assistance by way of the mining revenue payment; thus the justification for such a mine service tax.

We further believe that such a tax could include an amount to set up a reserve or sinking fund to be set aside for the day when the mine ceases operation and the mining community is left to try to find some other alternative economic base to sustain its future. When a mine closes, a mining municipality may be in a very precarious position, with debts incurred for schools, hospitals and municipal services to provide for the mine's working staff while in operation. Suddenly the mine closes and the town is in difficulty, especially if the town is totally dependent on one mine.

Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines made a fortune out of Timmins and used the profits to invest in Labrador and elsewhere. They left little in the town. They sold at market value the houses they had built for their miners and collected rents all through the years. Those of you who have been in Timmins have seen that those houses, from the aesthetic point of view and some other points of view, are not the best houses in the world by any means.

The waterworks system and as many of their buildings as possible were sold to the town and to other people at market value. Other buildings they burned down or destroyed to save on municipal taxes. Hollinger and other mines that closed during the years made their profits and they got out, presumably thinking they had discharged their obligations to the community. It did not matter that the town had provided services to enable them to have a viable community for their work force and in so doing contracted debenture debts to pay for these services. The mines did not accept any responsibility for these debts. Fortunately for Timmins, other mines have been discovered and have come into production, so that our future has not been as jeopardized as it might have been.

However, my colleague from Thunder Bay can detail the predicament of Geraldton and can give telling justification for imposing a mine service tax in which is included an amount for a sinking fund to be put away until the mine closes and the community must cope with the crises that result, as it tries to find some other alternative economic base on which to sustain the community.

The second-stage tax recommended by Smith and endorsed by the select committee is called "a mines profit tax," which would have been levied initially at a rate of 12 per cent on profits as determined for the first-stage tax, but after deducting the first-stage tax. This is a concept of economic rent. Emergency gold mining assistance and allowances for exploration expenditure and an investment allowance would be deducted. Whether some three or four years later that 12 per cent rate is proper, of course, would have to call for further study. The second-stage tax would thus apply only on profits over and above what might have been earned in other investment opportunities; that is this concept of economic rent.

This bill now before us, Mr. Speaker, has completely ignored Smith and the select committee. It perpetuates the favoured position taxation-wise that has been in existence for years for mines. It continues to provide for outdated and unreasonable exemptions from tax. It does not provide an adequate return for the people of this province, for the development of the resources that belong to us. It allows for one group of taxpayers to have an almost free ride at the expense of the other taxpayers. It perpetuates the sweetheart relationship between this Conservative government and the mining industry in this province.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Right On!

Mr. Ferrier: The corporate welfare bums in this industry need to be put in their place and good and proper.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Along with the ministerial bums.

An hon. member: Go easy now!

Mr. Reid: That's certainly original anyway.

An hon. member: How about the back-bencher bums?

Mr. Ferrier: And so, Mr. Speaker,—

Mr. Foulds: Sweetheart contract—!

Mr. Ferrier:—I move that the motion for second reading of Bill 197 intituled, the Mining Tax Act, 1972, be amended by deleting all the words after "that" and substituting therefor the words:

This bill be not now read a second time in order that:

1. The government consider its basic policy with respect to all natural resource taxation and in particular respecting the structure of taxation in the area of mining taxation with emphasis on the concept of economic rent;

2. The government consider that the collection and supervision of this source of revenue be reposed where all the basic tax revenues presently properly lie, that is, with the Minister of Revenue and not in the Ministry of Natural Resources; and that the recommendations of the Ontario Committee on taxation and the select committee on taxation be heeded, or at least given a nodding acknowledgement;

3. The government consider steps to ensure that mines resource taxation not be a laughing stock and masquerade replete with loopholes, exemptions, deductions and special concessions not afforded to any other segment of the economy or community.

Mr. Speaker: May I ask the hon. member who the seconder of his motion is?

Mr. Ferrier: The seconder of my motion, Mr. Speaker, is the hon. member for Lake-shore.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have been prompted to make some remarks on the bill since the House will divide as to whether it should be read a second time or not. My second reason is that the member for Cochrane South has made a strong speech opposing the present concept of mining taxes, and the amendment indicates the opposition which he has expressed in his very thoughtful speech. I hope it is not unfair to recall to your mind that when the situation arose as to whether or not certain mining companies should be treated to assistance on the part of government—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Yes, it is unfair.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —provincial and/or federal—

Mr. Renwick: It is unfair.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —and in fact municipal—and whether or not it applied in his own community, he was not prepared to be so adamantly opposed to the kind of—

Mr. Renwick: It's not only unfair, it's basely unfair.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Who moved the taxation motion?

Mr. Stokes: He was just talking about the taxation system; now the member is talking about the incentive programme.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order, please! The hon. Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I guess I've got those members where they live. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that when it applies to their own home towns—

Mr. Reid: Right!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —their principles go out the window.

Some hon. members: That's right.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They go out the window!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Cochrane South knows very well—

Mr. Renwick: That's not fair. That's very unfair.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —that some of his more vocal colleagues in the front row have got him into trouble on more than one occasion. The one I'm talking about is when they got him into the worst trouble. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that under those circumstances, when the present leader of the NDP was making the same speech—

Mr. Reid: Sock it to them!

Mr. Renwick: The member for Cochrane South won in spite of the coalition of the Liberal Party and the Tory party.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The hon. Leader of the Opposition has the floor. We'll give everybody else an opportunity in a moment.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On the previous occasion when this speech was delivered—

Mr. Deans: It wasn't delivered.

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—by the leader of the NDP, the member for Cochrane South actually got up and spoke and voted against his leader's position. I felt that I should bring that to your attention, sir, because one of the problems in mining tax law—

Mr. Renwick: I think we are all indebted to the Leader of the Opposition. I really do!

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—is that when one stops looking at it—

Mr. MacDonald: Where does the member stand?

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—as an objective situation and it comes into one's own home town—

Mr. Renwick: The way the member has been looking at it!

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—sometimes one thinks it over differently—

Mr. MacDonald: Where does the member stand?

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—a rather short period of time. Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Foulds: The interim leader of the Liberal Party has taken a new lease on life since his convention has been postponed.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In commenting on the principle of the bill, I've got two or three things that I would like to bring to your attention. It seems to me that the mining industry—

Mr. Ferrier: I would like to rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: What's the point of order?

Mr. Ferrier: My principles have been called into question by the Leader of the—

Mr. Reid: After that, the member hasn't got any!

Mr. Ferrier:—Liberal Party—

Mr. Renwick: Just the way the Attorney General's (Mr. Bales) were today!

Mr. Ferrier:—and I think that—

Mr. Deans: Withdraw that remark! That is a disgusting remark.

Mr. Ferrier:—I would like to make one or two statements.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! I can't hear the member for Cochrane South now.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Why don't they let their member make his objection?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Reid: There are a couple more of them over there!

Mr. Ferrier: The point of order was, first of all, he said that the speech I made was a speech made by the leader of the party. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that I made the speech on my own with my own research, my own writing of it, without copying anyone else's speech. Secondly—

Mr. Foulds: Good speech, too.

Mr. Ferrier:—when my principles are called into question—

Mr. Reid: What about the one he just made?

Mr. Ferrier:—by the hon. leader, I would like to remind him, if he went back to the days of the Texas Gulf episode, that my position at that time was—

Mr. Reid: There is no point of order.

Mr. Ferrier:—that the smelter be located in Timmins—

Mr. Reid: It is no point of order.

An hon. member: It is a point.

Mr. Ferrier:—and the government tell them that it be there. When the government—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is straying from the point of order now.

Mr. Ferrier:—made all kinds of concessions I felt that, while I was personally dissatisfied with it, it was the way that this government—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): He is trying to excuse himself now.

Mr. Ferrier:—reacted. I did not feel, at that point when they had done something, even though I didn't agree with it altogether, that I could vote against it. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition feels that I'm against—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! You're debating now.

Mr. Ferrier:—my principles, I am quite happy to—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): To withdraw your criticism.

Mr. Ferrier:—let him attribute whatever motives he would like to me, but I'd like to put on the record of the House my own thoughts on this whole thing.

Mr. Foulds: Well put!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right.

Mr. Deans: Are you sure, Mr. Speaker, that the Leader of the Opposition wants to withdraw his previous remarks?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Do you want to rule on that point of order, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition accept that explanation and withdraw his remarks?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, now that you've ruled on that point of order, I'd like to continue with my remarks.

Mr. Deans: We didn't notice he'd started!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They seemed to turn the members on. I don't know—

Mr. Singer: Those people are very sensitive these days.

Mr. Reid: Didn't the member get his cheque today either?

Mr. MacDonald: I wonder where the Liberal Party stands on this?

Mr. Singer: Those fellows are very sensitive today.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, the member for York South is getting defensive!

Mr. Foulds: The Leader of the Opposition took a long time to get around to that.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I would say, Mr. Speaker, if the former leader of the NDP would listen to the speech of my colleague from Rainy River as attentively as he listens to mine, then he would not—

Mr. MacDonald: I have heard it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—ask such a ridiculous question, because I, of course, am simply supporting and reiterating the position taken by our mines critic when he said in his address—and it was an excellent one and the member for York South should have paid better attention—

Mr. MacDonald: I heard that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon:—that we could not possibly support the bill. But it seems strange that the member can't have reasons for differing from the government without embarking upon these old diatribes about corporate ripoffs that he has learned from another place.

Mr. Lawlor: The member doesn't like corporate ripoffs?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: You know what happened to the NDP, Mr. Speaker. With the best efforts of the corporate ripoff and the corporate bums, the NDP were successful in raising their vote across Canada from 18 per cent to 18.3.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: What happened to the Liberals in the last election?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I must say, Mr. Speaker, that the Liberals were seriously reduced in their support, but they are still the government of the nation and we know who lost. Those people—the NDP lost!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Are the NDP going to stop them?

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: How about the principle of the bill?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What an accomplishment—18.3 per cent!

Mr. MacDonald: The arrogance is rubbing off.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What a victory; 18.3 per cent!

Mr. Stokes: Where does the Liberal Party stand?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Are we ready to proceed, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: Right.

Mr. Stokes: Now where does the member for Brant stand?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It was interesting listening to the member for Cochrane South—and I couldn't help recalling visiting his fine, fair town, Timmins, this summer. We were very well received—

Mr. Ferrier: The member didn't visit it during the Ontario election campaign.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I felt that the hon. member was so well entrenched up there that I wanted to concentrate my efforts where they might be more productive.

Mr. Stokes: The member's absence was attributed to the fact that he was backing the Tories.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. Let's get back to the bill.

Mr. Renwick: Does the member remember Wilfred Spooner, the former secretary of the Liberal Party?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, no. I didn't like either of the opposition candidates, but when it came to a choice I'd sooner have Bill than Wilf.

Mr. Deans: That's what the people of Timmins said too.

Mr. Reid: Only by a small margin.

Mr. Speaker: Are you ready?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right!

So, Mr. Speaker, when we visited Timmins, we went out to see the tremendous operation of Texas Gulf—the open-pit mine and also the concentrator that has been built—and I recall the member for Cochrane South speaking against his party and in favour of the assistance that came from various government levels.

Mr. Stokes: He never spoke in favour of the tax concessions. The member is talking about two different things.

Mr. Speaker: Let us continue the debate on the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, the record stands for itself—the member for Cochrane South went against his party under those circumstances.

But I'm trying to say something about the Texas Gulf concentrator; unfortunately I can't remember the correct name for it. Now what is it called?

Mr. Ferrier: Ecstall Mining.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Ecstall Mining, right, because they're having a certain corporate re-naming. We went out to this plant and were very well received. They gave us a little plaque made of zinc for us to hold our important papers down with and that sort of thing.

The thing that impressed me was the technology that has expanded and shown itself to such a level of perfection in that plant in Timmins. They have landscaped it, it is sodded, the executives gave us a great welcome indeed. But here is a plant representing an investment of close to $200 million when it is completed—$200 million—and the main part of it was being operated by a staff of 17.

Actually there are 100 on the payroll, because they have three shifts and some ancillary workers. It is also true that the section where they electrolytically refine the zinc was having some work-up difficulties and there were additional people hired to eliminate those problems. I don't know what the status is now, but this tremendous expansion employed 17 people per shift to operate the concentrators, and there's a $200 million plant that they're operating.

Mr. Stokes: That's a lot of dollars per job.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: So the point really is, Mr. Speaker, that modern mining developments are not labour-intensive. That investment does very little for Timmins other than, I suppose, the supply of some of the parts that went into the original plant.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): What about the open-pit operation?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well, the open-pit itself is now in full operation—I'm not sure how many are employed there—but the decision to put the refining there, while it was supportable, certainly didn't make very many jobs for Timmins residents or anybody else.

If we are going to consider the concept that the mining operations are not labour-intensive, I suppose we've got to consider Sudbury, where the city exists only because of the nickel-smelting operations. There's nothing else there, other than some elaborate government facilities. Certainly businesses serving the mining industry have sprung up and it is an expanding city, but without the refinery and the nickel operation Sudbury simply wouldn't be there—or it would be a very remote crossroads.

Modern mining development certainly cannot be supported any longer just on the concept that it makes jobs. Really, it makes profits for the people who own the resource and undertake its development.

The second point associated with this—and it's unfortunate—is that most of the people who make the profits are not Canadian, they are not residents here. It's true to say that if we examine the list of shareholders of most of the mining companies, some rather better known than others, we will find names of many Canadians.

Mr. Singer: It isn't my fault the stock didn't go up.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We will find names of Canadians from time to time, but largely the mining industry is owned outside our borders and controlled from there. One of the exceptions, of course, is the uranium development in this province, which—what's the name of—

Mr. Stokes: Roman—in spite of his best efforts to try to sell it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —which is owned and operated by Consolidated Denison, which in turn is owned and operated by Steve Roman, that well-known Conservative who I understand sometimes used to support some Liberals until finally Pierre Trudeau decided that Steve Roman would not sell out the whole industry to American interest; therefore, he changed his politics to the Conservative Party with not very good results for his own political career. But, of course, Lord Thomson had the same experience, and it didn't seem to hold him back in the long run.

Mr. Lawlor: It did politically!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Maybe Steve will go into the House of Lords and get into public affairs that way.

My point, Mr. Speaker, is that with some notable exceptions the mining industry is capital-intensive and the profits normally leave our country. I'd point out to you that I have said that there are notable and important exceptions.

Mr. Stokes: The member told John Turner that, eh?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: If we look at some of the situations—financial, taxation and otherwise—that have assisted the mining community, we find that new mines have a three-year tax holiday and they have the advantage of very rapid depreciation so that their plant costs are written off before the machinery itself has lost its usefulness.

Then, of course, there is the advantage of the depletion laws, which have been changed federally so that the depletion has to be earned while we in Ontario are going to maintain the old automatic depletion allowances, which are very misleading indeed.

The word "depletion" would make someone like myself—and perhaps like the minister until recently—someone not too expert in the details of tax law, think, "Well, all right. So a company buys an ore body, and as they use it up they get an allowance because there is just so much ore left to use up." But in fact the depletion is based on their profits—

Mr. Stokes: I don't think there is any depletion under this Act, is there?

Mr. Renwick: There is none under this Act, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It comes under the Corporations Act, and we are going to be talking about what the NDP called the "corate bums."

Mr. Stokes: The member should read the Act.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They're indicating, surely, that the rights of the mining industry—

Mr. Renwick: Why doesn't he wait until we get to that Act?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —have been considerably and unfairly extended. One of the ways in which the mining industry has been able to defer its taxation is by the acceptance of depletion allowances, which together with the three-year tax holiday and the fast depreciation have given it considerable advantage over other industries and other corporations.

The federal government has abated three per cent of the taxes that it has levied in the past on mining corporation profits and left it to the provinces to decide what the disposition of that three per cent would be. Some provinces have rebated these funds to the mining corporations themselves under a programme to stimulate exploration and development. Ontario, in a grandstand play, has decided to keep most of the three per cent but make some of it available to the mining community as a stimulus for the expansion of their exploration and their development here.

But we know that in recent years the mining concerns—which, as I have already mentioned to you, sir, are international in concept; they don't feel a loyalty to any nation as far as I can see, except to their shareholders—are prepared to go anywhere in the world where the tax base is to their advantage and where their moneys for exploration can be spent with some thought of return. The developments in Australia are well known.

Certainly the emphasis on exploration left Ontario a few years ago and concentrated in BC, but I understand after the change of government there a good many of those companies are flocking back to Ontario to re-emphasize their exploratory operations here. So they are prepared to move anywhere in the world where there is a buck in it, and after all, a mining corporation is not in business for anything other than to make profits for its shareholders and, of course, to vote the executives as large salaries as the income will warrant and the stockholders will support.

So I would say, Mr. Speaker, that it is time we did change some of the priorities that are exerted in this province as far as revenues from our natural resources are concerned. We may be afraid that if our mining tax situation is changed dramatically we will frighten away the industry and it will undertake to explore and expand elsewhere. We have had this experience in the last eight to 10 years with a net loss, I would say, in expansion and exploration to BC, Australia, Ireland and certain other areas—certainly the western United States. But for a number of reasons they like to come back to Ontario because we have a history of great finds in the Canadian Shield. The Texas Gulf one has certainly restimulated interest in any mining company that has initiative and a few bucks to finance exploration.

So, Mr. Speaker, I feel that the time has come when it is not sufficient for Ontario simply to re-enact the legislation which has been on the books for so long, to simply bring itself in line—not perfectly in line but in line—with federal legislation, which itself is very much up in the air as far as corporation taxes are concerned. It is obviously time for Ontario to take some initiative in establishing new mining tax policies. I for one am not too concerned if the rate of exploration were to go down for a short period of time, because I feel that modern mining developments are not labour intensive and the profits, in large measure, do not accrue to the advantage of our people here.

Mr. Speaker, I don't want to identify myself with the speech that was made by the NDP, or their concept that everybody in business is a corporate bum, basically trying to rip off—a phrase they love so much—anybody who isn't a member of the NDP or what they designate as the working classes in their efforts to do this.

Mr. MacDonald: He is trying to win on both sides of the fence.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not at all. I just want to dissociate myself from these people because they are dead, absolutely dead.

On the other hand I cannot find it within myself to lead my colleagues to stand up in support of the inadequate mining tax policies brought forward in this bill. The minister, as always under these circumstances, says, "I am just the revenuer, I am just the guy who collects the money."

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, it is that man. Well, it should be the Minister of Natural Resources.

The minister gives an indication the policy is set by somebody else—and that somebody else is hardly ever here. He has his own problems. He is no doubt talking with the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) about the can of worms they have opened up in their efforts at retrenchment. However, that is another matter.

So, Mr. Speaker, as our mining critic said in his opening address on this bill, we will not support the principle on second reading.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. Lawlor: Well, talk about principles, Mr. Speaker. From one side of the fence the hon. member attacks the hon. member for Cochrane South, then himself accedes to the basic principles involved and which were brought forward in numerous committees of this House, and when it gets to the rub, he backs away in total inconsistency.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Not at all; just pointing out the inconsistency of the NDP.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): The member for Lakeshore is strutting on.

Mr. Lawlor: The whole business is watered down. He is fence-sitting—no sense of decency; inconsistent.

Mr. Reid: And he beats his wife too.

Mr. Deans: You said it!

Mr. Lawlor: That's right! And he knows nothing of motherhood.

Mr. Roy: Or the flag.

Mr. Lawlor: Well, we have more important things to attend to than watching the inconsistencies of the Liberal Party. They are always rubbing the wrong side of the tub in these matters.

I was going to say that if the Attorney General of the province wanted to lay charges of false pretences, that he would have very good grounds to do it against his Minister of Natural Resources. If ever a false pretence was perpetrated on this House, one has just to look at the explanatory notes contained in this legislation.

It is a piece of camouflage and sloughs off the whole issue which says these are incidental appeals—it has something to do with an appeal procedure; and makes it an expedient application to a judge. It says there nothing of any consequence—matters of the procedural and housekeeping kind only. It says: "You can put my legislation through without hardly turning a hair." And underneath it all, underneath the little bandage, is the suppurating sore of the whole field of this particular legislation.

Mr. Foulds: Well put!

Mr. Lawlor: For instance, take the area in this legislation touching the gross income and how it is arrived at as the base upon which the tax under this Act commences; where the minister begins under numerous clauses to work in his deductions. Well, before he begins to do that, to work those deductions, he has already gone through an ocean of other deductions in arriving at the figure he starts with.

In this business of the mine assessor—the role he plays; his function under this legislation—this is where the cosy, internal, incestuous relationship inside the minister's department really takes root.

Nowhere in this legislation—although the minister sets up the role of the assessor—does it tell what the assessor will do, except in the most general and vague terms. Nowhere either in regulation or in legislation are there available the criteria upon which these determinations are made. They are secretive. They are internal to the minister's operations. They are cosy with the industry.

The only place that one can come to any resume of the situation is in the Smith report itself. There he talks about the extremely wide discretions, about the in-built inequities in those discretions—even internal to the industry itself; between the nickel industry on one side of the fence and the rest of the industry on the other side.

Smith talks about the processing allowance which is wholly up to the determination of the mining assessor. The role of the mining assessor is the nub point. Now at least they ought to be independent. They ought to be under the Ministry of Revenue.

They ought to be removed from the Minister of Natural Resources' self interest. His business is to promote mining, to do everything in his power to make it wax in the province. Therefore, he is not going to impose taxation which might just cause a small wane. The small wane is less than two per cent of the productivity of these mines. The tax itself, as it is arrived at, is totally negligible. Smith in his recommendations under the second-stage tax on profits, recommends at least a 50 per cent increase of revenues from this source.

The committee on which I sat had all the Conservatives agreeing, every one of them, because they looked at the situation objectively, dispassionately, and because we got down to brass tacks in the process of the committee work. Every one of those Conservative members—and the Liberal member—all agreed that, while we would do it in a different way than the two-stage way set forth in Smith, nevertheless it would have to be at least 50 per cent greater in terms of return to this province, than what it was at the present time.

When the Smith report came out and when we toured the province and heard the mining industry, particularly International Nickel, if I may say so, you would have thought that the day of Armageddon had arrived. They resisted the smallest move in the direction of redefining the tax, of making it more equitable, except possibly making direct payments to municipalities for the services derivable therefrom which, of course, in turn, they wished to have deductible from both federal and provincial taxation so they wouldn't be any worse off in the long run anyhow.

That was the furthest concession that was really involved. We all said no. In the irretrievable natural resource, what are we deriving of benefit to the people of the province as a whole? A negligible entity, an amount that really cries out for redress.

While we have this minister, I have no small simulacrum of a hope for any redress arising from this particular source. Not only has he not moved in the direction of seeking to impose greater taxes, the whole tendency in the five to six years since this report came down has been to open up another honey-comb of exemptions, exceptions, qualifications and loopholes. The thing has got a damned sight worse than it was previously rather than any degree better. There is the business of this government's perpetuating the three-year tax holiday when the federal government at least thought that ought to be exterminated and taken out.

The business of increased acceleration in the writeoffs of plant, equipment and machinery, both from the federal source and from the provincial source—the five per cent production allowance—all these are new tax measures, superadded to the largess that the minister has already handed out to this particular industry. The only reason that he can't or doesn't do a lot more pillorying in this particular regard—and here indeed in respect to all tax measures—is that things are fairly complex.

This is rather difficult and so hidden behind the Trojan horse of complexity, it is hard to filter this down to the populace at large but the term of a corporate tax ripoff has a ring to it. It does get through to the populace at large how they are being mulcted in taxes with respect to this and other industries, but in mining it is beyond the dreams of avarice, beyond any manufacturing.

If you read the mining briefs from those companies, they say their tax is high because this is a superadded tax supposedly over against the regular corporation tax field.

The fact is when you get down to what is granted, both under the corporation tax and then over and above by this particular tax measure, we are getting no return.

It is so negligible as to be pitiable. It is almost better not to have the resources under this particular regard, so far as these measures are concerned or a return on the resources as such, than to have taxation measures of this kind.

I think it is to the point here to point out at page 314 the Smith committee talks of this concept of economic rent as follows:

A special tax on mines can be justified on the same grounds as oil royalties or timber dues, namely as a means of securing for the province a share of the economic rent for the use of its resources. For administrative and constitutional reasons, which we discuss in the course of this chapter, the imposition of a royalty or gross income tax on the output of Ontario's mines is impracticable. A profits tax is the logical alternative. It is also better suited to an industry that is characterized by a high degree of risk because a profits tax does not penalize the person who makes a wrong decision about committing resources to a particular mining operation.

In other words, there have to be profits to have a profits tax.

The tax that Smith is recommending is really an excess profits tax. The tax that we affirmed in terms of the committee work, and which has been totally disregarded by ministers of this department in turn, and as far as I know by this minister overtly, is again a tax on what would be considered in any legitimate function of economics an excess profit made from mining ventures.

No one seeks to disincentivize and no one seeks to put down that mine which is just getting into operation. The point about those mines which are in full-blown operation is that some portion of the vast profits they make and take from this realm ought to be lodged in the pockets of the citizenry here to lift in some way a measure of the burden that they have to pay in terms of personal income tax.

We may observe at the outset that having sold to private persons the title in fee simple—that is, given it away at an earlier time—quite unlike other industries, unlike manufacturing and a hundred others where they have to purchase land and put up buildings with basic capital, the mining industry position is that their basic purchase of the resource—which may be rich beyond Croesus' dreams—is made at a pittance and always has been. And they say: "Why shouldn't we get a little since we have given you the land for virtually nothing?" The province appears to have narrowly considered the range of alternatives constitutionally available to it for exacting rent for the use of such resources.

Until fairly recently the outright ownership of Crown land that might contain minerals could be acquired upon payment of a nominal sum, and substantial tracts of mining land have passed into private hands. Now lacking the rights of ownership, it would cost, in their opinion, too great an amount in terms of this Treasury to try to reinstitute the government's position in Crown lands as is done in the forestry industry; having made the basic blunder back in the 19th century, we are kind of stuck with it, all of us.

—the province encounters more difficulty in imposing charges that provide an appropriate return to the public treasury from the private exploitation and development of these mining lands. On the other hand, it can be said that the province parted with ownership of mining lands for a nominal price in the knowledge that it was at the time imposing, and would continue to impose, a profits tax which is more likely to be related to the value of the lands than is any royalty, based on the price or production, determined in advance of the development of a mine. We hasten to point out, however, that a mines profit tax, at the rates now imposed in Ontario, fails to produce an appropriate amount of revenue, the criteria for which we develop later.

The rest of the report is taken up with developing these criteria. Why, oh why, does the minister pay no attention to them? It was a straightforward, thoroughly equitable, completely just representation that was made. And, as I say, far from giving it any credence or even any lip service, despite the work of the committee of the House, the government has proceeded to erode that tax base from that time forth and to ignore everything that has been said.

It can only mean that—as my leader said in Brantford last night—the matters discussed in this House with respect to election offences are simply the tip of the iceberg. This is where the government must get its fundamental revenue from, because the government is in their pockets. Nothing strikes one as being so formidable as the mining companies, as those corporate interests, when legitimate, completely rational and justified proposals are put before this House and before the people of this province and then knocked down holus-bolus and never acted upon, never even whispered about by the government in power as being brought into force.

There is something very strange there, and it goes beyond strange. After a period of time in this House one becomes cognizant that the full weight of those corporations is immensely more powerful than the electorate and immensely more powerful than yahooing voices like mine raised to protest against it. It all goes down the drain but the mining companies go on forever. In the course of this debate I want to know, if the minister will stoop to tell me, why the role of the assessor is not given full cognizance. It's not completely set forth. Why isn't it embodied in the legislation? Why don't we know what his function is? There are pages and pages here as to what is allowable and disallowable, particularly a whole range of expenses disallowable at page 308, totaling 15.

Of course, when you peruse those you will find that many of them are reallocated within the terms of this legislation, having reduced the profit and having been given a processing allowance—a processing allowance of eight per cent and upwards, but nothing less. The mining assessor then proceeds to make these deductions, at which stage we begin to write the legislation.

I trust that the minister has perused carefully what is said about this, which was hidden, virtually unknown, except that Bob Macauley, who was the counsel for this committee, said one day "I never really knew what went on in mining taxation until after this report was printed".

It was one of the most clotted, labyrinthine, hidden things in all governments. At least the report has had the efficacy of bringing that to light, so that we have got something to stick our teeth in when we are talking about these matters. Previously we were completely in the dark, and it is only as a result of this that we have come to any knowledge at all as to what goes on behind the scenes in that relationship between the mining assessor of this department and the mining interests themselves.

He says that the processing allowance is an invalid and illegitimate one. And he gives four reasons for saying that, of which I shall only refer to two. He says:

We have four basic criticisms of it:

First, a processing allowance should not be fixed at a percentage of the original costs of the asset, as this ignores the fact that the operator recovers his investment in depreciable assets from his profits by the annual depletion allowances.

And may I just pause here for a moment, Mr. Speaker. What happens in this mining and resource taxation is that they reduplicate themselves; like the perennial snake, they slough off the skin and turn around into their own mouths. In other words, they get depreciation, not once or twice, but sometimes three times by way of different measures set up in the tax statutes. This is the first instance.

They get regular depreciation allowances—and we will come to that under the Corporations Tax Act—which aren't in this bill, although it does mention depreciation for the minister's own particular purposes. This government has a certain level of depreciation—between 5 and 15 per cent, I believe—and the federal government has vast schedules of depreciable assets under its Income Tax Act. This government, under its Corporations Tax Act, is going to give them more largess by way of depreciation. Depreciate, depreciate—it's like compound interest, it does tend to grow.

No one else gets these privileges, at least not on the scale that is accorded in this province. British Columbia doesn't do it. There are four or five other provinces that give it. And Quebec isn't in the same league.

We have one of the lowest returns on investment in our rate structure. Then we compound it by going back to the original costs of the thing instead of taking the depreciated costs as the basis for our processing allowance. And this goes on in perpetuity.

Many old mines have recovered virtually all of their investment in processing plants, but they continue to receive a processing allowance based on the original costs. We would have a greater allowance than eight per cent—

Smith, you know, Conservative though he may be, is still a balanced man. He says, "I'm going to be generous; I'm going to give 12 per cent." Has the government adopted that recommendation? Has it taken cognizance of this or done a thing about it?

We would favour a greater allowance than eight per cent, say 12 per cent, applied to the present investment in processing assets, including processing plant at its written-down value.

The third point:

We think that the allowance should be provided for in the Act or regulations thereunder and should not be at the discretion of the mine assessor as it is at present, when the value of ore at pit's mouth is determined as the amount at which the mine assessor appraises such output.

In addition to our basic objection to provisions in the taxation statutes that result in the amount of tax being affected by the manner in which an administrative official or a minister of the Crown exercises his discretion, we have a particular objection in the case of this mining tax. Here we think the manner in which discretion has been exercised with respect to the processing allowance has resulted in substantial inequity as between nickel producers and the other mine operators.

My friend has talked about this, and I won't labour what he is talking about in terms of "the special concessions granted in 1906 for the particular chemical difficulties the International Nickel Co. had in segregating its nickel body from zinc and other ores."

The thing was obviated within a very few years and yet it goes on. Why does it go on? How can it possibly go on? It's such a grotesque inequity that an additional allowance at a greatly increased percentage should be given to this particular company, this all-powerful company in the Province of Ontario—a company which, to step on its toes, means that all the rest of us are reduced to Lilliputian proportions. It runs the province. It gets whatever it wants. How can that be in a democracy? And the minister is its handmaiden.

Mr. Deans: Yes, it's his fault.

Mr. Lawlor: He does absolutely nothing to redress the imbalance. Look at the billions of dollars taken in by that company. Suppose that company had been originally owned as a Crown corporation, or at least with shared capital? Look at the benefits that would have flowed in with respect to housing policy in this province—the money available to us.

Doesn't the minister look at things that way and see how these people have really exploited and walked away from the situation and thumbed their noses at this government? Or if they don't thumb their noses at it, they at least sit all over it. They reduce the government to children.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Watch your language!

Mr. Lawlor: It's the biggest ripoff I've ever seen! And the more one looks at it, the more angry one becomes in terms of any sense of distribution of wealth, and any sense of where the tax burdens of the province lie.

My friends from northern Ontario will talk about the largess of these companies, in terms of walking out, leaving towns derelict, not giving one damn at the end of the day as to what happens to the people they brought there and who have been the source of their livelihood and their beneficence. I think that within the terms of this kind of legislation there ought to be clauses setting up, as a mandatory measure, that sinking funds of some kind be some proportion of the total profit picture.

Unprofitable mines ought to be set aside specifically by the industry for care and attention to the people affected when the mine reaches its final stages. They ought to be, in some way, directly responsible for the retraining of the individual, for the transportation of families, for moving of homes if need be. In other words, they ought to be under some kind of obligation, considering their circumstances and their isolated geographical situation. There ought to be some weight placed upon the companies.

Fifty years ago it was roughshod: "We'll ride over the other fellow," and, "Each man take whatever he can," and, "The devil take the hindmost." There is a dawning consciousness—it's not unknown among the Tories and is to some extent much greater, if I may say, among them than among the Liberals—that corporation wealth and the central role of the corporation in our society does import fundamental social responsibilities for the conditions which it creates.

But that's only a dawning realization. As this minister grows in stature and looks at the situation—and he sees more of these towns than I do—perhaps he would consider bringing into being precisely such legislation as would improve that condition.

One could spend a good deal of time over the various ripoffs in this area, and the business of now bringing under its base something that the government hadn't done previously—which didn't exist many years ago: for example, permitting the corporations to write off D and E—development and exploration expenses; the minister's refusal, under this particular head, to adopt the principle recommended by Carter, that these be earned, as in the case of depletion allowances. The business of the minister's affirming automatic depletion in face of all the debate that has gone on and has led to so little in terms of the great taxation debate of the past decade. It has bred a mouse and the mouse squeaks in the person of the minister.

Mr. Foulds: A 254-lb mouse!

Mr. Lawlor: Those D and E expenses extending to a considerable portion of the reduction, as things now stand, should be, in my opinion, severely scrutinized. The 33½ per cent automatic depletion allowance is not invalid. I hope the minister hangs around because I don't want to take any more time today on depletion because it's not really under this Act at all. It's under the Corporations Tax Act where the benefits for mines are set out in that particular way.

The fact is that the amount under this bill was fairly recently increased from $10,000 exemption to $50,000 exemption before the tax even started—it is another measure which creates a great hole in the legislation.

One could go on. Somewhere in the magnificent book written by David Lewis during the federal election campaign on the corporate tax ripoff—one of the finest publications this country has, if the minister would peruse it sometime—there are sections on extractive industries, etc. Somewhere in there he says that they have enumerated 34 different tax concessions, special subsidies, exemptions or deductions that are peculiar to this particular area of our economy. Thirty-four! By the time they are finished we should be paying them money just to be here and I think we probably are by way of subsidies and grants.

As I say, a good deal of time will be taken up as far as I am concerned on depletion allowances, as to what Smith says in derogation of them and the long passages in Carter—if you give faster write-offs and if there's a legitimacy there; if there is a shrinkage of capital; if capital is being depleted. That's the basis, really, of depletion allowances although it's wandered over the years very far from that base. It no longer has any relation to wasting of capital. It is just granted holubolus, on an arbitrary principle, the way that this government does it under its legislation.

We'll go over this clause by clause. I trust that as we do so, it will be done in the presence of the Treasurer of the province (Mr. MacNaughton) and somehow will work in with the Corporations Tax Act because there are many sections in there, as the minister knows, on resource industries. If we get the whole picture without one segment being divided from the other and dealt with in isolation, I hope this whole thing can be worked together in hearings of a single committee, one following upon the other. I think the Corporations Tax Act should have precedence and then lead into this particular legislation insofar as the committee is concerned.

I would ask the minister to do that as a measure, as a gesture, of courtesy; and to undertake that as a straight matter of logic. We will be able to turn our fire to these particular sections in which in area after area the type of expense allowed, the type of assessment made, deserve radical criticism.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Mr. Speaker, I don't want to cover any ground that's already been covered by previous speakers, but I think it's quite obvious that this minister doesn't have the well-being of his own constituents at heart when he brings in legislation like this and hopes for support from all members of the House.

Coming from a northern riding, a good deal of which owes its existence to the mining industry—in particular communities like Red Lake, Balmertown, Cochenour—it seems to me that the minister would have learned by now that the people who are responsible for creating new wealth via the mining industry in the province aren't getting a fair share. I think previous speakers have highlighted the inability of present legislation to garner sufficient funds from the mining activity to satisfy the needs of the province and to justify the kinds of assistance and services that are provided to the mining industry by various levels of government.

It seems to me there is small return for the millions and millions of dollars that we've invested in railways, in roads, and in other services, to assist the mining industry locate—particularly in remote areas of the province. It becomes quite obvious that once they do begin to extract the minerals out of the ground, there is little revenue for the very people who are responsible for creating the new wealth. I'm told that it was about $1.5 billion last year.

When one considers the infinitesimal amount that filters its way back to all levels of government—something like between 3 and 4 per cent to the federal—it seems to me that this minister should be more aware of the situation than almost anybody in this Legislature.

I need not remind the minister that for every day that a mine operates, it's that much closer to the day that it will close and the people who owe their existence to the mining industry and the communities that owe their existence to the mining industry will have to look for alternatives.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): That's life in general.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right!

Mr. Stokes: My colleague from Cochrane South has said that the mining industry has, or should have, as its primary interest, the social need of the people who are responsible for creating billions of dollars of new wealth.

Consider what has taken place in the Sudbury basin, where billions and billions of dollars have been taken out of there over the years by Inco and Falconbridge. And yet we have a community such as Sudbury, with a population of about 90,000, and it can't even afford a city hall. I'm sure that the minister—

Mr. Gilbertson: They fill a lot of baskets though.

Mr. Stokes:—in touring around the province can see evidence wherever he goes in mining municipalities of their inability to provide services for the people who help to create all this new wealth.

Now, if the minister can justify the rates of taxation that are imposed on the mining industry, at the very least he should assure the people who work in the mines—who create the new wealth from the natural resources to feed this hungry giant down here along the "golden horsehoe"—at least he should assure those people that sufficient amount of dollars will go back directly.

If the minister is sure that the level of taxation is sufficient, surely he, above all people, has the responsibility to see that a sufficient amount of money is filtered back to those who created the new wealth to provide services.

On top of that, he should provide a sinking fund for the inevitable day when a community's mining resources peter out and the people living there have to look to another alternative, rather than moving.

I think the minister is well aware that when the last gold mine closed in Geraldton—after having extracted millions and millions of dollars in new wealth from those mines around Geraldton—that over 300 people were displaced. They were thrown out of jobs at a time when well over 50 per cent of them were in excess of 52 years of age.

Now, can the minister tell this House what alternatives there are for the employees in the mining industry who have reached that age; where the possibility of retraining or relocating is almost nil? In my talks with officials of the federal Department of Manpower and Immigration and in talking to this minister, none of them came up with alternatives for those people who found themselves out of a job as the result of the depletion of an ore body and the closing down of a mine.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that this minister above all others should assure those people in the mining industry that they are entitled to a fair share of all the additional dollars that go into the economy as a result of our activities in the mining industry.

I'm sure the minister is aware of the scarring of the landscape that takes place as the result of the exploitation of our resources. Nowhere in this bill do I see money set aside for the rehabilitation of those sites.

Indeed, to be more specific, Mr. Speaker, I drew the attention of this minister to a particular situation in Geraldton, where the mining company walked away and left a gaping hole in the landscape about 100 ft. wide, 250 ft. long and about 150 ft. deep. The officials in his own ministry couldn't even find the hole. When I asked them what they were going to do to protect the public, particularly snowmobilers, they said: "Well, when we find the hole we'll decide what we'll do with it." They eventually did find the hole.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Did they fall into it?

Mr. Stokes: The minister assured me over a year ago, Mr. Speaker, that they would insist that the previous operator would be forced to put a chain-link fence around it to protect the public. This hasn't been done and I am wondering just what provisions he is going to make.

Certainly there is nothing in evidence in this Act that the minister will, in fact, make the operators responsible for rehabilitating the sites, instead of leaving them in the deplorable state they are in at the present time, leaving the taxpayer to clean up the mess they have left.

They have taken all the profits out. They have left nothing behind for the miners themselves except the little bit of equity they have in their own homes which they must abandon if they are going to seek employment elsewhere—at an age when the chances of retraining them are almost nil. All of these things the minister should be aware of, as he comes from the part of the province that relies to a large extent on the exploitation of our mineral wealth.

I really do believe that the minister has been in this portfolio long enough now that he should be just a little bit more parochial in his approach with regard to the exploitation of our resources, and in providing some assurance for all of the people in northern communities who contribute in such large measure to the affluence that many people down here have at the present time.

I want to insist and impress upon the minister that this bill is not going to get easy passage. He has time to bring in amendments to give the people in the north the assurance that they are going to get a fair share as a result of our mineral exploitation. I think he should bring in the kind of legislation that will give them that assurance and give them an economic base to provide a sinking fund so that they can look to other alternatives well in advance of the closing of many, many mines.

I think, Mr. Speaker, with those remarks I will wait for the clause-by-clause study to get into more detail in the bill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Laughren: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As one who lives in the shadow of that corporate phallic symbol, the superstack in Sudbury, and as one whose constituents, virtually all, are employed by the mining industry, I rise in opposition to this bill and in support of my colleague's amendment.

Really, there has been no significant tax reform here at all despite the recommendations of Carter and Smith, as has been pointed out. I really don't know what kind of recommendations the minister would need, what kind of expertise he would require, to convince him that the way he is doing it is wrong. The way he has been doing it and is continuing to do it, is totally wrong.

I think he surely should see by now the long-run ramifications of what is going on in the mining industry in this province. If he looks at where these companies are spending their exploration dollars, it is not in this province—it is not even in this country. The day is coming, Mr. Speaker, when the mining will not even be done in this province.

I don't like to be pessimistic but I could draw one small parallel in what happened in a small town in the Province of Quebec. About five years ago the company sold its houses to the employees. Five years later the town was shut down and the employees were left with those houses but with no employment.

This past year, the International Nickel Company embarked on a programme of divesting itself of its real estate in the company towns in the Sudbury basin. I ask the minister to give that very serious consideration, because I suspect that the day is coming. If this government is not going to exploit those resources in the form of proper taxation, then all it is going to do is ensure there will be nothing at all to take the place of the employment when that day comes.

I would urge the government to give serious consideration to the comments of my colleague from Lakeshore, that we really are seeing the tip of the iceberg here, as we were with the Fidinam affair, in that the International Nickel Co. truly does do what it wants in the Sudbury basin.

A little while ago the Ministry of Transportation and Communications was considering building a bypass. It could not build the bypass in certain areas because the International Nickel Co. wanted to expand its open-pit operations—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member would find this a convenient spot to break his remarks, if he has more to say, and move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Laughren moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I would like to say that tomorrow we will proceed with items 2 and 5 on the order paper.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1972

The House met at 10 o'clock, a.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: While we do not have our guests of this morning in the galleries as yet, we will shortly have in the east gallery students from the Oshawa Catholic High School of Oshawa and Bayview Secondary School of Richmond Hill; and in the west gallery students from Burlington Central High School of Burlington. A little later in the morning we will also have students from St. Lawrence High School of Cornwall, and J. J. McGrand Separate School of Toronto.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

PCV REGULATIONS

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to ask the Minister of Transportation and Communications if he has any plans to change the PCV regulations pertaining to the trucking of livestock?

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, this is under active consideration presently. We have been studying this now for some two or three weeks and we will be making some decision on this very shortly.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Two supplementaries: Can the minister give us the import of the changes expected; and is he conferring with the truckers' organization—what do we call it?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): ATA!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The ATA—in negotiating the changes or are they simply going to be announced with consultation?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, we had a meeting with the ATA some few weeks ago on this matter. This doesn't preclude another meeting with them. In addition, we have been speaking and conferring with the officials from the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, farmers' groups and so on. It is not an easy problem to resolve but it is under active consideration.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: It would be an exaggeration, then, on the part of some people who have spoken to me about it, that the government is thinking of cancelling all the PCV classifications that have given truckers the right to truck cattle and opening it up to anybody with a truck?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, without getting into what the proposed legislation or change in regulations might be, I would say that this could be one of the alternatives; obviously any time we are changing anything that could be one of the alternatives, but it has not been laid down as yet.

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development.

Can he explain why, when the statutes require the hospitals of Ontario to put forward a budget to the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Health sent a change in the budget expansion percentage dated, in the case of Brantford I believe, as late as November 23? Can he explain the inadequate planning at the policy level that led to the confusion that now reigns among the hospital boards of this province in trying to meet the rather irrational demands of the ministry in reducing the rate of expansion to five per cent?

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, there is an unfortunate assumption in the question from the Leader of the Opposition which would lead me to answer very simply that I don't recognize that there is any lack of planning at the policy level, as he says, with respect to the communications that have gone out to the hospitals.

As the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) indicated in response to questions on this subject earlier this week, the whole approach to the hospitals has been based on a new planning standard with respect to active treatment beds. The memorandum to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition makes reference is an indication, if one has seen the letter, of about four different areas in which each hospital is asked to consider its budgetary allocations with respect to the general increase which is allowed—the special consideration given to active treatment beds, the reallocation of resources and so on.

There are some hospitals which have been constructed for their active treatment purposes, on a provincial planning standard of say five beds per 1,000. The Leader of the Opposition would be the first to recognize that this government, with the support of all parties, has moved into extended care and, therefore, it would seem obvious there would be some need for a reconsideration as to the number of active treatment hospital beds needed in any area, because of the new programme and the redesignation of beds.

Rather than getting into a long and detailed answer I simply want to speak to the point which the Leader of the Opposition is trying to make and disagree with it. There is no lack of planning at all. In fact, it is a very responsible approach which has been taken in order to bring some control over these expenditures and to decelerate, as I mentioned before, the rate by which these particular costs are going to be allowed to go up.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: How can the provincial secretary then explain that the ministry in the past has always sent the budgetary limit to the hospitals some time in August? It was normally approximately seven per cent, which was a very difficult limit to live under.

This year the indication of it was not sent until late in November, when the budgetary requirement has to be in on November 30, and it was reduced to five per cent? How can he fit that in with that palaver he has been giving me about the adequate planning that is taking place in his policy department?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, there is no question but that the ministry itself would have been happier if the information could have been sent to the hospitals earlier. The information, in order to meet the criterion of being a responsible approach to budgeting, had to be subjected to more considerations. There were a lot of other factors to be taken into account.

It is unfortunate that it wasn't sent out earlier. I can't argue the point that in other years it has gone out earlier. However, the point still remains that, as the Leader of the Opposition has been reading in the bulletins from the Ontario Hospital Association and from a number of chairmen of hospital boards throughout this province, they have accepted the challenge of the minister to work with him to effect the economies with which the ministry is faced.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): It is not a challenge, it is an order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I have a further supplementary, having to do with planning and the answer from the Minister of Health that the reduction of active treatment beds would be compensated for by an increase in the home-care programme. Is the provincial secretary aware that the 90 days available under the normal home-care programme has by order of the minister been reduced to 30 days; and that in fact people suffering from a broken hip or something who would be cared for in the home are going to be kept in the hospital longer, so that the 30-day restriction on home-care coverage will see them to the end of the requirement? How can he square the reduction from 90 days to 30 days with the minister's statement that the home-care programme is in fact going to compensate for the reduction in active treatment beds?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I can't speak to that particular point, but I will make it my business to get that information through the minister for the Leader of the Opposition.

I think the point the minister was making the other day in the exchange with the Leader of the Opposition and with the member for Scarborough West was that because of the reclassification of the number of active treatment hospital beds that were required against the new planning standard, it would now become imperative, on an area basis, for hospital boards along with other health delivery agencies, to have to consider whether or not there was some reclassification for beds that would no longer be paid at the active treatment rate, be they extended care, be they chronic care, be they convalescent care, be it the whole implementation of the home-care programme or whatever the alternatives may be. Although I can't give you an answer, Mr. Speaker, and I can't give the Leader of the Opposition an answer to the specific change in regulations to which he makes reference, I will in fact get that information for the member.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A final supplementary, if you will permit it, Mr. Speaker: Can the provincial secretary confirm, through the elaborate planning that went into this series of decisions, the indications that, because of the removal of 1,500 beds in the ancillary services from active treatment, as many as 1,200 people will be out of work before Christmas and that it is directly associated with that planning decision?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I am not able to respond to that, because I have no information that would either confirm or deny the facts which the Leader of the Opposition has included in his question. It would be difficult to ascertain what the implications are until such time as each hospital board of governors has had an opportunity now to review its 1973 operations against what its total budget allocations are going to be. Here, once again, it is obvious that each hospital board will now have to weigh the financial considerations of its total operation. I have no way of knowing what the results of this will be with respect to the labour force in each hospital.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): But the minister is destroying the jobs, while his partner is creating them, supposedly.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, because this minister is the policy minister concerned, does he not think it is the height of social irresponsibility to bring down an order of this kind—which the administrators learned about when reading the Globe and Mail on Friday morning, having had no advance notice from the Minister of Health—which will obviously reduce the number of jobs throughout the hospital system at precisely the moment that the man immediately on his right is bringing in winter works programmes to create jobs? How does the minister resolve throwing people out of work through arbitrary fiat of this government on the one hand, and then cutting down diseased dutch elm trees on the other?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, there were several questions in that addressed to me by the member for Scarborough West. Number one, I do not think that the social development policy field—or the Ministry of Health as one of the ministries in that field—has acted socially irresponsibly at all. I would think that we could be accused of being irresponsible had we not proceeded along the lines that we have insofar as this matter was concerned.

I have no evidence at the moment with respect to the labour implications of this particular decision of the ministry.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister complained about it.

Hon. Mr. Welch: We have the member for Scarborough West standing up and making all these righteous generalizations, but we'll face that situation when we have it.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is pompous.

Mr. Lewis: What does he mean? He'll have to face that situation!

Hon. Mr. Welch: Thirdly, the member for Scarborough West, in his usual irresponsible way—

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): He'll have apoplexy!

Mr. Lewis: I won't have apoplexy.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I was not looking at the hon. member—

Hon. Mr. Welch: —has failed to share with this House the fact that the minister—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: —but at the member to his right—to his left!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The one over there!

Mr. MacDonald: This is only a further manifestation of the difficulties they are having with the Provincial Treasurer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I wasn't pointing at the hon. member for Scarborough West at all. As a matter of fact, I wasn't too sure he was even here.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Could Hansard tell me where I left off?

Mr. Lewis: We were dealing with the problem on the minister's right!

Hon. Mr. Welch: That's the posture of the Treasurer of this province—always on the right.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The Minister of Health communicated with the chairmen of the hospital boards earlier than his announcement to the House, and the administrators to whom the hon. member makes reference had a memorandum from the Deputy Minister of Health at the same time the announcement was being made in the House.

Mr. Lewis: They got it on Friday morning in the mail!

Hon. Mr. Welch: Well, I take no responsibility for the federal mail system. I know that it went out—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, is the minister saying in his own careless complacency that in all of his advance planning he made no projections of people being out of work as a result of a cutback of 1,500 beds? That he made no analysis of some of the medical staff that would be put out of work on this basis? Does he mean that with all the planning that went into this, he can't tell the House whether or not those of us who have those fears are justified?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of Health made the announcement regarding the budgetary limitations with respect to the increase to be allowed, and this information was communicated, we realized that in many hospital operations a very large and substantial percentage of their budget is in fact made up of labour costs. I appreciate that; it would be less than responsible not to admit that.

Mr. MacDonald: It would be inhuman.

Mr. Lewis: The minister misses the point.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The point that remains is that how any particular hospital will respond now to the limitations placed on them is a matter which they will have to determine within the framework of their responsibility.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Welch: It remains to be seen how each hospital's board of governors will in fact respond to this.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Then I come back to irresponsibility, because that's what it is.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, do I understand that the member for Scarborough West feels that there should be no limitations on the increase allowed to the active treatment hospitals of this province?

Mr. Lewis: I feel that if we are going to place limitations, we should look at the facts and act only after consulting the facts.

Mr. MacDonald: They are acting like the arrogant Liberals in Ottawa they are always decrying.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Welch: And then if we—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Welch: As far as I'm concerned, the ministry has acted in a socially responsible way, taking all the factors into consideration.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): A supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's not a supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Not a supplementary? All right, the hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: In the planning that went into the decision in reference to northwestern Ontario, did the minister's department take into account the fact that the hospitals in the city of Thunder Bay serve the entire region since special medical services are not available to people as far away as 250 miles?

Hon. Mr. Welch: The answer to that question would be yes, Mr. Speaker. In fact, the hon. member will know from the communications that went out from the ministry that there was special reference to that section of the province and that in fact they are not expected to meet the new planning standard at the same level as the rest of the province.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: In fact, though, did not the same hospital bed ratio apply strictly to the city of Thunder Bay in considering the three hospitals in Thunder Bay?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I am certain—and I am recalling this from memory—that the section of the province to which the hon. member makes reference is not subject to the same planning standard as southern Ontario. In fact, it is higher, though I can't quote the figure. Now the hon. member might have information that I don't have from the practical interpretation of the memorandum, and if he will share that with me I will be glad to get the specific answer to that specific concern of his.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

An hon. member: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: There have been a reasonable number of supplementaries.

ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question of the Treasurer, Mr. Speaker, who has been referred to as the problem on the minister's right.

Mr. Lewis: That's right.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Can he tell the House whether in fact this retrenchment decision affecting hospitals emanated from his office rather than the Ministry of Health or the Provincial Secretary for Social Development, whether in fact it is his panic over facing the $600 million deficit left him by his predecessor, and the problems that he sees facing him in the oncoming year, and whether in fact it is his irrational response to the fiscal nightmare that he has so long predicted and which is now upon us?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted to ask how long it took the hon. Leader of the Opposition to concoct that question?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It just sprang from my mind, looking at the minister there trying to defend the inadequate answers of the policy secretary immediately to his left. I believe the problem is right in the Treasurer's mind.

Mr. Lewis: If the Leader of the Opposition thinks the policy minister's answers were inadequate, wait until he hears this one.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Why doesn't the member for Scarborough West take a walk?

Mr. MacDonald: Why is the Treasurer stalling?

Mr. Lewis: Is the Treasurer going to lose control again?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Why doesn't the member take a walk and do himself some good. Why doesn't he do that?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the Treasurer going to throw that book? What is he going to do with that book?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: The answer is, I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition and my loud-mouthed friend over there, that these decisions are reached by policy fields, by operating ministers, by the Treasurer, by the Policy and Priorities Board. They are not unilateral decisions; this government doesn't work that way.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Since the government seems to be reacting in a state of fiscal panic in this connection, has the minister any information as to the level of the deficit, which was predicted to be about $600 million? What will it be, would the Treasurer tell us, at the level of spending that we are enjoying at present?

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Let us in on the planning.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I think, Mr. Speaker, we will reserve that comment until the budget is brought down in the House, which usually describes the situation with the current budget and forecasts the situation for the future.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Is there any possibility that the Treasurer is going to hold those cheques in perpetuity that have been due to the farmers now for several weeks, in order to help him with the problems that he is facing at present?

Mr. H. Worton (Wellington South): What about the senior citizens, too?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: My hon. friend has gone on a question spree here this morning. Of course that is not true.

Mr. Singer: Is that against the rules?

Mr. Lewis: Don't pout. The Treasurer is starting to pout. He gets rattled.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I am enjoying myself. Why doesn't the member for Scarborough West smile for a change?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): He doesn't know how. It is Friday morning.

Mr. Lewis: Is it true that our budget is like the unemployment insurance fund?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: He is not happy on Friday. Friday isn't a happy day for the opposition.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I think I have answered the question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, when the cheques are sent, is it true that the minister is sending along his picture with each cheque, as he did with the shelter rebates?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I haven't considered it but it is not a bad idea.

Mr. MacDonald: That is a pre-Christmas threat if I ever heard one.

Mr. Lewis: It is probably worth almost as much at the bank.

BURSARIES FOR MEDICS IN NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Provincial Secretary for Social Development what has caused the Minister of Health to announce the termination of the bursary system for doctors and dentists wishing to practise through northern Ontario—the specific bursaries and subsidies which were given to students who intended to practise in the north after graduation? I gather from a news report last night that that is to be phased out. Can that be explained to the House?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, I think that is a question which might be better directed to the Minister of Health.

Mr. MacDonald: Isn't that a policy issue?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A matter of planning.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I am not sure if in fact the member for—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is that tight little group that makes the decisions over there.

Hon. Mr. Welch: By the way, the 45-minute question period does provide time for answers.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): I don't call "I don't know" an answer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The point I am making, Mr. Speaker, on this particular Friday morning, being the first day of December, is the fact that—

Mr. Reid: The provincial secretary is wasting question period time. Don't tell us what day it is.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Welch: That is just to make sure the opposition knows.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He is trying to think of his point again.

Hon. Mr. Welch:—is the fact that the hon. member for Scarborough West was making reference to some newspaper account of remarks by the minister himself, and I think under those circumstances it would be wise to in fact address this to the Minister of Health.

Mr. Lewis: I was making reference to a radio report.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The question with respect to the special programme, the incentive programme, to encourage members of both the medical profession and the dental profession to go north, has been a very successful programme.

Mr. MacDonald: Well, why is it being cancelled?

Mr. Lewis: Why is the government cancelling it?

Hon. Mr. Welch: The point is, I'm not familiar with the comments made by the minister that were reported yesterday.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, Order!

Hon. Mr. Welch: Surely the member for Scarborough West—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Singer: Give us some unilateral decisions now.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Surely the hon. member for Scarborough West would realize that having phrased his question and making some reference to a recent newscast, that the policy minister would want to be very cautious to make sure that he in fact consults with the Minister of Health before giving an answer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: In fact the minister didn't even know the decision had been made, is that right?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Well, I didn't—

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary: Is that what the minister is saying—that he had no idea it was made?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Foulds: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary. The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: Following the last comment of the minister, does the Minister of Health consult with him before making policy statements?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Good question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Is that a supplementary?

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Supplementary.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): It's not a supplementary, no.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary, the hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Will the policy minister assure everybody in northern Ontario who so badly need doctors that nothing will be done by the Ministry of Health that will jeopardize the possibility of their getting doctors now or in the future?

Hon. Mr. Welch: I don't think there'd be any difficulty, in fact, in concurring with this.

I'm not familiar with the news account to which the hon. member for Scarborough West makes some reference. As far as I'm concerned the programme that has been introduced by that ministry has been very successful.

Mr. Lewis: No, the Minister of Health is reported to have said it was quite unsuccessful.

Mr. Singer: Nobody would honour their commitment. All the doctors were—

Mr. MacDonald: He said there was a ripoff involved and he wanted to stop the ripoff.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Don't ever come in on Friday!

Hon. Mr. Welch: Were those people at some St. Andrews ball last night, or something like that?

Mr. MacDonald: I don't know where the minister was.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I was busy reading reports and working very, very late.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Obviously not the right reports, however. I was in another ministry.

But be that as it may, I can certainly share the concern of the hon. member for Thunder Bay and would be glad to communicate his concern to the Minister of Health.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

CITIZENS' INQUIRY BRANCH REPORT

Mr. Lewis: A question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister of Government Services, if I could. What meaningless nonsense is this that the citizens'—

An hon. member: That's provocative!

Mr. Lewis: That's not provocative!

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): What would the member call it?

Mr. Lewis: That's the kind of preamble which the minister has asked for in a question. It's to the point.

What kind of meaningless nonsense is this that the citizens' inquiry branch puts out, which says that in the month of October, 1972, the total inquiries were 3,511, of which 87 per cent of them—over 3,000—were general inquiries and non-building kiosk inquiries? What does that all mean? What kind of people are non-building kiosk inquiries? And how is that fulfilling the COGP wish for an appraisal of government contact with citizens?

Hon. C. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Igloos aren't they?

Mr. MacDonald: He's puzzled.

Hon. J. W. Snow (Minister of Government Services): I must admit, Mr. Speaker, I am, with that question.

Mr. MacDonald: That was obvious!

Hon. Mr. Snow: Obviously, I have not got the paper that the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party is referring to in front of me.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Everybody always gets one.

Mr. Lewis: Everybody gets one; I have been getting them from month to month. I am just asking what they mean.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I am sure, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is getting them. I just do not have the figures in front of me here that he is referring to. The—

Mr. Foulds: We want an explanation of non-building kiosks.

Hon. Mr. Snow: The citizens' inquiry branch submit to myself and to management board a monthly report as to the number of inquiries and the type of inquiries they receive—whether they are by mail, whether they are by telephone, whether they are from people walking into the office, and at the information kiosks, as the member calls them, within the government buildings—

Mr. Lewis: They are non-building kiosks.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Well, that must then be—

Mr. Lewis: They are just little sinecures that the minister has established for somebody.

Hon. Mr. Snow: The information desks in the Macdonald complex and in the Whitney building are operated under the citizens' inquiry branch, so there are a certain number of inquiries at the information desk—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What does non-building kiosk mean?

Hon. Mr. Snow: I don't know. Is that the answer the member wanted?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I really don't know. At least I answered the question. I will find out, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: This is simply a winter employment scheme worked out by this minister and the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) for former Telegram employees.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A supplementary question: Can the minister explain, in view of the original statement that this branch has worked closely with the MPPs, the statement that was sent out to all the MPPs yesterday saying that certain cases within their ridings are not being revealed to them?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I understand that in some cases an inquiry from a citizen comes to the citizens' inquiry branch and the staff there is specifically asked not to inform the local member.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a last supplementary, Mr. Speaker, I remind the minister that when this was introduced there was much fanfare attached to it. Perhaps I can recall to his mind, I say with an interrogative inflection, 10(17) of the CGOP report which says that the director of the citizens' inquiry branch be responsible for conducting tests to identify, tabulate and analyse information on citizen interests and concerns received via the telephone inquiry service and from community information centres now operating. How can that possibly be communicated to government in any way when the minister doesn't even know what it means; when 87 per cent of the inquiries are undocumented; when the whole thing has been reduced to nonsense?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, that is entirely wrong. We do tabulate completely the inquiries that come in—the written inquiries and the telephoned inquiries; the number of inquiries that relate to the different ministries of the government. A great number of inquiries the branch gets relate to federal matters and municipal matters.

Mr. Lewis: There were 38 on municipal matters—last month, 38 inquiries and 3,000 from non-building kiosks.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Perhaps the minister would answer the question.

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): But he just can't.

Hon. Mr. Snow: The report that comes out monthly, as I said, breaks down the inquiries in order that we can evaluate the service that this particular new branch is supplying to the people. I must say that they are making every attempt to communicate the inquiries to the particular member for the riding where the inquiry comes from except, as I say, there are a few cases in which the particular person asks that the member not be informed.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary: If the system is working as well as the minister says, could he explain why there is so much unhappiness about it among backbench Conservative members who have two complaints? No. 1, that their prerogatives are being interfered with by this branch; and No. 2, the government, through this branch, is unnecessarily serving members of the opposition?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, I have certainly not heard any complaints from—

Mr. Singer: The minister doesn't go to his caucuses very often.

Hon. Mr. Snow: Yes, I do. I have not heard any complaints from any backbench member of this party or from any member of the opposition party.

Mr. Singer: Because he doesn't go to his caucuses very often.

Hon. Mr. Snow: I don't go to the caucuses of the opposition unless I'm invited.

Mr. MacDonald: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: COGP proposed in its report that this should be on a trial basis. What is the government's present view with regard to this operation—in terms of a trial or a permanent operation?

Hon. Mr. Snow: Mr. Speaker, when this recommendation of COGP was first implemented it was on a six-month trial basis. That six months, I believe, is just complete now and Management Board has recently approved extension for a further six months.

Mr. Reid: Why?

Mr. MacDonald: Does the minister mean it will be a permanent outdoor relief department for former Tely employees?

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions? If not, the hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DETOXIFICATION CENTRES

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development—

Mr. Roy: Come on!

Mr. Sargent: In March, 1971, the minister brought in legislation to establish 10 detoxification centres in Ontario. My first question to him is, are they working and does he plan to set up any more in Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, reference is being made to the amendments to the Liquor Control Act and the plans of the Ministry of Health with respect to this alternative method of treating or looking after the chronic drunk offender. The hon. member will recall the staging that was in fact to be the background for the introduction of these centres and the criteria in the various counties.

It is my understanding that the operation of the detoxification centre itself in those areas, for instance, as in Metropolitan Toronto—I think this was commented on in the Toronto press within the last few days—is working well. It is the second phase of the programme which is still being determined, namely, the rehabilitation aspect or the halfway house programme.

In some centres of the province through the voluntary sector there are those who are having great success with this particular programme. But the member can appreciate that both components are really necessary to complete the picture. I would doubt at the moment that we are in position to give the hon. member a report on the success of the operation until we have the second phase, the halfway house or the rehabilitation section, in operation for a little longer period of time.

As the member knows, in certain sections of Toronto the alternative is now available to the police officer of either sending someone to the detoxification centre or to the jail system.

Mr. Sargent: A supplementary: Is the second phase, the rehab programme, in operation in all 10 centres?

Hon. Mr. Welch: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Sargent: In what centres is it operating?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, our problem at the moment is that the detoxification centres themselves are not in operation in all 10 centres. As I was indicating in my answer to the main question, these were to be phased in.

The detoxification centres in Toronto, and I think one in Kenora, are presently in operation, and they are planned for the other parts of the province in conjunction with the public hospitals. There is one here in Toronto and there is one in St. Catharines operating on a voluntary basis where they have in fact introduced the halfway house or the rehabilitation centre. They would be the only centres that I'm familiar with as part of the organized programme at the moment.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, Mr. David Archibald says the programme is a flop. Does the minister agree with that?

Mr. Reid: Sure.

Mr. Roy: Sure!

Hon. Mr. Welch: May I handle that question in two parts? I don't know that Mr. Archibald says it's a flop.

An hon. member: He recognizes it.

Hon. Mr. Welch: In fact, Mr. Archibald as the executive officer of the Addiction Research Foundation has recommended the programme, and Mr. Archibald indeed chairs a committee within our field with respect to its full implementation. So I would be very surprised if Mr. Archibald had that particular feeling. I am not in the position to make any judgement on the programme yet because I don't feel that we've had sufficient experience with it.

One of the concerns that I have about the programme is that, even if it were operating today in its full capacity, there are very obvious limitations to this programme because of the number of beds that would be available when one thinks in terms of the number of people who may be part of this classification with respect to this particular illness. But we can only hope, as in most experiments, that we would be given sufficient time to have some experience with it to see how successful it might be.

Mr. Singer: By way of a supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary, yes.

Mr. Singer: Is the minister not aware of the very substantial criticism being addressed to this so-called programme by provincial judges who, because of recent amendments to the Criminal Code, now deal with these unfortunate people in a much more lenient manner—in fact, send them back on to the streets because there are no beds available for them? Would the minister not agree that in Toronto where the need is absolutely the greatest the provision of treatment facilities for alcoholics is almost nonexistent, notwithstanding his announcement a year ago or many months ago?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question of the member from Downsview, I am aware of some of the criticism that is being addressed to this programme. It's coming from a number of sources.

Because of the amendments to the legislation, the judges who are responsible for sentencing are taking a more lenient view with respect to this type of offence, because they feel against the background of up-to-date thinking that it should be treated more as an illness than as a criminal offence. Being faced with this change in public attitude to the chronic drunk, of course, they have the problem on their hands as to what do they do with these people who are now before them by virtue of the Criminal Code.

So we have a change in social attitude toward the person and obviously an insufficient number of beds in the new plan to accommodate all those who might well qualify to be sent there.

I have been reading some very responsible and some very interesting articles by those who have reminded us that perhaps in the new system we are not providing the basic type of care which we need for these people. Some people argue that we may have changed the venue of the revolving door.

Mr. Singer: Well, they are often better off in jail.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The only problem I have—and I share this quite frankly with the hon. member—the only problem that we have with this, assuming just for the moment that we had a sufficient number of beds, is this whole question that there is a lack of a compulsory component even in the new programme. In other words, under the old system, as the hon. member would know, a person charged with this offence could, on conviction, be sent to jail. So there he was, subject to the routine of the jail and also the recipient of regular meals and some health services.

To go the other route, although he could go to the detoxification centre there is nothing which would in fact force that individual to stay within that particular programme, and there are those who advise us that if, in fact, you were to introduce some compulsory nature to the alternative you might well destroy the merits of the programme.

Therefore, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the fact that the hon. member has introduced this question and I can assure him that it is under very active consideration within the field.

Mr. Singer: By way of final supplementary, could the minister very simply tell us how many beds are available on Dec. 1, 1972, for treatment of this kind in Metropolitan Toronto?

Mr. Renwick: Answer?

Hon. Mr. Welch: I would be very glad to get that information for the hon. member.

Mr. Renwick: That involves people, the minister wouldn't know that.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

one of the things, as I say, that is presently being worked out between the two groups.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville, a supplementary.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister, in order to provide our American counterparts with a more realistic and satisfactory air pollution reading for the city of Windsor, is the minister considering setting up additional monitors in the city, especially one on the east side of town close to the Ford Motor Co. foundry and also fairly close to the Detroit Edison power house on the American side?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, this may be necessary. I can't give a yes or no to the hon. member today, but this is one of the things that we are looking at.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

POLLUTION CONTROL FOR WINDSOR

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of the Environment regarding a statement on Nov. 8 by one of his officials that the Ontario and Michigan governments are very close to a working arrangement on pollution control for Windsor, by which American firms would cut back when Windsor's air pollution level was "intolerably bad".

How close are we to this arrangement now, and has the minister any details?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, all I can say is that we are quite close. My understanding is that it is a matter of them wanting to use certain of the readings that we take. There is also some question about establishing the actual sources in the Detroit area, which is being worked out. We had some short discussion about this when I was in Detroit a week ago in connection with another matter. All I can say is that there is close co-operation, both sides are working to have an effective and enforceable solution and I will let the House know as soon as we have this.

Mr. Burr: Supplementary. What criterion is going to be used to establish when the level is intolerable? Is it the 32 figure or is the ministry going to use a lower level reading?

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Speaker, we would trust that Wayne county and the city of Detroit would use our criteria, but that is

FARM TAX CREDIT

Mr. J. P. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the provincial Treasurer.

In regard to his new tax credit plan, is it true that a farmer has to pay his taxes in the year 1972 in order to qualify for the tax credit?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I suppose it can't be said that he has to pay his taxes. He has to file a return to determine the level of his taxable income, because that is a component part of the manner in which his credit would be calculated.

Mr. Spence: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Then if he does file this he can qualify, even if it is in 1973, for his tax credits, if they are not correct?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: That is quite correct; he must file.

As I say, whether he is eligible to pay taxes or not really isn't as pertinent as the determination of the level of his taxable income, because from that determination the tax credit is produced.

So there will be an extra form accompanying the tax forms. They presumably will be available; if they are not mailed to people they are usually available in the post office. There will be an extra form, I believe it will be a blue form. That is the form to be completed to make application for tax credit.

Mr. Spence: Mr. Speaker, another supplementary: Is the minister aware that the clerks of municipalities are instructing taxpayers to have their 1972 taxes paid by Dec. 31 in order to qualify for tax credits for 1972?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: No, I am not aware that that is being done; although I am not surprised that it is.

I can't say really. I'll have to pursue it to see whether taxes in arrears can be utilized for tax credit purposes or not. I don't know whether they have to be paid, but I can think of clerks and treasurers requesting they be paid for their own purposes, in any case.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale. There is one minute remaining.

AUTO INSURANCE BOOSTS FOR TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Is the minister aware that if he were convicted of an offence of careless driving under the Highway Traffic Act in which no accident was involved either to person or to property, and he was fined $100—being the minimum fine—that the insurance company would then impose an additional fine on him by increasing his insurance premium 50 per cent for one year, likely two years and possibly three years, resulting in an additional punishment of in excess of $200, and probably $300?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): I understand, Mr. Speaker, that some companies have followed this type of assessment for incurring loss of points for infractions under the Highway Traffic Act. It is my further understanding that not all companies follow that policy in that there is no loss afforded to them.

I heard a matter similar to this debated in the House, I believe last year, and there was some concern expressed, and quite properly so, that there is no reason why the insured should have to pay an additional assessment if there was no loss to the insurer.

I feel the member is concerned or he wouldn't have asked the question, and I share his concern. It seems inequitable to me, if there is no loss, that there should be an increase, and accordingly I would hope that the competitive aspect of the insurance industry perhaps would preclude purchasers of policies from dealing with the company that would react in that fashion.

Mr. Speaker: The question period has been completed.

Mr. MacDonald: It's a long standing legal rippoff.

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that changes be made in the membership of standing committees as follows: 1. Administration of justice, Mr. McKeough substituted for Mr. Clement; 2. Social development, Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Root substituted for Mrs. Birch and Mr. McNie; 3. Resources development, Mr. Gilbertson substituted for Mr. Bennett; 4. Regulations, Mr. Handleman substituted for Mr. Irvine.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The third order, resuming the adjourned debate on consideration of the reports of the Liquor Control and Liquor Licence Boards.

LIQUOR CONTROL REPORTS (continued)

Mr. Speaker: I believe the hon. member for Sudbury had adjourned the debate at the last occasion upon which we debated this topic. The hon. member for Sudbury.

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, one week ago when I adjourned the debate on the consideration of the liquor board reports, I was making a plea on behalf of approximately one million people who reside north of the French River. These one million people occupy several hundred thousand square miles of moose pasture, so that the considerations for the people in northern Ontario are somewhat different from those for the other six million people who have the distinct pleasure and advantage of living in that part of the province known as southern Ontario.

At the time that I terminated, I was trying to explain what Mr. Wishart was aiming at when he brought in his report after having done a study of the distribution of beer in northern Ontario. I think this report has been misinterpreted by the Liquor Control Board. Mr. Wishart was concerned that the existing markets for draught beer would be preserved in that part of the province, to maintain a couple of hundred jobs which were on the line had the southern Ontario breweries been allowed to come in and export draught beer into that part of the province. The result of his recommendations was that the existing situation should continue, that those breweries in northern Ontario should have the monopoly position and that they should be the only ones allowed to distribute draught beer in northern Ontario. I agreed with that, for the simple reason that we do want to keep that industry viable.

Mr. Wishart at no time, as far as I understand his recommendations, indicated that there should be any further restrictions other than the existing market. The existing market at that time was in barroom sales or in licensed premises. He made no mention whatsoever—in fact the situation was not even apparent—that there would come about a situation whereby draught beer would be put into mini-kegs and made available for home consumption. These mini-kegs are available in southern Ontario, and for some unknown reason they are not available—and even to this day they are not available—and are not sold in the retail outlets in the north because of directives from the liquor board that this should not happen.

I think the members have to realize that with the geographic distribution there is not a tavern or a bar just around the corner in a lot of the small towns in northern Ontario. In fact, in some instances you have to drive from one city to another if you want to partake of this dubious pleasure. So I think it is more important there, than in this part of the province, that these mini-kegs be made available. I am looking forward to the minister making an announcement which will state that by New Year's Eve, northern Ontario will have mini-kegs of draught beer available for home consumption. I think that would be greeted with jubilation across a wide sector of the population in northern Ontario. That is about all I am going to say on that matter.

When the liquor board was transferred from the Solicitor General's office to the office of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations there was a directive asking members and citizens to make known their ideas on long-term approaches to liquor sales in Ontario.

It's unfortunate that over the past years the distribution of alcohol has become so commercialized and has been turned over to the profit-motivated distribution system, because when people are seeking a profit they will do almost anything in order to enhance their profit. The minister then finds himself in terrible difficulty and under extreme pressure.

If he wants to make any corrections or a change of direction, he not only has to deal with the population, which usually goes along pretty quietly with these directives, but with the commercial establishments, the restaurant and hotel operators, people who have built up a living and an industry on the distribution of alcohol. This puts him under severe pressure, and it's very difficult for him to make changes in direction.

I think there should be a gradual trend away from commercialization and the distribution of alcohol for the sake of personal and private profit. We know there have been vast empires built up on the sale of alcohol, and I think this is one of the weaknesses in the system which restrains the minister. These people, the hotel and restaurant operators, have come to think that this is their private preserve; that the only reason we sell alcohol is to allow them to make themselves a living or to enhance their profit picture. I don't think that was the intent at all. But that is what it has deteriorated to.

I think we should get away from the profit motive and try to get more licences into clubs or organizations that do not distribute whisky and beer just for the sake of making profit, but as a social venture for their membership or whatever. I realize there are some club licences around, but there are not as many as I would like to see.

I do not mean by this that we should add additional outlets. I am thinking rather of the practice of giving one particular hotel operator five or six licences—in fact, there's a particular hotel in my town which has about six licences. It has a men only licence, a men and women licence, a lounge licence, a tavern licence and a dining room licence. What happens is that many of us who want to go out on an evening and meet our friends in this type of atmosphere all have to collect in this one particular spot. The result is that outside this hotel there are several acres of cars—probably 1,000 cars—because these five or six licences are attracting people.

We should distribute these licences throughout clubs or disperse them so that we won't have these ghettos of outlets all concentrated in one area, because this creates a problem of crowding and the neighbourhood generally deteriorates. I think the greatest example of that is the place they call "the strip" on Yonge St.; it's a pretty crowded and rowdy spot when all of those pubs, which are door to door and back to back, start dumping out.

I think we would have a much better environment if we distributed these licences in the areas where the people live, because I have no desire to come downtown to Yonge St. in Toronto or Elm St. in Sudbury; I would just as soon stay in my own neighbourhood. We should also probably be thinking about neighbourhood pubs. I don't know why you have to operate a hotel or a restaurant in order to get a licence to distribute alcohol.

I think if there were pubs somewhat like these I have seen in Great Britain—they call them the locals there, and you don't have to get into your car and drive 10 miles to this particular spot to do your drinking; you can do it right in your own immediate area—I think this would not only solve the problem of traffic; I think when you are in company with your neighbours, people who know you, you tend to act in a little more civilized manner.

I think it would cut down on some of the rowdiness because we will all admit that the bars do get a little rowdy once in a while. I don't know what we would call them, just a local pub. It doesn't have to be a monstrous place like some I have seen. You know, I have seen probably the biggest barn in Ontario. It was in Elliot Lake a few years ago; there were 600 chairs in one unbroken room—600 chairs in the barroom. Now, this was a bloody disgrace to have that type of bar.

I think if you had a bar with only a dozen chairs in it, a corner in a residential neighbourhood, the whole problem of rowdiness and alcoholism would be somewhat downgraded. I wish the minister would think about breaking up these large oases that we have in the downtown areas of our cities and towns, and get all of these licences spread around the communities so people can partake in their own environment, in their own stamping ground, rather than have to come to a special place.

Now, on the question of club licences—I am a member of a local union. We have a club licence and I didn't know the ridiculous regulations until last week. I was with four of my friends; we happened to be out doing some business and later in the evening we decided to go into the club and have a couple of beers. Lo and behold, I couldn't take my four friends in because I am allowed only one guest! This is a pretty ridiculous thing because it forces me then to do things that I shouldn't have to do. Being well known in this particular club, I had other people sign in my guests.

There is no reason why I, as a bona fide member of this club, could not go in and sit down and, associating with four people, collectively enjoy what this club licence intimates, that I have access to alcohol in this environment. I don't see why I am allowed to sign in only one guest.

Well, I think I understand why, because of the powerful lobby from the hotel keepers and those people who think it is their right and duty; that this is their private preserve and no one should infringe upon their right to make a profit. I know the pressure that is put on the minister and on the board, because each and every time there is a club licence granted, these people raise objections because it is going to detract from their private profits.

I think there is nothing more degrading than a man who makes a profit from selling alcohol, because we know it is a harmful substance. We tolerate it because we don't know how to control it. I think it is wrong to put it in the hands of private operators and let them think that it is their right—and their God-given right—to make profits by selling alcohol.

I wish the board and the minister would play down these objections from the commercial operators and allow the club licence a little more leeway. These clubs do not necessarily do this for the sake of profit. It is a service to their membership and that is precisely the only reason they operate these things. It is to try to keep their organization together because we all know that when people gather they do like to imbibe a bit. It lowers their inhibitions; it makes for more convivial surroundings.

Mr. Speaker, I know that the minister has received the submission from the Ontario region of the Canadian Restaurant Association and I think its attitude toward the sale of alcohol is pretty well outlined there. There are things in this submission that I wish he would pay heed to, and which he will probably ignore.

On page 4 of that particular brief, they imply that there should be a survey done and question why there is a need for licensing in any form. By implication, they are saying that liquor should be available just like lollipops or Coca-Cola, or some other harmless substance.

Alcohol being what it is, I think it has to come under strict government control and I would ask him to look very closely at any suggestion that alcohol be thrown on the free market—the supply and demand market. These people are interested only in profits and we know that they could figure out ways and means of increasing consumption through advertising. There's enough advertising even now; even that could be curtailed a bit. But these people seeking private profit would certainly increase the consumption of alcoholic beverages in one manner or another.

So I think the tight regulations which are presently imposed by this government should be maintained, but I don't think the regulations should be picayune and inconsistent. I think once we make a rule we should stick to it.

The rules should be clearly written and I don't think the board should have the power to rule one way in one area, and another way in another area. As they are now, they are capricious and no one knows from day to day, from hour to hour, from minute to minute, what the next directive of this board is going to be. That is one of the chief complaints I hear from across the province.

So licensing by the government, control by the government, has to be maintained despite the submission of the Ontario section of the Canadian Restaurant Association.

The second point which I came across was on page 6; it was that we should have an advisory committee to advise the government. And, of course, they recommend that the Canadian Restaurant Association be on the advisory committee.

Well, my complaint comes right through here again. I can pretty well predict what these people would advise the government to do—get rid of licensing and get rid of all of these things. It would lend substance to their first proposal that there should be no licensing.

If you do need an advisory committee, I think the people who are engaged in the business of selling alcohol should not be among your advisers. I think that they have a bias for profit, and might lead us down the garden path and the advisory committee report then would have some substance and bearing, because then it would be an official committee report.

They also question the concept of acquiring a licence. They seem to indicate that just because they can run a restaurant and have proved that they are capable of functioning in the business world, to sell alcohol to the public should be their right.

Now, I don't think anyone has that right. No one has the right to sell this substance to the public. I think the government has to decide whether we want any more outlets, whether we have enough, where we want them, and everything else. The person distributing alcoholic beverages should have no say whatsoever. His ideas of where it should go, I'm sure would be in conflict with what the other members and I would think would be in the best interests of the citizens of Ontario.

The only redeeming feature of selling alcohol—and I speak as the experienced amateur—is the tax revenues that we collect. That's about the only good thing we can say for alcohol. And the Restaurant Association thinks we should terminate the transfer tax, because it doesn't apply to any other business. I know that it's just another means of collecting money from the brewing or the alcohol industry, but as I said earlier, the only redeeming feature of the whole bloody industry is the revenue that the government derives from it—and I don't believe that the revenues derived go anywhere near to paying the social cost of distributing this alcohol.

As far as I am concerned, taxing of liquor is a wide open field. You can lay on tax after tax and as far as I am concerned I will never complain. I don't care whether you do it to foreign liquors or domestic or beer or whatever it is. If the government needs revenue then this is one easy place to get it because it is a non-essential commodity, and though it is a luxury—and there's nothing wrong with luxury taxes—those people who have the wherewithal to buy exotic wines therefore have the wherewithal to make a contribution to our government.

In no way would I agree with removing any of the transfer tax, the 10 per cent surtax which is not charged to other industries. The operator has to pay an extra 10 per cent just because it is alcohol. The government can raise that to 20 per cent if it wants, it would only please me the more. It would mean more revenue for the government, and if we have to raise revenue then I think this is the easiest place to do it. It might also detract from the consumption of alcohol if the price were raised high enough. I think that is just about all I have to say on the distribution.

The chairman of the Ontario Liquor Licence Board, Mr. Mackey, took over this job a couple of years ago. Since he was a former policeman I think we did expect certain actions from him regarding the issuance of licences. As was stated last week, there's a sort of toll-gate system used—no one knows just what the secret key is to get the gate open in order to get a licence.

We all suspect—and it has been thrown in my face many times in the past year—that there is some sort of mysterious system of getting licences, that you have to visit certain lawyers and you have to make certain deposits. I can't justify this, but I will say that there is a widespread feeling throughout the province that this is so.

With Mr. Mackey's background, my leader of the day implied that maybe he would solve this problem and the people of Ontario would then have some faith in how these licences were distributed. I haven't seen anything in his two years in office which would lead me to believe that the toll-gate system has been changed.

People write and ask me if I know the secret. I'm not of the government so I don't know what the secret is. I tell them so and they go away shaking their heads looking for this secret key to get in the door. The job of chairman of the Liquor Licence Board has been played up to suggest that there are very few people who could do this job and that Mr. Mackey is an exceptional person and for this reason he should have the job.

I have no doubt he is—he has got a good background and a good record—but I just wonder if the criteria for this job are so unique that it has to be this one particular person, and I just wonder how many bites at the public purse a person is allowed to get. We know that Mr. Mackey is a former police chief of the city of Toronto and he is at present enjoying a pension of $11,000 a year. We do not know—or I do not know and I haven't seen it published—what he draws as chairman of the Liquor Licence Board.

In the present situation I don't know why a person would get two bites at the public purse. I think the $11,000 pension would keep him in a reasonable situation and that this job should have been given to someone who probably needed it. I am sure that there are people qualified, because it does not strike me that you have to have any particular academic or university training. I think it takes a lot of common sense. You don't necessarily have to be a policeman either. Judge Robb, as members know, was not a policeman and apparently he did a job on it.

I am concerned that so much of the wealth of the public purse is dumped into one person's pocket. It reminds me of some of the things that go on among the backbenchers on the government side. They get duplicate pay for doing different jobs on different committees, commissions and boards, such as the OWRC and the Niagara Parks Commission and these various other jobs that pay another salary on top of their basic salary here. Here is somewhat the same situation. It's sort of incestuous that we cannot expand our view and we cannot lift our horizons a bit and find someone else outside of the magic circle to give this job to. I think the minister should think about that.

With that, I think I will reserve any remarks until a later date. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe.

Mr. A. W. Downer (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I am very deeply interested in this debate and I appreciate the many views expressed. I am particularly interested in what the Leader of the Opposition had to say because I have a great regard for the Leader of the Opposition. I've known his—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Oh-oh! That's a bad start. I'm afraid of what comes next.

Mr. Downer:—family for 35 years, and I regard his views with great respect. I would like to say, in connection with what he had to say last week—he was talking about banning all liquor advertising—that that's a very excellent suggestion. I only wish it could be done. It would be a very wonderful step in this province. But we have to be realistic. This whole question was debated in this House more than 15 years ago and the decision at that time was that the prohibition of liquor advertising was unrealistic and impossible.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Times have changed.

Mr. Downer: The distillers and brewers at that time were not agitating for the lifting of the ban. We had a sort of ban. It was a bit of a ban we called the national code, but they weren't agitating for the lifting of the ban. But because they felt that they were getting everything they wanted anyway, we couldn't enforce the prohibition. It was an impossible thing. We banned advertising here, but magazines and periodicals, such as Time and Reader's Digest and Maclean's and a score of other papers, printed their papers outside the province. The ban certainly didn't affect them. Their magazines—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): The most effective ban is not to deal with their products. That'll bring them to heel quickly.

Mr. Downer: Then the radio beamed advertisements from the United States, and you can't stop that sort of advertising. The only thing the ban meant was that our papers and our magazines and our radio stations were not able to cash in on millions of dollars of advertising revenue. This, of course, hurt only our own people—the typesetters, the printers and the small magazines—and didn't affect the advertising coming in at all. So the ban was lifted.

The same thing has happened in British Columbia. The Social Credit government introduced a ban on liquor advertising, but the leader of the New Democratic Party, on the very first day in office said, "We lift that ban because it is impossible to enforce it." There you have the background of advertising as far as liquor is concerned.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I wonder if the hon. member would permit a question?

Mr. Downer: Oh yes, quite.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, surely the hon. member must, from his experience as a member of the Legislature, on the liquor board, and as a minister of the Christian church, equate in his own mind the problems of alcohol with the problems of tobacco. We have successfully banned tobacco advertising in many respects and I was simply calling for a similar ban for alcohol because I believe it is much more damaging than tobacco.

Mr. Downer: Right. I agree with the Leader of the Opposition. But the ban would have to be international in scope. The ban on tobacco advertising is international in scope and therefore can be enforced, but this is a different thing altogether.

It was also suggested during the course of the debate that local option be abandoned as a basic principle. In other words, local autonomy should be thrown to the winds. I don't think the people on the other side of the House think that at all.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: You can get a drink in Talisman, and that is in a dry area. The member's back door. We can shoot that full of holes whenever we want to.

Mr. Downer: If we did away with local option I think this would be a very unwise step and a backward step.

Mr. Singer: The sky would come tumbling down.

Mr. Downer: Here is a principle that has stood the test of time for many, many years—

Mr. Singer: Oh, yes!

Mr. Downer: —and I would like to point out—and this is important—that of 974 municipalities in this province, 200 at present are absolutely dry and 514 are partially dry. In other words, the 514 have only liquor stores and Brewers' Warehousing stores.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In every one of them you can get a drink if you belong to a club.

Mr. Downer: Only 260 municipalities in the whole Province of Ontario—

Mr. R. F. Ruston (Essex-Kent): A membership card gets you in.

Mr. Downer: —can be considered in any sense of the word to have all the licences available.

Mr. Singer: Representing what percentage of Ontario's population?

Mr. Downer: Only 260 are completely—surely the members don't want to impose their will upon people who don't want it?

Mr. Singer: Representing 95 per cent of Ontario's population.

Mr. Downer: Why force people in dry areas to accept something they don't desire? If we believe in local autonomy—and I have an idea that most of us have strong views on this—why give lip service to it? Let it stand out: This local option must be retained. We daren't walk slipshod over the views of a large segment of our population.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Is the member talking as a liquor commissioner, or the laird of Duntroon?

Mr. Downer: I am speaking as both. I don't mind censure, you know; a little bit of it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What is it the member doesn't mind?

Mr. Downer: I often think of Dean Swift who said: "Censure is the tax that we have to pay for doing something instructive," so I don't mind being censured a little bit.

I would like to go on from there, this time to the hon. member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor). I am sorry he is not here, he is one of those affable Irishmen that I like. We don't perhaps kick with the same foot but I like an Irishman and I like the hon. member for Lakeshore.

He suggested that perhaps we should have only one boss; that the Liquor Licence Board and the Liquor Control Board be amalgamated. I would like to suggest to him and to the hon. members of this House that we look at this matter twice before coming to any quick conclusions.

First we have the Liquor Control Board which was in operation for many, many years before the Liquor Licence Board. The function of the Liquor Control Board is to buy and sell the product and look after the method of distribution. The liquor stores are under its jurisdiction and some of the warehouses too.

This board has done a fine job for many years and I can't remember a single finger of dishonesty or incompetence being pointed at this board. If members know of any instances of where there has been a pork barrel, I would like to know about them. I haven't heard about them and I have been in this House—

Mr. Ruston: All of them are.

Mr. Downer:—for longer than any other man in the House.

Mr. Ruston: They are all pork barrels. All of them.

Mr. Downer: It is a multimillion-dollar business and we should be proud of the manner in which it has been operated.

Mr. Ruston: Run by the Conservative Party.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Downer: The present board, General Kitching and John Harris, are men of outstanding ability, able, approachable, serious—excellent businessmen. The staff of the board is also conscientious. We are very fortunate to have men of that type in charge of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario. I would like to remind the members, too, that the men who preceded them over the years were of the highest calibre also.

As far as the Liquor Licence Board is concerned, I look back over the years to the formation of this body. I remember the Attorney General of that day, the Hon. Leslie Blackwell, who made this statement. He said:

We shall appoint a Liquor Licence Board and this board will be a semi-judicial board, so that the granting of licences will be taken out of the realm of politics altogether.

Mr. Ruston: What a joke.

Mr. Downer: Well now, wait a minute.

Mr. Ruston: That's the joke of the day.

Mr. Downer: Judge W. T. Robb was the first chairman, and he remained so for 25 years. In all that time not a finger of unfairness could be pointed at him.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): It was kept at a distance.

Mr. Downer: I sat on the committee for government commissions for many years and I heard very little criticism of the operations of Judge W. T. Robb. There was no question of his integrity. He did a magnificent job, and I think this province should be ever grateful to him for his quarter of a century service. Every application for a licence was heard in the open.

Mr. Germa: The government paid him well.

Mr. Downer: You didn't even need a lawyer to act for you, and there was no indication of political patronage.

Now we have a new chairman—Mr. Mackey, the former police chief of Metropolitan Toronto; a man of undisputed integrity; a man of complete common sense who is carrying on the great tradition of his predecessor.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): If you are a Tory you get a licence.

Mr. Downer: Well, it worked out very well for the last 29 years.

Mr. Ruston: Sure it has, for them. Good for them!

Mr. MacDonald: That comment is an interesting comment on the member for Dufferin-Simcoe's observations.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: One of those dry townships of yours.

Mr. Downer: Now we perhaps had better come to my place on the board. I am the liaison officer, if you like, between the board and all the organizations and agencies having to do with alcoholism. People come to my office, or are referred to me by members of the board or by members of this House, or they come as ordinary citizens, or they come referred to me by the clergy, by doctors, and by all sorts of welfare agencies. They come seeking information and help with problems connected with alcoholism.

I would like to remind the members that this whole problem is a very complex one. I am not dealing with people who drink. I know the percentage of people who drink in this province is constantly rising. But I would like to remind the members, and we are very proud of this, that the incidence of alcoholism has not risen for the last 12 years. More people are drinking, but the incidence of alcoholism has not risen. It was a little less than two per cent 12 years ago; it is a little less than two per cent in 1972. We can pay tribute to the good work of the alcohol and drug Addiction Research Foundation, and all the other agencies that are working in this province.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How many alcoholics does the member figure we have?

Mr. Downer: A little less than two per cent; about 120,000.

Mr. Germa: Those are the known ones.

Mr. Downer: I mentioned a moment ago that this whole question is a most complex one. I think all of you realize that there is no cure for alcoholism—except one. That is complete abstinence. There is no other cure. If an alcoholic stops drinking and then tries to take a drink, he will be right back again. There is no cure except complete abstinence.

That's the very difficult part of the whole thing. It is very difficult to persuade a man or a woman to abstain. I would like to tell you that about one-tenth of the alcoholics in the Province of Ontario are women. It is very difficult to explain to them, or to persuade them, that they are alcoholics, that they can't take a drink, that they must give it up completely. That is one of the great problems we face.

Ontario is a very important province, the most populous province of all Canada, and we have all the things that go together with importance. We have industry and resources and great educational institutions, but the greatest asset of any province and any country is its people, and everything revolves around people. It is necessary that we have physical and moral and mental fitness in all our people. Anything that interferes with these three things, anything that takes away from these three things, anything that interferes with the physical and moral and mental fitness of our people, anything that does that is bad.

The members know and I know that alcoholism affects them all. Therefore, I ask the hon. members of this House for their continued support and their continued sympathy. We need their co-operation as we try to find an answer that will help us improve the conditions, to find an answer, if you like, to this age-old and this vexing problem.

I said a moment ago that there is no cure except complete and absolute abstinence. The alcoholic cannot drink if he is to be rehabilitated. I mentioned a moment ago that fortunately only about two per cent, or less than two per cent of our population are alcoholics. The other 98 per cent can take it or leave it. The alcoholic is a compulsive drinker, a man with a disease, and as such should be treated as a sick person. I sympathize with the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Potter)—

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Why are we cutting back on hospital grants for them?

Mr. Downer:—when he says we have to cut down on the vast amounts spent on medical and hospital operations. People, he says—and I agree with him—who are alcoholics should not be sent to public hospitals just to dry out. That's too expensive an operation. We should have halfway houses or clinics, good nursing homes, for that purpose. It wouldn't cost nearly as much. In fact, it would cost us no more than one-quarter of what it costs us to maintain a person in one of our general hospitals for a day. What I am saying today is not controversial, I hope. It is not political, because every single person in this province is interested in the subject. They are all interested in the health, in the well-being, and in the welfare of our fellow citizens.

I would like to say a word about the Addiction Research Foundation because, since its beginning 23 years ago, it has accomplished a great deal. It has established clinics in most of the cities and larger towns of the province. It has an educational programme that stands out among all the nations in the western world.

I remember—and I am sure the members will be interested in this—writing to California a few years ago regarding their efforts to curb alcoholism, and as to what they were doing, because I had heard wonderful reports, glowing reports, of what they were doing down there, but imagine my surprise when I received a letter telling me what they were doing, and at the bottom of the letter was a little postscript saying: "Our whole scheme is based largely on what your Addiction Foundation is doing in your province. You are far ahead of us in California."

Dr. Archibald, the head of the foundation, has been honoured in many states of the union. Only recently, he was invited to Australia by the Australian government to explain the workings of our foundation. So the report of our work here has gone all over the world. When we look around us and see the need, with broken homes and broken lives, it is surely imperative that we do all in our power to improve conditions and find an answer to this age-old problem of overindulgence.

The other day I noticed a billboard on which were these words: "Drive carefully. The life you save may be your own." We could very well change that a little bit and adopt it to our programme and put it this way: "Drink moderately. The home you save may be your own." This problem of overindulgence touches every one of us.

We have other agencies, of course, besides the one that I've mentioned, the Addiction Research Foundation, and I'd like to mention them for a moment. They're doing an equally outstanding job in this field.

Alcoholics Anonymous—who hasn't heard of them? It is an organization doing a particularly magnificent job. The members know what alcohol can do to a person, to a person's life and a person's home. Without fanfare—and there isn't any as far as they're concerned—they're doing wonderful things in this field.

I can testify to their work for I've seen examples of it at first hand. They never give up on a person. No matter how far down the ladder he's fallen and even if he falls off—as people often do—they go on time after time putting him back on the ladder, lifting up his arms, helping him. I cannot say how much we owe to the Alcoholics Anonymous organization.

The Salvation Army is also doing marvellous work at Harbour Light, the clinic on Jarvis St. and at the Halfway House in Glencairn, that's in my own riding. Here, 150 men can be accommodated and the record of rehabilitation is almost unbelievable. Out of over 500 treated in 1970, over 200 were completely rehabilitated and 90 married couples were reunited. This is an amazing record and shows us what can be done.

Then, the churches are doing great work. Along with the distress centres, we now have the detoxification clinics which are being organized and put into operation here and there throughout the province.

I would like to say again that this problem is not just a government problem. It is a problem that has to do with every single person in the province and it is a continuing problem. If, by some miracle, either the opposition or the NDP were to take over the government of this province, they would have the same problem to contend with and I don't think they would vary the approach to it in any way. It's everybody's business; it's their problem, it's my problem and I'd like to close with these words.

Mr. Foulds: It's our problem because it's the government's problem and it is not handling it.

Mr. Downer: Great things have been accomplished in this line. When a person has found his task, knows in his heart what he must say and do and be, he's then pretty well immune from the praise or the blame of men.

Mr. Foulds: Insensitive.

Mr. Downer: Whether others are flinging bouquets or splashing mud, it doesn't make much difference if he knows what he is doing. I don't mind being a little fellow in this business.

Mr. Foulds: Which is nothing.

Mr. Downer: I don't mind being a termite as long as I am in the company of big bugs, and there are lots of big bugs all around! I close with these words, "We pass this way but once." If we can say a kindly word or do a good deed, let's not neglect it; let's not defer it—for we pass this way but once.

I have a philosophy of life and I'm sure that every man and every woman in this House would subscribe to it:

I'd like to think when life is o'er
That I had filled a needed post;
That here or there I paid my fare
With more than idle tale or boast;
That I had taken gifts divine,
Breath of life and manhood fine,
And tried to use them now and then
In the service of my fellow men.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Reid: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will keep my remarks brief. I am certainly glad to hear the member's annual speech on this particular problem. In some cases when we listen to the hon. member he almost seems to know what he is talking about, and in other cases he gets up and says there is no fraud, corruption or political patronage involved in the Liquor Control Board and the Liquor Licence Board and he completely loses credibility.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Right!

Mr. Reid: However, Mr. Speaker, I would just like to bring four or five points to the minister's attention and ask for his consideration in regard to them.

The first, and the least important perhaps, is the fact—it has already been touched upon, I think, by the member for Sudbury and others—of the atmosphere that prevails in our bars and pubs and cocktail lounges. Certainly one of the most anachronistic rules is that you cannot get up and walk from one table to another with your drink, with the result that if you are trying to have a sociable evening, you go into a bar, you see somebody you want to talk to, you either have to get the waitress to take your drink over—which they don't appreciate doing—or you go and sit down with somebody and you order a drink and you talk to them for 10 minutes and guzzle it. It is almost a crime. I wonder if the minister has ever had that experience of feeling that heavy hand of the bouncer on his back saying, "You're cut off, buddy, because you're walking around with your drink in your hand." It is completely ridiculous. However, enough said about that.

I would like to mention two or three particular problems that we experience in the northern part of the province. One is that when people receive a licence to operate either a men's pub or a mixed bar or cocktail lounge, they are required to come all the way down to Toronto at great expense, usually $200 or $300. They are called in to the chairman's office. They walk in and he says, "Are you Mr. So-and-So?" "Yes." Then he says, "Here is your licence. Thank you very much for coming." It's a waste of a man's time to come down to Toronto and return home and a waste of $200 or $300 in expense.

Mr. Germa: That is where the toll-gate is.

Mr. Reid: Yes, I suppose. But it seems to me a needless practice. I would think that the minister could very well abolish it. If the board finds that the people involved are worthy—if that is the word—of receiving a licence to operate a beverage room of some kind, then surely the licence can be mailed? There is no real need for them to come all the way to Toronto, walk into an office, be handed the licence and then return home.

The next point, Mr. Speaker, is in regard to special permits or special occasion licences. As a member, I have been called upon on a number of occasions to intervene or to phone Toronto to ask if the licence can be speeded up or if there has been some holdup. It seems to me that perhaps in northwestern Ontario, for instance, this could be done out of a regional office, perhaps in Thunder Bay. I would like to see it, say, in Fort Frances or Atikokan, but perhaps in Thunder Bay, where people who are applying for special occasion licences can get them without having to apply all the way to Toronto, where local needs are really not understood. These permits could be approved of in an office in our own region.

The next point, Mr. Speaker, has to do with a related matter and that is for special occasion permits for small country areas where they have a community hall and where they don't always meet the standards set by the Liquor Control Board. The Liquor Control Board requires a women's bathroom, a men's bathroom, hot and cold running water, fire escapes outside, so much tile on the floor and so on. A lot of communities in my area don't have these facilities, but they do use their community halls for weddings, reunions, the odd curling bonspiel, and this kind of thing. And they're being discriminated against because these communities can't afford to put in the kind of facilities required by the Liquor Control Board.

I would suggest to you, sir, that there's really no hazard to health in not having some of the facilities that are presently required. As a matter of fact, the regulations as they presently stand cause more problems than otherwise in giving special-occasion permits to these small community halls.

If there is a wedding or a special do, and the hall has not received a licence from the Liquor Control Board, then often they go ahead and have the wedding or whatever it is, but they don't have a bar in the hall itself. This means that if people are going to have a sociable drink, they go out to their cars, passing the bottle back and forth and having a drink.

This happens all the time. The result is that instead of there being sociable drinking and the level of alcohol imbibed by any one person being kept down, we're forcing people to sort of run out to their cars or behind the bush, so to speak, to have a quick snort, and people wind up getting inebriated with the resulting problems therefrom.

Mr. Ruston: It's cold out there; they need something to keep them warm.

Mr. Reid: Surely we've reached a level in this day and age where we're a little more sophisticated than that, and that people's basic right to have a drink at a social function within their own community shouldn't be denied because they don't have an indoor toilet, hot and cold running water, or some such thing.

The next problem, Mr. Speaker, has to do with the rather elastic type of decision-making on the part of the Liquor Control Board in granting outlet agencies in northern Ontario. Under the present law—and perhaps the minister could inform me as I'm going along—we cannot have a liquor outlet agency within 20 or 30 miles of each other. Is it 30 miles? It was 30 miles and it's now—

Mr. Stokes: It was 30.

Mr. Reid: What is it now?

Mr. Germa: It changes every week.

Mr. Stokes: There's no restriction.

Mr. Reid: Well, I'm glad to hear that. I wasn't aware of that. I understand from my colleague that there is no restriction—that's fine, there will be a whole bunch of applications in front of the board shortly then. Thank you very much, sir.

Mr. Speaker: Thank you. The next speaker is the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I don't intend that my comments will be too voluminous. However, I would like to bring to the minister's attention some of the problems I see in both the Liquor Licence Board and the Liquor Control Board.

The first problem I would like to deal with relates to environmental considerations. I think the board has a responsibility for preventing a greater pollution problem than we have today. I've noticed some jurisdictions in the United States have put deposits on beer in cans; others have absolutely banned the use of canned beer. I think Oregon is one state that has banned the canning of beer; therefore, the beer can is no longer a problem.

I think we in Ontario probably could put a deposit on canned beer and require the individual who buys the product to bring it back to the Brewers' Warehousing store or to return the used case and beer cans on the pickup when new deliveries are made to the individual's home. If there was some type of a deposit, I think that would encourage the individual to see that it goes back to where it can be disposed of properly, rather than throwing it into the waste.

Likewise, when it comes to the stronger of the alcoholic beverages—and I'm referring both to wine and some types of alcohol—those bottles generally are of the type that one quite often sees tossed out of a car window or discarded in some back alley in the downtown area, rather than being returned.

I think some deposit should be put on the liquor bottle. It would have to be a fairly substantial deposit, because a nickel isn't going to have the individual bring the bottle back. He's simply going to toss it wherever he can. Maybe there is another method of doing this, Mr. Speaker, but I think the department with its large sums of money could find an alternative method of overcoming at least this type of pollution.

One of the other aspects I wanted to bring up concerns draught beer. I can recall about two years ago asking the minister if draught beer could not be made available for home consumption. At that time he said: "Well, no, it's impossible; you can't do it. But we can give you a 16-gal keg of beer." So, imagine an individual parking a 16-gal keg of beer in his fridge next to the baby bottle.

But, however strange it may seem, at that time we were exporting 4-gal kegs of beer to the United States—or the equivalent of 4-gal kegs. So, even though we said we couldn't distribute and sell it in Ontario, we were exporting the product to the United States.

It did seem kind of strange that the minister responsible didn't even know that this was going on. However, I think you should still have the 4-gal—the little dutchman as it was once called—available to the public if they so wish to use the product.

I think it's a forward step on the part of one brewery to come through with a 1-gal container, even though the attachments and the equipment necessary for it are quite expensive. I think it is a forward step. It does enable the individual who wants draught beer, and doesn't want to spend his time sitting in some type of tavern or lounge, to drink it in the environment of his own home.

The next point I wanted to bring up concerns the government's new policy of establishing self-serve stores and going into the shopping centres.

I see nothing wrong with that, but certain stores have been set up in small neighbourhood areas. The survival of that neighbourhood area quite often depends on the fact that there happens to be a Brewers' Warehousing store there and/or liquor store. If you remove those two attractions from that area, then you kill the shopping centre.

It may not be true in all instances, but I do know that in certain areas in my own community that has been one of the complaints of the businessmen. They say: "If you are going to take this store away, no longer are we going to get the street or road traffic that we would have normally received." As a result, they are very much afraid that the individual will no longer shop locally.

Then again, by putting distribution centres mainly in shopping plazas, not everyone has a car to reach them. Transportation systems in the community are not as good, generally, as they could be.

I think one of the things that the minister could do is sort of forget about the idea that a store has to have a $10,000 a week turnover, or it should be phased out. I think the number of employees that are going to be put out of work has to be taken into consideration, plus the effect the elimination of that store can have on a small shopping centre, or a neighbourhood shopping centre.

We notice that mini-marts, 7 to 11 stores, seem to be very popular. They are a small package style of store and I can't see why the minister couldn't simply update the liquor store in some of these neighbourhood shopping centres and still maintain that store if the area warrants it. I don't think that dollars should be the sole criterion for eliminating the liquor store.

We should also look into the idea of the drive-in establishments they have in the United States. Why should a man actually have to leave his car if he wishes to pick up one, two or half a dozen bottles of joy juice if he can simply drive in? There are drive-in banks and drive-in practically everything. If we are going to get modern, well let's modernize this whole approach and let the customer drive in.

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): We could put it in with a hose.

Mr. B. Newman: Probably the next step will be having it as part of a utilities system where you put a coin in the tap in the home and you turn it on and you get a certain measure of the type of beverage that you wish to purchase.

But I think the government can look into the possibility of drive-in stores. They are quite popular in the United States, even though the distribution is not controlled by government. I think it may have a place in the whole distribution system.

I've also noticed, being very parochial, that the city of London happens to have 12 stores with two in the planning stage, whereas in my own local area there are only six stores. I don't know the number planned.

I think with two cities of approximately the same size and population that the government should treat both in exactly the same fashion. I would assume that people in Windsor indulge just as much as do the people in the city of London. For one thing, the home of Canadian Club is right in my own riding and the minister knows how popular a beverage that happens to be.

Another item that I would like to bring to the minister's attention is the government policy on licensing. I don't know what takes place in there, but it did seem strange to me that a tavern by the name of George's Tavern appealed and appealed to the department for the privilege of dispensing liquor with meals and could get nowhere at all. Nowhere!

All kinds of reasons were being given at the time for them not receiving a liquor licence. It was next door to a church. The church said it was all right to have it, but it was against licensing policy. You go into another city and you find a tavern right next to a church anyway, or within a short distance of a church.

It's too close to a school. You go into another city and it is closer than this to a school. There didn't seem to be the uniformity that there should be and it makes one suspicious when approaches like this are being used.

I think that the policy should be clearcut and dried so that anyone who operates a good eating establishment—and even not a good eating establishment; why shouldn't a poor man be able to get a glass of beer when he goes to a restaurant? Why does he have to go into a high-class restaurant to get a glass of beer?

Mr. Foulds: Shouldn't be too dry.

Mr. Germa: Why have we got a social caste system?

Mr. B. Newman: There is the problem of George's Tavern, that I mentioned, to the minister. It seems strange they couldn't get a licence. But, as soon as the tavern changed ownership, the new owner got the licence immediately. It was kind of funny that this happened. The old fellow couldn't get one. This wasn't during the minister's stay in government; it was prior to his coming into this House.

We often hear that the board did say at one time that you had to be in the food business for some time before they would give you the right to dispense beverages. But when a Holiday Inn wants to come into an area they get the licence just like that. When the racetrack opened up in the city of Windsor, there was no problem. They had the licence before they opened up. But if a Mr. Stevenson or a Mr. Jones, operating a successful restaurant, wants to get a licence there always seems to be some type of drawback to his application.

I think that that should be eliminated and I hope the minister—knowing he is very fair minded—will look into it and clear the air once and for all.

Likewise, both the tavern and public house beer dispensing privileges have been given out in a little too large numbers in certain areas. I think that the minister should have a policy of phasing out some of them in those areas, so that every corner, sort of, doesn't have one of the establishments.

At one time they said that every corner used to have a church. Then every corner used to have a gas station. Now, in some areas every corner seems to have a liquor establishment, or a tavern, or a public house. I think the minister should still allow the individual who has the licence to transfer it maybe from that area to another area so we don't have a proliferation of stores and establishments in a given area.

I can mention to the minister and I will do so privately, one area that I think has a very harmful effect on the whole outlook of the people in that given area. The youth in the area—walking to or from school, or going in the evening to some community activity in the school—seeing what goes on, can't help being affected by it. You know, if you walk through a building with wet paint it is pretty hard not to have some of that paint rub off on your clothing or on you! It is exactly the same thing with the younger folk going through an area in which there happens to be too large a number of alcoholic dispensing establishments.

On special occasion permits, I would like to commend the officials in the department for the efficiency with which they have acted upon this, especially when I have had requests from constituents for special occasion permits and they did not arrive in time. I have contacted two different gentlemen in the department and they have acted with dispatch at all times. I think that their approach to this was first-rate and I commend them for it. I commend the minister for having such people in his employ in that branch of the government.

However, I don't see why special banquet permits always have to be issued out of Toronto. The situation is better known at the local level, and why the chief of police or some branch in the local area could not issue that permit, I don't know. I think they could be, and possibly should be, issued at the local level where the people know the organization which is asking for this special permit. They know it would not be wrong to provide that special occasion permit.

Mr. Speaker, one of the real problems with the whole discussion of liquor is there is a lack of education in the whole field of liquor use—or the abuse of alcoholic beverages, I should say, rather than liquor solely. We have to start that education at an earlier level.

I don't mean turning around and talking to high school students or to elementary school students, telling them "Don't drink because it is going to cause X types of injuries and damage to your system." Or that we would put a worm in a glass of Coke and show what happens to the worm as a result of being exposed to the Coke, and then do exactly the same thing with some alcohol. They don't use alcohol at all because it is too valuable to put a worm in it. We put the alcohol into the worm, the human worm, instead.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): But the worm will turn.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): There shouldn't be alcohol there in the first place!

Mr. B. Newman: Well, you know, alcohol is a preservative and they use it in the school system if they have various types of organs that they wish to use for demonstration purposes in biology classes. They generally keep them in some type of alcohol.

However, there has to be a greater emphasis on education, and spending the few dollars that the government does is not enough at all. The government has to spend millions of dollars in the educational field. The minister has to update his films all the time. He has to get extremely capable speakers going into the school systems and going to organizations and clubs but not necessarily talking of the evils of it. As soon as one mentions something as being evil the individual who hears that says, "Says you! It is evil to you but it is not evil to me."

So I think it is going to take a delicate approach to the whole problem in an attempt to inform and educate people that we don't want abuse, we want moderation. If we can't come along and overcome the problem, or if the incidence increases above the two per cent that it is now, we are going to get a greater and greater awareness of the problem on the part of the public. They are going to ask that we go back into the era of prohibition.

We know what happened in those days. I myself am quite familiar with that, living on the border and having seen at one time aircraft loaded with gallons of alcohol being flown right over to the Detroit area, and then coming back to pick up another shipment of alcohol.

I don't think that prohibition is the answer, but I certainly do think that moderation after a fashion, but by means of an extremely important educational programme, can reduce some of the problems. We will never eliminate the problem, because just as we have the overabuse of alcohol, we have that same thing happening with food. We notice that we ourselves occasionally develop a slight protuberance in the frontal part of our anatomy as a result of the overindulgence in food. We keep eating; we don't eat as much as we need, we eat as much as we want and we can't help but get a little obese. Then, after that, the 5B-X or the 10B-X air force exercises don't help. Even the bicycling of the hon. member for Muskoka (Mr. Miller) won't help get rid of that type of weight.

So, Mr. Speaker, to the minister, I hope that some of the remarks that I have made are taken into consideration by him and something is done. I know the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe does everything that he can to come along and alert our youth to the problem. But, sending a gentleman like him into a school system to talk to 13- to 19-year-olds, is just whistling Dixie. It comes in here and it goes right out there. He is not on the age level to be talking to groups. I couldn't talk to them today, because they want one of their own, so to speak, to try to convince them that moderation or if not moderation, even abstinence from the consumption of alcohol is the better approach.

I think the minister should take some percentage of the profits derived from the consumption of these beverages, and it should be allocated to an extremely strong educational programme. When he arrives at the percentage that he should use, he should not play around in dollars only. This is an extremely important problem.

I look at the newspaper today, and what do I find? Two ads here, full-page ads. We are approaching the festive season and so naturally they are going to come along and talk about alcohol. Here is one, for Corby's Consumer Services. You know what Corby's Consumer Services are. They are not related to the minister's department; they are related to the joy juice people. It is an attempt—naturally it is a subtle attempt—to sell their produce, and to try to convince the individual to be moderate in the consumption of the product.

That was only one ad that I brought to the minister's attention. There is another full-page ad in this morning's Sun, sort of encouraging the use of alcoholic beverages. Whether we have to ban the advertising, or what approach we must use to educate the public to use, but not abuse, the product, I don't know. I think that the minister's people, probably in conjunction with other jurisdictions that have this type of a problem, could come upon a better approach than we have been using up to date.

Today we are going through the era of pop wines. We are encouraging our young folk to get hooked on something, to get hooked on wine. We don't have it in Ontario at all, but in the United States. If members saw the recent issue of Time magazine, featuring the Gallo people of California and an article explaining how the wine industry has mushroomed in the past 15 or 20 years, we can foresee exactly that same mushrooming effect taking place in Ontario and in Canada a few years after this happens in the US.

I can foresee that Ontario may be asked by the winemakers to be allowed to distribute the pop style of wines, wines that have an extremely low alcoholic content, but from which there is still probably just enough kick from the consumption of the product to encourage the individual to think, "Well, if I got a little kick from wine, maybe I can get a little better kick from some other type of alcoholic beverage". The next thing is that you have that individual caught in that revolving door. By the time he reaches 25 or 30 years of age, he is one of those two per cent that we refer to as alcoholics.

It is pretty hard to convince our young folk not to pop pills when they see mom and dad popping pills. It is pretty hard to convince them not to drink when they get home and see mom and dad drinking. But the drinking is not bad; it's the overdrinking. When they see, if not at home, somewhere else, the individual overly inebriated, it is pretty hard for them not to come along and want to see what effect the taking of the alcoholic beverages is going to have on them. They very often say, "No, I am not going to be an alcoholic," but that individual who says he is not going to be has attempted to convince himself, but tries like the dickens to see if he cannot be and ends up by being.

Mr. Speaker, one other topic that I would like to bring to the minister's attention is something that was asked of me this summer concerning the hiring procedures in the liquor stores, which would be the Liquor Control Board and Brewers' Warehousing. I understand that a circular came out from some department saying that two members of the same family were not to be working in the department.

I could understand that maybe the husband and wife should not be hired at the same time, or if the husband is there, the wife should not be hired. I could even understand that maybe when the dad is there the son shouldn't be taken on. But remember, the children aren't necessarily around with their parents all the time. If they are married and have left home, I don't see why a second member of the family should not be given exactly that same opportunity for employment with one of the Brewers' Warehousing stores or the Liquor Control Board.

I think each case should be judged on its merits and not necessarily a hard-and-fast rule that two members of the family should not be employed. I think it is really against the Human Rights Code to come along and deny the right of another individual to employment if the employment is available. It's only natural that an individual who works for the board would know of openings and would be able to inform a member of the family and have him in, but I don't think that there should be that type of discrimination registered on the part of the board.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the minister has been able to make some notation on a few of the points that I have made mention of here and that they will be seriously considered when future legislation is introduced. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Thunder Bay.

Mr. Stokes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Most of the points that I would have raised have already been raised by previous speakers. However, I would like to emphasize the need for placing some of the decision-making powers in the hands of people locally.

I spend a good deal of my time answering correspondence from constituents, speaking and making representations on their behalf for special occasion permits and for dining lounge licences, for lounge and open house licences. As previous speakers have mentioned, it makes very, very little sense to place the decision-making powers in the hands of somebody down here on Lakeshore Blvd. when we have competent inspectors right on the scene who know what the criteria are. They know the legislation; they know the regulations. The regulations are fairly straightforward; any person of average intelligence can read them. The local people know what is provided for.

It makes very, very little sense to people who are making application for these licences to have to go through the bureaucratic maze of somebody who is an inspector at the local level and somebody who is an inspector down there, and then have the licence approved through the board. It seems to me that these licences should be awarded on the basis of need and service to the public rather than on any other criteria that may be used.

It has been suggested that there has been political patronage or that other considerations are taken into account before these licences are awarded. I have really no evidence to that effect. But with the legislation as straightforward as it is and with the accompanying regulations fairly easily understood, maybe the present minister responsible to this Legislature for these two boards can tell me why any applicant making application for these licences finds it necessary to engage the services of a lawyer. I just don't understand why.

A good many constituents, and a good many concerned citizens who aren't constituents of mine, have written to me and said, "We have been trying for 10 years or 13 years to prevail upon the Liquor Licence Board or the Liquor Control Board for the necessary authority to sell alcoholic beverages, or to open an agency store in an area where it is badly needed." I find that lawyers have been involved for months and sometimes years in making representation on behalf of applicants.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): It is a complicated area of jurisprudence.

Mr. Stokes: I fail to understand this, because I went through—

An hon. member: Talk to a lawyer.

Mr. Stokes: —the regulations yesterday morning in answering an inquiry from a constituent. I'm sure that members of the Liquor Licence Board, if they haven't got the letter now, will have. It seems to me that it shouldn't be necessary for anybody making application to prevail upon a lawyer to present his case. It just seems to me that it is straightforward enough that, if the applicant provides the board with the necessary information, there is really no need for him to engage in long drawn-out, protracted negotiations with the board, costing considerable amounts of money for legal services.

As a matter of fact, I've had a good deal of success in intervening on behalf of constituents myself. I've had difficulties with some. I hesitate to say it was for political reasons. I would like to think that it wasn't for political reasons, that it was for some other reason. Maybe their case wasn't well documented. Maybe they hadn't made a case sufficient, in the mind of the board, that there was a need for this in a particular area.

The member for Rainy River suggested that, any time he made application, they started looking at mileages and said, "There is one 28 miles away or there is one 31 miles away and our criteria happen to be that you don't place them any closer than 30 miles." I think that this was antiquated thinking. I think the board has changed this and it is now on the basis of need. This makes good sense.

As I say, I think I've had a fair degree of success in prevailing upon them to issue licences, particularly to the agency stores where it was common practice for people in many remote areas in northern Ontario to have to travel a maximum of 58 miles. I suppose it had become a way of life for a good many people in northern Ontario, but it became increasingly difficult to impress upon tourists and other people travelling through the area that we didn't have any of these establishments less than 30 miles apart. Gratefully that has changed, and now there are very few areas in northern Ontario that aren't adequately served. There is the odd exception, and of course these are given attention as they are brought to mind.

I believe we must facilitate the processing of these applications, whether they are for special-occasion permits, agency stores, or lounge licences. It seems to be a fairly straightforward procedure, and I see no reason why an applicant should find it necessary to engage the services of a lawyer.

There is one particular thing that I think must be taken into consideration—and the hon. member for Rainy River alluded to it briefly. On one occasion in my experience the band council of an Indian reserve applied for a special-occasion permit, and the local inspector initially okayed the application. But then for some reason or other—I don't know whether it was because something untoward was brought to his attention by the local constabulary, whether he had a second look, or what it was—he denied the application for a special-occasion permit by the band council that wanted to have a banquet on the Indian reserve. It was denied on the ground that the reserve didn't have running water. And when he was assured that it did indeed have running water, he said, "Well no, now we find that there is another reason why we have to deny the permit, and that is because you don't have any inside toilet facilities." For anybody who knows anything at all about the north, in a good many areas outside privies are a way of life, particularly on a good many remote Indian reserves.

Mr. Germa: Four rooms and a path!

Mr. Stokes: Yes. It's a way of life with them, and to suggest that they must spend an inordinately large amount of money just to hold a social event on their Indian reserve is simply beyond explanation. Why should they have to change their whole life style in order to engage in a reasonable activity, such as having a banquet with a couple of drinks? This is something that everybody down here takes for granted, yet when somebody in the north makes application they keep throwing all these regulations at them.

I realize this isn't wholly within the purview of this minister, that there are health and sanitation regulations to be taken into account.

This reminds me of a recent application by the Pickle Lake women's group. They hold about four or five social events throughout the calendar year, one of them on Hallowe'en. They made application, and of course they were turned down for a variety of reasons. And when the health inspector suggested what they had to do in order to conform, they did this; they conformed right down to the letter of the law and of all the regulations.

Then the inspector went in on a subsequent visit and said, "No, I was in error. The water table is just a little bit too high. We can't give our blessing to the issuance of a liquor permit, because you don't meet our health regulations."

So he suggested they put up twin privies on a 5-ft-high mound of earth out in the middle of a field and construct railings up to these outdoor privies. I tell you, it was the funniest looking thing I ever saw, when I went into Pickle Lake. And this was at the direction of the health inspector on the insistence of the Liquor Licence Board inspector before they would issue this permit!

Mr. Foulds: They wanted to elevate it.

Mr. Stokes: Nobody can explain it to my satisfaction, so how do you expect me to be able to explain it to the satisfaction of a women's group? There wouldn't be 70 people who used that facility in a year. If you know what the weather conditions are in Pickle Lake chances are if they had a call of nature they wouldn't use that anyway, they'd trot home and come back again.

Just to show you how unrealistic some of these are, we who represent northern constituencies always keep harping and say the government imposes the same regulations up in Pickle Lake or on the Pic reserve as it would down here at the corner of Queen and Bay. And, of course, we are talking about a different lifestyle. We are talking about a different ball game altogether. I just hope that when we make application for these things the minister and those members who are associated with these boards take into consideration conditions as they exist in many remote communities.

I take it they are going to have these mobile agency stores in many areas in southern Ontario. They have introduced some of them on a trial basis up in my area and it's my understanding that they didn't work too well. They were issuing authority to operate an agency store during the winter months and, of course, then the board would operate it itself for the heavy tourist season.

It's my understanding and it's my observation that they haven't worked too well. I would like to suggest to the minister and the board that in any place where they have established a regular agency store they do not try to discourage people from getting into this kind of activity and providing this service to the people by closing them up in the summer and moving in the board's trailer. It seems to me that it doesn't work well. I would suggest that any place where the government can justify an agency store it put it in the hands of a private enterpriser. It complements his business very well and he provides a very useful service, not only to the people in that particular area but to the travelling public. I hope that the minister will take that into consideration when he is reviewing his policy for agency stores throughout the province.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Simcoe East.

Mr. G. E. Smith (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make several observations to the minister on this subject. First of all, though, I would concur with the observations of the member for Dufferin-Simcoe concerning the ability and the character of the administrators of the Liquor Licence Board and the Liquor Control Board.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that several years ago when I had the privilege of moving the Speech from the Throne I urged the government and those responsible to take a second look at our regulations as they affected the licensing of tourist establishments. Since then I am pleased to note that there have been some changes that have been very beneficial to the tourist industry throughout the province and, I suppose, speaking parochially, in my area.

I know that I share the views of the other two members from my county—the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe and the hon. member for Simcoe Centre (Mr. Evans)—when I tell you that the tourist industry plays an important part in the economic development and livelihood of our area.

However, today I would like to make one or two comments concerning another phase, and the first one would be on the licensing of private clubs. Mr. Speaker, I have several golf clubs in my area which are owned by an individual or a family, and because they happen to be in a dry area where local option prevails they are not able to have a club licence. However, it is my understanding that if that particular club was owned by a membership it could qualify for such a licence. I would say to you, Mr. Speaker, and through you to the minister, that when he is reviewing the regulations he should give consideration to extending this privilege to such clubs in this province.

The minister will recall that I mentioned to him the possibility of selling beer through the corner grocery store. I believe he told me at that time that there were two problems he was concerned with. One would be the possibility of keeping the product current—not to leave it too long on the shelves in order that it might become skunky. The second problem was the controlling of the sale of the product.

This past week I had the opportunity, along with other members of our House, to associate with members from the Province of Quebec, "La belle province," when some of its legislators were in this area, or in Toronto, on an exchange visit. I took the opportunity of asking various members their observations as to the feasibility and the practicability of selling beer through the corner grocery store. I would like you to consider their observations in defence of corner grocery store sales.

First of all, as you are no doubt aware, in the Province of Quebec beer is sold only through the independent operator, not through the chain operator. They have had no problem with quality control on the shelf. I think that if the minister perhaps analyzes the source of some of his advice, and the advice of the board, it perhaps could come from the brewing interests—who would have greater responsibilities in assuring that the product would be fresh. It's much easier to service one outlet in a city—a Brewers' Retail outlet, as we know them now in the province—than it would be the individual outlets throughout a municipality or a town.

I would also say that there should be some responsibility, I would assume, to the vendor—to the corner grocery store. We have problems right now in the Brewers' Retail outlets. People under age are still able to go in and buy it because it is during a busy time, or perhaps an individual clerk is not quite alert. As a result, beer is sold to minors or to those who are not qualified to purchase the product.

I would say to the minister that the same responsibility could be carried out by an individual store owner. If it was found that a store was selling to a minor or someone who wasn't qualified, its selling privilege could be suspended.

Again, I would like to go on record, Mr. Speaker, as speaking in defence of the corner grocery store and the sale of beer there, because perhaps in the future in many areas it will be one of the economic means of its survival.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Besides, Duplessis got a lot of votes out of that, didn't he?

Mr. Foulds: Is the member for Simcoe East going to defend motherhood and virginity at the same time?

Mr. G. E. Smith: Pardon?

Mr. Foulds: Is the member going to defend motherhood and virginity at the same time?

Mr. G. E. Smith: In my area, Mr. Speaker, the corner grocery store exists, I suppose, for two reasons. One is the fact that it is open at hours when the chain stores are closed. The second point, I suppose, is the fact that it will extend credit. So, I would suggest the minister at least again reassess the possibility of giving them another reason to continue operation on a sound, financial basis. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Now we'll get it.

Mr. Drea: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I rise to speak at this time because it concerns me a very great deal that we are talking about a fundamental review of liquor laws and practices at a time when, for the life of me, I can't really see what fundamental changes are needed. There are more outlets for alcohol than ever before in the province, both in package stores and in the combination of licensed premises, ranging from cocktail bars down to the beer parlours that we are supposedly phasing out.

There is virtually no time during reasonable hours when you cannot obtain alcohol somewhere in Ontario and with very little inconvenience. So, quite frankly, I don't understand the great concern or the great urge that is constantly being put forth that we have to move with changing times. I think we have moved far ahead of the changing times.

I wouldn't have these fears if the population of Ontario, at least the drinking population of Ontario, were as temperate in the way it handled the product as the minister is, and I say that with all sincerity. I suppose I wouldn't be as concerned either if the drinking population of Ontario handled itself with the same high ideals as the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board, but it doesn't, and I think that this is something that we have to look at. It seems to me there is a danger in having liquor policies made by people who know how to handle it and have no difficulty handling the particular commodity, at a time when more people than ever before are encountering tremendous difficulty in coping with alcohol.

It may be all very well for the member for Dufferin-Simcoe to say that the percentage is still two per cent. I believe that he sincerely means that. But two per cent of the population now as against two per cent of the population 20 years ago is a goodly number of human beings. I think that we have to take a look at the entire pricing scale, the strength of the product and the number of outlets where liquor is available.

For many years now we have been—I don't like to use the word misled—duped, I suppose, into believing that alcohol was no longer of great concern in this province; that what we had to be concerned about in the field of drugs was the illicit ones such as marijuana and the amphetamines and LSD and so forth. Nothing could be further from the truth, because alcohol is the number one drug problem. The other ones are very pale and insignificant in comparison.

Yet it seems to me the thrust of the clamour for change in liquor laws is to make more liquor available more hours of the day in more places than ever before. I find it very difficult to rationalize the situation that we have with alcoholism with the desire to increase the amount of alcohol available.

I think, quite frankly, that within five years we in this Legislature are going to have to make up our minds one way or the other that we are going to raise the price of booze. We are going to have to do it as other countries did it because, in terms of our dollars now and our earning power, whiskey is just about half the price it was 15 years ago. We have two choices: We can water it or we can raise the price. I personally prefer the former because there is always the danger of the bootlegger.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: They are already watering it.

Mr. Drea: But I say to the minister that within five years we are going to be discussing that in very serious terms in this Legislature.

Mr. Lawlor: We will be doing it in two months.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): It was all Mackenzie King's fault. He was the one who introduced the water.

Mr. Drea: I would like to talk about another aspect of our liquor laws. For the life of me, I cannot understand how some of these places get licences, maintain licences, are allowed to go on with the type of shows that are inside them, and are allowed to cater to the clientele that is inside.

Mr. Foulds: Especially the Empire Club!

Mr. Drea: It doesn't have a licence. I am talking about some of these phenomena that have come along in recent years particularly within about three blocks of this building on Yonge St.

I happen to represent the riding of Scarborough Centre. One of my more distinguished, if not my most distinguished, constituent happens to be the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board. I have already paid tribute to his standards and his ideals and his way of life, and I am absolutely convinced, since entertainment permits come through the board, that he is not being given a free hand.

I think if he was we wouldn't have the collection of joints—and that is about the best word for them—that now clutters up Yonge St., has cluttered up the south end of Jarvis St. for some time, is on Spadina by College and is on the fringe of west Toronto. As a matter of fact, I have one bucket of blood—which is about the best you can say for it—in my own riding.

It seems to me if we are going to have a liquor policy that says we are going to have outlets, if we are going to encourage people to eat because we only give tavern licences now—with the odd exception, there is no longer a straight licence to serve only liquor—the very least we could do is to make the places which are making their money out of the sale of alcohol, which is a privilege that we have extended to them, simply clean up their acts. I see no reason why a place on Yonge St. which advertises 'Girls, girls, girls' from 12 noon on should have a licence. They can take their pick; either they put the clothes back on the girls and clean up the place or they take the liquor out.

Mr. Foulds: The member doesn't like combination sinners!

Mr. Drea: I like a lot of things.

Mr. Reid: Does he only do one thing at a time?

Mr. Drea: That's right, and that is why I am still here!

Mr. Foulds: He likes to concentrate on one vice at a time.

Mr. Drea: I say this to the minister in all seriousness: The type of outlet that many of us asked for years ago was one where a family could go, where we weren't having beer literally flung at us as it was in those days by waiters who were telling us to drink it or get out. We didn't want that. We went on to ask for a more sophisticated, more dignified kind of outlet.

At the same time, all we have done in many of these places, particularly in the downtown bars, in the final analysis, is we have transformed the old, dirty, odorous men's beverage room, with all the unpleasantness that went with it, into a sophisticated or semi-sophisticated setting.

I think the time has come, if the minister is going to review liquor policies, for him to take a long look at the places that are making a considerable amount of money out of selling liquor. I think the time has come to unfetter the hands of the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board, and let's upgrade the standards.

I have no quarrel with people who want to have entertainment, and want to have a drink. I go myself, but I think there is a level at which we stop. After all, if the liquor licence is on the wall of that place—

Mr. Stokes: The liquor or the entertainment?

Mr. Drea: —it has the blessing of the Province of Ontario. If that is the kind of thing we are giving our blessing to, perhaps I was wrong when I first started and I said I really didn't see much need for a review of liquor policies.

I think in this regard we definitely do, and I would be very glad to give the minister a list of places, or I would be very glad to take him around. To go into some of them, one needs two people because one is in fear of one's life from the moment one goes in until the moment one comes out. They are two or three blocks away from the Legislature of the province and there are similar situations in virtually every large community in this province. I think the time has come for a considerable amount of reform.

I would like to wind up with a very brief comment on local option. Although I come from an area that does not have local option, I believe very firmly that we should preserve local option. I don't see why the will of the majority has to be interfered with constantly by somebody who would like uniformity and so on and so forth.

I think the Leader of the Opposition raises some very valid points when he says one can always get a drink by belonging to a club in a local option area. I think that that is an admirable compromise. If the majority of people do not want outlets but there is a minority that does, it seems to me the club situation for those who do is a very good compromise. I would certainly hope that there is no infringement upon the right of people to decide whether they want a saloon on the street corner or not.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, I share a number of the views which have already been expressed on liquor policy by members of this party. I just wanted to raise two points for consideration by the minister who is responsible for reporting to the House on the policies of the board and of the commission.

It would appear to me that it is essential that the minister take up with the board, and implement, a suggestion which I made a year or two ago with respect to the interrelationships—corporate, family-wise and in other ways—of persons who hold liquor licences from the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario. There is ample precedent in the Income Tax Act and in the Securities Act for making certain that a questionnaire is properly phrased to indicate the extent of interrelationships by those persons who in fact hold liquor licences in the Province of Ontario, whether they are corporations or individuals or partnerships.

I was one of the people who was very pleased when the former chief constable of Toronto was appointed as the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board, because it seemed to me that one of the ways in which we could ensure we were not suddenly faced with an infiltration of crime, of organized crime or syndicated crime in the city, was to have him as chairman of the Liquor Licence Board. But he can only perform that function if all existing licensees are required to disclose all of their corporate or family interrelationships by way of a questionnaire framed along the lines of the kind of provisions which are in the Securities Act and in the Income Tax Act for disclosing corporate interrelationships and other interrelationships.

I had occasion, from the time I made this suggestion in the House, to mention it in a Conversation with the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board. He indicated to me at that time that it was under active consideration, but so far as I am aware it has not as yet been implemented. I make the simple point that every existing licensee in the Province of Ontario should be required to complete a detailed, sworn questionnaire with respect to interrelationships that he or the corporation that holds the licence may have at the present time, and that all future applicants be required, by way of an appendix to the normal application form, to answer all of the questions which would provide information on that interrelationship.

It may be, Mr. Speaker, that the provision already exists and the steps are already being taken, but I re-emphasize that it is essential that those interrelationships be known to the board and that they be a factor which is taken into consideration when licence applications are issued or when existing licences are under review.

The second point that I would like to make is that I had occasion in August of this year to be asked to look into the question of an arbitrary revocation by the chairman of the Liquor Licence Board of a special occasion permit. I use the term "arbitrary" not to indicate any lack of good faith on the part of the chairman, but simply to point out a defect, as I see it, in the provisions of the Liquor Licence Act.

This particular group was the Vietnam Mobilization Committee, which has for many years now been the active organization in Toronto taking stands in connection with the war in Vietnam. Political views are not relevant to the point which I happen to make. That group had made an application and had received a special occasion permit for a Saturday evening dance and party at 80 Winchester St. in the city of Toronto.

They had made their plans accordingly, and as the minister knows—as everyone knows—for most organizations a special occasion permit is an essential ingredient; not just of the success of the party, but for the purpose of raising the funds that many organizations want to have and need for carrying out their purpose.

Suddenly and with only about 48 hours before the dance and party was to be held, if my memory serves me correctly, the chairman of the board revoked the licence. He was good enough, when I made an intercession with him on behalf of the people who approached me about it, to meet with some of their representatives—but he did not change his view. He had received representations from other persons in the area, for whatever reason—and again it is irrelevant.

But it does draw attention to the fact that we must make certain that when any form of licence is issued by the Liquor Licence Board, even if it is a single occasion permit—let alone a long term licence—that there be adequate provisions for a hearing if that licence is to be revoked. There should be an informal and quick method of a proper hearing in which the representations leading to the action are taken under advisement and the chairman is permitted to exercise something in the nature of a judicial decision—rather than an administrative decision—with an adequate representation from both sides to the question.

I'm not one for proliferating appeal tribunals of one kind or another. However, it may well be that the liquor licence—other than special occasion permits—is a more or less permanent licence granted to persons operating those establishments in Ontario, and it will require some kind of appeal provision to be made.

I have not reviewed the Act in the last few days, but my recollection is that there is nothing in that Act which provides for the kind of review that we have made arrangements for, against other forms of administrative decision.

Those, Mr. Speaker, are the two points that I wanted to draw to the minister's attention when he is considering an extensive review of the statutes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Peel South.

Mr. R. D. Kennedy (Peel South): I would just like to make a few comments, Mr. Speaker, if I may. I think everything has been said at least once. I did want also to record my support for the maintenance of the local option provisions.

The one other point I was interested in, Mr. Minister, is the standards used to determine the number of outlets in any given area. Mississauga is said to be, and I believe it's right, the most rapidly expanding municipality in Canada—and one of the most rapidly expanding in North America. So there is quite a proliferation of outlets. Now, if the number of outlets has a bearing on the alcoholic problem—if it's a contributing factor—then I ask the question that if there were some limitation on outlets, what would be a suitable standard?

Should the sum standard be based on a per capita arrangement? The zoning, as I understand it, is now the control. If there is a commercial strip of land, I presume there could be liquor outlets cheek to jowl—provided, of course, the standards were met. But it seems to me there must be—I don't know whether there is—an optimum number and I ask the minister whether he would give some thought to and whether there should be limitation in this regard to help resolve the problem.

I could add that in the town of Oakville, as I understand it, gas stations are the same, although not related—gasoline and alcohol certainly don't mix—but in Oakville I understand they have set the maximum number of gasoline outlets. If someone wants to bring an additional one in, they can only do it if one other is closed out or phased out. There obviously has to be some limitation to this.

If a sophisticated, elaborate hotel was built, like a Holiday Inn, surely you can't say, there can only be so many outlets and so this type of hotel cannot receive one, because obviously it's expected by the patrons.

If that gives some indication that I am opposed to a proliferation of outlets and the increased consumption—if the two are related—I'd like to change hats for a moment now to quote from the report from the Ontario Food Council on the Ontario tender fruit industry. One paragraph, Mr. Speaker, on page 8, states:

Recently some Ontario wineries have requested changes in the Liquor Control Act which would allow the importation of grape concentrate to meet the anticipated future demand for wine. It is difficult to accept this when Ontario wineries have not stated their requirements to Ontario producers in sufficient time for production to be geared up.

Estimates point toward a healthy wine growth potential. If Ontario is to develop a distinctive wine industry with a continued incentive for growth development and variety improvement, the introduction of foreign concentrate should be very strictly controlled if it is allowed at all.

Sales of Ontario wines have grown well—seven to 10 per cent per year—and this is expected to continue at the same pace or perhaps slightly reduced. The prospects are excellent for increased grape sales, provided the wineries give leadership and the incentive to select and produce the grape varieties required.

One of the significant things perhaps does involve the Ministry of Agriculture and Food. I'm sure they're interested; I presume they commissioned this study. The increased capacity of our vineyards in Niagara, as the minister well knows, is nothing less than dramatic. In 1961, there were 20,883 acres. They produced 40,800 tons. Ten years later—1971—there was an increase of only about 3,000 acres, to 23,191 acres to be exact, but the production increased no less than from 40,800 to 75,904 tons. This is some indication of the task and the good job that is being done by producers in adapting our acreages to new varieties and greater production on a very slight acreage increase.

I did wish to bring this to the attention of the minister, Mr. Speaker, and also one other recommendation here. It is recommended that a wine market development committee be formed. This committee would work toward co-ordinating a healthy future for this important industry and would involve the Ministry of Agriculture and Food and presumably the ministry to which all these remarks are being addressed.

Those are the two points I wished to make, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Will there be any other hon. members wishing to enter this debate? If not, does the hon. minister wish to reply to any of the comments? If he does, perhaps he would save his reply in view of the hour and move adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Foulds: That wasn't a suggestion, that was an order!

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. minister does wish to respond—

Hon. Mr. Clement: I thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, but I have no response to make at this time, although perhaps I will at some other time.

Mr. Speaker: This concludes the debate then?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes.

Mr. Speaker: This concludes the debate on consideration of the reports of the Liquor Control Board and the Liquor Licence Board.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker, before I move the adjournment of the House, I would like to make some reference to what will happen early next week.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Some passing reference.

Mr. J. A. Foulds (Port Arthur): That's a change!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: That's no change—if the hon. member is here, that is.

On Monday, we will first call No. 2 on the order paper, and following that I would like to suggest to the House that we will call Nos. 13, 14, 16, 8, 9 and 5. That, of course, will run through until Tuesday. I would suggest to the House that, unless I announce otherwise, the House will sit on Monday evening.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, before the motion is put, can I ask the House leader if it is intended that the second order will be completed on Monday? In other words, will the budget debate finish Monday?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I would like to think so.

Mr. Speaker: Before the motion to adjourn, I should like to remind the hon. members of the annual Speaker's buffet supper, which will take place next Tuesday evening, and I hope that you will all be there.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 1 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

MONDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We're pleased to note that we do have some visitors with us today in our galleries: in the east gallery, students from Herron Valley Jr. High School of Toronto, and in the west gallery there will be students from the postgraduate course in medicine from the University of Toronto. I would also indicate to the hon. members that we have a group of special guests in the Speaker's gallery consisting of 10 parliamentary interns who are attached to the members of the House of Commons.

Statements by the ministry.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE COSTS OF EDUCATION

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I would like to tell the House that I intend to table today an interim report of the Committee on the Costs of Education. This committee has been chaired, and is chaired, by Mr. Thomas A. McEwan, the president of Becton Dickinson & Co. (Canada) Ltd., of Mississauga, Ont.

The report contains 22 recommendations related to the capital building programmes of school boards and their costs. Included in the report are observations and suggestions for both school boards and the Ministry of Education on such matters as capital grant approval procedures, the sharing of buildings and sites, the funding of school construction and a number of related matters.

This report, Mr. Speaker, is of great interest to us because the ministry has been moving in directions similar to those proposed in the report and we have been following procedures for some time which are in line with many of the recommendations. Therefore, we welcome this thorough study on this very important subject by a group of knowledgeable citizens.

Certain of the report's recommendations will require further study and analysis, in order that we can assess their feasibility and ramifications.

In tabling the report, Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment briefly on the allocation of public funds for school construction and the need to exercise restraint in a period of declining or stabilizing school enrolments.

Between 1961 and 1971, the value of school construction in Ontario was nearly $2 billion, or an average of $200 million each year. During the same period, over one million new and replacement pupil places were built, providing the people of Ontario with modern and functional school facilities. Of course, Mr. Speaker, these levels of spending for school construction were made necessary by the rapid growth of enrolment during the 1960s and a backlog of renovation and replacement carried over from previous years.

Today, however, we face a very different situation. Last year, the enrolment in our elementary schools began to decrease for the first time in 26 years, and the downward trend is expected to continue until 1979. This decade will also see a decline of secondary school enrolment to levels lower than the present.

These trends are primarily the result of declining birth rates and a changing immigration pattern. The number of live births in Ontario has declined from 26.8 per thousand in 1957 to 16.9 per thousand in 1971. The immigration to Ontario of people under the age of 18 declined from 107,621 in 1966 to 80,732 in 1970.

For the past two years, because of these trends and their effects on school accommodation requirements, the Ministry of Education has reviewed with particular care the justification and need for every building proposal submitted for grant purposes by school boards. Approvals have not been given in cases where proposals were based on enrolment projections which seemed unrealistic or unduly high.

In addition, even after initial approvals have been given, Mr. Speaker, the justification of the need for new facilities has been reviewed at subsequent stages of approval. In some cases, subjects have been cancelled or redesigned because new information made the earlier proposals obsolete. The ministry has provided considerable practical assistance to school boards in these matters, to stress the urgent necessity to rigorously analyse need and to minimize the possibility of building new facilities which might not be used to capacity a few years hence. We have provided school boards with detailed information on birth rates, the number of births by residence of mothers, provincial enrolment projections and county and district population projections by age groups to the extent that this material has been available.

In addition, Mr. Speaker, the ministry is developing a complete computerized inventory of facilities by school and by board. Also, computer printouts of existing accommodation, school by school, have been made available to school boards for planning purposes. These kinds of procedures and services are continuing because I believe that it is in the public interest that school boards objectively assess their real needs before planning new facilities.

Last week, as a further step to ensure efficient planning and use of school facilities, I announced a new procedure whereby school boards concerned with a particular geographic area will be required to carry out a co-operative study of need of additional school accommodation before a proposal will be considered by the ministry. I am confident that out of this procedure will come increased sharing of facilities between school boards, both public and separate, and assurance that money will not be spent on new pupil places unless there is a very definite need.

Further, since present and projected enrolment patterns indicate a diminishing need for new school facilities, the government is reducing the allocation of funds to school boards from the Ontario Education Capital Aid Corp. The allocation was reduced from $202 million in 1971 to $159 million in 1972, and there will be a further substantial reduction in the funds available for school construction in 1973. This means that all proposals to build new facilities will continue to be scrutinized very closely by the ministry—not only projects financed through the Capital Aid Corp., but also those financed by local boards from current funds.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to emphasize, however, that there will continue to be sufficient money to build those new facilities which are clearly needed. It is the continuing policy of the government to ensure the provision of necessary school accommodation and quality education for the pupils of this province, and sufficient funds will be provided for these purposes. For example, at a time when we are putting a high priority on new housing starts, I wish to give assurance that reduction in capital funds for school construction will not be allowed to inhibit or discourage new residential subdivisions and housing projects which might not go forward if adequate school facilities were not available.

I feel confident, Mr. Speaker, that the report which I am tabling today on school costs and capital construction will generate valuable discussion throughout Ontario. I hope that every school board will study it carefully and I know we can count on their co-operation in these very important matters. I would like to thank the chairman and the members of this committee for their excellent work. I am sure the members of this House look forward to receiving subsequent reports as this committee continues its important task.

WHITBY PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, there has been some comment in the past few days about a task force report on the Whitby Psychiatric Hospital and I would like to make a statement on this matter.

At the outset, I think the members should remember that this task force was set up as a committee of hospital employees to make some comments and recommendations on the reorganization of the hospital, which started on May 1 of this year. The ministry supported and encouraged the formation of the task force and considers the report worthy of consideration. It covers the areas of patient care, staffing, physical facilities and ward safety, team functioning and administrative review. Broadly speaking, the report breaks down into two areas, one in which the committee suggests there could be a closer working relationship between the Ministry of Health and the hospital; and a second area which calls for consideration at the hospital level of certain other matters at issue.

I am pleased to announce that in the four months since the report was written, certain positive steps have been taken by the hospital on seven of the recommendations, and further progress will be made on these as the reorganization of the hospital continues.

In considering the report, I think members and the public should also be aware of the time schedule under which the task force had to work. For purposes of their analysis, they took a three-month period in 1971 and compared it with a two-week period in mid-July of this year, about two months after reorganization of the Whitby Hospital was started.

Since we received the report a little more than a week ago we have been in constant touch with the hospital administrator. On Wednesday of last week, Mr. Frank Miller, my parliamentary assistant, Dr. William Henderson, assistant deputy minister, and Dr. Tony Ives, head of the psychiatric branch of the ministry, visited the hospital.

Of the 10 recommendations that were made, seven are already under review, and this leaves three recommendations of the task force with which we must deal: Defining the objectives, policies and procedures of the hospital, which is recommendation No. 1; provision of non-hospital placements for patients no longer requiring hospital care, which is No. 6; and the establishment of a multi-disciplinary committee, which is No. 10.

It is my understanding that all 10 recommendations will be dealt with by the following plan

Dr. L. O. Bradley, executive director of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, has agreed to a formal request from the administrator to assemble a multidisciplinary team, which will undertake a detailed and independent survey of this facility. This will serve two purposes—it will be a first step toward full accreditation in the future and, of more immediate importance, it will provide a detailed listing of further improvements in terms of the accreditation standards and programmes.

The survey team will consist of Dr. Bradley himself, as the administrative representative; Dr. M. C. Kovacs, medical superintendent of the Brandon Mental Hospital of Brandon, Man.; and Miss N. Leckie, director of nursing at the Douglas Memorial Hospital, Montreal, with others to be added if appropriate.

Dr. Bradley has indicated that he is aware of the urgency of the request and has promised as speedy action as is humanly possible.

SPILLING OF SULPHURIC ACID

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a brief statement concerning the sulphuric acid spill which resulted from the derailment, last Friday night, of a Toronto-Hamilton-Buffalo freight train in the Welland area.

I visited the site this morning to find cleanup operations, well under way under the direction of my ministry. I must say it was quite a spectacular scene. Almost all the spilled acid has been contained and we expect that what is left in the tankers will be pumped out today and tomorrow. The equipment should be there by now.

Pending the removal of the remaining acid—it is estimated that approximately 1,200 tons have escaped, that is about 120,000 gallons—the bulk of the acid has been directed into a series of five lagoons dug on the property of Mr. Paul Milo. It is being neutralized there with soda ash and caustic soda. So far 22,000 tons of soda ash and 10 tons of caustic soda have been trucked to the site—I might say from Amherstburg—for use in neutralizing the acid in the ditches between the train wreckage and the lagoons.

Staff from the Ministry of the Environment and the local medical officer of health have sampled well water in the immediate area and given the water supply a clean bill of health. This sampling will continue until any possible hazard has passed. It is anticipated there will be a slight increase in dissolved solids in the well water within a few weeks, but we do not expect this will be a long-term problem.

I spoke to Mr. Milo today to thank him for permitting us to dig lagoons on his land. His house is one of the handful close to the tracks and he has been reassured about the quality of his well water. In the excess runoff during Saturday night's thaw, some acid passed the dikes and the Ministry of Natural Resources personnel report that a fish kill resulted in the nearby creek which leads to the Welland River. We don't anticipate any noticeable effect on the Welland River; sampling has been going on and so far there has not been any. We expect that both operations will be completed within one week but site restoration will probably take about another month.

We have been assisted greatly by the co-operation of the local residents in the area, and I can't speak too highly of the activities and actions of the Niagara Regional Police force, which has kept the area cordoned off and supplied a mobile headquarters to co-ordinate the whole operation. In addition, I must also mention the very quick action of the Niagara region, Department of Public Works, which was first on the scene and prevented the acid runoff by the construction of the early dikes.

Mr. Speaker: Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): A question of the hon. Minister of Health pertaining to his series of statements last week leading to a retrenchment in costs associated with hospitals: Can he explain why the home care programme, which he used as a reason for the reduction of the number of active treatment beds, has itself been reduced from 90 days to 30 days in its application in some communities?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I don't know where the hon. Leader of the Opposition is getting his information from. It originally started out as 30 days, and it has been increased since then. It started off on a short-term basis to keep patients out of hospital or to allow them to return home earlier; when it was started they were covered for up to 30 days. Since then it has been extended, and at the end of 30 days it can be extended for two 30-day periods; in effect, it can be extended up to 90 days.

At the present time I am reviewing this, because I don't think this is enough. I feel that even if it's on a long-term basis, it is much better to keep patients in their own homes and maintain them there as long as it can be done economically; it is better for the patients than to put them in institutions. Thus, we hope to expand or extend our programme very shortly not only to cover more of them in the 90-day period but to extend it over a long period of time.

There have been cases where patients were cut off by the local administrator of the programme and, when they were brought to my attention, I found that perhaps there was a husband and wife involved and one of them was incapacitated. When we provide service under the home care programme, they are able to carry on. If we cut it off, it would mean institutionalizing both of them because they are unable to carry on on their own. Therefore, it is much more economical and much better for them to be maintained in their own home as long as we can. Certainly it has not been cut back to 30 days.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: For purposes of clarification, is the information incorrect that we received from—

An hon. member: Dr. King.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: —Dr. King in Waterloo, that the policy was for 90 days and by order of the ministry it was reduced to 30 days? Is that incorrect?

Hon. Mr. Potter: That is incorrect, yes.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: All right. I thank the minister for clearing that up.

A supplementary: When the minister is rethinking some of the decisions associated with cost-cutting, can he review the decision that led him to discontinue the stipends for interns in a number of medical practice areas, which has led many people in this field at the university and hospital levels to have to apply for loans very much larger than the average loans that are available to students and much larger than they were led to understand would be necessary in the furtherance of their careers?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, this was done before my time but I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition is referring to the dietetic interns—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Yes, right.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Physiotherapy interns.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —physiotherapy interns and others, yes. No, I can't answer that, but I would be glad to get the answer for the hon. member. I really think this might require a different view too. Instead of providing assistance for them as students, I would like to look at it from the standpoint that they are providing a service to the hospitals and perhaps they should be remembered by the hospital for the service. One way or another, they should have the assistance, but I would like to look at it further.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Surely that would be very acceptable.

A further supplementary about the same programme that the minister has enunciated of reducing costs for hospital care and the delivery of health services through hospitals: Can he explain why the five per cent budgetary limit was imposed by his ministry as late as the middle of November when the statutory requirement for budgetary presentation is, I understand, Nov. 30? No information was available in August, according to hospital officials who contacted me.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As early as last spring when the statement was made by the Ontario Hospital Association that they anticipated they'd need an eight per cent increase, I made the statement at that time that I couldn't see any way that eight per cent was going to be available to them.

As a matter of fact I have been meeting with the executive of the Ontario Hospital Association ever since. So the hospitals were pretty well made aware that there wasn't going to be any eight per cent increase. As a matter of fact, I wasn't able to tell them what it could be. We've been very, very carefully reviewing our programmes to determine just how much money we would have available to them.

I disagree with the statement that some hospitals have made. They say that they haven't been able to prepare their budgets because they didn't know how much money would be made available to them. I don't like that system of financing myself. I feel as long as we continue to say to a hospital, or to any other institution for that matter, that we're prepared to give you an extra five, seven or eight per cent to spend next year, as they prepare their budgets they'll find ways and means of spending it.

I was much more interested in the hospitals taking a good look at their operation, sharpening their pencils, and just seeing what kind of a budget they could come up with, without anticipating any increases. I know that several hospitals did this, so they were not caught, as you might say, in a bind by not knowing how much money was going to be made available to them. Other than that I can say nothing more except to say that it has taken us this length of time to determine how much money we would be able to have for them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: By way of supplementary, if you will allow me just to complete the series that I wanted to ask. They are all based, Mr. Speaker, on the minister's statements from last week. How did his plan to reduce costs, which must have been evolved over a period of time, result in the decision to do away with the subsidies for doctors who would locate in the northern part of the province or elsewhere? We were talking about this in the Legislature in his absence on Friday.

Hon. Mr. Potter: There has been no decision made to do that, Mr. Speaker. You are never too old to learn and I'm still learning that you must check everything very, very carefully and if you don't allow enough time to do it, you sometimes get caught. I got caught the other day when I was delivering a speech in Ottawa, when I came to a part where it said "and this is to be phased out," and there was no intention of phasing out. When I delivered the speech I told them it was being reviewed and we were looking at it very carefully.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): New speech-writer, that's all.

Hon. Mr. Potter: If I may get back to that particular item, Mr. Speaker, we have had several programmes to encourage doctors to locate in the northern part of the province. One of them was the grants programme in which we gave them an outright grant every year for four years. Another was guaranteed annual income, in which we guaranteed them an income for four years while they were there, and the third was the bursary plan. The bursary plan started off by paying a bursary of $3,000 a year to the students if they would locate in the northern part of the province or in a designated area after they graduated. They received this for two years, the last two years of their training. What I actually was referring to was that in this particular programme, out of 61 we are dealing with particularly, 20 have located there and of the other 31—

Mr. Lewis: Forty-one.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Ten opted out after they graduated and didn't want to go there and wanted to pay their money back.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Is the minister recovering that money?

Hon. Mr. Potter: We are recovering some of it, yes. Of the other 31, they are students who had the bursary, say, in their next to final year. Then in their final year they decided they didn't want to go along with it, so they haven't accepted it. So that out of 61 we have about one-third who located there. I'm looking at it because the other part of our programme has been more successful, and if this isn't successful then I think we should consider trying to develop some other means of encouraging them to get there, rather than putting $1.5 million or $2 million, as we have here, into this programme which may not be as successful as we had hoped. At the present time—

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): The minister might build a faculty of medicine up north.

Hon. Mr. Potter: At the present time, there are still 49 students interning. There are 106 still under the bursary programme; so we don't know how many of them might back out or might not. But the other part of the programme has been most successful. We have had doctors locate in many areas in the north. I have a list of them here, if anybody is interested in them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: In conclusion on this topic, Mr. Speaker, can the minister tell the House how many people are in danger of losing their employment in the hospital services field as a result of the policy which he has enunciated, piecemeal, over the last three weeks? Surely, would he not agree that, if the policy of the government was to reduce at any cost the commitment of public funds to this service, it would have been better if the Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) had enunciated it as government policy and that he, as the administrator of the department, should have had the responsibility to administer it rather than take the onus on the department as a whole? So, specifically, how many jobs are going to be lost by people presently employed in the field, and what will the total savings be to the department over the first year of this new retrenchment programme?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I doubt very much from the comments I've received from many medical administrators so far that there will be any jobs lost.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No jobs lost?

Hon. Mr. Potter: The comments that I've received from several of them have been that they support the programme. Certainly the Ontario Hospital Association executive has supported the programme. There have been statements in the press of others that have been supporting the programme. They have until April 1 next year to try to readjust to the new funding. They feel, as I do, that with the ordinary turnover that there is in these hospitals, it won't be a question of individuals losing the jobs, it'll be a question of attrition—of not replacing some of them as they leave.

Mr. Lewis: By attrition?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Really, I don't think the hon. Leader of the Opposition is going to suggest for one minute that the operation of our hospitals should be a winter works programme or a job-hunting programme.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: We are critical of the minister's inadequate planning.

Hon. Mr. Potter: It has been stated on many occasions, first of all, back in October—by the member for Scarborough West—

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): That really borders on being insulting.

Hon. J. White (Minister of Industry and Tourism): No, it doesn't. That was said in the House last week.

Mr. Lewis: It doesn't border on it; it is insulting.

Mr. Bullbrook: I am sorry, it is insulting. It doesn't border.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Bullbrook: Supplementary, if I may.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: I want to know what the total saving to the province would be, if the minister would indicate?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition was asking a supplementary.

Hon. Mr. Potter: I can't say the total saving offhand, Mr. Speaker, but I'll have it for the hon. leader tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker: There has been quite a large number of supplementaries, but the New Democratic Party has not had an opportunity to ask a supplementary. I, therefore, call the hon. member for Parkdale with a supplementary.

Mr. J. Duksza (Parkdale): It's a supplementary to this question. In the context of attempting to cut down costs of acute treatment beds, can the minister tell me why he is also cutting down on the supportive services? He has cut down the financial support for the daycare centre at Sherbourne and Dundas which is part of Queen St. Mental Health Centre. By doing this ambulatory service they are in fact diminishing the usage of acute psychiatric beds which are much more expensive at Queen St. Mental Health Centre.

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker, it is not our intention to cut down on other types of services. It's obvious that if we cut down on our active treatment facilities, we have to provide some other type of accommodation. This was a matter, as I am sure most of the members were aware, that was discussed at the health ministers' conference in October in Regina. It was reported as being agreed to by all health ministers across Canada that we must find some other type of accommodation and some other method of looking after our patients than the expensive active treatment facilities.

More recently we have had a report in the newspaper—just today I believe—of the American government adopting steps in the same direction. So, I really can't accept the criticism that we are trying to cut out active treatment beds unnecessarily. We are trying to cut back on them because it has been proved that they are not being used that efficiently and they are not necessary for many conditions.

In doing so, we are, in fact, providing other types of accommodation. As for the other types of accommodation we are providing, as I started out to say before, we are increasing our nursing home accommodation across the province. We are increasing the number of chronic beds that are being made available across the province, and we are increasing the number of patients that can be cared for under the home-care programme. In addition to this, the outpatient facilities of the province are being increased every year to provide more outpatient services to the patients. So these are some of the areas which we are using as an alternative to active treatment beds at the present time.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Duksza: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This is not only developing into a debate, much of it is now repetitious. I will permit one more supplementary.

The hon. member for Sarnia had been attempting to ask a supplementary.

Mr. Duksza: Then may I repeat my question? The minister's answer was not what I asked. Can I repeat the question then?

Mr. Speaker: All right. I'll listen to the question again.

Mr. Duksza: I asked the minister why he is cutting off the financial support for a day-care centre at Dundas and Sherbourne. I did not ask him to give me a policy statement.

Mr. Speaker: All right. Does the hon. minister have a specific answer to that specific question?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Daycare centres don't come under my jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Samia.

Mr. Bullbrook: Having regard to the fact that the minister, last week, attempted to convey to the House that the sole responsibility for the ultimate decision is that of a board, and in view of the fact that the chairman of the board of the Sarnia General Hospital has announced that 43 active treatment beds will be shut down effective Jan. 1, and in view of the statement made by the minister that no persons will lose their employment as a result of same, could the minister advise me where is the saving to the public of Ontario in this connection? Are we to presume from what he has said that these beds will be converted to chronic care beds?

Hon. Mr. Potter: It depends on the situation, Mr. Speaker. There are areas where there is a need for more chronic facilities, where there is a need for more—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Hon. Mr. Potter: —rehabilitative-type facilities. I'm not familiar offhand with what the need is there, but I'd be glad to meet with them and discuss it, because it's a question of providing an alternative to the active bed which is better for the patient and more economical.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of one final supplementary, does the minister not agree that the board of a hospital doesn't have the right or the ability to say to its employees, "You'll now go into home-care service"? Those people who service the 43 active beds in Sarnia General Hospital, who are being deprived of their work and their professional rights, don't have any other place to go. What saving is there to the people of Ontario when those beds are shut down—

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): And the minister keeps on the staff.

Mr. Bullbrook: —and they're kept on the staff?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I'd be delighted to meet with the people from Sarnia and work out their difficulties with them. I don't think it's that difficult.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, at the expense of trying your patience, sir, I would like to ask the Minister of Health whether, given the events of the last two or three weeks, he can yet provide for the Legislature a health plan for Ontario, which gives to us a projection of chronic, convalescent, homecare developments in the province over the next several years as an alternative to active treatment, and also outlines for us what precisely he intends to do in the field of community health centres? Or are we to assume that the alternative is as ad hoc as the original plan itself?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I'll be glad to prepare such a report, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: Thank you.

ONR AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC CORPORATION

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications? May I ask whether the Ontario Northland Railway has, in fact, entered into an agreement or contractual relationship of some kind with that corporation in Quebec responsible for the hydro development at James Bay?

Hon. C. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Mr. Speaker, about what was that? May I ask the hon. leader of the New Democratic Party in what respect? What—

Mr. Lewis: In respect of transporting goods or materials in a direct contractual relationship attached to that specific project.

Hon. Mr. Carton: To my knowledge no, Mr. Speaker, but I'll be happy to look into this.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, are there any negotiations under way, that the minister knows of, between the Ontario Northland Railway and the corporation involved in the development of James Bay?

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): I hope so. More business for the railroad.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, there are many discussions going on, particularly with the Ontario Northland, at this present moment. But may I say this; that none have reached policy level, or where I would be involved. I have seen absolutely nothing, Mr. Speaker, that would impinge upon my field as the minister, and I am aware of any of these matters when they reach that stage.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

DENTAL TECHNOLOGISTS

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Health whether he would be kind enough to allow the House to see in advance the amendments he intends to make to Bill 203? May we have a day's notice of the alterations to the Dental Technologists Act before we enter into second reading?

Hon. Mr. Potter: I intend to introduce the bill tomorrow, Mr. Speaker, and ask that it be referred to the social development committee after second reading.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, are we to assume that there will be amendments to the bill?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes, I anticipate there will be.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask, sir, in advance, doesn't the minister think that on substantive amendments which we all know the House will be entertaining, there is value in knowing them in advance of second reading when we are debating the bill in principle, and could he not afford that to the opposition parties?

Hon. Mr. Potter: To be honest, Mr. Speaker, I hadn't given it much thought. I thought if I brought the bill in, and at the time of second reading made the statement of the amendments I was going to propose to the committee that that would be sufficient notice to the committee, the same as any other party would be doing.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have other questions?

CHARGES LAID BY CONSUMER PROTECTION BUREAU

Mr. Lewis: A question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Affairs, Mr. Speaker: Can he tell us whether the Consumer Protection Bureau has laid any charges under its legislative powers over the last three or four years? Is he aware of any such charges?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I am curious to find out, does that have reference to any particular aspect?

Mr. Lewis: No; to the whole range of complaints which may be presented to it.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes, it has.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, would the minister be good enough to table for the House the kinds of charges which the consumer bureau has laid?

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes, I will look into that. The types and numbers?

Mr. Lewis: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Clement: Yes.

HEALTH CARE DELIVERY SYSTEM

Mr. Lewis: Fine. Just to tie a tag end together, Mr. Speaker, back to the Minister of Health: Since the daycare centre to which my colleague from Parkdale referred is attached directly to the Queen St. Mental Health Centre under his department, can he explain why, in his cutbacks, he is including support services of that kind?

Hon. Mr. Potter: No, Mr. Speaker, but I will look into it and find out why.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. David.

METRO CHAIRMAN'S TERM OF OFFICE

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): My question is of the Minister of Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs: In view of the municipal elections being held today and the provincial provisions for a two-year term of office for most municipal councillors, is the minister considering an amendment to the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act to bring the term of office for the Metro chairman, which is three years, into line with that of the council, which is now two years?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, yes. In answer to the hon. member, yes, we are considering that.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sarnia.

PENALTIES FOR IMPAIRED DRIVING

Mr. Bullbrook: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have two questions of the Provincial Secretary for Justice. One, is the minister properly quoted in the Toronto Windsor Star as saying as follows—I'm sorry, the Windsor Star—as saying as follows: "Mr. Kerr said in an interview that Ontario and most of the other provinces consider impaired driving too serious an offence to allow those convicted to be able to drive to work"? Firstly, is that a proper quote? Secondly, doesn't he sense any imbalance of justice when for example, heaven forbid, he or one of his colleagues was subjected to the automatic penalty, he has a chauffeur to drive him? What about the transport driver who automatically loses his right to work? Does the minister, as the Provincial Secretary for Justice, subscribe to the fact that that is true and equitable justice to all the citizens of this province?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Mr. Speaker, my answer to the hon. member's question is that, to my recollection, that is not a proper quote. What I was attempting to say, and this was really in an interview later in the evening with the reporter from the Windsor Star—

Mr. Martel: That was after how many?

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Much later in the evening.

Hon. Mr. Kerr:—was that in considering the Highway Traffic Act, and particularly the Criminal Code section dealing with impaired driving and driving while intoxicated, one of the ingredients was the seriousness of the offence and that sometimes a fine itself was not considered too strict a penalty for an offence of that kind. I wasn't trying to say there shouldn't be restricted licences; or that there should be some way whereby the Highway Traffic Act and the Code do not conflict so that restricted licences could be issued in certain circumstances, as indicated by the hon. member, where a person so convicted needed his vehicle in his job, in other words to earn his livelihood.

I was not against the idea of restricted licences. All I wanted to emphasize was the fact we were seeming to lose sight of the fact that it was a very serious offence and that a suspension of licence was warranted in most circumstances.

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes, well by way of one further supplementary: Recognizing the seriousness of the offence, are we to glean then from the minister's response that the present system of automatic suspension does not meet with the approval of the Provincial Secretary for Justice?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That's right. I feel, as a matter of fact—

Mr. Bullbrook: Good! Good for the minister!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —I agree with the federal amendment. I am not taking issue with that. What I am taking issue with is the way it was brought in without—

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): A couple of the minister's colleagues don't agree.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: —any consultation whatsoever with the provinces.

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister had best look to his left and to his right there.

Mr. Singer: The Attorney General (Mr. Bales) and the Minister of Transportation and Communications aren't quite sure they agree with the minister.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

QEW SNOW REMOVAL

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications. Will the minister request the highways maintenance department—

Mr. Singer: Talk about that in the next cabinet meeting.

Mr. Deans: —to provide him with a detailed accounting of all the work that was done today in preparation for the snowfall that occurred on the Queen Elizabeth Highway between Highway 403 and Oakville? Will he further ask for a technical investigation of that stretch of highway to determine why it is there are something like 100 to 150 wrecked vehicles along that stretch, and that on other parts of the highway there were very few accidents?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will have an up-to-date report, including the police reports of any accidents, and have it examined.

Mr. Deans: One supplementary question: May I ask the minister if he would ask, in particular, for a report on that stretch of highway and on Highway 403 where it intersects with the Queen Elizabeth Highway; because no matter when there is a snowfall, whether it be an eighth-of-an-inch or a foot, a number of very serious accidents occur right at that intersection?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I recall some months ago there was some question about the stretch of highway between 403 and Duff's Corners. Is this the stretch the hon. member is talking about, or is it between 403 and the intersection and then Oakville?

Mr. Deans: I am talking, Mr. Speaker, about the intersection at Burlington, at the Burlington end.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for London North.

NIGHT SESSION OF HOUSE

Mr. G. W. Walker (London North): Mr. Speaker, my question is of the Chairman of the Management Board. I wonder if he could indicate to us, in view of the widespread interest in municipal elections today, whether or not we can celebrate the first common election night in Ontario by abandoning this evening's sitting?

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deans: Too late!

Mr. Martel: Why?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I think that maybe for that reason, and other reasons—

Mr. Lewis: Typical of the Conservatives to ask that the session be abandoned.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I was in the office of the Premier (Mr. Davis) and discussed this with him while the bells were ringing and since then; and he has asked me to suspend the sitting of the House this evening. We will carry on with that debate, then, tomorrow evening.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): After all, the bars are open at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York-Forest-Hill has been attempting to gain the floor for some time.

PROHIBITION SIGNS ON METRO STREETS

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Thank you. May I inquire of the Minister of Transportation and Communications whether he has had an opportunity to look into that very simple but very important question I asked him last Monday, as to whether his department had authorized the erection of all those prohibition and partial prohibition signs in the northwest quadrant; and as to his theory, if he authorized them, in discriminating against certain residents and certain streets, and against other residents and other streets. Could he tell me, please?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, my ministry—and it is done through the ministry and not the minister—my ministry authorized some 2,000 bylaws that have to do with local municipalities in like cases. There are about 2,000 a year that come through the office.

This is done by virtue of the Municipal Act. That is where the authority is given. In this particular instance there are many signs, as the hon. member mentioned, up in that northwest quadrant, but my ministry examines these bylaws with three purposes in mind: (a) whether or not they contravene the Highway Traffic Act; (b) whether or not they intersect a King's highway; and (c) whether or not they relate to a connecting link.

Those are the only considerations that are given by my ministry. This has been the policy and this is the policy. Where there is a King's highway intersected or where there is a connecting link involved, then we attend and make sure that there is nothing that interferes with the natural flow of traffic.

Mr. Givens: But isn't it a fact that the mess that has been created there was because of the cancellation of the Spadina Expressway? Mr. Speaker, if the minister lived there, doesn't he think it is just as important to protect the residential rights of the people living north of Lawrence Ave. as it is to protect the residential rights of the people living south of Lawrence Ave., particularly since many of them live in the minister's riding? Why doesn't he block off those streets as well?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: After all, cities are for people, remember.

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I must confess that this particular matter of the Spadina Expressway has been recurring time and time again, but just—

Mr. Givens: And it will keep recurring.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Carton: Just to show you, Mr. Speaker, the concern that the minister has—and I am sure the leader of this government has—with this particular problem, there is a very prominent association that put forth its ideas quite recently, such as narrowing residential streets, putting jogs in residential streets, making bumps to discourage car traffic and, in fact, said that no further expressways should be built, including specifically the Spadina Expressway, the Scarborough Expressway and any other expressway, and that was the Toronto Liberal Municipal Association.

Mr. Givens: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Givens: —who are blocking off the streets and ruining residential streets in my area and in his area?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

SHORELINE DAMAGE AT LAKES ST. CLAIR AND ERIE

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, a question of the Minister of Natural Resources: Regarding protective action on the shores of Lake St. Clair and Lake Erie against further damage resulting from the current high water levels and the high easterly winds—which are in action again today, incidentally, Mr. Speaker—are his engineers ready yet to recommend a course of action?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, my engineers have not completed their study of this particular problem. They have been concentrating, as the members well know, on the Pelee Island situation, and hopefully I will be able to give some further indication in the next few days.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary?

Mr. Burr: Has the minister considered the possibility of building at certain places under-surface breakwaters consisting of wrecked cars, as is the case off the shore of North Carolina?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that the member is aware that some sections of the shoreline have already been protected by abandoned automobiles at the present time and this is one area that the engineers will examine and report on.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Downsview.

DEATH OF GRACE SCOTT

Mr. Singer: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have a question of the Attorney General. Could the Attorney General explain to us exactly what happened when Elmer French of Waverley was tried for an offence apparently somewhat related to the death of a young lady named Grace Scott? French was tried for not yielding a right of way and for some peculiar reason the Crown attorney was not sufficiently informed to bring before the court the fact that his failing to yield had resulted in an accident which had caused the death of this young lady. The Crown attorney obviously was either misinformed or was negligent—

Mr. Speaker: Now the hon. member is embarking on a speech. The question has been asked.

Mr. Singer: Would the Attorney General tell us what he is going to do about it?

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, that was an unfortunate accident resulting in the death of a young person. The Crown attorney who appeared on the matter was not the regular Crown attorney in that area. In his submission he did not mention the death of the person, though he dealt with the accident itself.

The person pleaded guilty, was fined and that fine, I presume, was paid. The death of the person does not relate to the charge of breach of the law, but rather it should have been mentioned because it might well relate to the penalty. The fact that he had committed the wrongdoing was mentioned as it should have been mentioned.

This has been a difficult case but I am faced with the problem that a person has been convicted and shall he, against basic principles, stand in jeopardy twice for the same action or breach which has occurred? On that basis and for that reason, regretfully, I believe that no further steps can or should be taken in this case.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, would not an appeal have lain with the Crown and would that appeal not have been a trial de novo? At that point would it have been double jeopardy? Couldn't all of the facts have been brought before the subsequent court as part of a trial de novo?

Hon. Mr. Bales: There was a plea of guilty before the court and the description of the accident was given. I inquired carefully into this and ascertained that the court was not advised as to the death. Under those circumstances I feel it would be a case of double jeopardy.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor West.

YWCA RESIDENCE

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): A question of the Minister of Labour, Mr. Speaker: What action is the minister considering taking concerning OHC's building of a single women's residence here in Toronto, to be managed by the YWCA, which was announced by the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) last September? It is in direct violation of that provision of the Ontario Human Rights Code which states that no one will be denied any housing on the basis of sex or marital status.

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to my hon. friend, I have to disagree. I don't think it is a contradiction of the Code. I think we have made an exception there, and even landlords can rent to, let's say, one sex—or females—provided they are all females in his apartment, or his building. Or males, for that matter.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: His apartment?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: His building, I meant. I can't see that it is in contravention of the code.

Mr. Bounsall: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, is the minister aware that the State of New York not only has denied funds for building of single sex accommodation, but has stated, through the New York City Human Rights Commission, that as of February, 1973, all single sex operations in the matter of housing must cease?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I wasn't aware of that. Perhaps it might be a good idea for the minister to go to New York some day.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

BAN ON STUDDERED TIRES

Mr. Gaunt: A question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications: Does the minister think that the action taken by the OPP a week ago at the Ontario and Niagara border points, in which the police were stopping all American cars, warning them that if they drove with studded tires they would be subject to the maximum $100 fine, is in the best interest of the Province of Ontario as far as our tourist trade or our public relations are concerned?

Mr. Lewis: What about Manitoba?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I would defer to the Solicitor General. The law enforcement provisions do not come under my ministry. However, I would add that this is the law and I suppose that is their way of enforcing it.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Essex—

Mr. Gaunt: May I redirect that question to the Solicitor General, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He has nothing to do with the law. He just enforces it.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I did not see that report—I had heard of it—and when I made an inquiry as to it, I was advised that it wasn't correct.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Does the minister mean they are allowed to drive with studded tires?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I would be very pleased—

An hon. member: The minister should make up his mind.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I am answering the hon. member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. Lewis: Then the Solicitor General will have a supplementary in a moment.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I would be very pleased if the hon. member were to give me details or the background of the report that he is basing his question on.

Mr. Gaunt: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Do I take it that the Ontario Provincial Police have not indicated to the Solicitor General that any of the American drivers were stopped at the aforementioned border points?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I think there was some story that literally hundreds of motor vehicles—I don't know what story the hon. member has, but the story related to me was that hundreds of motor vehicles were being stopped.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): There were only scores!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Now I don't know whether they were being cautioned or whether they were being summonsed, but I asked for details of the report and was informed that the report was incorrect.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: They wear studs up there in July!

Mr. Gaunt: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Does the minister have a list of the convictions under this particular section of the Act up until the present time? Does he know how many people have been convicted under this particular section of the Act?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, I haven't got the figures for this year, but I did table in the House last session the convictions for the winter of 1971-1972. No recent figures have been brought to my attention; I can acquire them for the hon. member.

May I say this in anticipation of the supplementary that hasn't come: The law is the law and it will be enforced.

Mr. Gaunt: A final supplementary: Has the minister instructed the OPP to enforce this section rigidly?

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Mr. Speaker, they have been called upon to enforce the law in the same way they are called upon to enforce all of the laws.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is kidding the House. The figures last spring indicated the law was not being enforced.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Cochrane South.

NORTHERN TRANSPORTATION

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications. Would he table the report on transportation studies in northern Ontario, which has been completed and was discussed with the municipal officials of northeastern Ontario?

Hon. Mr. Carton: No, Mr. Speaker, I won't table it until I have had a chance to read it.

Mr. Lewis: Come now, the minister has been discussing it.

Hon. Mr. Carton: I discussed only the recommendations, Mr. Speaker. In fact, I haven't seen the press release but it came out in the press release that the minister had not seen the report, that he discussed them at their request with three of the individuals on the municipal liaison committee representing "the great north." They were advised that, firstly, the minister had not studied the report and, secondly, any of the recommendations were not the minister's, the ministry's nor the policy of this government.

Mr. Ferrier: As a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, will we have an opportunity to see this report in due course to study the recommendations ourselves and to be prepared to comment upon them as far as they affect transportation in the north?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Yes, Mr. Speaker, very definitely.

I must say that at first glance, from what I have been able to read, I am very happy and very proud about this report. As a matter of fact, I tried to contact the individual members who represented that area that day and was unable to contact the hon. member for Cochrane South, but I did contact some of his colleagues and other members of the Legislature to advise them.

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has expired.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Good!

Mr. Speaker: Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Hon. Mr. Wells presented the interim report of the Committee on the Costs of Education.

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: And they say the member doesn't have friends in here.

Mr. Henderson: Right.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Which way does the water run?

Mr. Henderson: Level.

LAND DRAINAGE COMMITTEE

Mr. Henderson: I'd like to present the interim report of the land drainage committee.

May I take this opportunity to say a special thanks to my secretary, Mrs. Doris Dunne, who has assumed additional responsibilities since I took over as chairman. I also want to thank members of the staff for their assistance and help in past months—Miss Jane Maher, Miss Glenda du Sart and Miss Maureen Dunne. Also Mr. Dave Callfas, whom we have out here on the floor today, as clerk of the committee; Mr. Edward O'Meara, from the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, who was research officer for the committee; Mr. James Monteith, consultant engineer, and Mr. George Calver, drainage co-ordinator, Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

I want to congratulate the committee members on their attendance at the meetings and the interest they have shown on this subject, which is—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The hon. member is asking for it.

Mr. Henderson:—so important to the farmers of Ontario.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How about the taxpayer?

Mr. Henderson: On behalf of the committee may I congratulate and thank the Premier—

Mr. Lewis: Why?

Mr. Henderson:—and the Minister of Agriculture and Food (Mr. Stewart) for having the foresight in recognizing the need of this study, which will prove beneficial to all—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Henderson:—the people of Ontario. During the course of public hearings—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Henderson:—and interviews with various officials responsible for administering drainage in the province, certain problems were repeatedly brought before the committee.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: About three of them 100 times.

Mr. Henderson: In this report there were five particular areas of concern, namely: the future status of ARDA assistance to drains; demonstration tile plots; tile drainage loans in unorganized territories; problems relating to the—

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Is he in order?

Mr. Lewis: Yes.

Mr. Henderson: —use of section 4 of the present Drainage Act; problems relating to highway and railway drainage crossings.

The first four items have been dealt with in this report and recommendations have been made herein.

Evidence was presented at all the public hearings to the effect that the Minister of Transportation and Communications, along with the municipal road authorities and railway companies, have, by virtue of the artificial barriers to the natural drainage pattern formed by the grades, effectively denied many farmers the opportunity of properly draining their lands. The attitude of these authorities in general has not been co-operative with respect to private drainage schemes and to a lesser degree municipal drainage schemes.

The county of Elgin appears to be the only authority with what I would consider to be an acceptable policy. This county recognizes its obligations in connection with private drainage and in all cases bears other additional costs caused by the presence of artificial barriers.

The suggested amendments to section four are intended to remedy some of the problems encountered with these crossings. The committee at this time considers the problem complex and intends to give the matter further study. Meetings are planned for central and southern Ontario in the upcoming months and subsequently the committee intends to make a major recommendation on these and other subjects.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Hasn't the member got any other meetings planned?

Mr. Henderson: Yes, several.

Mr. Shulman: We have a drainage problem in High Park.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I do have my staff here. Would my staff stand and be recognized by the House?

Mr. Shulman: Better looking than their boss.

Mr. Henderson: I regret to inform the House, and more particularly the members of the committee, that this afternoon I have received the resignation of Miss Glenda du Sart, who is taking up other responsibilities. May I take this opportunity to thank her for the work she has done for the committee and wish her well in her new job. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Bullbrook: Is there anybody else up there that he knows?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Well, surely someone is going to applaud the chairman!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

REGIONAL MUNICIPALITY OF YORK

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Regional Municipality of York Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, in the Regional Municipality of York Amendment Act authority was given to the regional municipality of York to license plumbers and drainlayers; the amendment adds the part that prohibits the carrying on of such trades without a licence.

This bill will be pursued in the Legislature by Mr. Meen.

CITY OF TIMMINS-PORCUPINE

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the City of Timmins-Porcupine Act, 1972.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Mr. Stokes: Is the minister going to make it bigger?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: It is going to grow anyway. We know that.

Mr. Ferrier: What is the minister doing to us now?

Mr. Martel: Giving us a grant?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, in section 1 of the bill, the Timmins Police Board is defined for purposes of the Act,

In section 2, the amendment will permit the city, by bylaw, to reduce the cost of providing an urban service to designated areas when the city receives any grant or assistance in respect of the urban service, and will give the council discretion similar to that contained in general legislation,

In section 3, the new provisions relate to the organization of the police force in the new city of Timmins, and the guarantee of former officers of employment and pension and other benefits,

In section 4, the purpose of the new section is to permit the city of Timmins to establish fire service areas and to give the city the same authority as a township to pass bylaws for appointing, insuring and paying firefighters, and for entering into agreements concerning the area of fire protection and the establishment of joint fire brigades.

The conduct of this bill in the Legislature will be in the hands of Mr. Irvine.

Mr. Stokes: I hope the minister has made some provision for unorganized territories.

MILK BILL

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend The Milk Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the amendment is to clarify the intent of the Act that, in respect of quotas, the Marketing Board acts administratively and is not required to fix standards by regulation.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that this bill validates the action taken by the Milk Board and which was called into question by the recent ruling of the Supreme Court concerning the making of quotas.

FARM PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Farm Products Marketing Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, this bill does essentially the same thing as the last bill. It's essentially the same wording, made to take care of that one item which was called into question by the Supreme Court.

COMMUNITY CENTRES ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Community Centres Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, under section 1, the amendment makes it clear that capital grants are payable for capital improvements and alterations to existing community centres. Sections 2 and 3 of the amendment make it clear that community centres under this Act may be acquired by lease.

ELDERLY PERSONS CENTRES ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Elderly Persons Centres Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, in section 1, "centre" is more clearly defined. In section 2, the first reference to section 3 is removed so as to prevent any ambiguity in extent of the section. Section 3 is self-explanatory. In section 4, the amendment authorizes capital grants to be made by the minister rather than by order in council. In section 5, the amendment requires site evaluations and community surveys be made, so that the deed for a centre can be established before a grant is paid; and the amendment authorizes capital grants to be made by the minister rather than by order in council. In section 6, the application of this section is made more general. In section 7, the amendments expand the regulation-making powers to include the other changes incorporated in this bill.

JUDICATURE ACT

Hon. Mr. Bales moves reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Judicature Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for the office of supernumary judge in the Supreme Court of Ontario and is complementary to an amendment to the Judges Act of Canada passed by Parliament in 1971. Under the provisions of the amendment to the Judges Act, any Supreme Court judge who has attained the age of 70 years and who has been in judicial office for at least 10 years, may notify the Minister of Justice of Canada of his election to give up his regular judicial duties and hold office as a supernumary judge.

Upon making that election, a Supreme Court judge then becomes a supernumary judge and may hold that office until he reaches the mandatory retirement age of

75. His duties during that period of time as a supernumary judge will be such as may be assigned to him from time to time by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Under the British North America Act, the organization and constitution of the Supreme Court of Ontario is a matter within the legislative authority of the province. The bill I am introducing today establishes the office of supernumary judge for that court, so that the members thereof may elect to hold the same.

I wish to point out, Mr. Speaker, that when a judge so elects, the regular judicial position on the bench which he held becomes vacant and will be filled by an appointment. The supernumary judges will then become available to assist the court in special cases of long duration and to meet the workloads of the court as required from time to time at the direction of the Chief Justice.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Who knows, we might have a by-election in Downsview.

Mr. Singer: I heard the provincial secretary never was going to give in on that.

SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Schools Administration Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, this bill contains several sections all having to do with amendments to the procedures concerning boards of reference. One of the amendments takes away the mandatory provision that boards of reference be held in camera. Another provides for the appointment of either a chairman or a new board of reference where one has been prohibited from acting after it has begun to hear a case.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The second order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion that this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the government.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I did not think, when I moved adjournment of this debate last May 2, that there would be quite such a long hiatus in my remarks on the present government's budget.

There have been some remarkable changes since that time—and those changes naturally have affected the direction that my remarks will take. The most remarkable of those changes, of course, is that we are now speaking on a budget formulated by a man who is no longer the Treasurer. But perhaps that's not a very serious problem, Mr. Speaker. I suspect that by his present location in the front row, the former Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) will be making a comeback quite shortly.

In fact, I suspect that the present Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) is not really the Treasurer at all. But even if he is, that's not very serious; because nothing essential has been changed. Only the names and the personalities have been changed to protect the guilty.

The young fogie has been replaced by the old fogie and sitting in close juxtaposition to both of them and smiling in all his marshmallow benevolence is the master puppeteer; the card shuffler whose deck remains unchanged—the Premier (Mr. Davis).

When I adjourned this debate some six months ago, Mr. Speaker, there were a number of items about which I wished to speak. I had at that time been urging the government, without success, to cut back the increased fee to residents for using provincial parks and to increase these fees to non-residents.

In trying to tie together the remaining remarks and the items that I wanted to deal with in this conclusion to my budget speech, it became clear to me that all of these items have one unifying link. I feel compelled to speak about three or four topics, not merely for the exercise of enumerating the obvious faults of this government to a deserted Legislature, but because as a relatively new member of the Legislature it has become startlingly clear to me that this present government, and particularly the Premier, has very little respect for the parliamentary process and, in effect, is trying to twist the Legislature and the processes of government for its and his own political ends.

The present Conservative government is still perpetuating, not only a government, but a society, that puts greed, self-gain, selfishness and an "I'm all right, Jack" attitude ahead of the values of legislative responsibility, co-operation, and particularly integrity.

Let me just give a couple of brief examples. Not so long ago two Conservative cabinet ministers, the Attorney General (Mr.

Bales) and the former Treasurer, the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) were found to have been speculating in land development. The Attorney General half-heartedly offered his resignation, which the Premier, in his mighty wisdom, refused. The member for Chatham-Kent, as we all know, resigned over the alleged conflict of interest that arose.

What is fascinating to me is this; all this came at a time when land and housing costs have skyrocketed so much that the average person in Ontario, the guy carrying a lunch bucket who earns between $5,000 and $10,000 a year, cannot afford to buy—or in my own city of Thunder Bay cannot even afford to rent—decent accommodation. It may have been legal for the Attorney General and the member for Chatham-Kent—and I suppose it is legal for anyone who has the privilege and the cash to speculate on land to do so—but to my mind it was criminal in the attitude of mind that was shown by these two ministers—one a former minister—of the Crown. It is that attitude of mind which is so rampant in this present government that I wish to speak about.

I wish very simply, Mr. Speaker, to speak about corruption in government. I am using the word corruption quite deliberately and quite precisely—the erosion of integrity. It has become startlingly clear to me that this government has an amazing number of debts to pay off. It pays them off and treats the electorate of this province to a combination of bribery and blackmail; and that combination of bribery and blackmail reaches down to the very foundations of this Legislature. It affects almost every single decision this government makes and I am beginning to worry that it is affecting every decision that even individual members of this Legislature make.

Is it any wonder that during the donnybrook in this Legislature over the so-called Fidinam affair the Premier, in giving his various weak explanation, stood there like a plump Uriah Heep, wringing his hands.

Let me start by giving one example of the traditional pork-barrel bribery, which peculiar Tory technique affected my own city of Thunder Bay. This concerns the whole business of a so-called mini Queen's Park in Thunder Bay and the wholesale moving of government offices from Port Arthur riding to the Fort William riding and the complicity of the Minister of Government Services (Mr. Snow) in the pork-barrel politics of the Conservative Party in the Thunder Bay area.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Right.

Mr. Foulds: I was going to speak at length on this, but I will just refer to it briefly now because other more important matters have come up.

Mr. Stokes: The Minister of Government Services is listening very closely.

Mr. Foulds: I want to point out that contrary to the wishes of the city council of Thunder Bay, and contrary to the wishes of the majority of the people of Thunder Bay, the present government has persisted in its stubbornness regarding the location of a government complex slated for northwestern Ontario. It has been assigned to a site in the Fort William ward, a site that is very inconvenient and very out of the way. The site could have been well located. A centrally located site, which would have served as a focal point to unify the city, has been deliberately rejected by this government simply to satisfy the ego of the absent member for Fort William (Mr. Jessiman). The official explanation that is given is that the soil tests on the proposed central site were unsatisfactory.

Now that central site would have unified the city. It would have provided for expansion; and it is a site that would have generally been acceptable, not only to the people of Thunder Bay city itself but to the people of the whole region.

Presumably the people of the region are to be served by this government complex. But what is fascinating, Mr. Speaker, is that the government has refused on two occasions to convey the results of the soil tests on this central site to the city engineer of Thunder Bay. In fact, I was reading in the local paper last week the third paragraph of a letter, signed by Mr. C. H. Spence, manager of the general safety and planning section of the Ministry of Government Services, which says:

I am sure you are very much aware of the wide differences of opinion which developed when the various alternatives were being reviewed. Because of this, and in order not to exacerbate the existing dissension and to avoid doing anything which might lead to further recriminations, I have been directed to hold the information you have requested within our files until such time as its release will not create additional problems.

Mr. Stokes: By whom?

Mr. Foulds: That is a good question; by whom? Now what does that mean, Mr. Speaker?

Basically, that means the government is afraid to release its findings on that site. It is afraid to release its findings, because it knows the actual findings of the engineers did not bear out the allegations made by the minister and the member for Fort William that the site preparation there would be excessively expensive.

It is typical of this government that it refuses to be above board and open. It is obvious that the government had already made up its mind that it had to pay off the member for Fort William by giving him a pork-barrel plum and locating a government complex in his riding to try to show the people of his riding, the people of northwestern Ontario generally, that the government looks after its so-called supporters and that the people should kowtow to the "big blue machine" in order to get its goodies. It is this attitude, this pork-barrel attitude, that underlies the actions of this government. This example in my own riding is just one small example of that.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Shades of Fidinam!

Mr. Foulds: I just want to say to those members opposite in the strongest possible terms—

Mr. Stokes: There are not many of them over there.

Mr. Foulds: No, not many of them. They have fled the Legislature. I see the member for Kenora (Mr. Bernier) is here, however. Glad to have one of the north Conservative members here.

I just want to say that I don't really respond very well to the Conservative technique of combination blackmail and bribery. I want to go further. The voters in my riding don't respond to it very well. I suspect that after 29 years the electors of the entire province are growing just a trifle weary of it.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): It doesn't seem like it.

Mr. Foulds: I want to make it clear that I was not elected by the people of Port Arthur riding to become a member of the legislative club nor to become a yes man to the Conservative majority in this House. The people in my riding quite deliberately and quite consciously chose to send an opposition member to this House, and I consider that my job.

Mr. Stokes: A very wise choice too!

Mr. Foulds: It is with these thoughts in mind that I move now to what I consider a very serious matter indeed, and it is the matter of the select committees of this House, and in particular the matter of the select committee on utilization of educational facilities.

I deal with this matter with a good deal of hesitation and with some reluctance, because I suspect I will be tampering with the unspoken rules of "the club," Mr. Speaker; but I do so because I feel it is necessary. I do so because the present sham and charade of much of the business of this House and the way it is conducted are being brought home to me very forcefully.

We have heard a good deal recently about conflict of interest, government patronage and the erosion of the integrity of the present government. The most disturbing thing that I have encountered in the past year is the way in which the erosion of integrity has spread through this very Legislature; and the way we are expected to accept it and even encouraged to become a part of it.

I am most disturbed by the Premier's and the government's abuse of the legislative process, and particularly of the select committees. I tried to do a little research in the last few weeks into appointments by the government of members of the Legislature to various government boards, select committees, and so on, and I have come up with an amazing statistic, Mr. Speaker. As far as I am able to determine, there is just one poor, lone, government backbench member who is not getting some extra remuneration above his basic member's income from the government's appointments.

Mr. Laughren: What did he do wrong?

Mr. Foulds: If that member were in the House perhaps he could correct me. Perhaps my research was inadequate and perhaps he is getting a ripoff just like everybody else; but the hon. member for Prescott and Russell (Mr. Belanger) is the only government member who is not receiving an extra stipend.

Mr. Laughren: There must be something!

Mr. Foulds: Now what has that unfortunate member done to be ignored thus? How has the Premier overlooked this poor fellow? Why is he being cast into outer darkness?

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Is the member on a select committee?

Mr. Foulds: I am getting to the opposition role, just relax.

I bring to the Premier's attention the plight of this poor man. Think, Mr. Speaker, of how he must be feeling. The Premier is doing things for people, especially for his people, his backbenchers, his cabinet ministers, his parliamentary assistants, his ministering angels and flocks of flakmen, and bagmen as well.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Wasn't the member on the drainage committee?

Mr. Foulds: No, I wasn't on the drainage committee.

Mr. Givens: Didn't the member have 50 bucks a day extra?

Mr. Foulds: Oh, I was getting my ripoff. We'll get to that.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The member is getting $60 a day.

Mr. Laughren: Don't get uneasy fellows; he'll cover the waterfront!

Mr. Gilbertson: And not taxable; not taxable!

Mr. Foulds: So I feel sorry for this member for Prescott and Russell, when many of the government members are in fact receiving two or three ripoffs. There sits this poor member bereft of any of these payoffs.

An hon. member: Where's the member for Wellington-Dufferin (Mr. Root)?

Mr. Foulds: Shame on the Premier! Shame on the Management Board! Shame on the computer that throws out these committees to be constructed for the edification of the backbenchers of this House. Can nothing be done to rescue the hon. member for Prescott and Russell from monetary limbo? Surely a way can be found to give him an appointment too, because every other single member of the government has been appointed either to boards such as the Niagara Parks Commission, the Ontario Northland Railway, the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, or to a select committee.

It is this obsession of the present government to establish select committees to which it can appoint not only its backbench members but also opposition members, which does not really speak all that well for the independence of the members of this Legislature. What bothers me is, aren't we always going to be in some kind of conflict in our decision-making process if this situation continues?

Now to give a slightly different example. The other day the hon. member for High Park (Mr. Shulman) raised the question of the use of government planes by Mr. William Kelly, the bagman for the Progressive Conservative Party of this province. The minister responsible tried to intimidate the opposition in asking such questions by mentioning in his reply, which was completely irrelevant, that he had authorized the use of the Ministry of Natural Resources plane for my good friend and colleague, the hon. member for Thunder Bay, to travel within his riding. But the implication is what bothers me, the implication of the minister: "Don't make a fuss boys or Mr. Stokes won't be able to travel around his riding anymore."

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): There's a lot of difference between Stokes and Kelly.

Mr. Foulds: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Thunder Bay should have the right to travel throughout his riding—because it is a very difficult constituency—either by government aircraft, if necessary, or some other means, in order to serve the people in that far-flung and impossibly difficult constituency.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: He was granted that right.

Mr. Foulds: I would say the same thing even if the member was a government member. The member for such a riding should not be at the whim of the present government.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: He had the right, didn't he? He'll have it every year.

Mr. Foulds: He can have it whenever he wants? We've got back to this bit, have we? It should be perfectly clear to all that he has a right to internal travel within his riding. The same applies to a member such as the member for Nickel Belt. It should not be done as a favour or a privilege—

Mr. Stokes: Or Cochrane North (Mr. Brunclle)!

Mr. Foulds: —or Cochrane North for that matter—bestowed upon him by a generous government.

Mr. Stokes: In fact, I insist that he be given the same consideration.

Mr. Foulds: It should be, as I said, his right. We should all take it for granted, and that right should be clear and above board.

Now to return to the matter of select committees.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: They don't do it in Manitoba.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): They haven't got any planes.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Yes they have.

Mr. Foulds: They travel by rail a lot out there.

Let me just make it very clear, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Martel: That was a poor comparison wasn't it?

Mr. Foulds:—I have no desire to join the communion of saints. I am and I have been proud to be a politician. The remarks that I made about the politician's role during my so-called maiden speech last year are still very much a part of my thinking. But let me share with you, Mr. Speaker, and with other members of this assembly, my dilemma since last Dec. 17 when I was appointed to the select committee on the utilization of educational facilities.

I accepted that appointment quite consciously, I knew, or at least I thought I knew, what I was getting into. There is no doubt that anyone who seeks office in this assembly has made a commitment to make the basic democratic form of government, the parliamentary system, work. There are many of us on this side of the House who often come close to despair because of the many imperfections that we see in the system. All of us in this party have a commitment to basic fundamental change within that system; but I, for one, wish to work within it not merely to tamper with it but to revolutionize it.

Fair enough, but how does this relate to select committees? Basically, I believe this government, and especially the Premier, is deliberately abusing the select committee system, and therefore this legislation system, for crass political ends and crass political gains.

Select committees traditionally have very valuable work to perform. Goodness knows there are many problems in our society in Ontario that need examining; but are select committees, comprised of 11 members of this Legislature in each case, effective for the particular task that they have, for the present, been appointed to do? Are select committees the best vehicle to be examining all the questions that the present set of select committees are examining?

There are at present six of them. That means there are 66 members of this assembly, over half its membership, engaged in select committee work. If we add to that the Speaker, 24 cabinet ministers, the seven parliamentary assistants, the backbench Conservative members who hold positions on various appointed boards, that means, as far as I am able to determine, there are only nine members of this Legislature who aren't getting something extra in the way of remuneration above their basic member's income from government appointments.

I don't find that as horrendous as the press would.

I also see a conflict of interest for a number of members who not only work as members of this Legislature but are working full-time at various law practices and so on. That also cuts into their duty, it seems to me, as members of this Legislature. I know, as a member of the select committee on utilization of educational facilities, that the extra perks aren't really worth it, although I suppose a few members make it worth their while in financial terms. That's up to them; it is something for which they are answerable.

But there are three basic things that I find very worrisome indeed. One, does this extra select committee work, the board appointment work, the advisory committee work and all this kind of work interfere with our basic function as legislators and our basic function as ombudsmen for our constituents? That is one very serious question that has been troubling me.

Secondly, are select committees simply serving as very expensive escorts for their supportive and research staff?

Lastly, is the government serious about acting upon the recommendations of the select committees which this Legislature now has operating?

These are the three fundamental and thorny questions that trouble me, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps some members of the government and some members of the opposition will feel that I have betrayed the legislative club by bringing these questions to the attention of the Legislature, and therefore perhaps to the public. It is not an action I have taken lightly.

As I say, I have wrestled with the problem almost from the beginning of the establishment of my own committee. I would like to use the select committee on utilization of educational facilities as an illustration, not to indict it or individual members but as an illustration to indict the government for the way in which it abuses the purpose of select committees.

The select committee on the utilization of educational facilities is, I am afraid, the perfect illustration of how much contempt the Premier and his party have for the legislative process; and the perfect illustration of how these committees can be used, not for the laudable purposes for which they were originally conceived, but as I said to pay off the backbench members and perhaps to buy off the opposition members.

Let me explain what I mean. I have had a growing suspicion that our select committee—and probably select committees in general—could be misused and have been misused by an overweight and overpowering governing Conservative Party to provide make-work for its own backbenchers; and as I said before it is an attempt to try to seduce the opposition members into the club.

Potentially the select committee on the utilization of educational facilities has to deal with one of the most serious questions facing the society of our province. The increasing and unthinking spending on the hardware and on the bricks and mortar of educational institutions during the 1960s by the present Premier gave rise to unparalleled spending during those years. This in turn led to great public concern, as the public saw that these buildings they had paid for were standing idle for a good portion of the day and/or of the year. There came an increasing demand that the buildings be more fully used, either by the public generally or by extending the school day and/or the school year. Questions affecting the style and operation of our educational system were immediately raised.

The provincial government was being pressed to do something about it. Their response was to establish the select committee of which I am a member. This, of course, immediately took the heat off the government. Whenever questions were raised in the House or by the public or by the press, the Minister of Education and the government could say, "Well, we have a select committee of the Legislature to look into this." This does give a certain credibility in the public's mind to the government's concern. But has the committee lived up to its responsibility? Regrettably, I think not.

There were two occasions, Mr. Speaker, when I had come to the point of actually drafting a letter of resignation from the committee to either you, the Speaker, and to the chairman of the committee.

First, let me say why I was anxious not to quit. As the education critic of the New Democratic Party, I feel it is my duty to learn as much as possible about the present state of affairs in education in this province. Second, goodness knows this government needs all the help it can get to define its educational aims and objectives. I thought—somewhat immodestly and naively I realize—that I might be able to give it that assistance.

But last spring I began to realize that our committee had no focus, no plan of attack, no real rationale for its actions. In a series of meetings last spring, the member for Nickel Belt and myself argued that for the time being the committee had done enough perambulating, enough travelling and that it should sit in work sessions, evaluate its findings and determine the direction the investigation should take. But all this was to no avail.

After this House adjourned at the end of last June, Mr. Speaker, I was fortunate enough to get 3½ weeks of vacation isolated on a lake in northwestern Ontario. My wife and I didn't read any newspapers, heard very few radio broadcasts; it was indeed an idyllic interlude in which I brushed the cobwebs of this fusty institution from my psyche and from my mind.

During that time I came to the conclusion that the select committee on utilization of educational facilities had very little justification for going on its proposed fall trip to Europe. Imagine my chagrin when I emerged from my isolation and found that certain press men here in Toronto were beginning to raise a hullabaloo about the select committee travels. I considered resigning from the committee before the press had raised the matter and also at this point, Mr. Speaker; but I felt if I'd done so it would have been a bit of grandstanding. And, as I said, I'm not yet ready to join the communion of saints. Being a good member of the club, Mr. Speaker, I decided not to make a public statement or raise the issue in any public way but to fight it out within the committee. That's the way things are done within the club.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: And Europe looked good!

Mr. Foulds: I now regret this decision. Interestingly enough during that summer and before we met again in August, the member for Nickel Belt and I independently had decided that we would not go on the European junket until the committee had defined its objectives and aims. We urged the committee to at least postpone its trip until January. In the meantime, the work session could have been held and we could have had a justification for going on the trip with specific objectives in mind.

If I can project myself back to late August when we put these arguments to the committee, I think I would summarize my thoughts and arguments this way:

First, I did not feel that the expense of the trip to Europe could be justified at that time because the committee as a whole had never sat down; (a) to define its aims and objectives, or (b) to examine and evaluate the data we had collected on our various trips throughout the Province of Ontario.

Second, the member for Nickel Belt and I suggested to the committee that it should schedule a number of work sessions to do this.

Third, we felt that the committee in its public hearings had given far too much attention and priority to the establishment groups, such as the boards of education, separate school boards and the parks and recreation authority in each municipality. Citizens who did show up to make representations to our committee were rushed through their briefs towards the end of the evening hearings.

Mr. Laughren: Or hassled—

Mr. Foulds: Or hassled. Right!

Mr. Laughren: —by the member for Timiskaming (Mr. Havrot).

Mr. Foulds: Fourth, we felt the committee had abdicated too much of its responsibilities to its research and supportive staff. We also felt the committee was avoiding taking the essential decisions that the committee as a whole should take with regard to the direction of our investigation and to the findings of our committee.

However, these arguments were to no avail. The committee worked out a so-called compromise. Part of the committee was to go to Europe in October as originally planned; the second was to go, if at all, in January or at some future time.

Much later I learned that the member for Nickel Belt and myself were, of course, the only part of the committee that didn't go to Europe; although at least one other member of the committee at the meeting on August 24 had committed himself to a later time.

To summarize, it is my reluctant but firm belief that the committee went to Europe with no clear or specific reasons for going and went because, "it was the thing to do and because other committees were doing it." I would think that perhaps the other committees had far more justification for so doing. I feel it went because it is one way that this government has designed to keep the members of the Legislature in line; so that they won't raise too many embarrassing issues. In crass terms, Mr. Speaker, it's a payoff.

There are two additional factors which lead me to believe that the Tories have absolutely no respect for the committee system and that they refuse to take it seriously and use it to mask political purposes.

First, let us take the membership of the select committee on utilization of educational facilities. Of the seven original Conservative appointees, only two are still active on the committee. The member for Fort William (Mr. Jessiman) has moved up to the chairmanship of the Ontario Northland Railway—probably sitting in his private car at this very moment. The member for Lambton (Mr. Henderson) has moved up to the chairmanship of his own select committee, on land and drainage. The members for Hamilton West (Mr. McNie) and Scarborough East (Mrs. Birch)—

Mr. Laughren: Probably in his private drain now.

Mr. Foulds: —have been elevated to cabinet posts. And the member for Hamilton Mountain (Mr. J. R. Smith) after benefiting from the travels of the select committee, has suddenly found the duties of a parliamentary assistant too onerous to continue with the work of the committee.

Now, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Right! That European tour was pretty tiring.

Mr. Foulds: Yes. At this time the committee is getting down, supposedly, to its working stage. The committee has had its travelling; it has had its fun and games. Now it sits every Wednesday trying to justify its activities. And because we are sitting while the Legislature is sitting, there are no per diems attached. Is that one reason for the exodus of Conservative members from the committee?

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): A good question!

Mr. Foulds: Seriously, I ask the members, how can the committee come up with a coherent report from its members when five of its original Conservative appointees are no longer with the committee? Is it any wonder that one becomes just a little cynical about the real purpose of select committees?

Mr. Laughren: The Conservatives are going to put in a minority report.

Mr. Foulds: Is it any wonder that I suspect that the Premier and the Tory government think of select committees primarily as a way to buy off the troops. The government has manipulated its membership on our select committee to such an extent that one can only conclude it is not serious about considering any of the recommendations of the committee. If this is its attitude to our select committee, is it not likely to consider the work of all select committees with equal disdain?

I want to continue for a moment about that disdain. I think one of the things that really drove me to my present position of cynicism, Mr. Speaker, is an article that appeared in the Thunder Bay Chronicle-Journal. The chairman of our committee had been interviewed by a reporter of the Thomson press and had indicated to him that the committee would be bringing forth certain recommendations about the year-round use and the day-long use of school buildings for community purposes. The headline on that report and the first two paragraphs read:

Interim Report on School Urges Free
Use by Public

Free use of school buildings and property will form the basis of an interim report by the select committee on the utilization of educational facilities, says Dr. Charles McIlveen, chairman.

Mr. Lewis: Shame!

Mr. Foulds: The article continued:

The community pays for the buildings and properties through taxes, therefore why can't they make free use of the facilities after hours and on weekends, said Dr. McIlveen.

"The select committee," he said, "will make the recommendation for free use of schools in January when the interim report is presented to the Legislature."

Mr. Speaker, this may become one of the recommendations of our select committee; but this announcement by the chairman was made before the committee had sat down and pulled together any of its findings, and it was made without consultation with any other members of the committee. It may not in fact be a committee recommendation, although the chairman says it was a recommendation.

An hon. member: A very expensive recommendation!

Mr. Foulds: That seems to me to be completely contrary to the way in which select committees of this Legislature ought to work. Although I think, Mr. Speaker, that the chairman of my committee is a good fellow, as are all hon. members good fellows, nevertheless I cannot avoid thinking that the Conservative members, because they have been in power for so long, feel that they are somehow endowed with blessings from on high, and they have developed in a mere 29 years a concept that took civilization over 1,000 years to develop and a concept that is reminiscent of the Middle Ages. That concept says that they are ruling by divine right and that their thoughts and feelings are automatically the will of God and the will of the people.

Mr. Laughren: Led by "King Billy"!

Mr. Foulds: I suspect that the time will come when they find both those propositions to be false.

I would like to conclude my remarks, Mr. Speaker, with a few observations about the recent announcements cutting expenditures in the social development field. These announcements in the last two weeks amount to a mini-budget. Typical Tory headlines blossom in all the papers. My own local paper, The Thunder Bay Chronicle-Journal, ran this one: "Government Restraint Set on Hospitals, Colleges."

Mr. Martel: But not doctors!

Mr. Foulds: There are several galling things about these announcements, Mr. Speaker. One of them is that the government is now reaping a strange kind of benefit from its own shortsightedness and stupidity.

In the 1960's when there was a desire among the public generally to spend more on education, did this government spend wisely? No! The then Minister of Education, the present Premier, directed that spending into hardware, into buildings, plants, bricks, mortar, equipment. Bigger was better. The schools of that period look uncannily like factories.

Now we are clamping down on this expenditure; we are clamping down on expenditures to universities and hospitals and to the elementary and secondary school systems. But are we redirecting the spending to reduce the pupil-teacher ratio, to encourage special education, to develop libraries, to spend more on the elementary and pre-elementary school child? Are we developing programmes to spend more on the chronic-care patients in hospitals? Are we spending more on social and family benefits?

No, Mr. Speaker, we are simply clamping on ceilings so that we are cutting back right across the board. In this province we are not determining any kind of social priority.

The Minister of Health's (Mr. Potter) announcement imposes restraints on hospitals, but he has yet to come up with specific alternatives for health care. His recent statement that Thunder Bay has too many active treatment beds is of serious concern to us in the north.

If you'll just bear with me, Mr. Speaker, I'll go into that in detail. I have another statement here.

Mr. Stokes: Take your time, the Tories haven't any speakers!

Mr. Foulds: The recent announcement was that one of the hospitals in Thunder Bay had to cut back, I believe it was by 25. That is of very serious concern to us in northwestern Ontario. No special consideration seems to have been given to the northwestern area of the province in the arbitrary ratio set by the minister. As usual, the government has not taken into account the special conditions that exist in our part of the province. The ministry has not considered two very important factors affecting health care in northwestern Ontario.

First, the bed ratio established for Thunder Bay seems to have been based only on the population immediately surrounding the city. The minister does not seem to realize that for any specialist care the majority of people in our region, who come from towns such as Atikokan and Geraldton, have to use hospital beds in Thunder Bay. Nor does the minister seem to realize that because of the distances travelled many people have to stay in hospital in Thunder Bay somewhat longer than those in southern Ontario so they are in shape to make a very long journey home. That journey of often as much as 300 or 400 miles.

Second, the minister has given no active leadership so that the grave shortage in chronic patients' spaces in northwestern Ontario will be met. The minister has talked glibly about alternatives, but he has not given a single concrete example of any specific alternative he is contemplating.

But as far as we are concerned on this side the straw that broke the camel's back, to use the old cliché, was the minister's statement on Thursday night to the College of Family Physicians. He made the speech in Ottawa, typical of a government of this type. He admitted that northern Ontario was short of doctors, but at the same time he announced that the government's incentive programme to encourage doctors to settle in northwestern Ontario was being phased out.

Once again he offered no alternative to ensure there would be sufficient doctors in northern Ontario to serve the needs of the people in that area. And it is also incredible to me that the policy minister responsible was unaware of that decision when questioned on Friday.

There is absolutely no excuse for the provincial government to continue its incredible insensitivity to the very special needs of people in northwestern Ontario and the very special conditions under which they live. And we as a party object strongly, and I personally object very strongly, that in fact the government cutbacks in health care and education are being used so that the government can subsidize more hardware—rapid transit systems, and rapid transit systems that are centred on Metro Toronto.

And that is the final irony, Mr. Speaker. It's obvious that in spite of the hallelujah chorus in the editorial pages praising the government's stand to restrain spending, we are simply going to be spending more money on hardware and not on people.

The Premier has a new toy. In the Sixties it was the educational system and the educational buildings and the factories that he designed. This time, in the 1970s, his new toy is the rapid transit system; especially rapid transit systems here in Metro Toronto.

Beneath the surface of the complacency of this government one can detect that it has in fact lost its so-called talent for renewal. It is serving up the same old principles; it has no more imagination, no more creativity. What does this government emphasize? This government emphasizes political patronage, hardware, materialistic goods.

Twentieth century symbolic circuses are more important to them than providing decent general welfare assistance and decent allowances under the Family Benefits Act. One of the things that has become starkly clear to me in the last year is that the present system encouraged and developed by this government judges men and women, classifies them, divides them into basic categories: Those who are considered worthy and those who are not.

We in this party say that all men are worthy; that we are in fact our brother's keeper; and that we have a responsibility—and we as a society have a collective responsibility—to ensure the health and welfare of those people less fortunate than ourselves.

I want to illustrate what I mean very quickly by giving two examples of constituency cases that have come to me within the last year for some help.

One person was—let's call her Mrs. Jones—an elderly lady confined to a wheelchair, living in the rural part of my riding, and looking after herself quite adequately. She had an income of $121 a month from this government. She dropped her glasses and broke them. Previously to dropping her glasses, she had a birthday and a few of her friends had given her a bit of money, a total of $26.

After she had arranged to go into town, a distance of 20-odd miles, with a neighbour to get the glasses fitted, her eyes checked and so on, she decided that instead of getting the cheapest frames, which would break very easily, she would spend the money that had been given to her and buy an aluminum set of frames that cost $26. When she phoned me at five minutes to 5 o'clock on a Thursday afternoon she was almost in tears because the Ministry of Community and Social Services had told her it would not subsidize her glasses; because she had the money she could pay for the whole shot and get the cheap pair.

I managed to get in touch with the optometrist and told him to send out the glasses. I managed to get in touch with the Ministry of Community and Social Services and it was fixed up. Mrs. Jones got her glasses.

That was fine. I was glad I was able to help; but think of the agony that poor woman went through! Why should she have to suffer in that undignified way? Why should she have to come to a member to make sure that the government system worked?

The second case I want to bring to the members' attention concerns a boy about 15 or 16 years of age. Let's call him John Smith.

An hon. member: Good choice!

Mr. Foulds: He suffers from a multiple disability; I think that is the official term. He is blind and he is either extremely emotionally disturbed or retarded—and they've never been able to determine which; in this great, wonderful, rich province of ours.

He had been shuffled around to a number of institutions within the province and about last November he was sent home. His parents were unable to look after him adequately and a friend of theirs got in touch with me. After a year of struggling with red tape that boy, who has a good deal of ability—I've seen him; he had some talent from which this society could have benefited! Basically, what this society has done is hide away from the problem.

That boy, after about a year, is back in the school for retarded children at Lakehead Psychiatric Hospital, back where he started. Within their limited means at Lakehead Psychiatric Hospital school for retarded children, they are doing a fairly good job with him. But the frustration of that boy, the indignity to which his parents and he have been subjected is what anguishes me.

I want to make it clear the dignity of these people was impaired. I was glad that I was able to help them as individuals, but I resent very much making such a system devised by my Conservative friends across the way work.

It is this present economic system and the present attitude of our provincial government that are responsible for the plight of these people and the indignity in which they live. I resent making the Conservative, Liberal, callous, so-called free enterprise system, work.

It is the government across the way that devises a budget for the Ministry of Community and Social Services so that in north-western Ontario there can be only one social worker for every 375 cases. Just imagine that ratio, Mr. Speaker! The officials within the ministry, in my area at least—and that seems to be unusual—seem to be working very hard. But we are lucky, with that kind of ratio, if they can deal even with crisis situations under the circumstances.

It is this government and this government's sense of priorities that are to blame. It is more important, in the Premier's mind and in the Management Board's mind, that it keep its backbenchers happy and try to buy off the opposition members by appointing them to select committees of the Legislature, such as the ones that I sit on; and to spend more on one meal for its 11 to 14 members than the government allows for Mrs. Jones for a whole month—

Mr. Laughren: Right on!

Mr. Foulds: —than it is to provide Mrs. Jones with a decent standard of living and to allow her to live in dignity.

In the second case of the boy who is retarded, the blind boy, I wish I had the power of miracle to whisk him to Toronto and sit him here beside me and give him sight and understanding for just half an hour, so that he could sit where I sit and catch a glimpse of that complacent Conservative mob, who, by their decisions and by their sense of priorities, are in the process of condemning him to a life of frustration and anguish.

It is not just the Minister of Health who is responsible or the Minister of Community and Social Services. It is the whole cabinet and that whole government and their whole basic rotten philosophy that decides that loans to ski resorts are more important than finding funds for the genuinely disadvantaged of our society. It is the system of this government that must change, and that change must come about by replacing the present government. Those of us within the New Democratic Party know that our party is developing and has developed policies that clearly distinguish us from the complacency and the callousness and the paternalism of the other two parties who see as unworthy such people as I have just mentioned.

There is for me as for every democratic socialist, no person who is a person of no or little consequence. The people that I just mentioned in these two cases not only have a right to human dignity and decency, they have a contribution to make to our society. We, as a society, will be the poorer unless we allow these people to make their rightful contribution and to take their rightful place in our society.

Mr. Speaker, the present government has failed them abysmally. Thank you.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Stokes: I guess this party is the only one that has something substantial to say.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): And says it well.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Like a grind organ, it would go on 24 hours a day. Just crank the handle.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Ontario budget for 1972-1973, which was delivered with such bombast from the former provincial Treasurer (Mr. McKeough), is a masterpiece of government juggling. I can just imagine the kind of smoke-filled back-room conference that must have taken place prior to bringing down that budget. I picture several economists laying before the former Treasurer a number of alternatives to raising the required moneys. I picture the former Treasurer scanning them with a rather displeased look on his face as his economists fidget nervously, wondering what his reaction would be. The former Treasurer would finish his scowling, scowl into space for a few minutes and then say, "Okay, but change a couple of things. Get rid of those progressive tax increases on income. What do you want to do? Kill incentive?"

In that scenario we have the philosophy of the treasurers of this government—providing incentives to the private sector while clobbering the public sector. How else can one explain the total lack of tax increases to the private sector? Indeed, there was even a tax cut in one case. I refer to the logging tax. At the same time, taxes are raised for individuals who purchase such amenities as alcohol, recreation, cigarettes, gasoline and beer. Even more to the point, how does one explain the extraordinary windfall given to the brewers and vintners of the province? Not only were the tax increases regressive, but also they automatically provided increased profits to the private sector. Truly extraordinary!

While this government has been calling for the privatization of our economy, at the same time it has been intervening more and more in the affairs of the province. I refer to something which is the Sudbury regional government. It should be intervening more in our resource industries and decentralizing the other levels of government because, as surely even the former Treasurer must know, the capitalist system is not a full employment system and it is not a system designed to benefit the greatest number of people. As employment grows, as it becomes ever more evident that our problem is distribution of resources and not production, the government will be forced to become more and more involved in the planning of the economy.

In the northern part of Ontario we have witnessed the private sector behave in the most rational way possible. For years the firms up there have served the economic system with unswerving loyalty, with only one goal and one incentive—the maximization of profits. That, of course, is perfectly natural. They are playing the game according to the rules. To expect them to do otherwise would be naive.

The results have been as predictable as their behaviour. With tax concessions, a woefully inadequate resource tax and virtually no restraints on their wilful pollution of the environment, they have amassed billions of dollars of profit. And if they decided that they would cease operations there this year, they would simply do just that.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Right.

Mr. Laughren: And they would do it if it would maximize their profits.

Mr. Stokes: 'Twas ever thus.

Mr. Laughren: When a layoff occurs, the corporation is protecting its profits, and the taxpayers pick up the tab for supporting the unemployed miners. What kind of justice is that? Why isn't there legislation to protect the jobs of these workers? Is there nothing that needs to be done that these workers could be gainfully employed at? Are the societal costs of providing unemployment insurance or welfare of up to $100 a week more than would be the cost of providing employment at $150 a week? And actually with the minimum wage in this province of $1.65 an hour, a man's income would be only $66 a week; so why not raise the minimum wage to $2.50 an hour and provide jobs? There's no reference at all to that in the budget.

If the federal government is too wrapped up in its 19th century Liberal ideology, why does this government not take the initiative and create an employment insurance fund, one in which funds accumulate for the purpose of providing jobs? Every employer could be assessed a portion, based on the number of employees. Who knows, it might even be an incentive for firms such as Inco to keep their employees on the job with environmental tasks when and if the market was soft for their products. Think of the political advantage for a government that established an employment fund. And, of even more significance, think of the advantage of having a fully employed work force.

It is with some hesitation that I make these suggestions, because if this government ever did consult with itself and decided to do some of the things I suggest, I suspect it would end up with a distorted programme anyway, because this government has no equal when it comes to taking a socialist programme such as Medicare, giving the private sector a piece of the action and then taking credit for it as an example of progressive legislation. No-fault auto insurance is another example: The government institutes no-fault insurance for about 15 per cent of the claims, then proudly boasts that it has introduced no-fault auto insurance.

This government exhibits Pavlovian responses to resources and taxes. When it sees a resource it says, "Sell it," and when it sees a corporation tax it says, "Cut it." I am sure that the entire cabinet salivates at the most obscure suggestion that our economy should be reprivatized. Given free reign, this province would have education and the military returned to the private sector.

The most disturbing aspect of the budget was the increase in tuition fees for post-secondary students. This government has, on one hand, given the corporations another $125 million tax credit and, on the other, raised tuition fees by $21 million. Indeed, the $125 million would have allowed the government to move substantially toward the elimination of tuition fees entirely. Instead, we have the opposite. As a matter of fact, even one-half of that tax credit would have allowed tuition fees to have been almost totally eliminated.

I suppose winning 78 seats last year gave the government members the impression that they are invulnerable and allows them to move toward the elitist society they would like to see in this province. May I remind them that 45 per cent of the vote is no mandate to do as they please. They may be the elite, but the people they are elected to govern are not. I might add that putting so many of their backbenchers over here, on our left, is a clever move on the part of the old guard, because otherwise I suspect they would be spending a lot of time looking over their shoulders. This budget has pleased only those from where this government derives financial support, not those who have voted for it, or in some cases, even formed part of the government.

The increase in tuition fees is compounded by two factors: 1. The decrease in grants as a proportion of the total assistance available (raising the loan portion from $600 to $800 was a niggling thing to do and just puts further into debt those whose family income is at or below average); 2. The lack of jobs for students last summer was no secret—and the government must have been aware of this when the budget was drawn up. In the Sudbury basin there were approximately 1,700 fewer jobs last summer than in previous years.

This government's attitude toward post-secondary education is reactionary indeed. From university government to student financing, to access to facilities such as the Robarts library, there seems to be a lack of understanding of the changes that are occurring in our society in spite of this government.

It is safe to say that people today regard a post-secondary education as a right for everyone, not just those from upper income families, and the argument that loans and grants are available is a stupid argument. Increased fees and larger loans are plain and simply deterrents to students from average and below-average income families.

This budget reflects the whole rhetoric on accessibility that the Wright report reflected and we know how everyone feels about that report. Any form of student financing that leaves only one group of graduates with a large debt is regressive and reactionary, if not downright elitist.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Good point.

Mr. Laughren: Moving from education, I would like to deal with a specific sector of the province: the resources sector. Before I criticize or offer alternative programmes, let me lay some facts before this assembly.

According to the latest annual statistical report on mineral production, the total value of all mineral output since mining began in Ontario amounts to almost $24 billion. By 1970 the annual production was almost $1.6 billion—for one year alone, 1970—and of all the metallic minerals produced, 98.9 per cent was produced in northern Ontario. If we apply that percentage to the total produced since mining began, we get a whopping $23 billion of minerals that have been mined in northern Ontario, with the Sudbury basin contributing in excess of two-thirds of that, or over $15.5 billion.

Come up to Sudbury and see if you can see any legacy of that wealth—is there a legacy in the form of office complexes, highways, municipal services, cultural activities? You will see none of those.

In one year alone, in 1970, the value of economic production in the Sudbury region was over $929 million and in that same year the total mining and acreage taxes paid to the province by the mining industry totalled slightly over $25 million. So from the $929 million value of economic production, the province obtained about $25 million.

The total tax bill for the industry was more than that, of course. It was over $46 million. But this was, I make note, based on a calendar year rather than a fiscal year, so you can't really compare the two figures. The province got a little more than $31 million in total and the federal government about $14.5 million, and that includes the taxes paid to municipalities.

So, from a total mineral production in 1970 of almost $1.6 billion, the province and the municipalities received $31 million, or slightly less than two per cent of the value of minerals produced, and in total the industry was taxed at a three per cent rate.

Mr. Foulds: Shame!

Mr. Laughren: During the same year they paid those taxes, they paid dividends of more than $210 million.

I am deliberately using taxes expressed as a percentage of production rather than profit, because that term has become meaningless. In 1970, the International Nickel Co. earned over $94 million in profit and paid no corporation income tax whatsoever. The number of write-offs, depletion allowances, exploration and development allowances and deferred tax allowances is such that the term "profit" really has become meaningless.

Of course, those who rush to the defence of either the mining industry or this government will claim that what really is important is the number of jobs provided by the industry. Let's examine—

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): They fill a lot of bread baskets.

Mr. Laughren: Yes—let's examine that. Let's just look at the number of jobs provided.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): The member for Algoma has done it again!

Mr. Laughren: In 1961 there were 34,203 production mine workers in Ontario and they mined over 72 million tons of ore, or 2,108 tons per employee. That was in 1961. In 1970, the number of employees had dropped from 34,203 to 29,390—a decrease of 14 per cent—while the tons mined increased to almost 96 million tons of ore, or 3,263.2 tons per employee.

So employment has decreased by 14 per cent while the value of ore mined has increased by 19 per cent. To put it another way, productivity has gone up by over 54 per cent and the member opposite brags about the number of bread baskets in this province that the mining industry fills. He had better check the statistics before he sounds off. He doesn't know what he is talking about.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Laughren: When it comes to processing, it is bad enough that we do not use our minerals as a source of finished products in this province, but not even to refine them here before shipping them out is a disgrace. In 1970, for example, 100 per cent of all nickel mined in Ontario was smelted here, but only 56 per cent was refined here. This is adding insult to injury if you know anything about the mining processes—

Mr. Gilbertson: But then look at the—

Mr. Laughren: —because the smelting process is the polluting one while the refining process is relatively clean.

Mr. Foulds: Good point.

Mr. Laughren: There is just no excuse for allowing International Nickel or Falconbridge, for example, to refine any of their ores elsewhere. Section 113 of the Mining Act is a sham. That particular section states, of course, and I quote subsection 1:

All lands claimed or mining rights patented, leased or otherwise disposed of under this or any other Act or by any authority whatsoever are subject to the condition that all ores or minerals raised or removed therefrom, shall be treated and refined in Canada, so as to yield refined metal or other products suitable for direct use in the arts without further treatment.

Then subsection 2 goes on to say:

The Lieutenant Governor in Council may exempt any lands, claims or mining rights from the operation of this section for such period of time as seems proper.

End of quote. Amen. So the province is governed by ministerial discretion once more and not by legislation.

Mr. Foulds: And a very indiscreet minister he is too.

Mr. Laughren: He certainly is. He should be ashamed of himself. I find the refining of nickel elsewhere particularly annoying since the mining giants are well established, rich and of sufficient size and sophistication to be able to refine the nickel here. Since mining began in Ontario, in excess of $6.8 billion worth of nickel has been produced, almost 27 per cent of the total value of all minerals produced in this province. The nickel mining companies are well established and profitable. To have continued to allow them to process their ores elsewhere just cannot be justified. A publicly owned refinery should have been built in the Sudbury area years ago. Such a refinery could have been used as a prototype for pollution control and at the same time would have given the province and the people of this province a piece of the action.

Mr. Foulds: Right.

Mr. Laughren: But the mentality of those in the mining industry is such that they see only as far as the margin on their balance sheet. Mr. J. H. Stovel, president of the Ontario Mining Association, speaking at the association's 53rd annual general meeting on Tuesday, May 2, 1972, said:

We cannot simply say to world buyers, as many economic nationalists would have us say, "We will sell you finished or semi-finished metals instead of concentrate, like it or lump it." If we took such a posture many buyers would go elsewhere. Certain European countries are favourably disposed to buying refined metals from us, but only if we also supply them with concentrate for their own smelters.

What Mr. Stovel is saying, bless his little high-grading heart, is that we who have the resource are being dictated to by those who need it. And why do those countries want concentrate for their smelters? Well, I suspect it is because of the jobs that processing provides. This government needs a few lessons in poker playing. The odds are high. Our resources are nonrenewable and our unemployment level is high. We simply must get more finished products and jobs out of our resources.

Mr. J. E. Worley—he is also from the Ontario Mining Association—expressed the industry's concern in a different way from Mr. Stovel. He said:

In 1970 our total mineral exports were valued at more than $5.5 billion, or approximately 30 per cent of the total exports. Such efforts by our mineral industry ensured that this country was able to purchase from other nations—the US, Japan, Great Britain and many others—the products that add immeasurably to our standard of living.

Mr. Worley is proud of that export figure of $5.5 billion and 30 per cent of our exports. Well, I'm not. To ship our minerals out of this country on this grand scale is stupid. Mr. Worley is quite right, of course, when he says that our exports allow us to purchase from other nations. What do we purchase? Finished products. But we ship out unfinished resources, exploited by a capital intensive industry, and trade them for finished products made by labour intensive industries, and our government leaders and economists claim we have to learn to live with high unemployment!

I suggested earlier that Mr. Stovel, of the Ontario Mining Association, had a high-grading heart. I meant it, and the term applies to Mr. Worley too—and to all those other 19th century ministers of the Crown and mandarins who still insist that we cannot process our resources here. They are high-grading from the Canadian people and in particular the Ontario people, because more is being taken out of the ground and out of the province and out of the country than is being returned to the people of this country, this province, or the communities from whence came those minerals.

For years the giants of the mineral industry have held a gun to the head of the Canadian people. That gun was loaded with threats of mine closures, mining ghost towns and unfavourable balance of trade—and even a plunge on international markets of the Canadian dollar. But that gun was loaded with blanks; and this government should call their bluff. This government should move quickly and firmly to end, once and for all, the high-grading of our resources—I might add, primarily by foreign-controlled corporations—not that that would bother this government.

At a time when the economy in southern Ontario is sophisticated and highly technical, it does not make sense to be exporting two-thirds of all metal commodities in ore and concentrate form, as opposed to one-third in refined metal and alloy form. In 1971, Ontario exported almost 80 per cent—79.1 to be exact—of its total metals production.

The economy of northern Ontario continues to rely almost entirely on natural resources; and what is unusual is that the southern part of the province does not rely on the north for its development or continued growth. The resources of the north are not sold to the south—they are primarily sold on world markets rather than servicing the industrialized south of this province.

The missing links between the resource-rich north and the industrialized south is a provincial industrial strategy. We have no such planning in this province. Rather we have a programme of sporadic, irrational incentives that encourage development without proper long-range planning—an official plan, as it were.

Tax incentives to industries, such as the 5 per cent credit on the purchase of new machinery, forgoes $125 million a year in tax revenue with no visible results and, indeed, without any specific objective other than somehow to create jobs. The objective is to create jobs—but where, in what industries? And are they jobs in which there now exists a surplus labour pool? There are no answers to those questions.

The Ontario Development Corp. provides incentives through loans and grants, but here too there is an abysmal lack of planning. Since 1967, when the ODC began granting performance loans, over $45 million has been lent to various business enterprises. Of that, 85.1 per cent went to southern Ontario creating in excess, they tell us, of 20,000 jobs there—as opposed to only 2,124 jobs in the north.

It is not just the fact that 85 per cent of the money went to the south that is so shortsighted, it is the absence of a strategy in the granting of those loans that is inexcusable. As the situation now stands, the company with the best sales pitch gets the loan; not the company whose plans best mesh with the province's industrial strategy.

I have an industrial strategy in mind, and it is not just regional in scope. Rather it is a strategy to create jobs, to offer Ontario the opportunity to become at least somewhat more economically independent and to best exploit our natural resources.

Since this province is endowed with enormous mineral wealth, its economy should be guided toward and by a policy of integrating our exploitation of resources with a comprehensive industrial base. It is absurd to continue to have industrial activity thriving in the south and resources development in the north, with virtually no connecting link. The location of our resources is not a deterrent to their sale on world markets. This is obvious since it is where they are presently sold and have been sold for years.

Similarly, the manufacture of medium and heavy industry commodities in the north would have a world market—and similarly geography would not be a deterrent. Obviously, such a policy could not be accomplished overnight and probably would require federal co-operation. The obligation is for Ontario to provide the thrust since the resources belong to the province. Also, the entire mining industry could not concurrently be integrated with a new industrial sector but at least a beginning could be made with one or two metals. If the metal selected were nickel, the potential would be remarkable.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Right!

Mr. Laughren: The sale of nickel is not dependent on any one industrial or consumer item—

Mr. Foulds: Listen to this!

Mr. Laughren:—nor does any one country make up an overwhelming proportion of the mineral demand. The demand is world-wide. In 1970, nickel consumption by end-use markets demonstrated the diversity to which nickel is put. The end-use markets, for example, are: machinery and transportation, 16 per cent of the total nickel consumed; automotive, 14 per cent; electronics industry, 12 per cent; chemical industry, eight per cent; petroleum, eight per cent; process industries, seven per cent; aircraft, six per cent; energy conversion systems, four per cent; marine industries, three per cent; architecture, three per cent; coinage, two per cent, and other uses, eight per cent.

Mr. Foulds: Can't get more diversified than that.

Mr. Laughren: Not only is nickel in great demand because of its flexibility, its markets will probably expand. I quote from the 1970 annual statistical report on mineral production for Ontario:

Several end-use nickel markets are expected to grow rapidly in the 1970's, including gas pipelines made of nickel alloy steels; liquid natural gas transport equipment of nine per cent and 36 per cent nickel steels and stainless steels; vehicular gas turbines utilizing nickel-based super alloys; nuclear power generators with stainless steel and high nickel alloy components; and desalination plants requiring copper-nickel alloys.

Sintered nickel steels will open new markets in the automotive and appliance industries, providing higher levels of strength and toughness while at the same time achieving the manufacturing economies of the powder metallurgy process. Stainless steel is expected to be used increasingly as a structural material because of its high strength properties combined with outstanding corrosion resistance and beauty.

Finally, with the growing emphasis on environmental control, nickel will find increased markets in a great variety of pollution abatement equipment.

There appears to be no doubt whatsoever that the market for nickel is substantial and will continue to grow, and this province must begin to do more with that market than supply it with ore or concentrates.

These ores are non-renewable and unless they are used as a lever to open up world markets for finished products manufactured here, we shall leave a legacy in the north of pollution, open pits and, eventually, unemployment. I say unemployment because unless we develop an integrated economy, other cheaper sources of minerals will be exploited at the expense of Ontario sources.

If we hang our hat on only the resources, there is no reason for a buyer to purchase Ontario ores if they can be purchased from Indonesia where mining costs are less. But if we develop a manufacturing industry around those resources, we shall be competing not just against ore prices, but in world-wide markets for a number of finished products.

Now to be specific. I propose that this government do the following—or at least consider the following alternatives and only one of them is radical:

1. The proper taxing of our resource industries so that at least we get more from the corporations than a payroll. For too long we have exported resources representing one-quarter of the jobs represented by the same value of manufactured goods we import. In other words, we export four jobs while we keep one.

2. An end to the tax concessions now granted the resource industries. Depletion allowances should be granted only if they protect the community and the company employees from a future shutdown. Depletion allowances must be regarded as insurance for the working people and others in the community as well as for the resource industry. Exploration write-offs must be earned and depreciation allowances made more realistic.

3. A serious attempt to integrate our resources with manufacturing in northern Ontario—the goal, world markets. A long-run industrial strategy based on employment requirements as well as balance of payments considerations is desirable and, I believe, entirely possible.

4. A deliberate and determined programme for public ownership of our natural resources.

Certainly alternatives one to three should be implemented as an interim measure since it is not acceptable to continue to allow the resource industries to pay taxes at the current rate. It would be insufficient to return control of our resources to the people of Ontario, unless it was for the purposes outlined earlier, namely, to provide the province with a more economically independent economy to act as a lever in the integration of our resources with a manufacturing sector, and thus provide employment in a labour-intensive industry.

In summation, the government should be regarded as the guardian of our province's resources, whether those be human or natural. To allow them to be unduly exploited is shameful. This government is presiding over the depletion of our resources and is paying the corporations to do just that.

There is an economic concept known as optimum output. That is when the marginal revenue derived by a firm as a result of producing another unit of output is equal to the marginal cost of producing that extra unit. Our resources should be managed in exactly the same way.

Who would believe that the resource corporations have been taxed to their utmost? Has resource taxation reached a level at which even the slightest tax increase would prompt them to offer their resources to the province, since they could no longer function as a profit-making enterprise?

It is obvious that the resource corporations are very rich, very powerful and very under-taxed. It is also obvious that this government is responsible for the balmy years enjoyed by those same corporations. It is time the people of this province received some benefit from that which rightly belongs to them.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Middlesex South.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to say a few words regarding the budget of our government.

I think when we look at the budget of our government today we see spending that no one would have suspected 10 years ago. There has been a dramatic increase because of public services that we have been called on to supply in this province. I feel that it's something that we can't take lightly. On one hand, you have people suggesting that we should be spending money for more services. On the other hand, you have people complaining because their taxes are too high. It's certainly a problem to get that delicate balance of getting the resources and placing them in the right place to do the proper service for the public of Ontario.

Some of the ideas shot out from our members across the way are great in theory. Unfortunately—

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): And in practice, too.

Mr. Eaton: that's what they mostly are— theory. Just like the last two speakers, I suppose, being teachers and spending their day in a classroom, they never had to get out in the work-a-day world, do business from day to day—

Mr. Foulds: Ever work in a pulp mill?

Mr. Eaton: —meet a payroll—

Mr. Foulds: Ever work on a railway? Where has the member got his hands dirty?

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): It makes a difference.

Mr. Eaton: —and answer to people for millions of dollars—

Mr. Foulds: The member is darn right it does. We know about it, too.

Mr. Eaton: —worth of business in a day-to-day business—

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Why doesn't the member get back to the budget? He should get back to the budget.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): He is on the budget.

Mr. Renwick: He is on surer ground if he attacks the budget rather than attacking us.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Eaton: I guess they don't like to have a little bit of their own back, eh?

Mr. Renwick: We are glad to have it from somebody who knows how to dish it out.

Mr. Gilbertson: It doesn't sound right, though.

Mr. Eaton: Theory is great. They can stand there and offer much of it, but when somebody hits it, they—

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Name one. Name a great one.

Mr. Eaton: —get very concerned about it.

Mr. Foulds: Fear of gravity is pretty strong.

Mr. Eaton: Anyway, I have a few subjects in the budget that I would like to touch on. They are things that concern me, items that I would like to see concentrated on perhaps a little more.

Mr. R. Haggerty (Welland South): Now for the bad news.

Mr. Eaton: One in particular in our area, that concerns me and concerns the entire province, is that of associations for the mentally retarded. We have a workshop in our area that provides schooling and an opportunity for children to stay in their own community. At the present time, the only support they can get is up to 25 per cent of their budget.

If we were to provide more in this particular field, I'm sure that it would be well spent in workshops in local communities. It would allow many more to stay in their community and have an opportunity to do their studying, to learn to live in the world around them from day to day, rather than be put in institutions such as Cedar Springs, where the cost is much higher and the child is taken away from his home. So I would like to see our government concentrate more on providing some of these facilities for the local communities.

I will also touch on our conservation authorities. We have seen a tightening in the budget of our conservation authorities this past year, and in our area the authorities have done a tremendous job. They've made facilities available for the urbanite from a particular centre, like the city of London, and they have sometimes provided this by volunteer work within the conservation authority by those in the rural communities. I feel that when we have this type of dedication the government should certainly be putting support behind it. I would certainly like to see more support for our conservation authorities.

I would like to touch for a moment on the Ontario Development Corp. A number of loans have come into our area to support industries. They have done a great deal for two or three of the communities into which they have come. They have made the town of Strathroy a place where unemployment is unknown; it's an area that's actually deficient in workers at the present time.

I feel that this scheme should be expanded to many areas, but we should be looking beyond just giving a loan. We should be looking to the area of financing industrial assistance through guaranteed bank loans. Get the local companies to deal with the banks in their own communities. Get us out of the position of having to have the funds to finance certain industries.

Mr. Haggerty: Try and get it out of the banks though.

Mr. Eaton: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Haggerty: Try and get it out of the banks.

Mr. Eaton: I think we can get it into the hands of the banks if we can guarantee the loans. The cost that would be incurred because of cases where we might have losses would not compare with the present cost of raising funds, tying up funds, interest, and providing people to check these loans over when we have the bank facilities already available.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): The banks don't do it for nothing. They made $230 million last year.

Mr. Foulds: We can do it cheaper.

Mr. Eaton: You know, I hear this quite a bit: "We can do it cheaper." I have yet to see on item that the government can do cheaper and I don't care whether it is the Liberal government, a Conservative government, or an NDP government.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): This government is the greatest—

Mr. Stokes: They are making Ontario Hydro a Crown corporation.

Mr. MacDonald: It is undermining the democratic process, it has so little faith in it.

Mr. Eaton: I have yet to see things that we can do in government that private enterprise cannot do cheaper and more efficiently—

Mr. MacDonald: Take a look at hospital insurance.

Mr. Laughren: Three dollars for Manitoba; $22 here.

Mr. Eaton: —where a person has a stake in his day to day business.

Mr. Laughren: Just look at Bell Telephone.

An hon. member: Provide jobs for the boys —government work.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: The member for Middlesex South is a backbencher.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Eaton: So I would certainly urge that loans put out by the Ontario Development Corp. be changed to a system of guaranteed bank loans.

Mr. Stokes: Subsidize the banks.

Mr. Laughren: Subsidize all businesses.

Mr. Eaton: I don't think they need to be subsidized.

Mr. Foulds: Right, none of them do.

Mr. Eaton: That's right. They can get out and do the job themselves if we give them the opportunity.

I would also like to touch on the Ontario Housing Corp. and—

Mr. MacDonald: Do an in-depth job on that.

Mr. Eaton: —in particular a couple of situations that involve them. It's not their housing programme; I think their housing programme has been good to an extent. I feel though that it could be improved, in a situation where we are putting all Ontario Housing Corp. houses together and almost creating another ghetto, by spreading these out, putting them in different areas and making them part of the community so that we are handling some of the social problem as well as the housing problem.

In particular, I would like to dwell on the Public Works Creditors Act, which has involved a number of situations with the Ontario Housing Corp. I think of one instance in particular in my own area where the bankruptcy took place of a company that was a subcontractor for a contractor doing a job for Ontario Housing Corp. What a schemozzle! You know, we post a sign that says we guarantee the workers' money—

Mr. Haggerty: Get after the Ministry of Labour.

Mr. Eaton: I've been after them. Don't worry, they know about this one.

Then we come along to a situation where the Bankruptcy Act comes into effect, as inept as it is—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): That has to be federal.

Mr. Eaton: It is. The hon. member knows that; he knows the problems with it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Ah, that's it!

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): I knew he would get to them!

Mr. Eaton: But to get back to this particular case, we have a lawyer in the Ontario Housing Corp.—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Oh, that is bad!

Mr. Eaton: —who says there are 90 days in which to file a claim, so the chap writes in and files it. Fine. He knows it will be looked after, and it gets put off and off—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That sounds like the Ontario Housing Corp. office.

Mr. Eaton: That's it; that's the one! We can be critical of our own too when we see something wrong, just like the hon. member should be critical of the federal government—

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): We don't claim infallibility!

Mr. Eaton: Anyway, because it happens to be a subcontractor they say the Bankruptcy Act takes over and the Public Works Creditors Act means nothing.

Well, if we're going to post that sign where a job is being done for the Ontario government then it should mean something. It should take precedence, and the money the government is withholding from the contractor should see that those workmen are paid for their wages.

Just in the last month another one has come to my attention; this one involves about 55 people.

Mr. Haggerty: All in the member's area?

Mr. Eaton: No, the jobs are down in my friend's riding; perhaps he should know about this one. Why doesn't he?

Anyway, there are two companies involved doing work for the Ministry of the Environment. It's the same sort of deal: a subcontractor is going broke and the Ontario Public Works Creditors Act does not apply. I feel this should be straightened out so that it has some effect to protect the workmen in these cases.

I would also like to mention one of the offshoots of the government, the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Mr. Laughren: Offshoot?

Mr. MacDonald: It's not an offshoot; it's the dominant group. They are running the government.

Mr. Eaton: I think we have too many of these little offshoots.

The Workmen's Compensation Board is doing an excellent job of providing protection in many cases—

Mr. Laughren: Name just one.

Mr. Eaton: —but they get tied up in little detailed things that put the workman on a basis where he is treated almost like a second-class citizen. He has to go down on his hands and knees to get assistance.

Mr. Haggerty: It's got to stop!

Mr. Eaton: Every time you call them up about something, they say, "We'll get that straightened out for you." The next thing you know you've got a big letter with a whole bunch of excuses in it as to why they can't do it.

Mr. Haggerty: We have the same trouble too.

Mr. Eaton: I feel that the way the board is set up we should have some more direct input to it from this Legislature. Perhaps we should have a member sitting on that board so that he can be in direct contact with the members of this House.

Mr. Foulds: The member for Wellington-Dufferin (Mr. Root)!

Mr. Laughren: We will support the hon. member if he wants to abolish it.

Mr. Eaton: The hon. member would move to abolish the Workmen's Compensation Board, a board that serves the workmen of this province—

Mr. Laughren: It serves the employers of this province, not the workmen.

Mr. Eaton: —better than any programme to assist injured workmen in this world?

An hon. member: Oh yeah?

Mr. Eaton: It's a good programme but it has its deficiencies.

Mr. Laughren: It's a guarantee against civil suits by the employers.

Mr. MacDonald: Is there a Tory back-bencher free to take a seat on the Workmen's Compensation Board?

Mr. Eaton: Many of them—any of them!

Mr. MacDonald: I'm glad to learn there are one or two free agents around.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): We might put the member for Sudbury East on it.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Eaton: There are a couple of other points I would like to get to—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Eaton: —first of all, concerning the effect of the budget on the Ministry of Agriculture. You know, it is one of the most important industries that we have in this province. It is the least subsidized of any agriculture in the world—

Mr. Haggerty: The member doesn't believe that?

Mr. Eaton: I know that for a fact.

Mr. Laughren: The next minister of agriculture.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Does he get that job by divine right?

Mr. Eaton: We get more food for an hour's work today—and you can name any commodity—than we did 10 years ago. Tell me any other industry that has shown that amount of development.

Mr. Martel: Why is the department so shafted then?

Mr. Eaton: But, you know, squeezes are put on agriculture. I'd like to point out some of the things that have come into effect this year which shouldn't have because of squeezes on budget. First of all, a fee has been put on lab service to farmers in Ontario because of budgetary restraints by this government.

Mr. Stokes: Is that good?

Mr. Eaton: No, it's not, that is what I am saying. It is a most important item to farmers in Ontario because the very health of the industry is at stake. One could take an animal in before and have it tested and checked out if something happened to it. Now one can go in, have this done and end up with a cost of $15 for taking in a little pig that might be worth $10. Some of the farmers are avoiding doing it.

Mr. Foulds: It isn't covered by Medicare?

Mr. Eaton: I think it is important to our health standards that a service like this is carried on so they won't avoid it.

Mr. Martel: Does the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Stewart) ever listen to the member?

Mr. Handleman: All the time.

Mr. Eaton: I would also like to touch on the gift tax that this province has imposed on the agricultural industry. I think it is most important that changes be made here. When the federal government had it there was an exemption of $10,000. Now there is an exemption of $10,000 at the maximum; the most one can give any one person in a year is $2,000. I feel that this should be raised to within the area of $20,000 a year by this government—

Mr. Martel: Is that a free enterprise aspect?

Mr. Eaton: —because this was one of the standard ways of passing on a family farm, and one of the most important ways of financing a new setup for a young fellow who was receiving it from his father.

I know of many cases in my own community in which a father has given his son the first $20,000 of the farm and he has been able to finance the rest through the farm credit. In this way the father got his money out of it and was able to retire properly, and the son was able to get a foundation to finance that farm operation and keep it in the family.

I certainly believe that something should be done to change this and make a gift tax available to farms. In fact, I would go beyond that and say it should be available to small family business. There are many businesses in Ontario which are in the same boat; there has been a father and son building it up and they can't transfer it properly.

Mr. Foulds: Like the T. Eaton Co.

Mr. Eaton: Yes, that would be a good idea!

Mr. Martel: Is that a free enterprise concept?

Mr. Handleman: It's to stop foreign take-overs, the member knows that!

Mr. Eaton: I would also like to bring out an item regarding highways that concerns my particular area. We have a programme in around the city of London to put a bypass in. There has been considerable controversy as to where this bypass will go.

Some people say it should go through the city; some people say it is a bypass that goes around the edge of the city. The councillors last time voted nine to eight to put it through the city. I think today they would probably vote differently and next week they would probably vote differently again.

Mr. Haggerty: Where should it go?

Mr. Eaton: I suggested it should go around the south edge of the city and that we should provide a spur into the industrial area of the city of London. It means a difference in the cost of nearly $23 million. I think it is important at this time, when we are looking at budgetary restraints, that we restrain ourselves in this particular case and put the bypass around the edge of the city, where it should be. Put an industrial spur in there and save this money. Perhaps with that amount saved, we will have some money to spend on some other roads in the county where it is needed—such as the extension of Highway 73 to Highway 2 and the repaving of Highway 81, which is now the main link between Highway 401 and Sarnia.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Which one goes past the member's farm?

Mr. Eaton: Highway 401 does right now. I am sitting in fine shape for getting on a highway.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Would the hon. member find this a convenient place to adjourn the debate?

Mr. Eaton moves adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' HOUR: MUNICIPALITY OF METROPOLITAN TORONTO ACT

Mr. Givens moves second reading of Bill 19 intitled, An Act to amend the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act.

Mr. P. G. Givens (York-Forest Hill): Mr. Speaker, I think that it is fitting and propitious that this bill should be discussed today. Its purpose is to change the title of the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto Council to mayor of Metropolitan Toronto and to provide that the holder of that office shall be elected at large by the voters in Metropolitan Toronto.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board of Cabinet): Mayor of all the people.

Mr. Givens: The mayor of all the people. The "big daddy" of the metropolitan corporation—a contiguous area of 240 square miles, with a spirit and with a character and with an ethos all its own.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Greatest city in North America.

Mr. Givens: There are many elections taking place today in the various boroughs. There is supposedly one city of Toronto with a population something like 700,000—whatever figures I discuss today, Mr. Speaker, of course are approximate; they aren't exact figures.

There is one city called the city of Toronto, which is really a borough today—and five boroughs ranging in population from about 80,000 to some 450,000.

I suggest that most of the elections that are taking place today are rather irrelevant. In very few instances when you talk to people do they really know who is running for office in their particular boroughs. Very few know their candidates. Everything is zeroed in on the mayoralty race of the city of Toronto.

I know people in North York where I live and in other boroughs who know more about the relative merits or demerits of the candidates running for mayor in the city of Toronto than they know about the candidates of their own boroughs. They regard the candidates who run in the city of Toronto as their leaders, as their spokesmen; and they are not that at all.

And these mayoralty candidates in the various boroughs get up and they make all kinds of promises which are pompous and which are presumptuous. Because in the vast majority of cases they haven't the power nor the jurisdiction nor the wherewithal to carry out the promises that they make and they know it. Because the jurisdiction lies in most cases with the Metropolitan corporation, and in many cases right here in this chamber—and they know it.

You get the big wiseacres like the "gold dust twins" of radio station CKEY, Pierre Berton and Chuck Templeton. One of them is a millionaire who lives in Kleinburg, and who hasn't got a vote in the city of Toronto. The other one is a country squire who lives in Clarkson, and who also hasn't got a vote in the city of Toronto. I confirmed that with one of them today.

They have been spending day after day, in broadcast after broadcast, talking about the mayoralty in the city of Toronto—and they have nothing to do with it. They can influence it with their rhetoric, but they can't influence it with their vote. They can't affect by one jot nor tittle the mayoralty race of the city of Toronto.

The newspapers have been doing the same thing, and the television stations—and the radio stations. For the vast majority of the time they have been concentrating on the mayoralty race of the city of Toronto. They think it affects them, and it doesn't affect them at all.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: This is where they make their money.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): What is the member for Grey-South (Mr. Winkler) talking about? He tried to run the vote in Owen Sound this year.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Where did that voice come from?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): From under a rock.

Mr. Givens: And the reason I speak this way, Mr. Speaker, is because Metro Toronto today, to all intents and purposes, is the city. Metro Toronto is the integral social, economic, financial, cultural and political unit of this city today. When somebody who lives in Scarborough, or North York, or East York goes south or goes anywhere else, and somebody asks him where he comes from, he says, "I come from Toronto," because if he told him he came from Leaside or Agincourt they wouldn't know where it was. So Toronto today is the integral social, political, economic, financial and cultural centre. This is not the same as any other region in this province where you have a mix of urban and rural. There is no urban-rural mix in Metro Toronto any more. This has disappeared; this has completely changed.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Especially since—

Mr. Givens: The borough mayors today are really the administrators of the various localities, and should be called the chairmen of their boroughs and not the mayors, because all they do is administer the laws and the bylaws of their particular municipality. Their particular municipalities today are not where decisions are being made. All they are is fixers of curbs and fillers of potholes and collectors of garbage and taxes and hewers of wood and drawers of water. They collect garbage, but they don't even dispose of it. That has become a Metropolitan problem today.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): They ship it north.

Mr. Givens: The real head of Metro, the real leader of this community, if you accept my premise that Metropolitan Toronto is an integral solid community today, is the chairman of the Metropolitan corporation. He's the real head and he's supposed to be the leader, but he isn't that at all.

It is undemocratic, I suggest with great respect, that the man who wields this power should be non-elected. The mayor of Toronto can't fulfil this function or the mayor of North York, or of any of the other boroughs. None of them fulfil this particular role, nor does the chairman of Metro. Oh, you have these local loyalties of East York and Leaside, and you'll always have them, but the big decisions and the big planning and the big moves are made in Metropolitan Toronto.

Metro today has a population which is larger than that of eight of the provinces of this country. Prince Edward Island has 150,000 people or thereabouts. It has a premier and a party government and an opposition and a chief justice and a lieutenant governor, and all that. I suppose we have to have Prince Edward Island because to whom else would you promise that a causeway should be built?

You're choosing a chairman to run a store. The assessment of this area today runs to about $7 billion, and you know what a conservative estimate that is. You can multiply that by a factor of six or seven and you wouldn't be doing it an injustice.

The current budget of Metro today runs to about $350 million. The capital budget runs to about $150 million. That is a budget of about $150 million capital and about $500 million in total, current and capital. It is more than the budgets administered by eight of the Premiers of this country.

The Premiers have to get elected. They get chosen by their conventions by hundreds of their party faithful that then have to go out and put their stamp of approval on their particular candidates, just like this Premier (Mr. Davis) has to do. But the chairman of the Metropolitan corporation doesn't have to do that.

Seventeen men will foregather on Jan. 9. You may get 17 men or women who don't even know one another, because half the members of last year's council will not be there this year because of resignations or because they declined to run or because of withdrawals or retirements. They will get together to choose a chairman who will administer the budgets that I've indicated to you.

I think that this is wrong. These 17 people who are elected aren't elected directly to Metro. They are elected by a lottery. There will be 11 aldermen from the city of Toronto today who will be sitting on the Metro council. Nobody knows who these 11 will be until you hear the results tonight. Each ward elects two aldermen and the top guy sits on Metro, and they don't know who it is going to be.

None of these people is elected to serve the whole area at all. Each one serves his particular parochial interest. He comes from ward 3 in Toronto, or ward 5 in North York, or ward 6 in Scarborough, or someplace else, and none of them, not even the members of the board of control, represent the whole area. They represent their particular area.

We are, of course, elected from our particular areas, but we have a collective responsibility because of our party structure and because of our cabinet structure, and they don't have that there. Under our Act, the law says that the man who is chosen as chairman can be chosen from the council or off the council.

I suggest to you, with great respect, Mr. Speaker, that there will be grass growing down the middle of Yonge St. before the metropolitan council chooses a man off their council, because it doesn't serve their purpose to do so. It serves their purpose to pick somebody from their council, because if they don't, they have to admit to themselves that there isn't anybody capable enough from that council to do the job—and they'll never admit that.

Besides, it doesn't create any kind of a political movement. If one of them moves up it creates vacancies and the log jam is undone. My friend from York West (Mr. MacBeth), who was a candidate a couple of years ago, knows what I mean.

So what are the criticisms? I am prepared to accept the chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board, a chosen chairman, sooner than I am prepared to accept a chosen chairman of the Metropolitan corporation, because at least the chairman of the Municipal Board has two large functions to perform and he owes the responsibility to the members of the cabinet, to the members of the government, who have a collective responsibility to the people of the whole province. The chairman of the Metropolitan corporation does not have this collective responsibility at all, nor does he owe his choice to anybody who has such a collective responsibility.

Now, our Premier is opposed to this because I don't think he understands Metropolitan Toronto. And what you don't understand you fear.

Mr. MacDonald: He's like Pierre Trudeau.

Mr. Givens: He lives in the semi-bucolic bliss of the town of Brampton, with a population of about 45,000, and he comes to Toronto for football games and hockey games. He knows Toronto, but I don't think he really understands it.

I think he considers Toronto really an overgrown Brampton—say a town like Brampton only 50 times larger, with the traffic problems and the pollution problems and the smell and the noise and the pressure, and so on. But he doesn't really understand it. He really doesn't want to see a strong leader representing 2¼ million people of Metropolitan Toronto, because if he had a strong leader with muscle from Metropolitan Toronto he would never have dared to abandon the Spadina Expressway, or—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Givens: —he wouldn't dare to threaten them like he did on the Spadina issue, where he told them that if they went it alone he would see that a special bill was introduced in this Legislature to keep them from doing it on their own, and that if that wouldn't stop them he would find some other way of retaliating. That is why he wouldn't want to see a strong leader for Metropolitan Toronto, and I hope somewhere within the bowels of this old building he is listening to his squawk box to what I have to say on this particular subject. And I don't think—

Mr. Sargent: He's probably smoking a cigar—

An hon. member: His bowels aren't working right now.

Mr. Givens: I don't think he and a number of other people here, Mr. Speaker, understand what a city stands for, that a city has an ethos. A city has an ethos—and I'll explain it to you. It means a spirit, it means a character, it means a feeling of substance. A city, sir, isn't just bricks and mortar and mortgages, nor even the aggregate of all the people who live in it. It has a certain characteristic, and Toronto is different from Hamilton, and Hamilton is different from Windsor, and Windsor is different from Sarnia or Ottawa.

It has this characteristic that a lot of people don't understand. It is an interrelated organic centre of life, and it cries out for a leader to lead it who understands it and who can articulate its hopes and its aspirations and its struggles and everything else. And we are depriving the people of Toronto of this kind of leadership, of this kind of feeling, which they are entitled to have.

This is quite different, as I said before, from the regional structures that we have set up in this province, where there is a difference between the urban and the rural. This is an integral whole, it's a homogeneous centre of art and culture and sports and agriculture—culture-culture and agriculture and all other kinds of culture. This is where you come to hear a symphony concert, where you come to see a football game or a hockey game. Sure, Hamilton is there too, but this is the heart of the throb, this is where the dynamism is, the capital city of this Province of Ontario, and it requires to have a leader. The chairman of Metro, who is chosen by a majority of the members of Metro, does not constitute this kind of leader.

On this criticism that it will lead to party politics, Mr. Speaker, I don't see why the election of a chairman in Metro should lead to party politics any more than the election of the mayor of Toronto has led to party politics in Toronto.

Mr. MacDonald: And if so, why worry?

Mr. Givens: And if it does lead to party politics, so what? What is so terrible about that? Maybe there's no political ideology about erecting a traffic sign but maybe there should be a party breakdown on the ideology of whether there should be highrise or urban sprawl, or whether or not we should build 70-storey buildings in the heart of the city of Toronto. Maybe we should break that down on the basis of party lines.

What's wrong with it? There's nothing wrong with it at all. All these candidates are going around saying, "We do not take money from developers. We do not take money from developers." Yet one sees developments going on all over the place! One can't tie these prima donnas down because they only represent themselves—they have one vote.

The mayor of a city or of a borough has no more power than the newest, wet-behind-the-ears alderman who was elected to that council. The alderman soon finds out that the way to get his name mentioned on the front pages of the newspaper is to clout the mayor over the head with the mayor's baton that he carries in his briefcase from the moment he's elected. I know—I used to be an alderman!

Mr. MacDonald: The member used to be clouted!

Mr. Givens: They talk about the high cost of getting elected. I suggest, regardless of what the mayoralty candidates of the city tell us today, they're each spending at least $100,000 on goods and services — at least $100,000, plus the support of the newspapers. How much value does one put on the support of the Star or the Sun or the Globe and Mail?

An hon. member: Not very much!

Mr. Givens: Day after day, they come out with their editorials and their cartoons.

An hon. member: I'd say it was a liability.

Mr. Givens: Why would it cost more to run in Metropolitan Toronto than it does for mayor of the city of Toronto when the media — newspapers, radio, none of the stations are less than 50,000 watts, TV stations—give free publicity, free interviews, free debates and discussions on platforms and everything, and are all over the Metropolitan area? We know them all—the Fraser Kelly and Larry Solway shows and all the other shows. Why should it cost more to be elected in Metropolitan Toronto? Nobody goes from door to door any more. The premiers of all the provinces have to get elected. It costs them a lot of money in all of the provinces.

Mr. MacDonald: The member hasn't been in my ward for the last three weeks.

Mr. Givens: Why should the chairman, who operates a budget and who ministers over a population which is larger than that of eight of the provinces of Canada, not have to get elected?

The answer is it will keep the chairman busy politicking. Why should he be immune from politicking? Our Premier has to politicize and there's nothing wrong with that. The leaders of our respective parties have to politicize.

Why should the chairman not have to be elected? I never agreed with the two-year term anyway. I think it's too short a term. I think a more proper period is three years because it enables somebody to start something and to finish it within a reasonable time, and two years is too short.

They say we won't get the proper guy; that the public doesn't know as well as the members of council do whom to choose as the chairman, and that the public will get carried away by the charisma of the candidates. The 17 members of the council aren't carried away by the charisma of the candidates I suppose?

Some say the chairmen of Metro didn't want it. Mr. Gardiner didn't want it—to be elected. He was chosen by the Lieutenant Governor in council and then was chosen by council. Bill Allen didn't want it and Bill Campbell doesn't want it.

Mr. MacDonald: Ab Campbell!

Mr. Givens: Are we running this show for the convenience of the particular chairman?

I said Bill Campbell; I meant Ab Campbell.

We shouldn't be running this for the convenience of the particular chairman. We don't operate this business for his convenience.

I say, in closing Mr. Speaker, that the people of Toronto—and by people of Toronto I mean Metropolitan Toronto for the reasons I've indicated—need and require, very badly and very seriously, a leader they can look up to or a leader they can look down on!

They require to have it and they're entitled to it; and at the present time the people of Toronto are like children without a father. One can have a trustee and an executor and fiduciary and a guardian and everything else, but one cannot replace a father who understands his children.

We cannot replace a political leader who has to be elected by the people, who understands them, who knows what the whole thing is about and who can put it together and who can be the leader of that community. The people of Metro Toronto haven't got that today and I suggest, with great respect, that for the reasons I've indicated the people of Metro Toronto are being cheated in this regard. If we were to be elected as the governing party of this province, we would rectify that situation very quickly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York West.

Mr. J. P. MacBeth (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult to find an office for which the member for York-Forest Hill has not some personal experience, certainly if it's a senior public office. But this happens to be one occasion when I can rise and speak with a little more experience—maybe not authority, but at least a little more experience—than the member for York-Forest Hill.

It is not that I disagree with everything he has said. I agree with some of the minor points that he has made. But I simply like to get up and cross swords with this member, because he is such a delightful gentleman to cross swords with. So I don't want necessarily to say that I disagree with him completely, but I think it's right that the other side of the argument to the one that he has made and presented so well should be given.

There are only three living unsuccessful candidates for the chairmanship of Metropolitan Toronto, and I happen to be living and one of them. Mr. Goodhead, you may remember; Mr. Rotenberg, who is in another field today, and myself. Let's look at the three successful people: Mr. Fred Gardiner who was first appointed but then elected by this council to which the member for York-Forest Hill refers; Mr. William Allen; and presently Mr. Ab Campbell.

I think in those three people, contrary to what the member from York-Forest Hill has said, you have had good and strong leadership; they have all done well and I would say that the system has proved itself in that it works.

Mr. Foulds: Suitably picked from the elite!

Mr. MacBeth: They have been picked well, and I don't think they are all necessarily from the one party. They certainly represent two parties, and they have been seasoned men, and seasoned well. I don't think it's wrong that they should be picked from amongst their own council. Where else are you going to get the continuity or the experience than from the Metropolitan council itself?

I know the Liberal Party may have a little difficulty in picking the next leader from within its own ranks, but I think the NDP would think twice before it went outside its ranks to pick its leader. Certainly I think it's natural the Conservatives would pick their leaders from amongst their active politicians.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Who is the other candidate now?

Mr. MacBeth: So I say, who better to be chairman of the Metropolitan corporation than somebody who has continuity, somebody who has experience and somebody who has known—

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Why don't they elect candidates from their own people then?

Mr. MacBeth: They are going to pick them, I say, again this year, unless the hon. member who has just spoken decides to become a candidate, and that might be a very interesting matter. But I think you will find that again Metropolitan council picks its chairman from its membership, whoever that may be. However, they do have freedom to go outside, and I think that's a wise precaution; but I think it's not unreasonable if they should not go outside.

Let's take a look at the size of the electorate to which the member for York-Forest Hill suggests the chairman should have to appeal. I understand that in today's Metro Toronto voting there are 1,314,751 voters. That's just an approximate figure. Last year in provincial election I think the largest riding was that of York Mills with 95,596 voters on the list. So you want the chairman of the Metropolitan corporation to appeal to an electorate some 13 times the size of our largest provincial electorate. That to me is unreasonable.

You say it won't cost any more money. If $100,000 is the approximate figure now, I would suggest it would cost at least five or six times that. That may be a little exorbitant. Maybe there's not that much money around. But it would certainly cost much more, because even though the candidate doesn't go to every house, certainly the postman goes to every house. I know that the postmen have carried literature for all of the active candidates in this election, certainly any that expect to win.

I would say it would cost you much more money. Admittedly, there's some truth that the coverage is there now through the media, but you certainly wouldn't get away with what the mayors or the mayoralty aspirants are paying in this present campaign.

Again, some people in this House have taken exception to political donations. I wonder why the hon. member wants to increase those political donations and get another person in the ring, a person who would have to appeal to this large electorate. He has no political patronage to give out. His vote is only one on the Metropolitan council. He has no more votes than any other member. And if the hon. member doesn't like the political patronage that exists at the provincial level, would he like the political patronage that need must arise at the Metropolitan Toronto level? We're free of it now in the election of the chairman; let's keep political patronage out of it.

How else can one appeal to those 1.3 million people but through the media?

Mr. Stokes: That's a pretty weak argument.

Mr. MacBeth: Well, I think it's a strong argument. It's strong with me.

Mr. Martel: That doesn't make it strong.

Mr. Stokes: If it's wrong for Metropolitan Toronto, it's wrong for the province.

Mr. MacBeth: One must appeal to those 1.3 million voters through the media; the only way would be through the newspapers and through the radio. What good would a public meeting be to an electorate of that size? So, once again, instead of the personal contact that we all claim we want these days, we'd be playing back into the field of the newspapers and radio and the things that go with it. He couldn't possibly become known by all of these people.

I would just like to make a personal reference here when we are talking about costs. About three years ago when I ran for this exalted office—and I looked in the library the other day to try to find the quote on it and I couldn't, my own memory fails me—my campaign expenses, and I want the member for York-Forest Hill to note this, were less than $2.

Mr. Givens: That's why the member didn't get elected.

Mr. MacBeth: Well, it could be. But I got eight votes out of 32—and the figure is 32 not 17.

Mr. Givens: Horses are only important when one is playing horseshoes.

Mr. Stokes: That's 25 cents a vote.

Mr. MacBeth: Well, that's right, but sometimes this fear haunts me a little bit: if instead of less than $2 I had spent four times as much—$8—would I have got all 32 votes?

Mr. Martel: Who did the member buy for $2?

Mr. MacBeth: The money I spent that day was to entertain Tony O'Donohue, and in fairness to Tony O'Donohue I bought him a cup of coffee and a doughnut or a date roll or something. But I didn't succeed in buying his vote. You can't buy Tony's vote. That I know.

At any rate, as I say, there are 32 members, not 17. Maybe that's a Freudian slip on the part of my friend, but again I think he had it figured out on the basis of 11 from the wards of Toronto plus the Toronto mayor for a total of 12; he still remembered there were five other boroughs, so he added them up and somehow got 12 from Toronto and five from the boroughs for a total of 17.

Mr. Givens: That's a majority of 32!

Mr. MacBeth: Oh, I thought the member thought there were 17 altogether.

Mr. Givens: I don't think—I know!

Mr. MacBeth: Oh, he wasn't clear on that.

Mr. Givens: Let's clear that up. It's a majority of 32.

Mr. MacBeth: All right, there are 32. That means there are six from North York, five from Scarborough, four from Etobicoke, three from York and two from East York. And perhaps they should be looked at again as the population changes.

There is one other point I wish to make as far as the picking of the chairman is concerned. He is the chairman and has to work with six different municipalities. The fact that he is chosen by those members on council means that he has to play some politics with them. But I think the kind of politics he must play is more in the field of diplomacy than anything else.

First of all, he must deal fairly with all of those people to whom he is responsible. He must be a fair chairman. He must appear to be fair; and not only that he must be fair, because he is talking to and governing a pretty sophisticated electorate. Therefore, while he is responsible to those for his own position, he is chief among them. Also, I think there is a great deal of advantage in him being answerable to those people because they are there as delegates representing their councils and he, by reason of being responsible and being picked by them, has to deal with them in a most fair and diplomatic manner. I think William Allen is the choice and chief example of how well he dealt in that way.

Mr. Sargent: Get to the point!

Mr. MacBeth: No, that's a good point, the fact he is picked by them—

Mr. Sargent: The member has been wandering around all day.

Mr. MacBeth: No, I haven't. We've got the cost; we've got the media; we've got the numbers. Now, I say, the fact that he is picked by that council means that he has to deal fairly.

Mr. Speaker, just one other point and that has to do with the confusion in the term mayor. Part of this bill suggests that the name of the chairman should be changed to mayor.

Now, I am one who doesn't want to see amalgamation; and it might be a step towards amalgamation if this went through. But I think there should long be a Metropolitan council as well as a mayor of Toronto. I think if you changed the name of the chairman to mayor you would simply be adding to the confusion now existing. I think that change for change's sake is not good change. We should, sir, leave things very much as they are.

Mr. Speaker: The member for York South.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have got a bit of news for the hon. member for York-Forest Hill that I think should be divulged on the eve of election day in the Metropolitan area. He says door knocking doesn't go on any more. I have had more people knock at my door in this municipal election than in any provincial or federal election in memory.

Mr. Givens: On behalf of the mayor?

Mr. MacDonald: On behalf of everything—mayors, school trustees, aldermen. Of course, I'm up in a good area—they are alive, they are vital.

Hon. C. J. S. Apps (Minister of Correctional Services): They knew how the member was going to vote provincially.

Mr. MacDonald: Some of them didn't.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): They were trying to convince the member for York South; that is why.

Mr. MacDonald: Years ago I was fascinated by the role of one John R. Fisher in Canada. He became a sort of a proponent of Canada—and I don't know anybody who sold Canada with more vim and vigour and vitality.

If the hon. member for York-Forest Hill doesn't get appointed chairman of Metropolitan Toronto some time in January, then I think he is wasting his talents here. He should be appointed head of some sort of a promotional group for Metropolitan Toronto, because he does a magnificent job. He does it with zest and he does it with conviction.

My problem was that I didn't think that what he was saying here was really on the bill—and until I heard him speak I had to operate on the basis of the bill. When I took a look at the bill I had assumed that what he was getting at was some of the problems that had emerged in Metropolitan Toronto since its last restructuring in 1966—and how he was going to propose to correct them. If that is what he was getting at, then I found the bill distressingly inadequate. It did no more than fiddle with a few of the surface manifestations.

I repeat, I don't necessarily disagree with much of what the hon. member said. But I want to go off on some prepared thoughts I had in reference to the bill, which is all I had to operate with before. I will get back in the concluding moments of my remarks to the specifics of this bill.

It is rather interesting to note across the world today, Mr. Speaker, that a growing proportion of the population in every country—including Canada—is crowding more and more into urban areas. This is a world-wide phenomenon and it has produced two basic problems. We have them here in Metropolitan Toronto; we can find them in every other big city of the world.

One of them is that experience has proven that the old balkanized municipalities that happen to be included in the geographical area that becomes one big city have proven incapable of coping with the common problems of that one big city. People live in one area, they work in another area. There is an uneven distribution of the industrial assessment, which of course is one of the major bases for equitable taxes. These areas are incapable of coping with such basic requirements as water supply and of sewage disposal and of urban transportation.

As the hon. member for York-Forest Hill put it so well, this is one big city. It is one unit culturally, sociologically, economically—and in many other ways. Therefore they are forced—even though they cling to the little empires of which they were part beforehand—they are forced inevitably by events toward the delivery of amalgamated services.

Now, I am not going to back away from this business of amalgamation, which the hon. member for York West says he does not favour. But the interesting thing, as one looks at the two or three stages that Metropolitan Toronto has gone through, is that events are forcing this area into an ever-increasing degree of amalgamation.

In 1953 we faced a crisis. The area municipalities simply couldn't cope with the basic problems. Therefore, Leslie Miscampbell Frost, in his inimitable way, arbitrarily moved one time to create Metropolitan Toronto. And all those who were presiding over the little empires squealed with anguish at what had happened; but a year later the people were happy with it because it was a big improvement.

Then 10, 11, 12 years went by and we recognized that they hadn't gone far enough in terms of the amalgamated delivery of services. So we had the Goldenberg study—and we had another restructuring of Metropolitan Toronto. Again, moving closer to a fuller amalgamation so that we could get an adequate delivery of services.

Finally, I would suggest to you that we are not too far away at this point from another re-examination of Metropolitan Toronto so that we can move again toward a more fully co-ordinated, integrated delivery of services for this one big city.

Mr. Givens: It's overdue now.

Mr. MacDonald: I agree—it is overdue. In fact before the last election it was suggested by some minister on that side—I have forgotten exactly which one—that it would be considered after the next election. I don't know whether or not it has been considered, at this point, in the right timing of the election cycle. One does it early, so to speak, in the election cycle, so that any backlash will have subsided before the next voting day comes.

That is the one problem that emerges in one big city, this problem of restructuring to be able to meet the common problems.

There is a second, Mr. Speaker, and I suggest to you it is an even more important problem—that is the individual becomes lost in the urban mass. If we have 2¼ million people in Metropolitan Toronto, the individual loses his sense of identity; he has a growing feeling of alienation and that creates a whole range of social problems which the sociologists will say contribute to some of the unrest we have in modern society.

Therefore there has grown up the concept of the community council. It is being talked about ever more widely.

It has been implemented, I think I am correct in stating, in Canada more fully in Winnipeg than in any other city. They have one overall government and then local community councils to underpin that government so as to provide a community with which the individual can identify. These councils provide the means for a local input to the overall policy formation, and provide the mechanics for the kind of flexible administration of that overall policy which would meet local priorities.

This has sometimes been referred to as a process of creative decentralization. Back in 1966, Mr. Speaker, when this House was considering Bill 81 for the restructuring of Metropolitan Toronto—

Mr. Sargent: This is the same speech the member gave last year.

Mr. MacDonald: I have never given it before! That shows how—

Mr. Sargent: Same phrases!

An hon. member: Was the member for Grey-Bruce here last year?

Mr. Sargent: There's Norris Whitney, Mr. Speaker. Hi Norris!

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, perhaps Norris and the hon. member for Grey-Bruce can go out and look after things.

Back in 1966, when we were talking about the restructuring of Metropolitan Toronto, Mr. Speaker, we in the New Democratic Party frankly stated that we were in favour of full amalgamation.

What the hon. member for York-Forest Hill is in effect stating is that increasingly we have got amalgamation in services to the point that the local boroughs are just administrative units for the overall government. Are we going to be pulled, kicking and screaming, into that kind of a sensible rational approach?

At the time we made the suggestion, incidentally, the idea of local community councils was not by any means as current and as accepted as it is today, with its idea of underpinning an overall government for the Metropolitan area with these local councils.

We suggested, and I repeat it—not that I am dogmatically attached to it but I think it is the kind of model that is worthy of consideration—that if we have some 30 provincial constituencies in the Metropolitan area with the Metropolitan council might have, say, 60 local councils so that you have two aldermen or councillors, in each provincial constituency with boundaries that would be for the most part coterminous—therefore we would not have all the growing confusion of mixed-up boundaries between municipal and provincial and federal authorities. We would then have both an overall government and an underpinning of some 60 local councils.

Let's come to Bill 19 which the hon. member has introduced. His proposal is that the chairman should become the mayor. Well, if the mayor is going to be elected by all of the people obviously there may be some merit in changing from chairman. But what's in a name? A rose by any other name, as they once said.

I agree he should be elected but I don't agree with the hon. member that the election should take place across the whole city. Here I share some of the views expressed by the hon. member for York West. With a constituency of over two million people and 1½ million voters you would need to be a Kennedy or a Rockefeller to be able to finance that kind of situation. Let us not kid ourselves. If you don't happen to be a Kennedy or a Rockefeller—the alternative is going to be some sort of a machine with powerful interests behind the scenes which are going to provide the necessary money.

Unless and until we have solved the problem of election expenses at the municipal level as well as the provincial level, that kind of a constituency, I think, is ultimately going to threaten the democratic process rather than an enhancing of it. Rather, let the mayor of the city of Metropolitan Toronto be one of 60 members in the model that I suggested to you, elected in his own constituency, one of the 60 wards. Then he could be chosen by his fellows in that group; if he is chosen by his fellows, he is going to have the confidence of at least a majority of them. He will be an elected mayor, but he will be elected in what I would think a much more practical way than the constituency of a million and a quarter people.

In short, Mr. Speaker, what I am pleading for is not the kind of approach of the hon. member for York-Forest Hill, but rather that we should recognize that if parliamentary democracy—and the choice of a Prime Minister, the leader of a country—at the provincial as at the federal level, is a model that works there, why can't and why shouldn't it work at the municipal level, particularly if the municipality has over two million people?

In short, the Prime Minister or the leader should run in his own constituency. If he happens to be the leader of a party or of a group, whether it be a partisan group or whether it be a reform or an establishment group, or give it any name that you want, once he has been elected he will be chosen by his fellows to become the mayor of Metropolitan Toronto.

That, I suggest to you, is a much more reasonable and practical kind of approach than the one that has been suggested by the hon. member for York-Forest Hill.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the bill proposed by my colleague. Over the last four years I have changed my views very dramatically as to this whole role and the responsibility and the position of the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto. Before, I had felt that, based upon the system as it then was, it seemed logical to have a chairman appointed by the council from wherever they wished to choose that chairman. But as the whole system of government in Metropolitan Toronto has changed I have seen that there needs to be a dramatic change made in the organization and structure of this government to reflect the current needs and the changing conditions.

As my colleague said, it now appears that amalgamation is inevitable. It is inevitable because the boroughs themselves are no longer the communities they once were. There was a major effort made to preserve them because at one time they did have a sense of community, they did reflect a means of communication between the elected representatives and the regional government. But this is no longer the case.

Metropolitan Toronto was formed originally, of course, in order to co-ordinate planning and bring the financing under a single umbrella so that a much stronger base would be obtained to pay for the services so much needed in this growing area. But that is not now the only thing that Metropolitan Toronto is doing. It is doing many other things, taking on responsibilities at a central level that really require that the head of this government be one who is responsible and responsive to the people.

Not long ago I was reading Lester Pearson's book, "Mike," and I noticed one thing he said about the time he was assigned back to London. How pleased he was to be assigned to live in London because he said, in his view, London is the only big city in the world fit to live in. He said the reason for that is that it is a collection of neighbourhoods.

Toronto has many neighbourhoods. East York was True Davidson's neighbourhood. Leaside was pushed in on her after the last amalgamation. We have had many neighbourhoods over our past. The Beaches, Kensington, Parkdale, Swansea, the Lakeshore area, all these are logical neighbourhoods. In my view, these neighbourhoods should be revitalized and reformed so that the services that people require in the way of people services, such as health, welfare, recreation and education, can again be the responsibility of these neighbourhoods. Give them resources; give them power to do these things, so that there is an opportunity for each neighbourhood to reflect the wishes and desires and aspirations of that neighbourhood.

Under conditions like this, it is even more important that there be an overall government co-ordinating what goes on within this municipality of Metropolitan Toronto. As that government takes on greater responsibility for co-ordinating neighbourhoods, as I suggest, I think it is more important than ever that the head of that government be an elected person.

The reasons that others have told me in the past, that we should not force such an ordeal upon the chairman, are largely financial and the impossibility of getting people to run. The more I've seen in the last four or five years the more I feel that those reasons are not sufficient.

A good example of just how well a man can come from a relatively unknown position to a well-known position and well in the running in a major race is that of David Crombie, who last July, at the time he announced his candidacy for mayor of this city, was a virtual unknown. He had very little financial resources. I understand that to the middle of last week he had spent not much in excess of $50,000 to put himself well within reach of a victory.

Of course, we don't know what the results will be until later; but the fact that that sort of money made possible a campaign that has put his name well beyond the boundaries of the city of Toronto, well beyond the boundaries of Metropolitan Toronto, reflects the fact that money isn't the key to getting oneself well known and getting public support. It is the quality of the campaign.

Certainly I feel that the cost of a metropolitan campaign would not be much greater than that for the city, as my colleague has already mentioned. I, therefore, am completely in support of his view that the chairman should now become the mayor of Metropolitan Toronto, and that he should be elected. At the same time, I would urge that we consider a complete restructuring of our municipal government within the city of Toronto and within the whole of the metropolitan area to reflect the need to get back to neighbourhood government for the things that the people want in everyday people services.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for St. David.

Mrs. M. Scrivener (St. David): Mr. Speaker, if we must debate this bill, then I agree with the member for York Forest-Hill that today, municipal election day in Toronto, is a good one on which to do it since so much of what is good and bad about elections is fresh in our minds.

Generally, I do not like this bill. It smacks of the archaic, the old-time political theory of empire-building; of big is better. Over a period of years, the role and stance of the chairman of Metropolitan Toronto and the method by which he is elected has been a subject of controversy; today is no exception.

In considering the section which would change the designation of Metro chairman to mayor of Metropolitan Toronto, one should remember the duties and responsibilities which are presently associated with this high office. I would submit that perhaps the proposer of this bill may have forgotten some of them.

At present, the Metro chairman is the liaison between the legislative member of council and the department head or bureaucrat. His office co-ordinates the work of the administrative department and interprets council policy to these departments. Also, he is in a position to provide the necessary continuity between councils elected for brief periods of time.

The chairman's power lies in his ability to persuade and influence, not in his absolute authority. He represents one vote on the council and can cast that vote only when council cannot make up its mind. To some degree, he is apolitical. Frankly, I think that the chairman's job would be more appropriately designated if its holder were described as chairman of council and general manager of the corporation.

When one examines the demands of the job, it becomes obvious that the chairman must remain just that—a chairman, the instrument of his council and the administrator of its policy.

This is a job which relates directly to the special nature of the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto. Municipality by the way, is a misnomer, since Metro is not a municipality in the normal sense of the word. The nature of the Metro council is that of a special-purpose group brought together to resolve particular problems of common interest. Mr. Speaker, it was never expected that Metro would supplant the local municipalities in their contact with the electorate. To me, the Metro chairman's role is a direct reflection of the council with which he works.

Contrast this with the political implications which would attach to a Metro mayor. In my view, the popular election of a Metro mayor would make the office more nearly resemble the office of any elected municipal mayor as we know it and would inevitably pave the way for amalgamation of the city. Perhaps this is what the hon. member really has in mind.

Ultimately, it would mean the election of a mayor for one big city and elimination of the mayors' offices in each of the boroughs annexed to the city, all in the name of efficiency but actually, I would submit, at the expense of effectiveness.

If we reject the American big-city concept, it is difficult to understand how anyone could accept the idea of a big-city mayor and all that it implies for Toronto. How useful or effective has a Mayor John Lindsay been to New York or a Mayor Richard Daley to Chicago? These powerful, big-city politicians have had a vastly different role from those played by Metro Toronto's Fred Gardiner, Bill Allen and Ab Campbell, men who worked for a harmonious consensus among the mayors of the municipalities which comprise this city.

Implementation of this proposal would not result in better municipal leadership, quite the reverse; nor more efficient government, politicians would be replaced by bureaucrats; nor lower costs. It is the people who would suffer and the people who would pay.

As to the section which recommends that the Metro chairman or future Metro mayor should be elected at large, Mr. Speaker, this has implications which could be quite destructive. Generally, such an election would have little democratic meaning at the present time and contrary to the opinion expressed by the hon. member for York South, I thought that the hon. member did not speak to it with his usual fervour.

This would mean the superimposition of another elected municipal head, a super-mayor, upon the six elected mayors who represent Metro's six municipalities, and would place this superman in competition with the very people he is supposed to be serving.

In addition, he would be subjected to the pulls and pressures which originate in local issues—how could he escape them, since he has to be elected?—and his attention would be diverted from the regional questions which should occupy his time. Further, the political stance in which he would find himself might make him appear to favour one municipality over another in the delicate give-and-take of co-operative municipal federalism.

At present, even though the office of the Metro chairman appears to conflict with the concept of the elected council responsible to the electorate, nevertheless the chairman is responsible to elected persons since he is elected by the Metro Council.

Therefore, it follows that if we were to have a Metro mayor who is elected at large and who then becomes a super-political figure, obviously it would become necessary for him to become a member of the banquet circuit, just as other mayors do, to cut opening ribbons, and generally make himself available when invited to functions. To refuse is to offend and, once elected, probably he would wish to be re-elected. Mr. Speaker, this supermayor would acquire the same vulnerability as the other mayors.

To compensate for the social intrusions upon his workload—and Metro chairmen have been noted for the heavy administrative burdens they bear—this Metro supermayor would have to surround himself with bureaucratic desks. This would be the prelude to the immense bureaucratic organization which would have to replace Metro's six mayors when the trend reaches its inevitable outcome of one big city.

Mr. Givens: He is surrounded by bureaucrats now. Where has the member been?

Mrs. Scrivener: The present reachable democratic system would become a bureaucratic nightmare for three million people in 1980.

Another consideration is the cost of the election itself.

Mr. Givens: Lay on, Macduff.

Mrs. Scrivener: Today is election day in Metro, and in most of the municipalities of this province. We have all been watching and reading about the high cost of running for the office of mayor of Toronto, or mayor of North York, or wherever. Three men, competing among seven for Toronto's mayoralty, will probably spend more than $50,000 each on the usual media coverage—the signs, the posters, radio and television, newspaper space, letters and brochures.

Multiply this by six for the whole of Metro and a conservative estimate of cost for one man to campaign for the job of Metro mayor would be in the vicinity of $300,000. Frankly, I think this figure would probably increase to $500,000, since the use of radio and television would have to be increased for such a large area. Dr. Albert Rose has estimated that this figure could go as high as $1 million.

Whether $300,000, $500,000 or $1 million, Mr. Speaker, such expenditures for a job which, at present, pays $35,000 a year salary plus car and pension would arouse considerable public speculation about the motivations of individuals seeking such a post.

Mr. Foulds: What about the member for Wellington-Dufferin (Mr. Root)?

Mrs. Scrivener: The question would surely arise as to whose money was being spent for such a campaign, and why.

This leads to another disturbing thought, Mr. Speaker. A Metro supermayor elected at large from a population of more than two million people would probably receive a larger popular vote than any other elected person in Canada, including the Prime Minister. The political rationale indicates that such a colossal mandate would lead to the establishment of an inner-city clique, or machine, which would be the first real step toward the creation of a city state. It is an astounding concept, and it is a truth which attaches to the argument for supermayor.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, to implement the proposals contained in this bill would be to impose upon the people of Metropolitan Toronto many of the things which we abhor in the big cities to the south of us. I see no reason why we should inflict American-style big-city bureaucracy upon Metro when actually we have a unique municipal government which works very well, and to which people come from all over the world for investigation and study. What we have is very good, Mr. Speaker; the hon. member has not suggested an improvement.

Mr. Speaker: Does any other hon member wish to enter the debate—

Mr. Sargent: It wasn't going to pass anyway.

Mr. Speaker: —in the few minutes remaining? I now declare the debate completed.

In the absence of the hon. House leader, perhaps we could have a motion—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, just before you put the motion, maybe the gentleman who is just entering can tell us the bills he intends to deal with tomorrow.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): If any.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Yes, Mr. Speaker. Tomorrow, if the members care to make a note of that, we will deal with: 1. Item 12 on the order paper, Bill 224; 2. Item 13, Bill 225; 3. Item 15, Bill 230; 4. Item 4, Bill 181; 5. Item 16, Bill 235; 6. Item 5, Bill 197; 7. Item 7, Bill 203; 8. Item 8, Bill 204.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's the third time the minister has called those bills.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Tomorrow we'll deal with them.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I doubt it. Is it the intention, Mr. Speaker, for the budget debate to continue tomorrow evening?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Conclude!

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Yes, tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock we will continue the budget debate.

Mr. Singer: Up to the point of conclusion?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I would hope so.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The government isn't going to spend much time on the denturists.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: Today we have visitors with us in the east gallery who are students from Jones Ave. Adult School of Toronto; and in the west gallery students of York University political science honour course.

I am also pleased to inform the hon. members that in the Speaker's gallery we have with us four members of the Legislature of the Province of British Columbia, who are here to observe some of the proceedings in the Ontario House. We have Mr. James R. Chabot, Mr. David A. Anderson, Mr. Hartley Bent and Mr. Harry V. Lot.

Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

REFUSAL OF HOSPITAL PRIVILEGES

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to ask the Minister of Health if he can report to the House why the Hospital Appeal Board, which was constituted some months ago, has not effectively come to grips with the problem of access to hospitals by doctors, or the choice that patients might have of doctors because of the control of access to hospitals by the doctors.

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): No I can't, Mr. Speaker; but I'll be delighted to find out and get the answer for the hon. member.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Supplementary): Will the minister determine at the same time whether the board has had a meeting with all members present as yet?

VETOED HIGHWAY PROJECTS

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications: Can he inform the house whether certain highway construction projects that had been approved by his department, and in fact passed in the estimates of his department for construction this year, have been vetoed, or let's say postponed for a period of time in an effort to conserve funds in the department?

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): Well, Mr. Speaker, that is a very general question; one that it is difficult to answer without having the programmes here. As the member knows there are hundreds of construction programmes, and there are many and varied reasons for possibly not proceeding this year—property purchases, acquisitions, hearings, etc.

If the Leader of the Opposition has any specific highways he is inquiring about, would he please advise?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, I am referring only to those projects which were in—does the minister call it his blue book?—and presented at the time of the estimates. Is the minister not aware that in that book there are certain programmes which are recommended to be carried out at certain times in the future, and also a list of those which are fully approved and the Legislature is asked to vote money so that they might proceed during the construction season just now coming to a close? Were any of those either vetoed or postponed as an economy measure?

Hon. Mr. Carton: They were not vetoed or postponed as an economy measure, Mr. Speaker, no.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Well I have no further questions.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

ONR AGREEMENT WITH QUEBEC CORPORATION

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, initially a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications: In light of his answer yesterday, how is it that the seldom-present, itinerant member for Fort William (Mr. Jessiman), who is chairman of the ONR, is making announcements about the ONR entry into arrangements with Quebec which would allow for the transportation of three million tons of machinery and equipment per year for the James Bay hydro project? How does the minister gibe the announcements of the member for Fort William in Thunder Bay with his own categorical assurances yesterday that it had never reached a policy level?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, I can't talk for the hon. member, the chairman of the Ontario Northland, or what he may or may not have said.

Mr. Lewis: Who does he report to?

Hon. Mr. Carton: He reports to me; and as I explained to the hon. leader of the NDP yesterday, nothing has been finalized.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, does the minister think, in the light of what we know of the potential of the James Bay project, that his colleague from Fort William should be making announcements or projections of that kind? Might the minister caution him about the propriety?

Hon. Mr. Carton: Mr. Speaker, as I say, I haven't seen him since the question was asked yesterday and I don't know whether this was a press release, whether it was an answer to a question or in fact what was said.

Mr. Lewis: Well, nobody ever sees him! I mean that is not the minister's problem; that's a general problem.

JAMES BAY TASK FORCE

Mr. Lewis: May I direct a question, Mr. Speaker, to the Provincial Secretary for Resources Development? What is the result of the investigations I believe the provincial secretary is making into the environmental impact on Ontario of the James Bay project?

Hon. A. B. R. Lawrence (Provincial Secretary for Resources Development): There is no report on this, Mr. Speaker, although through the summer, of course, the committee was working. I shall check into that and see if there is some kind of a report I can make with regard to that particular committee and its studies of the environment. I know its primary purpose is to look at the Onakawana development itself, and I'm a little concerned that having placed that in the priority position, the committee will not have much in the way of definitive descriptions of its investigation into James Bay.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): A supplementary: Has the policy minister had any dialogue with any representative of the Quebec government to ascertain what the ecological effect might be as a result of a project of this magnitude? Is he not concerned that the large body of water that will be created might have an adverse effect on the ecology of the entire area?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: In answer to the first part, Mr. Speaker, I haven't had any direct communication with any member of the Quebec government on the subject.

With regard to the second part, of course, that is the reason why the terms of reference of that particular environmental committee were spread out. I think it was a rather unique term of reference given to them to look at the James Bay development from the ecological point of view.

I think the best thing I can do, in answer to the questions of both the leader of the New Democratic Party and the member for Thunder Bay, is to report to the House as soon as possible on what that particular committee has been able to accomplish this summer and fall.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, could the minister give us an assurance, insofar as it lies within the power of the government of Ontario to do so, that no development with any substantial environmental impact will take place in that part of James Bay bounded by the Province of Ontario and in the adjoining areas until these studies are completed and made available?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Undertake what? I'm not sure that I understand, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Renwick: That no development of any substantial environmental impact in the James Bay area bounded by the Province of Ontario—

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: In Ontario?

Mr. Renwick: In Ontario—will take place until the environmental impact study is completed by the minister's committee?

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: All I can say, Mr. Speaker, and subject to any further detail that may be developed through the Minister of Transportation and Communications, is that as far as I know, apart from what I guess is a 500-ft extension to the Moosonee airstrip, which is almost complete as of this week, there is no substantial project in that area that relates to the James Bay project. At Attawapiskat, Fort Albany, Winisk and throughout that area we have projects involving that particular department but none of them, I think, can be categorically earmarked as relating directly, at this moment, to the James Bay project.

May I say, having returned from a visit there a few weeks ago, that from what I could see on the ground, as it were, the prospect of Moosonee's being able to develop a very extensive airport facility, for example, even if it wanted to, is probably unrelated to the actual fact. Because, flying over the Fort George and La Grande River area, one can see that the Quebec Government itself is moving ahead with airstrip and airport developments that are incredibly more significant and important than the extra 500 ft on our own runway at Moosonee.

Mr. Renwick: A further supplementary question: Is the minister not concerned about the impact on that part of the Province of Ontario bounded by James Bay resulting from the Quebec development of the James Bay area?

Mr. Stokes: That's the critical question.

Hon. Mr. Lawrence: Well, Mr. Speaker, none of us here, I would judge, are experts in relation to the ecological impact when we are dealing with a project of these dimensions. I think that the impact on Ontario is going to be small no matter what the decisions and developments are on the Quebec side, because, as the hon. member will know, the country to the east of the Ontario border in the Province of Quebec is incomparably different in all ways from the Hudson Bay and James Bay flatlands that comprise the Province of Ontario's area there.

I can't give an expert answer, but I think that you have only to have a good look at the area to realize that the implications as they involve the topography of Quebec and the topography of Ontario are bound to be very different.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

NEW COMMUNITY OF NORTH PICKERING

Mr. Lewis: Yes, I have a question, Mr. Speaker, of the Minister without Portfolio in charge of North Pickering. It is a kind of an exotic title when you think of it. What land has the government acquired; how many thousands of acres has it actually purchased at this point?

Hon. C. Bennett (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question, I can say that as of last Friday we had purchased approximately 20 per cent of the total ownership that existed in North Pickering, or will exist in North Pickering. I do not have the exact acreage, but I will be pleased to get it for the member.

Mr. Lewis: The minister said 20 per cent of the ownership as distinct—

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Twenty per cent of the ownership, Mr. Speaker, indicated by the registration that we have at North Pickering office.

Mr. Renwick: By way of a supplementary question, could the minister give us some indication of the average price per acre paid by the government of Ontario for this property?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, there are varying prices that we have been paying. The average would appear to be in the range of about $3,500 to $3,800 at this time. I would be pleased to supply for the members a more detailed breakdown on the acreage and the prices that we have been paying, since there are some rather drastic differences, taking in the areas where there could be immediate development.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister indicate to the House when he is going to start expropriation proceedings for the land which is not being bought on a negotiated basis?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, we are continuing to negotiate for the acquiring of land. The date of expropriation has not been determined by the cabinet at this time.

Mr. Renwick: By way of a supplementary question, doesn't the minister assume that the expropriation procedures are sufficiently fair that expropriation would be much the least expensive way for the Province of Ontario to acquire this property and at the same time be fair to the persons who own the property?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question, back on March 2, 1972, when it was the decision of the government of the province to acquire the lands for the North Pickering development, it was decided that we would in the initial days attempt to negotiate the purchase. It was our feeling that the expropriation should come at some date in the future and that that would be a fairer way to treat the people by first of all allowing them the opportunity of negotiating the sale of their property to the government.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Does the minister who is answering the questions feel that an inquiry of necessity should be held in conjunction with the expropriation, and that perhaps this is one of the reasons why he is postponing the expropriation, to postpone an inquiry?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, it is not the reason why we are postponing the procedure of expropriation. The necessity of inquiry will follow as a result of the expropriation action.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, is it not true, however, that the government's so-called land freeze, which was really a noise control rather than any freeze on costs, applied only to expropriation proceedings but not to individual purchase transactions in the area. I am right in that, am I not?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, the land freeze related only to the usage factor and not to the value of it.

Mr. Lewis: But in the case of expropriation, not in the case of individual sales?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: I beg your pardon?

Mr. Lewis: The minister applies the land freeze aspect to the question of expropriation on the part of government? There was no freeze over the individual transactions which might take place in the interim?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, there was no freeze over the transactions. The government of Ontario still has the right to go in and negotiate the acquiring of the land at an agreed price between the owner and the province. As far as expropriation is concerned, as I have said already, a date in the future will be announced by the government.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, by way of a supplementary question, will the minister clear up for us how it would be possible for any meaningful inquiry of necessity to be held after the government of Ontario has already acquired substantial parts of the property?

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is putting the cart before the horse.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: No, Mr. Speaker, the government will decide on the expropriation at the appropriate time—

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): After it has spent all the taxpayers' money.

Hon. Mr. Bennett:—and within the terms of reference our inquiry of necessity will follow as one of the courses of action under expropriation.

Mr. Lewis: Supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: I think there have been sufficient. I'll permit the leader of the New Democratic Party—

Mr. Lewis: I'll put it in terms of a new question, because it is in fact a new question, although on the same theme, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: All right, let's try a new question.

Mr. Lewis: You'd prefer a new question?

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

Mr. Lewis: I'm sure you would. Then I'll oblige you.

Mr. Lewis: To the hon. member who is responsible for the North Pickering project: Why are we going ahead with that project at all, when: (a) the airport is now clearly in a state of suspension, and (b) the North Pickering community violates every precept of the Toronto-centred region plan?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the first question, it is a decision of the government of this province that regardless of what should transpire with the international airport and the federal government, this province will advance the North Pickering community project.

Mr. MacDonald: That's making a virtue of necessity.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: We do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is in violation of the Toronto-centred region plan; we think it is in keeping with the Toronto-centred region plan and its design.

Mr. Lewis: Well by way of supplementary—

Mr. Renwick: And with great respect.

Mr. Lewis: And with—never mind respect, with deference: Am I not right in thinking that the Toronto-centred region plan talked about the extension of industry and growth in the eastern part of the province, not the building of another 150,000-member community as an extension of Metropolitan Toronto? Where are they going to work, and how is the government going to handle it? What is the government doing? Didn't yesterday show the government what people think about unrestrained growth?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that yesterday showed us a great number of things. In the city of Ottawa we had a council returned that was just about true to form inasmuch as it was just about the same as we had prior to the day of election.

Mr. MacDonald: You are in a rut down there.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: It is fairly representative of our party, I might also add.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Which one?

Mr. MacDonald: The member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) is in the forefront—

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Free-enterprise party.

Mr. Lewis: I will offer the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) my condolences. He doesn't often lose.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, it is very clearly indicated in the Toronto-centred region plan that east of Toronto we have decided, and we believe, it is necessary to build a community away from Toronto—

Mr. Lewis: What does the minister mean, "away from Toronto"?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: —in the range of 150,000 to 200,000 people, and that is exactly what North Pickering will achieve.

Mr. Lewis: It is part of Toronto.

Mr. MacDonald: It's like the wart on Aunt Jemima's nose, it's that far away.

Mr. Speaker: I believe there has been a sufficient number of questions on this particular topic.

Mr. Lewis: One last question, Mr. Speaker, of the—

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: I'm sorry.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Prime Minister (Mr. Davis)—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West has not finished his opportunity to ask questions.

Mr. Sargent: He's had the floor 15 minutes. What more do you want?

Mr. Speaker: I'll come back to the hon. member later on.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: As a matter of fact, when the member for Grey-Bruce is the new leader of his party, we'll be second.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): I doubt that things will get that bad.

SOCIAL ALLOWANCES

Mr. Lewis: May I, Mr. Speaker, direct a question to the subdued Minister of Community and Social Services? When is he going to fulfil his commitment in the estimates of May of this year to raise the allowances under the Family Benefits and General Welfare Assistance Acts?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, it is a matter that we are very concerned with. I do not believe I can add much to a similar question the member posed to the Premier last week, when I believe he replied that it would be government policy and will be announced in due course.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Supplementary question: Does the minister agree that the $115 per person a month is sufficient or insufficient for someone to survive on?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I think, Mr. Speaker, that we are in agreement that there are certain areas where assistance is required.

Mr. Martel: A further supplementary question: Then what is the government waiting for, in view of the fact that the minister made a promise in May? Is that committee which the minister established simply a way of postponing until 1973 any increase in the amounts paid under the FBA or the CWA?

Mr. MacDonald: I think they have double-crossed themselves in their planning.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure to which committee the hon. member is referring. If he is referring to the task force, the task force that we have appointed is looking into all aspects of our ministry, the community and the various social programmes, and, of course—

Mr. Lewis: The government found $1 billion for transportation.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle:—assistance to family benefits is one of the areas they are looking into.

Mr. Martel: A supplementary: Doesn't the minister think it is merely a stalling tactic until 1973? In fact, because there has not been a raise since 1970 these people are actually desperate. There are insufficient funds and the fat cats over there aren't suffering the problems that these people are.

Mr. Speaker: I think the question is hardly a proper supplementary.

The hon. member for Wentworth.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Is the minister aware that a great many persons in receipt of mothers' allowance in the last two or three years have used the rental rebate as a means of purchasing gifts for their children at Christmas? Due to the change in the government's policy they won't have that money. Will the minister consider making some adjustment in the amount they receive in the month of December to compensate for that and allow them to have some kind of Christmas this year?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We are aware of these needs and as indicated, our policy will be announced.

Mr. Deans: When?

Mr. MacDonald: After Christmas.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have further questions?

Mr. Lewis: I defer to the member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Speaker: If it is a supplementary, I will permit it. If it is not a supplementary, the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. G. Nixon) is next. A supplementary? The hon. member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): In regard to the minister's answer, are the minister's officials who attend hearings and presentations of briefs from the one-parent families which point out the problems they are facing in meeting their rents and their purchasing of clothing, reporting back on a regular basis? Do their reports not indicate that the government should move immediately?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I can say one thing, Mr. Speaker. The various groups sure are reporting to me!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: I think the minister is a victim of this cabinet priority decision.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): A supplementary—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Shulman: Will the minister give us assurance that he will announce this policy, whatever it may be, sufficiently before Christmas so that action can be taken?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I don't think I can add much to what the Premier and I have already said.

Mr. Lewis: Where's the minister's clout in the cabinet?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Is the minister going to cut the allowances back? Is that his intention?

Mr. Speaker: Order! The hon. member for Dovercourt and then the hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

HIRING OF BILINGUAL STAFF BY POLICE COMMISSION

Mr. G. Nixon (Dovercourt): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) but in the absence of the Solicitor General, could the Provincial Secretary of Justice get me an answer please? I would like to know how many bilingual Portuguese, Greek and Italian men and women have been hired by the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission in the year 1972.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Mr. Speaker, I will get that information from the Solicitor General and give it to the hon. member.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

FIDINAM (ONTARIO) LTD.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, it is hard work to get the floor here! This question is of the Prime Minister. 1. In view of the fact that the government is investigating itself in the Fidinam affair—an incredible situation—will the Prime Minister assure the House—

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): The member is behind the times.

Mr. Sargent:—that he will allow the investigating committee to look into the $5 million election pot that the Conservative Party had last year, to ascertain how many donations were tied to government contracts? 2. Who received the finder's fee—

Mr. MacDonald: The Tory Party operates the same way as the Liberal Party always has.

Mr. Sargent: The member should be concerned about this. He is the one who is always squawking about it. 3. Will the Premier advise the House which firm did the legal work in connection with the project?

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I think I can undertake to get the information on the latter part of that question for the hon. member. As for the early part of the question, of course, I cannot and I will not quote for the members of the House an observation made by the hon. member for Grey-Bruce as related to this matter. I can only say that the Attorney General's (Mr. Bales) law officers are investigating it, and that is all I have to say.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary: In effect, the investigation will only be on the issue the government got caught on. In other words, either you're pregnant or you're not pregnant.

An hon. member: Is the Premier pregnant?

Mr. Sargent: Pardon me?

An hon. member: Stand up.

Mr. Sargent: The Premier is going to tell us, then, who had the finder's fee and the legal firm, is he?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No. I said I would find out.

Mr. Sargent: Well now, who got the finder's fee?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I don't even know whether there is a finder's fee.

Mr. Sargent: The Premier must know that.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): By way of supplementary, would the Prime Minister undertake to table the report of the law officers in this House?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member for Sarnia had been here, and I know he was very busy with his constituency activity, when the Attorney General—

Mr. Bullbrook: I didn't know the Prime Minister was there in Sarnia. Was he there?

Hon. Mr. Davis: No, but I would be delighted to go there anytime. But I think the Attorney General, if the member will check Hansard, has already answered that question.

Mr. Bullbrook: No, my recollection is that he didn't answer the question. Perhaps the Prime Minister could elaborate for my knowledge.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Because the Premier attends so regularly.

Hon. Mr. Davis: I would suggest the member for Sarnia read the answer that the Attorney General gave, and then he can make his determination as to whether or not he thought it was answered.

Mr. Bullbrook: Since I am so busy with my constituents, why doesn't the Prime Minister save me the time and tell me?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I would do anything I could to help the member for Sarnia, as I know he has been spending a lot of time with his constituents—

Mr. Bullbrook: The Prime Minister has always been kind to me.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—but I really think he would like to read this answer himself.

Mr. Shulman: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Natural Resources has the answer to a question previously asked.

Mr. Shulman: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: All right, one supplementary.

Mr. Shulman: In the course of his investigation, could the Prime Minister determine if Mr. Kelly worked on salary or commission?

Hon. Mr. Davis: I can only say to the hon. member for High Park he might get his 007 agent in Zurich to look into that matter and come back to the House with a report. I really can't answer that.

Mr. MacDonald: That was feeble the first time the Prime Minister used it.

Hon. Mr. Davis: It is just as applicable, though.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Natural Resources has the answer to a question asked previously.

RECONSTRUCTION OF OLD FORT WILLIAM

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I would like to reply to a question raised by the hon. member for Port Arthur in connection with the reconstruction of Old Fort William.

I have investigated the situation with respect to Dr. J. W. S. Careless and find that Dr. Careless did resign as a consultant to National Heritage on Oct. 26 of this year.

Mr. Renwick: How surprised the minister sounds!

Hon. Mr. Bernier: However, it is my understanding that he resigned due to the pressures of other work and other commitments.

Mr. Renwick: Oh!

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. J. I. Rempel, whom the hon. member referred to as an engineering consultant, was in actual fact assisting National Heritage in the matter of historic buildings design. He was on a contract of service and that contract was terminated by mutual agreement at the end of February, 1972. This termination resulted from a build-up of technical expertise in that area within the firm.

With respect to the archaeological excavations at the original site, I would point out to the hon. member that the reconstruction of the old fort is to the period 1816 to 1821. The archaeological site has had continuous occupation since at least 1803. During that period the site had been seriously disrupted. As the hon. member is aware, the original site of the fort now lies beneath the CPR tracks and a built-up section of the municipality of Thunder Bay. As a result, the archaeological team has been working under most difficult circumstances. However, I would like to point out and make it very clear that the pertinent data and evidence being uncovered by the archaeologists are being incorporated directly into the reconstruction of the programme. For example, major palisade lines have been discovered, and this information will be utilized in phase one of this construction.

I should also point out to the hon. member that, customarily, reconstruction programmes are based upon information from many sources. Archaeology is only one of the various disciplinary components. Other sources of information include direct documentary and graphic evidence, as well as the events and practices contemporary for that period of the reconstruction. In the case of Old Fort William, there exists a significant amount of direct documentary and graphic material, particularly from the time of Selkirk's occupation of the fort. We have undertaken an extensive research programme and this still continues.

In respect to the final supplementary, I believe the hon. member was referring to an article which appeared in the Aug. 21 edition of the Financial Times. I have read that article and can only say that I do not agree with his interpretation of the statement that he attributed to Mr. Pigott of National Heritage Ltd. However, I would like to assure the hon. member for Port Arthur that we are striving to have Old Fort William reconstructed as historically authentic as is humanly possible. We have no intention of turning this significant project into a "Disneyland-like tourist trap," as he had called it. If the hon. member has any evidence to the contrary I would be most interested to receive it.

In conclusion I want to urge the hon. member, and other members of this House, that they take time and make a personal inspection of the site with me and view the reconstruction of Old Fort William. I would also be pleased to arrange a visit for the hon. member and any other members who are interested, if they so wish, to the head offices and the design sections of National Heritage here in Toronto.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Foulds: Before I am able to take up the minister's invitation to actually visit the site, could he inform me if it is true that in fact a boathouse has been built on the site which is such that a boat of the period cannot come in or out?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: I didn't get that question; would the member repeat it please?

Mr. Foulds: Before I make my visit to the site to check first hand, is it in fact true that a boathouse has been built in which the door is too small for a boat of the period to come in and out?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Mr. Speaker, I am certainly not aware of this, but I will certainly check it out.

However, I want to point out to the member, and I pointed it out in my earlier statement, that we are doing everything possible, everything humanly possible to make this as authentic as we can, and we will continue to do that.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

TEACHER-BOARD NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Thank you, Mr. Speaker; I have a question of the Minister of Education. In light of the crisis developing across the Province of Ontario with mass resignations of school teachers effective the first of the new year, has the minister been approached by either teachers' federations or school board associations in an attempt to resolve the problem?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): The answer to that, Mr. Speaker, is no, I haven't been approached by them.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Would the minister consider the lending of his high office to either or both of the groups mentioned in an attempt to resolve the problem?

Mr. Lewis: High office?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, Mr. Speaker, I didn't realize this was a high office, but I really have—

Mr. Lewis: The minister is right, it is not.

An hon. member: It used to be.

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): The Premier used to think it was a high office.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Wells: I have great confidence and faith in the people on both sides of these disputes, that they will arrive at some mutually agreeable and satisfactory solution.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: Reason will prevail, reason will prevail!

Hon. Mr. Wells: As the hon. member knows, there is no particular guideline or legislative authority, or legislative ground rules governing these kinds of negotiations now, but certainly if we can be helpful in some way we are always here to be helpful. However, I just want to underline, Mr. Speaker, that I think if each side in all these disputes works in good faith with one another I think they can be solved.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary.

Mr. B. Newman: In light of the stalemate that has been finally arrived at, in certain situations would the minister then use his office to talk to each of the two sides, independently first, in an attempt to bring them together, so that they can resolve the problem so that as of Jan. 3 all the classrooms in the province will be manned by the teachers who were in the classroom prior to the present situation?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Well, Mr. Speaker, I will answer that question if the situation arises; that is the situation where some of the parties that the hon. member has referred to actually approach me.

As I say, at this point in time I have not been approached by any parties in any of these so-called stalemates.

Mr. Speaker: Supplementary?

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): No, new question.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Ottawa East, supplementary.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): Supplementary question: Is the minister saying, in fact, that he does not have any alternative plans if these people should walk out on Jan. 1? The minister doesn't have any plans, any alternatives to that situation?

Hon. Mr. Wells: No, Mr. Speaker, I didn't say that at all of course; I didn't refer to that. We were talking about whether we would mediate, or assist in some kind of process to get the two parties together. I would think that under the present legislation in this province the boards of education in the various jurisdictions would have plans available to make provision to keep the schools open if anything happens.

Mr. Singer: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, could the minister tell us what plans he knows to have been made in the event that these staffs do in fact walk out? Are there plans made?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I don't have any knowledge of these plans but the local school boards are charged with the responsibility of operating the schools under their jurisdiction. I'm sure that they have contingency plans that they are—

Mr. Bullbrook: The minister has a certain responsibility as Minister of Education.

Hon. Mr. Wells:—operating on the premise that—

Mr. Sargent: Pretty shady answer!

Hon. Mr. Wells:—schools will continue to be opened.

Mr. Singer: Well—

Hon. Mr. Wells: As I say now, I just don't think it serves anybody any good to be arguing about things that may or may not happen—

Mr. Roy: It is only a month away.

Hon. Mr. Wells:—because, as I've already said, we're in the early stages of December and I think that, given good faith on both sides, solutions to these problems can be worked out. Let's give them a chance to be worked out.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, I think the people of Ontario are entitled—

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member ask a question rather than a statement?

Mr. Singer:—to a greater assurance. Is the minister not prepared to give any assurance to the people of Ontario that, notwithstanding whether or not the contingency plans of the boards work, in the event a contingency arises, the children will be able to continue to go to school after Jan. 1?

Mr. Lewis: Or is the minister an anarchist?

Hon. Mr. Wells: My answer to that, Mr. Speaker, would be the answer I heard the new Premier of British Columbia give about a weekend ago—

Mr. Lewis: Carefull! Carefull!

Hon. Mr. Wells: He said, "I do not answer 'maybe' or 'might happen' questions."

Mr. Roy: That is really good planning.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Lewis: That was a good answer. The minister liked that.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): We thought the member would like that.

METROPOLITAN TORONTO ELECTION RESULTS

Mr. Drea: A question of the Premier: Would the Premier like to comment upon the tremendous vindication of his policy that cities are for people as exemplified by yesterday's election in Metropolitan Toronto?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Talk about a soft pitch!

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, in rising to answer that question at very great length—

Mr. Deans: He just happens to have a 10-page answer.

Mr. Bullbrook: We can read it in Hansard.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—with specific references to a speech made by the hon. member for York-Forest Hill (Mr. Givens)—which I have read, I want to assure him—and without getting into the merits of Brampton vis-à-vis Toronto, etc., I would only say to the hon. member who asked me that question—

Mr. Reid: Whatever his name is.

Hon. Mr. Davis:—there was some recognition by a substantial number of people in Metropolitan Toronto that the government's decision with respect to Spadina did have some relevance.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, by way of supplementary, did the Premier recognize that there was some recognition by the people in North York, Scarborough and Etobicoke that the plan isn't quite so hot?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I can't comment on either Etobicoke or Scarborough because I didn't analyse the situation there to the same extent. I think I am quite prepared to say that the people of North York are not as content with the Spadina decision.

Mr. Singer: Right!

Hon. Mr. Davis: The hon. member for Downsview has made this abundantly clear, but that is one of the problems of office. One cannot make—

Mr. Sargent: The Premier sure has dealt with it, I'll tell him!

Hon. Mr. Davis:—decisions that suit everybody. But nonetheless one makes them and I must confess that yesterday did indicate a degree of acceptance of that position.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: Is the Premier prepared to give some of the credit at least to Mr. Crombie or did he engineer the whole thing from beginning to end?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to give him total credit.

Mr. Reid: How much money did the Premier give him?

Mr. Bullbrook: The Premier gave him the cash, too!

POLICY ON COMMUNITY HEALTH CENTRES

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have a serious, non-facetious question of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development. Can the minister indicate whether the government has come to any policy decision with regard to community health centres? Specifically, has the government come to any conclusion as to whether the development should be restricted to health care delivery in the old or traditional sense, or in the broader sense of a co-ordination of health and social services within the community service centre?

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): Mr. Speaker, I would refer that question to the Minister of Health, who has made some comments on that particular subject very recently.

Mr. MacDonald: Just a minute now, Mr. Speaker. I have deliberately not put the question to the Minister of Health because it involves a policy decision that takes in Health and the Community and Social Services field, of which I thought the Provincial Secretary for Social Development was the policy minister.

My question, once again to this minister is: Has the government come to any policy decision with regard to the development of so-called health centres? Specifically are they going to be restricted to health or will they be integrated in the co-ordination of health and other social services?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Mr. Speaker, speaking particularly to the co-ordinative role between health and social services, to which the hon. member makes reference, that aspect of the programme is presently under review within the policy field.

Mr. Lewis: Oh, boy!

Mr. MacDonald: Does the minister mean he hasn't come to any conclusion?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Minister of Health has the answer to a question previously asked.

Mr. Lewis: Isn't the provincial secretary getting self-conscious about that policy role?

Mr. MacDonald: He can go back and speak some more.

Hon. Mr. Welch: It is a very exciting role.

Mr. Lewis: It allows him to give full and substantial answers to questions.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Hon. Mr. Welch: It is sensible.

ESTABLISHMENT OF DETOXIFICATION CENTRES

Hon. Mr. Potter: A question of the provincial secretary was asked in my absence on Friday concerning the report on the detoxification centres, and I have this information if the hon. members would like to have it.

This is a progress report respecting the development of detoxification and rehabilitation services for the chronic drunkenness offender in accordance with the programme approved by the provincial government last year.

Programme planning and development is co-ordinated by a committee consisting of two representatives from the Ministry of Health, two representatives from the Ministry of Community and Social Services and three representatives from the Addiction Research Foundation.

A budget was approved by the provincial government for the detoxification and rehabilitation programme on Sept. 12, 1972.

Mr. Sargent: We know all that. Why isn't it working? That is the main thing. Why isn't it working?

Mr. Speaker: There are four minutes remaining if the hon. members wish the answer.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Six detoxification centres plus six rehabilitation centres were originally scheduled for 1972—

Mr. Sargent: We were supposed to have 10.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Three were to be in Toronto, one detoxification centre and one rehabilitation centre were scheduled for Kenora, with one of each for Hamilton and one of each for London.

The plans for 1972 are developing on schedule. The Toronto Western Hospital detoxification centre with 20 beds and located on Ossington Ave. was opened prior to the funding date in September by funds provided through the Addiction Research Foundation.

The Clinical Institute of the Addiction Research Foundation Detoxification Centre is located at 410 Dundas St. and has 20 beds. This centre was opened on Nov. 15.

The detoxification centre for St. Michael's Hospital was originally operated within Seaton House, a hostel operated by the Department of Welfare of the city of Toronto. A new property has now been obtained by St. Michael's Hospital and a detoxification centre of 20 beds is scheduled to open in January.

Rehabilitation centres currently operating in connection with this system are located at 10 Madison Ave. with 19 beds, and 39 Beatty Ave. with 14 beds.

Three more units are currently under discussion with the Ministry of Community and Social Services and will be opening early in the new year. These units will be operated in connection with St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto Western Hospital, and the Clinical Institute of the foundation.

A 35-bed unit was opened in connection with the Lake-of-the-Woods Hospital in Kenora in September. A rehabilitation unit is scheduled for opening early in the new year.

In Hamilton, plans for a detoxification centre are well advanced in connection with the Hamilton General Hospital. The unit should be opened in January, 1973. A 14-bed rehabilitation unit is already operating.

In London—

Mr. Sargent: Almost two years after the government announced the plan. Almost two years.

Hon. Mr. Wells: It's not two years at all.

Hon. Mr. Potter: In London plans are well advanced for a detoxification centre in connection with St. Joseph's Hospital and this is also scheduled for January, 1973. A 14-bed rehabilitation unit is already operated in London at Quentin Warner House.

In 1973 five detoxification centres plus five rehabilitation centres are scheduled. These will be located in St. Catharines, Ottawa, Sudbury and Thunder Bay, and include a fourth unit for Toronto. Plans are well developed in all of these areas and they can become operational as soon as the funds are made available.

In 1974 five additional detoxification centres plus five additional rehabilitation centres are planned: two more in Toronto, one in Windsor, one in Kitchener-Waterloo and one in Renfrew county.

Prior to the opening of each unit throughout the province, the staff scheduled for the units are brought to Toronto for approximately four weeks' intensive training, consisting of general orientation to the field and specific experience in a detoxification centre in Toronto. The programme is designed in co-operation with the professional development department of the Addiction Research Foundation.

In addition, seminars are held for the staff of the general hospitals to which detoxification centres are attached. Staff from the Addiction Research Foundation visit the various units throughout Ontario regularly and participate in on-the-job training.

The Addiction Research Foundation and the Donwood Foundation are currently developing plans for a training programme for both professionals and non-professionals in order to more rapidly develop qualified personnel for participation in the programmes throughout Ontario for the treatment of alcoholics.

This programme is planned in two phases: (a) To develop a specific staff faculty to operate the subsequent training programme; and (b) to design and operate on a regular schedule a training programme which will incorporate a combination of carefully developed didactic curriculum, plus appropriate exposure to selected environments.

In addition, the Clinical Institute of the Addiction Research Foundation is a teaching hospital of the University of Toronto. Both undergraduate and graduate students are accepted here from the faculties of medicine, social work and occupational therapy. In the coming year this programme will be extended to encompass students from other faculties in the health field.

Mr. Lewis: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

Mr. Lewis: I really think that although the minister's reply was prompted by a question, it more naturally falls in the form of a ministerial statement before the orders and the time should not properly be deducted from the question period.

Mr. Speaker: I might say that I am sure the hon. members will recall that on various occasions I have taken it upon myself to extend the question period when in my opinion the reply to a question previously asked was rather lengthy. I have timed this answer and it took four minutes; in my opinion it is not an unreasonably long time to provide an answer.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, speaking to the point of order, I put it to you, sir, that in the last two weeks the cabinet has abused its privileges under the standing orders in answering questions in this Legislature.

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Reid: Today we heard the Minister of Natural Resources read a three- or four-page statement and now the Minister of Health has given us a lengthy statement of about five minutes. I refer you, sir, to page 7 of the standing orders, section 27(d), and raise this for your consideration. It says, and I quote:

The minister may take an oral question as notice to be answered orally at a later sitting, but where any such reserved question requires as its answer a lengthy statement, such statement shall be given under the routine proceeding, "Statements by the ministry."

I suggest to you, sir, that this has been going on for two weeks, both in the statements that have been read and in the verbal perambulations of the Provincial Secretary for Social Development and so forth. Those gentlemen over there have been abusing the time of this question period—they are killing it, sir.

Hon. Mr. Welch: If I am to answer the question, it is my responsibility—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Reid: I suggest to you they are taking the time away from the private members in the question period.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Very well put!

Hon. Mr. Welch: Completely irresponsible!

Mr. Speaker: I put it to the hon. member for his edification that regarding the standing orders in respect to the question period, it is to a great degree up to the Speaker to determine what takes place. I pointed out to the hon. member just a few moments ago the manner in which I have handled any statements made by the ministers in response to previous questions. I ask him to read Hansard if he didn't hear what I said a few moments ago.

Insofar as the hon. minister who made a statement regarding a report that he had presented, this is quite acceptable; it was not a lengthy statement. In fact, I conferred with him beforehand to see how long it might be and it was not, in my opinion, too long.

Mr. Reid: Five minutes.

Mr. Speaker: There have been no breaches of propriety, insofar as the Speaker is concerned, in this House during the two-week period mentioned by the hon. member for Rainy River. I reject his point of order completely.

Mr. Sargent: That's a matter of opinion!

Mr. Speaker: That happens to be my opinion, and I'm the Speaker.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, speaking to your point of order and your statement—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is out of order. There is no point of order.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will please resume his seat. I have made a ruling in connection with the point raised by the hon. member. If he chooses to challenge my ruling, he may do so—but he may not debate it.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of personal privilege that involves all of the members of this Legislature.

An hon. member: No. Speak for yourself!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Reid: You have made the statement, sir, that the question period is up—

Mr. Speaker: There is no point of privilege. The hon. member will please be seated. There is no point of privilege!

Mr. Lewis: Well, it is certainly not a point of privilege that encompasses all members of this Legislature, Mr. Speaker. That's enough nonsense.

Mr. Sargent: Why doesn't the member go by the book once in a while?

Mr. MacDonald: The member for Grey-Bruce ought to go by the book once in a while!

An hon. member: He doesn't have a book!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Does the hon. member have a point of order?

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): No, I have a question.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry, the question period has expired.

Mr. Sargent: Does he have a statement?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Roy: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, would it not be helpful, if I can be of some assistance, that the ministers be advised—

Mr. Speaker: That is no point of order.

Mr. Roy:—that any written answer of more than two minutes should be given as was outlined by my colleague from Rainy River, when we have only 45 minutes for 117 members.

Mr. Speaker: As I said previously, I believe the decision as to what constitutes an unreasonably lengthy statement must be within the authority and power of the Speaker to determine, which I have always done in the past. I am sure all hon. members will recall those incidents.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: There have been occasions when a nine- or 10-minute statement has been made and I have added four or five minutes to the question period.

Mr. Sargent: You are taking the heat off the government.

Mr. Reid: We are either going by the rules or we are going by the Speaker's whim, one or the other.

An hon. member: The Speaker is always fair.

Mr. Speaker: Well, the Speaker may be whimsical once in a while.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

ASSESSMENT ACT

Hon. Mr. Crossman moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Assessment Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. Crossman: Mr. Speaker, in addition to a housekeeping section, which provides a definition of the assessment review court, the bill also provides for taxation in 1973 on the basis of market value assessments in municipalities and in school areas comprising territory without municipal organization, that may be specified by proclamation.

MILK ACT

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Milk Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): Mr. Speaker, the hon. members may well wonder why I am introducing another Act today amending the Milk Act, since I made an amendment to the Milk Act yesterday. In introduction—

Mr. Renwick: No, we would be surprised if the minister didn't.

Mr. Foulds: It didn't surprise us in the least.

Mr. Renwick: We are looking forward to tomorrow.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: I am glad to know, Mr. Speaker, that my actions don't surprise my friends opposite. I am sure they will be in agreement with what I am doing then.

Mr. Lewis: Since the minister is going to repeal them both tomorrow it matters not.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: What we are proposing to do here in this bill is to transfer to the director of the milk industry in the province certain powers and duties now exercised by the milk commission. In other words, Mr. Speaker, we are separating the administrative and the judicial function of the milk commission.

Mr. Speaker: Before the orders of the day, I should like to remind the hon. members of Mr. Speaker's buffet supper this evening, including certain and all members of the Liberal Party.

Mr. MacDonald: That's carrying generosity pretty far.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

HOMES FOR THE AGED AND REST HOMES ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves second reading of Bill 224, An Act to amend the Homes for the Aged and Rest Homes Act.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): I just have a few comments to make on this bill, Mr. Speaker, but maybe they should be made in regard to Bill 225 on which this bill depends. Perhaps the minister could explain to me the reasons for the changes that come through in both these Acts to give the province the right to enter into agreements with corporations or with boards that are set up to manage homes for the aged?

As I would understand it, if these properties come into the hands of the province through donations or gifts, they are then to be leased back to the boards in the case of this bill, and perhaps to other organizations in the case of the amendments to the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act. Perhaps the minister could explain to me what particular instances have brought about the introduction of these bills?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury East.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Mr. Speaker, like my friend from Nipissing, the bill does pose problems for me in understanding the purpose for its introduction. It would appear to me the bill indicates that the right to let private bodies operate applies only to homes on Indian lands or in territorial districts; but perhaps it is as a result of subsection 6(e) in the preceding bill and the changes there that make it broad enough to cover all homes, since it authorizes the purchase of social services and community services.

Other than that, in trying to get clarification one would have to say, even after speaking to some of the minister's legal people, it takes a Philadelphia lawyer to understand the goings-on within this Act. I would appreciate some explanation as to what prompted the minister to introduce this particular bill.

Mr. Speaker: Any other hon. members wish to speak? The member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, just to prove that my colleague, the hon. member for Sudbury East, is correct about that, I am a lawyer and I can't understand the bill.

I would ask that we have a very clear indication from the minister whether this is some kind of technical amendment or whether it is part and parcel of a policy to be established by the government which is being introduced by a series of technical amendments to these three bills, and perhaps to other bills which the minister will introduce.

Mr. Speaker: Any other hon. member wish to speak to the bill? If not, the hon. minister.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, I think if I may deal with the first bill, Bill 224, the principle of the bill is fully explained in the explanatory note on section 3, which says:

The amendment authorizes the board of management in a territorial district to enter into a lease or an agreement with the Minister of Community and Social Services to operate and manage homes established by the minister under proposed amendment to the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

The two bills are related; one is complementary to the other. The second bill, Bill 225, would permit this ministry, by agreement, to purchase social or community services from agencies for municipalities under provincial programmes; that is in the first part of the bill. The second part would authorize our ministry to establish, by lease or agreement, property which had been donated to the province for use as a charitable institution for operation under our ministry. As an example, if an individual or someone wishes to donate a building to be used for a daycare centre or for a home for the aged, or for any of our community and social purposes, we feel this is very desirable. We should accept these gifts, and these two bills give us authorization to do so. We feel that this will give us more flexibility, more latitude in accepting gifts from individuals or corporations.

Mr. Martel: These bills that the minister has introduced seem to be trying to put the delivery of services through nursing homes, daycare centres and a whole host of things into the private sector rather than the public sector. It seems to be heading in a direction—

Mr. Speaker: Order! The member—

Mr. Martel: I am trying to get some clarification, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister was clarifying it.

Mr. Martel: He sat down to allow me to try and—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: In the second bill, Bill 225, we can purchase certain social services from agencies or from municipalities. This first bill, Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated, gives us permission to enter into agreement; what the member is referring to is really in the second bill, Bill 225.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: To committee of the whole House.

Mr. Speaker: The bill is directed to the committee of the whole House.

MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves second reading of Bill 225, An Act to amend the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, we started to cover the debate on this bill with the question on the last bill. I would like to follow up on some of that and indicate to the minister that he didn't really answer my questions in regard to the last bill, in that there must be some specific instances for which that bill was brought forward. Perhaps he could tell me what those specific instances are when he is answering on this bill as well.

I would like to make some comments on the second section of the bill in regard to giving the right to the ministry and the government to enter into contracts, not only with municipal organizations and other corporations of a non-profit nature, it gives the government the right to purchase social services from private individuals who may well be entering the field of social services on a profit-making basis.

This may be the philosophy of the government, to contract for everything, such as cleaning the Parliament buildings and things like that. I should hope that it's not the government's intention to offer to private investors and individuals the right to make profits on the provision of social services to the people of the province.

It is very odd that the ministry would come forward with this type of bill at the present time when it has appointed a task force to look into involvement and the operation of present methods used to give service to people under the different Acts administered by this ministry. It is very odd that they can move ahead in an area such as this, where they can ignore the perhaps obvious steps that should be taken, even before the task force has an opportunity to look at it or to report.

I believe with the interpretation of this section the government could spread out or decentralize even more the operations of social services in this province. I think we have enough overlapping now between the municipal services, the district services or county services, and the provincial responsibilities. It is obvious, at least from my point of view, that the answers the task force the minister has appointed will come up with would indicate that perhaps the province should be moving to bring under its control those areas of responsibilities that are now left within the municipal jurisdictions, instead of coming along with a bill that will give the minister the right to further diffuse the services across the province and to create perhaps a great number more private agencies which will overlap with the great number of governmental agencies that we now have in operation.

I would ask the minister to clarify what his intentions are under this section and to indicate whether it is his intention to go ahead with any type of major programme before the task force has reported.

The subsection, 7(a) deals specifically with the acquiring of gifts or donations, and basically I suppose that the questions pertain here as were asked on the last bill. So I would ask the minister when he sums up to indicate to us just what his intentions are in regard to farming out or giving out services to other corporations or other agencies, and whether it is his intention to restrict that type of contract to corporations or non-profit organizations that may be filling in the social areas and social fields because of the responsibilities not being taken up either by the municipal welfare and social services departments or this department itself.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, if I may: Since in both these bills there is clear confusion in the members' minds as to the meaning—in this case of section 2, subsection 6(c)—could the minister use his prerogative of speaking twice in a debate, speaking once and then winding it up, to take a moment now, before debate proceeds to other members of the House, to explain what it is he means by section 2, subsection 6(c). For what purposes would these services be purchased and from whom? What has he in mind? I sense we are really debating in a vacuum.

Mr. Speaker: On your point of order, normally the minister has the opportunity to make an opening statement—It could be done now I think—and then a winding up statement.

Mr. R. S. Smith: On the point of order, after this statement will I have the opportunity to speak again?

Mr. Speaker: We are getting into breaches of this rule at the present time. On the second reading it should be debated once.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Well, obviously the minister didn't avail himself of his opportunity to open up and we're going to change the rules in order to give him that opportunity, so—

Mr. Speaker: You can't get into a question and answer method at this particular stage.

Mr. Lewis: The minister can intervene at any time.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: If I may reply to the member for Nipissing, this may help with reference to some of the matters raised by the other members. The member for Nipissing asked me what specific instance has brought about this bill. In reply, this refers to a motor hotel in Terrace Bay that has been donated by a company in that town. We were very enthusiastic about accepting this gift. It will provide accommodation for at least 50 elderly persons and if we were to build it from scratch it would probably cost over $1 million.

There will of course be certain alterations to be made, but it is a very good building and we are very pleased because there is a need in that area for additional accommodation for senior citizens. We feel that this is saving money, not only for the province but for the local people, because homes for the aged, as the hon. members know are shared 50 per cent by the provincial government and 50 per cent by the local municipalities.

The member referred, in the second bill, to the purchase of community and social services. We feel this is desirable because it gives us more flexibility.

There are certain areas in the province, in northern Ontario for instance, where there is a lot of unorganized territory. We feel that in some of those cases it might be preferable for the district welfare board to be providing services to recipients under the General Welfare Assistance Act.

We have had representations made to us by the Association of Family Counselling Agencies, who would like to provide services. So we feel that if we can purchase those services that it's sometimes more desirable to do this than for us to provide those services directly. It gives us more flexibility in trying to make the best use of our resources.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would try to answer any other question.

Mr. Martel Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Nipissing have a question?

Mr. R. S. Smith: I just have one comment I would like to make.

Mr. Speaker: A quick comment.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Perhaps the minister would bring in an amendment on second reading or in committee to indicate that these services would be purchased from corporations or district boards or non-profit organizations, so that perhaps the minister's intentions would then be more clear.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Sudbury East.

Mr. Martel: Well Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this just a little further with the minister. In view of the fact I have so many unorganized townships, I agree the difficulty in obtaining services is great. But I have a fear that this is the beginning of what a group of voluntary welfare organizations came to see me about recently.

In a speech last year the then Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) indicated there was going to be a "reprivatization" in the social field. Many of those people who read the speech had a great fear that what in fact was occurring was that the government was simply opting out of its obligation in the public sector by offering the private sector funds whereby they would provide services for people—such as nursing homes, children's aid receiving centres, day nurseries, homes for the aged, rehab centres.

Is this just letting the thin edge of the wedge in to allow all of these other social services to be picked up by profit-motivated corporations, providing a way out for the government not to have to provide these services, except in a monetary sense?

I have read the minister's statement and I have commented on it, as he knows, regarding the cutbacks in day nurseries—he'll remember that great promise. Yet the minister spoke some two or three weeks ago and said the government was going to have to tighten the reins on spendings for day nurseries and for homes for the aged and so on.

I am simply wondering if all of this is coming together; and certainly this is what my colleague from Riverdale is concerned about as well.

Is the government, starting with the announcements of cutbacks and then adding this to allow the private sector to get involved, really beginning "reprivatization" in the social field?

I think the minister has to answer that quite clearly. He can clear up the problem for us very easily if he is willing to make an amendment, which we will move eventually, that we will support the bill providing "non-profit" is written into section 2 sub-section 6(e) and section 7 sub-section 7(a).

It is our intention to move an amendment which will in fact ensure that it is a non-profit organization that's interested in providing these services. Because I for one don't believe that we should allow profit-motivated corporations to be operating in the field of public services to people.

An hon. member: What about Brown's Camps?

Mr. Martel: Brown Camps volunteered to turn over all its camps to the government—

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

An hon. member: Who needs Brown's Camps?

Mr. Martel: —if the government would fulfil an obligation!

Mr. Speaker: Order please! We are on second reading of Bill 224.

Mr. Martel: That of satisfying one per cent of the needs of the province for emotionally disturbed children. He volunteered to turn that entire service over to the government, if they would fill the vacuum.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): Address the chair, address the Speaker!

Mr. Martel: And I am asking: Is the government admitting that it can't provide social services by trying to "reprivatize"?

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Is it getting into a Versafood style of delivering social services?

Mr. Martel: Certainly we will oppose the bill on that ground. If the minister is unwilling to put in "non-profit" in the appropriate place, we will eventually move an amendment.

I want to make a couple of other comments. Will this type of service, which we're going to purchase, cost more or less? Will it be more efficient than what the government can do?

I agree with the hon. member for Nipissing, and I said it during the minister's estimates, that it's time we got rid of municipal welfare and the province took the whole thing over, because the people that run some of those municipal welfare offices are just not in the 20th century. They're just not for real, some of them.

The powers that the minister has given people to make certain extra payments to people they simply ignore in totality, as the minister knows. The option is there for them, but they never use it. If this is just going to add more confusion, then I suggest we don't do it.

Therefore, I ask how the minister assesses there's going to be more efficiency, and more flexibility; I'm all for that as the minister knows. When we went through his estimates we pushed for more involvement of community groups, but on a non-profit basis.

Finally, I would ask that the minister indicate to us that this isn't the way out of the government's election promises to provide more for day nurseries and for homes for the aged, particularly in view of the statements of recent date made by the three ministers, with respect to things in the field of public services, such as hospitals, universities, and in this minister's own particular jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring a certain point to the attention of the minister and also ask him for a point of clarification. The minister is aware of the senior citizens centre in the city of Windsor—a very fine centre operated and managed by a Mrs. Dorothea Knight—and the excellent job they are doing with senior citizens. However, it is located in an area that is probably a little difficult for some of the senior citizens to get to, and also this centre is used full-time. I'm just wondering if the amendment, as introduced by the minister, would now permit his department to rent facilities closer to where there are other large numbers of senior citizens, to rent private facilities or church halls or other types of facilities, so that there could be a sort of satellite senior citizens centres in other parts in the community.

I know there is one approximately three blocks away from my home. They are using a hall owned by some fraternal organization. They have to rent it. Senior citizens have difficulty getting by on the financial resources they presently receive and have; were this department to provide or to pay for the rental of the facilities, and likewise provide some type of physical assistance by way of a counsellor, a programme consultant, and so forth, we could accommodate senior citizens far better by having these satellite centres spread throughout the community.

The city of Windsor, if I'm not mistaken, has 11.8 per cent of its population as senior citizens. It's extremely heavy. The Ministry of Revenue, the housing authority, builds fairly large senior citizens complexes as high rise centres. They do not have within that centre a commonroom, or an area in which senior citizens could actually congregate and carry on their activities. Possibly the department could, under section 2, subsection 6(c), rent facilities for them, pay for the rental of these facilities, provide them with some type of consultation assistance, and have senior citizens centres throughout the community, primarily adjacent to large concentrations of senior citizens. I'd like to ask the minister if that amendment permits his department to get into that type of operation?

Mr. Speaker: Any other hon. members wish to speak to this bill? If not the hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well Mr. Speaker, just for clarification, these two bills permit us to accept donations and gifts of buildings for which the title would rest with the Crown, with the province. However, the management of those buildings would be with the local board of management. In the case of Terrace Bay—the management of that particular building would rest with the board of management for homes for the aged of that area.

In response to the member from the nickel belt, I'd like to mention to him that what this legislation is doing is giving us more flexibility in those areas. Certainly we do not intend to shirk our responsibility in our ministry, but we do feel that in certain areas it's best to have a local agency provide those services, and if they can do it in a more economical way than we can—if they are on hand, if they are available—we feel they should be doing it.

We feel today that in a lot of these social agencies there are more and more people who are voluntarily donating their services. If I may use an example, in homes for the aged there are the community out-reach programmes and the meals-on-wheels programme. Today there are more and more senior citizens who prefer to remain in their own homes if they can, if their health permits them, and have services provided to them; meals-on-wheels is an example of such a programme, Mr. Speaker.

These are the sort of programmes we feel we would like to encourage.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): How many people are actually involved? How many individual recipients of meals-on-wheels are there?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: How many? It's difficult to say, but on that programme in the city of Toronto I would say it's in the thousands, and it's growing continually. It's a very worthwhile programme, and we have other—

Mr. Deans: I agree!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Pardon?

Mr. Deans: I agree, it is a worthwhile programme. I just don't think it is reaching enough people.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No, but as time goes on, though, it is becoming better known.

Another community out-reach programme is the foster home care programme. Many of our homes now are filled, so therefore if the local administrator feels some of these senior citizens could be placed in local homes, in private homes, we do this. At the present time we have more than 15 homes which are doing this, and more and more of this is being done.

So I'd like to assure the hon. member for Sudbury East that on the question of this research project in privatization, this is strictly an experimental project and I think we should carry out these research projects to evaluate them.

But I'd like to refer again to the fact that today there are more and more people who are volunteering their services to help the local community and we should avail ourselves of those services.

With reference to the member for Windsor-Walkerville, Mr. Speaker, is he referring to senior citizens in homes or senior citizens in housing apartments?

Mr. B. Newman: To both, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Pardon?

Mr. B. Newman: To both! Senior citizens in a high rise complex, or the senior citizens in the community generally who are ambulatory and able to go to a senior citizens centre.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well for senior citizens in homes for the aged there is at the present time provision in our Act to permit leasing and so forth. The legislation before us was brought in for district homes in northern Ontario, but there is provision in the Act for leasing of additional facilities to look after senior citizens.

Also this bill, Bill 225, will do certain things to which the member is referring. It will give us more flexibility in leasing accommodation and so forth.

I will be introducing a bill—in fact it has received first reading and will be receiving second reading, we hope, this week—the Elderly Persons Centres Act whereby such centres can be established within a housing complex, homes for the aged and so forth, and they can be leased.

So what we are trying to do, Mr. Speaker, is get more and more into these leasing and other types of arrangements. In other words we want to be able to provide the best service to the people with the maximum flexibility possible.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Mr. Speaker, I have one question of the minister for clarification here. In the case of, say a church organization wanting to set up a home for the aged, would this be a possibility?

How soon would the implementation of this sort of thing be undertaken and what funding would there be?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: For the first time, Mr. Speaker, if a church organization wants to—and many have; there are some excellent ones in the city of Toronto—they can become incorporated under the Charitable Institutions Act. They can receive capital grants of a maximum of $5,000 per bed, and if they take over an existing building they can receive grants of $1,200 per bed for renovations. The operating grants, I believe, are 80 per cent of $9; $9 is the maximum. The legislation is there now and there are some very good homes—

Mr. Young: Is there any willingness to expand?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Pardon?

Mr. Young: Is there any willingness on the part of government to expand this so that new institutions of this kind can emerge?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The legislation for expansion is there, Mr. Speaker, for those who wish to avail themselves of it, and many do. It is there and we would be pleased to receive any applications from any church groups.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, could it go to the committee of the whole House along with the companion bill?

Mr. Speaker: To committee of the whole House?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Certainly!

Mr. Speaker: It is so directed.

FAMILY BENEFITS ACT

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves second reading of Bill 230, An Act to amend the Family Benefits Act.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Nipissing.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Speaker, I have a few comments to make in regard to this.

During this ministry's estimates debate last spring there was quite a discussion in regard to the amount of time it took for the board of review to meet and give a decision to those people who had asked to have their cases referred to the board.

As I understood it then, the time lapse between the request and the final decision, in most cases, had been reduced to somewhere in the area of 42 days. But there still was a considerable length of time in some specific cases and the fact that the person did not receive any benefits was a hardship. Of course, even the average number of days that lapsed certainly would create some hardship for those particular people.

The whole question of family benefits was covered considerably at that time. In fact, it took us a couple of days, I remember, to get a commitment from the minister that he would go with all the forcefulness that he could muster and direct a request to the policy field first and to the Treasury Board for an increase in the benefits that are being made available to people, both under family benefits and under the General Welfare Assistance Act.

As we indicated in two questions, one last week and one today by the leader of the NDP, the minister is still standing around and waiting for something to drop in his hands from the Treasury Board. I would suggest that perhaps the minister wasn't too forceful; certainly he wasn't very successful up to this time.

This Act provides for an amount which shall not exceed the maximum amount of the allowances. Certainly the maximum amount of the allowances, in most instances, is far below the poverty line in this province. Perhaps the minister, when he is answering this in his statement at the end of second reading, could indicate to us when they are going to change those allowances, if ever, because it is now almost three years since there has been any increase.

As an example, a single person on old age assistance, between 60 and 65, can be allowed a maximum amount of $90 per month if he or she is living as a roomer or boarder with some family or relative. If they are living alone in rented quarters the maximum they can receive is $105. Perhaps he could tell me how he expects these people to continue to live on an amount that is at least $500 to $600 a year below what is accepted as the poverty level—$1,700.

We went through a federal election campaign in which the Tory party went around and said that people shouldn't live on $150 a month, but in this province we have a government formed by that party which forces people to live on as little as $90 a month.

I think some of the things that have been said over the past few months have been hypocritical to say the least, particularly when the government at the other level has increased the old age pensioners' minimum income to $150. I agree that even that is perhaps below the poverty line at the present time; but certainly for this government to allow people $1,080 a year on which to live, is scandalous to say the least in the circumstances of the wealth of this province and the wealth of the people in the province—and the ones who sit in government as well.

The only other comment I have to make in regard to this is that the whole question of the review procedure has worked fairly well in allowing people to take their grievances past the administrative level of the department. And the fact that they will be now provided with assistance while awaiting their decision, even though it is at the discretion of the review board, is a step forward.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sudbury East.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, first of all I would like to say that the bill is a real improvement over the situation which affected a good many people in the province who found themselves waiting for a review of their circumstances but had no method of support in the interim.

I would ask the minister if he would consider a very minor change in the bill when we take this to committee. It is not quite spelled out—and I would like this added—that if the people who are appealing don't win their appeal, they will not be asked to make a repayment. That should be included in the bill.

In other words, at the end of section 1(a), for example, we should include a section saying that "any amount so provided shall not be recoverable from the applicant or recipient of any funds." It is not specified in the bill,—and it should be, because there are so many interpretations put on bills by the many different people responsible for general welfare assistance as well as family benefits.

I think we should be as specific as possible to try to get away from this nonsense that I am so frequently confronted with, about there having been an overpayment created and we have to recover $10 a month. In fact, I wrote to the minister over the weekend about the case of a woman who I believe is getting the sum total of $90 from the Canada Pension Plan and in assistance from this government—and they are recovering at a rate of $10 a month, which leaves her less than $90 a month to live on. I have asked the minister to reduce that amount to $1 a month recovery if they must recover it.

A tremendous hardship is imposed when a person gets less than $100 and we recover $10 a month. I sometimes think we have got Simon Legree himself acting in some of those capacities over there as they recover $10. It is not very much to us, but when we deduct $10 from a person who is getting a measly $100 a month, it destroys that person.

As I say, just to guarantee that there is no possibility of anyone trying to get the money back as the result of an overpayment during this period, I would ask that the minister consider putting in the few brief words that I have indicated, to guarantee that we don't recover at any rate.

The second point I want to raise—and it follows on what my friend from Nipissing indicated—is about the apparent apathy of the ministry and the minister's cohort on the front seat, the minister responsible for co-ordination. We had an interesting discussion the other night at the Lieutenant Governor's dinner, and this problem came up of the inadequacy of the amounts for rentals and the amounts under the pre-added budget.

It is simply not enough, and it is simply not enough for the Prime Minister (Mr. Davis) to get up last week and say we are looking at it. It is simply not enough for the minister to say we are studying it, and we have gone to Treasury Board.

We have had eight months, almost, since his estimates. I said this afternoon in the question period, the task force and what it is going to recommend are a stall. I think the government is deliberately stalling until the fiscal year 1973-1974 before it increases that paltry sum, because it is within the power of both the minister and his colleague on the front bench to increase that now. They haven't done it.

It is nice to talk in platitudinous terms about, "Well we know that the rental allowance isn't enough. We know that they are using $40 or $50 off their pre-added budget for food and clothing, but that is okay." But all the inherent problems come. I'm sure the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) who sits there knows that if there is insufficient food a whole multitude of other problems develop in the health field.

Eight months has gone by since the minister promised to go to Treasury Board and nothing has changed. We got a great announcement about a transit system, and the government found $1.2 billion for it. But for people who are starving or are suffering from malnutrition, and all that comes as a result of that and inadequate clothing, it can't find a few bucks to bring them up at least to the federal level of $150.

The rentals are inadequate; there is no question about it. The minister doesn't have to wait for a task force report. He knows it. The pre-added budget is the 1970 figure.

Even then the minister will recall during the estimates the tremendous problem he and his staff had in trying, first of all to answer how they arrived at the pre-added budget in 1967, and then ultimately refused to tell us how they arrived at it then. We have now moved from 1970 to 1972 and there has been no increase, despite a tremendous increase in the cost of living and in rentals.

You people sit there complacently about it. I have to say complacently, because if the government had any desire to move it, it would have announced that down at the Science Centre instead of a transit system; which I don't oppose. But when people are hungry and ill-clothed, as far as I am concerned that takes priority.

I am asking the minister—and it is not even in the bill—would he make an announcement now, even if it is going to mean 1973, so that these people at least have some hope, which they don't presently have?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

Mr. B. Newman: Mr. Speaker, I want to make a few points on this bill. The first is that the idea of interim payments, I think, is a good policy on the part of the government. I have had occasion where individuals have appealed the allowance made them, and as a result not received an allowance. Because they thought that they were right and the government was trying its damndest to prove that they were wrong, they received nothing up until the time the appeal procedure had been completely terminated.

However, may I suggest to the minister, just as in the case of unemployment insurance, that he have review boards or appeal boards in communities, that the ministry adopt a policy similar to that in the larger communities.

Why should you have to have the chairman of the appeal board come from Toronto to the city of Windsor or to the city of London or to other areas of the province, when you can have a tribunal or an appeal board set up in the larger areas, at least on a regional basis, so that it could hear the appeal cases and expedite them?

These people appealing a decision of the board, remember, are living on pennies, so to speak. A dollar is a lot of money to them. It is not a case of someone who is making $5 and $6 an hour who is appealing because of an unemployment insurance decision. I think the minister could regionalize his appeal boards to expedite it, and then likewise to make it a little more personal in its approach.

Both the previous speakers did make mention of the amount of money allocated to the individual for rental payment. This has to be substantially increased, Mr. Speaker.

In communities—take the city of Windsor—where does one find accommodation for $95 a month? Yet that is all the individual is allowed. So what would you do if you were allowed only $95 a month? You have got to pay your rent, so you deprive yourself or your children or both of you, of something that is absolutely necessary—that is food—in an attempt to make rental payments.

It is completely out of line. The amounts allocated to an individual are not in keeping with the cost of living increases. For example, I read an article in the Detroit Free Press just the other day and they commented that Ford Motor Co. brought in the $4-a-day wage for an eight-hour day and then raised it to $5.

The working man today in the city of Detroit is receiving for common labour, production work, $5 an hour and $2.30 in fringe benefits. Windsor doesn't have quite that high a wage in its industry, but the government is asking the person on family benefits to live in a community where quite a few industrial workers are receiving maybe eight times more than the individual who is on the family benefits programme. I think it is time that the minister completely updated the allowances given to an individual on family benefits.

Another place where I find a real problem is with the individual who is turning 65 years of age and is going to transfer from family benefits to old age security. Now as soon as they reach 65, the minister's department cuts off their family benefits. But you don't know when they are going to start receiving old age security, even though they may have processed it well in advance.

The proof of age, especially of those who are born in European countries and in the countries bordering the Mediterranean, is an extremely difficult process. Quite often the Department of National Health and Welfare will not accept birth certificates presented by those people, especially if they come in from—the one instance that I have is Lebanon. They will not accept the birth certificate. So in the meantime the individual who has been on the family benefits programme is cut off because the minister's department insists that he should be receiving old age security, but he is still not receiving old age security.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. You are straying far away from the principle of the bill.

Mr. B. Newman: Well, I simply wanted to make mention to the minister that he should consider substantially increasing the family benefits to individuals in cases like that. That person shouldn't necessarily have to go to an appeal board. The department should make payments up until the time it receives word from the Department of National Health and Welfare that the persons are eligible for old age security.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, surely the Speaker and the minister realize that the previous speakers have wandered somewhat from the principle of this bill, but they realize as I do, and as maybe the minister does, that when we talk at all about family benefits under this minister's department we have to think about the miserable, inhumane payments that are being made today. That's about all I want to say on that, because the Speaker has ruled the previous speaker out of order in moving from the principle of this bill.

This bill is to provide for interim payments for maintenance to an applicant or recipient after a request for review has been made to the board, and I would like the minister to explain to me just exactly what he means by the addition to the section involved in the bill, whether it be in the case of an original application or in the case of a reduction of the recipient's allowance, or if for any reason their allowance has been interfered with and they make application.

Do they not, I ask the minister—and he may explain—have access to the General Welfare Assistance Act, the municipal relief? It has been my understanding, under the terms of his change where it says “where there may be financial hardship,” they don't have to rely upon this minister's department to get some assistance but can get exactly the same amount of assistance through the municipal welfare offices. In the case of a single person, to whom this ministry pays something like $11 a month, he or she can actually get $135 a month through the Municipal Welfare Assistance Act if there is financial hardship.

The only point I want to make, without wandering from the bill into the other aspects of the review boards, about which much could be said, is would the minister explain why these people have no access to the municipal welfare offices to receive the assistance they need during the term of waiting for their case to be dealt with by the review board?

Mr. Speaker: Do any other hon. members wish to speak to this?

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): I would like to commend the minister on this particular board because it has been my experience that whenever application has been made by citizens for a hearing they do not have to wait too long. I've been very satisfied with the way they conduct their hearings for applicants—

Mr. Gisborn: Has the member attended one?

Mr. J. R. Smith: I beg the member's pardon? Yes, very many times!

Mr. Gisborn: He got a different impression from mine.

Mr. J. R. Smith: I would like to assure the member for Hamilton East that on many occasions I have had opportunity, both here in the city of Toronto and at hearings in Hamilton, to represent personally people from the city of Hamilton and Toronto.

There is one particular aspect of social and family services benefits that I think the minister—while many have wandered on this bill—should be regarding. Recently, I had a case of a lady who is a patient in a Hamilton chronic care hospital. The doctor's diagnosis is that she will spend the rest of her days in this particular institution.

She is unable to qualify for comfort allowance simply because on occasion she returns home to spend the weekend with her husband and children. Mr. Speaker, I feel there are many instances such as this and really, common sense and leniency on behalf of the ministry would in the initial case preclude people such as this from having to make appeals to the review board for some form of benefits.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Speaker, with reference to the first matter, I believe I sense a general agreement with the bill. Using the words of the member for Sudbury East, “It's a real improvement.”

With reference to the member for Nipissing who asked “When will the allowances be changed, be increased; and who can live on their present allowances?” I believe the member was here during the question period today and last week when it was mentioned—

Mr. Deans: Why doesn't the minister let us in on the secret?

An hon. member: That's the problem.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Put some humanity in the bill.

Mr. Deans: Let us in on the secret.

Mr. Martel: What is stopping the minister?

Mr. Deans: We won't tell anyone.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: He's a very fine person, very sympathetic.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I would just like to reiterate, Mr. Speaker, what has been said before, that we are very well aware of the problems.

Mr. Renwick: Clear the galleries and tell us the secret!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We realize the cost of living has increased and changes will be made. But it will be government policy—

Mr. R. S. Smith: Is the government going to do anything about it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: It will be announced at the—

Mr. Deans: It will be announced at the appropriate time, but the appropriate time has long since passed.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! We are on Bill 230.

Mr. Martel: It was appropriate last May.

Mr. R. S. Smith: It wasn't politically appropriate up to a few weeks ago. Now the government can do it.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The hon. member for Sudbury East mentioned that he felt there should be an amendment dealing with repayment of the amounts given. This is not necessary, Mr. Speaker, because those who will be receiving interim payments will not be obligated to repay that amount. That is not necessary. They will not have to repay the amount that will be given to them during the interim period when their case is being heard.

Mr. Martel: That is the assurance we want, of course. That is the assurance we want written into the bill; because the welfare officers in certain municipalities like fun and games, as the minister well knows.

Mr. Deans: The member is telling me!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: With reference to the hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville and his suggestion about having regional boards, it is something we could look into. I'd like to mention to the hon. member that the board has been increased in numbers and we have representation looking after various areas. More than 90 per cent of the cases are heard within an average time of 40 days. I haven't heard of anyone who has complained recently of delays in cases.

We are trying to provide assistance as soon as it is possible. And when I say assistance, I mean have hearings as soon as possible. I have also made note of his very constructive comments and these are things we would be pleased to look into.

I would like to mention to the member for Hamilton East that the provisions of this bill will apply also to recipients who are administered under the local municipal welfare administrator. This Act will apply to those just as well.

If I have missed any questions in my answers, Mr. Speaker, I would be pleased to reply.

Motion agreed to, second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall this bill be ordered for third reading?

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker, may it go to committee of the whole?

Mr. Speaker: Does the minister direct it to committee of the whole?

So directed.

Clerk of the House: Order for committee of the whole House; Mr. A. Carruthers in the chair.

HOMES FOR THE AGED AND REST HOMES ACT

House in committee on Bill 224, An Act to amend the Homes for the Aged and Rest Homes Act.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any comments in respect of any sections of the bill?

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, on clause 3 of the bill.

Mr. Chairman: Anything before section 3? The member for Riverdale.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, as I now understand the bill, the minister has introduced this amendment, being clause 3 of the bill, to add section 9(a) to the Act, to cover a special situation in the gift to the government of the Province of Ontario at Terrace Bay of a particular institution. And the next bill has a companion clause designed to provide the authority for the government to accept the donation of it, and then to provide under this Act for the board of management in that particular territorial district to enter into an agreement for the lease and the management of the facility.

Now, is the minister telling us that that is for this specific situation and that the operation of the bill only provides for those situations where the government, by gift or donation—which I think is the language in the other bill—receives such an insitution and wants to make provisions for it? Is that the total significance of the bill?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Chairman, I hope that this will encourage other organizations and individuals to do likewise. We are very pleased with this arrangement. We think, as I said earlier, in the particular case of this donation to the province, the title of this building will rest with the province. Then, in turn, it'll be leased to the board of management of the homes for the aged in that area, which will operate that home in the same way that it operates other homes in the area. The legislation, of course, will apply, we hope, to many other similar cases. We hope that this will be the beginning of others.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, do I take that then to mean that what the government is opening the door to is bailing out institutions of one kind or another around the province which can't raise the funds for their own continuing operation, and providing a method by which those institutions can be transferred to the province and then managed by whatever the appropriate board is?

I notice that the minister nods his head and says no. What were the financial considerations which led the government to accept the donation of the institution at Terrace Bay?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I would say that the federal and the provincial laws that concern the donations of gifts will apply in this case as they apply in other cases. I would like to reiterate that we are very enthusiastic about this gift. We feel that we are receiving about $1 million of value.

To build a home for the aged today—a 50-bed home—would cost at least $1 million. Out of that amount, 50 per cent would have to be paid by this government and the balance would have to be raised by the local municipality.

In this age of budget constraints for municipalities and for governments and for everyone, we feel that if we can acquire facilities, not only for homes for the aged, but for day care and so forth, we should encourage it. We should encourage individuals and corporations and others to make these available for the public. We think this is a very desirable gift to the province.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, I didn't intend the minister to become defensive about it and to try to urge us to accept the spirit in which he's introducing the amendment. What I was interested in is what were the motivations behind the people who made the gift? What was it about the way in which it was then being operated which prompted them to turn it over to the government by way of gift?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, circumstances change in communities. In my own area, I can give examples of company towns that built buildings 30 or 40 years ago. Today the need for those buildings has changed. Today a lot of these towns are company towns no more. These buildings are there and they're in good condition. If the firm in that community wishes in its community spirit to donate it to the community or to the government, whatever the case may be, I feel that this should be encouraged.

Mr. Renwick: What was the name of the firm?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The firm in this instance is Kimberly-Clark of Canada.

Mr. Renwick: If this was a Kimberly-Clark gift to the Province of Ontario, did the ministry accept it on the basis that it was an acquisition by way of a capital transfer of property, or did the ministry then make projections of what it was going to cost the government to operate it and of the purposes for which it was operated? Not knowing the location of it, is it situated in a place which is suitable for the purpose for which the minister intends to use it?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes. There is a need for additional accommodation for senior citizens in that area. This matter was discussed with the local board of management.

Mr. Renwick: Well, that is true across the province.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Not necessarily. It varies. We have guidelines. Our guidelines are 28 beds per thousand of population, and in this area there is a need for additional accommodation. As for the maintenance, you referred to the operational grants and those will be available.

But as I said earlier, it's the capital cost today and today, in view of budget constraints, we encourage others to give to the province facilities that can be used for homes for the aged, for day care—there's a tremendous need for more daycare facilities—for many other social and community facilities.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, where is it located in Terrace Bay?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: If the hon. member has ever been to Terrace Bay he knows there are not too many motor hotels in that community; it's very centrally located. It's located close to the hospital. There could be the sharing of services also; they'll be integrated with the hospital services.

I think the people in that community will look very favourably upon it, as we do. We think it's a very worthwhile project.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, since this is the first instance of such a gift being made and used for such a purpose by the province, is the minister then prepared to state what are the criteria on which he is going to exercise his judgement as to whether or not he does in fact accept gifts in such circumstances in the future?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I believe that this is not unusual. I'm sure that there are many instances in this province where facilities have been donated. I know this is quite common in southern Ontario.

If this had been in southern Ontario I don't believe that part of this legislation would be necessary, because it's possible to do this with a municipal home. But this is a home in a territorial district and that's why we had to amend the legislation to permit this.

As I said earlier I hope that this will encourage others, because there certainly is a need for more facilities.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): I'd like to speak on this particular point. I find myself in some conflict here because the Terrace Bay Motor Hotel was well known to anyone who travels that area as the only decent place in which to get a fresh lake trout dinner. I hope the part of the agreement with the ministry is that the staff, particularly the chef, is retained so that the people using the facility will be able to partake of that very fine fresh lake trout dinner.

Mr. J. R. Smith (Hamilton Mountain): Great view too.

Mr. Chairman: Any further comments on section 3?

Are there any other sections of the bill you wish to comment on?

Shall the bill be reported?

Bill 224 reported.

MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES ACT

House in committee on Bill 225, An Act to amend the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

Mr. Chairman: Bill 225, An Act to amend the Ministry of Community and Social Services Act.

Are there any comments on any sections of the bill?

Mr. Renwick: On section 2 of the bill.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Yes, I'd like more explanation so that I thoroughly understand just what the minister is getting at. It relates to my original question.

Mr. Chairman: Which section?

Mr. Gisborn: Section 1(a). The minister answering briefly on second reading stated that the bill would also apply to appeals regarding municipal welfare. This I don't understand.

Does the minister mean that those who feel that they are not treated fairly in their application for municipal welfare can apply to the review board under the Community and Social Services Act?

Mr. Renwick: It is the wrong bill.

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): It is the wrong bill, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Renwick: He is referring to Bill 230. This is Bill 225.

Mr. Chairman: This is Bill 225, I'm sorry. Any other comments on this bill?

Mr. R. S. Smith: I just have one question on the first section. I'd like a definition from the minister of social planning, which he is adding to that section: "Authorized payments of grants for programmes of social planning."

Could he explain what he means; what types of grants they'll be and who they will be made to?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: An explanation of social planning? My interpretation, Mr. Chairman, would be the social and community services, which are a very wide range of services that are administered by our ministry.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Are there any specific instances that have brought about the amendment to the bill?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Not to my knowledge. Mr. Chairman. It is just to make our legislation more flexible and in order to give broader scope to our programmes.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Mr. Chairman, as indicated during second reading, we intend to move an amendment to the bill which would allow the minister the flexibility he wants in dealing with people like the Welfare Action Centre, and so forth, and in helping to fund them. But at the same time we want to be assured that the profit motive from social services does not become paramount; and therefore I move the following:

Clause 2 of bill 225 be amended by adding the words "on a non-profit basis" after the word "provision" in the proposed section 6(e), and after the word "operation" in the proposed section 7(a).

Mr. Bullbrook: Read that again, please?

Mr. Martel: That clause 2 of bill 225 be amended by adding the words "on a non-profit basis" after the word "provision" in the proposed section 6(e) and after the word "operation" in the proposed section 7(a).

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Martel moves that clause 2 of bill 225 be amended by adding the words: "on a non-profit basis" after the word "provision" in the proposed section 6(e) and after the word "operation" in the proposed section 7(a).

Mr. Martel: As indicated, Mr. Chairman, our purpose in moving this amendment is to keep the government in full responsibility for providing services; and yet at the same time allow the great number—the minister indicated earlier—of community groups and community-spirited people to provide the minister with the opportunity of utilizing their services. These are non-profit organizations and many of them are in dire financial difficulty.

I spoke today to the head man for the Welfare Action Centre in Toronto, who has been trying to obtain funds from the ministry since last—I guess it was last May when the minister said that he would look into their request for funds. They are certainly providing a very useful service.

They have indicated month-by-month the number of cases and so forth; a complete breakdown. And yet eight months later this minister, who thought it was a great idea, has still not assisted them with one red penny. If it hadn't been for the LIP service they would not be in operation today still waiting for this minister to provide funds.

This bill, with this amendment, provides the minister with that opportunity to provide funds to groups of community-minded people with a great deal of expertise to add to the deficient areas in the minister's own department. I don't mean that—I mean deficient in numbers of being able to do the job. It provides him with that expertise out in the community—it is something we advocated during the estimates—and provides him with the tools to do the job.

What this amendment doesn't do, of course, is allow the whole ball of wax, as my friend from Grey-Bruce (Mr. Sargent) would say—it doesn't allow tremendous corporations to move into the certain fields and, I might say, rip off the public purse by providing services which this government has failed to do. And that's why we're moving the amendment; and hopefully the minister will support it.

Mr. R. S. Smith: Mr. Chairman, for our part, in line with my earlier remarks, I would indicate that we would support the amendment as put forward on the basis that we feel that social and community services of the nature covered by the different Acts under this minister's jurisdiction should be on the basis of governmental action and should not be allowed to be leased out on the basis of profit to private hands.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. member for Brant.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): I would just like to add a comment or two to what has already been said on the amendment because I think it is a very valuable and important one, and I too would hope that the minister would consider accepting it and allowing it to stand as part of Bill 225.

I don't know whether the minister or some others might have read recent articles about the direction that health care and community welfare facilities are taking in the United States, where profit seems to be the basic motive for developing facilities for whose development we have depended upon government initiative.

As a matter of fact, they are even franchising some of their treatments in private hospitals under the ownership and jurisdiction of chains of hotels, for example, like the Ramada Inns. They are opening up these treatment centres, which are franchised and where everything is detailed something like Kentucky Fried Chicken would be. To cite another example, even specific procedures for treating alcoholism are now being franchised across the United States. I don't know whether this has come into Canada yet, and perhaps we can look forward to that time.

Certainly I would hope that the philosophy and principle of the expansion of community services here would certainly be by virtue of the establishment of public facilities wherever possible, and where that is not possible, with the proviso that it not be based on profit for those who own and operate the facilities.

As a matter of fact, I have always felt that the government was not filling the community needs when it permitted such an operation as the well-known Brown Camp facilities to expand to such tremendous proportions here and then into many other provinces. I felt that facilities for the care of disturbed adolescents and other young people should have been an emanation of either the minister's department or the Ministry of Health.

Such has not been the case, and a large percentage of the funds we make available to children's aid societies is spent for the private care of these people because there are no public facilities for them. As a result the Brown Camp establishment—I am not sure if that is its proper name now—has expanded tremendously. I understand it has fleets of aircraft and so on, that it has expanded across Canada.

There is no doubt they provide a service and a method of treatment that is not provided through public initiative by any ministry in this government. And obviously it is something that is lacking in other provinces.

So we can't condemn any principal in the business for moving into the field and providing this sort of care at a profit. But if in fact the principle enunciated in this amendment had been accepted in those times, then surely we would have been in a position to have the care provided on a non-profit basis either by the government itself or by some organization that would not be in business to profit on the unfortunate situation and the problems faced by people desperately requiring that type of care.

Mr. Chairman: The hon. minister.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, if I may first deal with section 7(a), it states in the fifth and sixth lines that these are establishments operated "for charitable objects," so I feel that the addition of the word "non-profit" would be redundant. It is not necessary because this section refers to "charitable objects," "charitable institutions" and so forth.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, perhaps if I might interrupt the minister, the insertion comes after the word "operation," which is in about the seventh or eighth line of the section. The amended section would read:

And the minister may by way of lease or agreement provide for the management and operation on a non-profit basis of the institution by any person or organization with authority therefor under such Act subject to the provisions of such Act and the regulations . . .

It is designed to govern the agreement for the operation and management of such institutions to make certain that the agreement, with whoever it is made, is one which is on a non-profit basis or on the basis of cost.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, this refers, for instance, to our homes for the aged. These are non-profit organizations. Their maintenance grants are paid on a per diem base. So much is paid by the province and so much is paid by the municipalities. These are municipal homes. The charitable homes also operate at a deficit.

Mr. Renwick: We assume that there is no difficulty in the minister accepting the amendment for clarification of that particular point because this amendment, if passed, regardless of what the present practice may be or what it may be in the future, would provide for that kind of institution, but under a lease, leasing out its operation and management to someone who could use it for the purpose of making a profit. We are interested in precluding that clearly in the statute.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Would the minister permit a question?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Yes.

Mr. Bullbrook: Would he tell me why he finds this so unacceptable or reprehensible?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Actually, Mr. Chairman, on this one here, personally I would have no objection to the word non-profit. However, with reference to 6(e)—

Mr. R. S. Smith: That is the real one in question.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle:—while it is the intention of the ministry to use non-profit agencies whenever possible, we do not want flexibility limited where there is no non-profit agency available.

As I said earlier in my remarks, we do feel that we would like to have the maximum flexibility possible to use agencies when it is more economical to do so. We feel that inserting the word non-profit would be limiting. We feel that this would be limiting our flexibility in this area, and we feel that it is not necessary.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Chairman, that's the very point! It is the point upon which, as a matter of principle, we would disagree with the minister. There should not be at this time any provision in the statutes of the Province of Ontario allowing public funds to be used by the government for the purchase of social services from an institution which could derive a profit from supplying those services.

It is our view that it is a fundamental point and that is why we raised it. If one reads the head note or the explanatory note at the side of it, one would have thought that that is what was intended because there is reference in the explanatory note to agreements between the province and social agencies respecting the delivery of such services. We thought that the amendment would clarify that those social agencies are to be non-profit operations.

For that reason, Mr. Chairman, unless the minister sees fit to accept the amendment, we would divide the House on it.

Mr. Chairman: With respect to section 6(e), all those in favour of—

Mr. Bullbrook: Before you put the question, may I suggest to the minister—as I understand his response to the mover of this motion, he wants to have certain latitude and elasticity to deal with profit-making organizations if the need arises. Is that correct?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We would like to have the maximum flexibility possible. For instance, we have at the present time in this province certain camps which are being operated by private agencies that do make a profit.

Mr. Bullbrook: Yes.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: We feel that it is not possible for this government to provide all the institutional services that would be required. It would require a tremendous amount of capital to do so.

We feel that there is room for both.

In certain cases, where a private agency can do it, we feel that if the circumstances warrant it, we should have the flexibility to purchase those services. That is why we feel we would like to have this latitude as it is in the present amendment.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Chairman, through you to the minister, certainly you can obtain these services, and still have the flexibility, from non-profit organizations. You would still be providing the funds for the operating costs, you would be providing the funds for salaries and so on; but without a profit motive. Now, how can the government possibly obtain these services cheaper if you are going to have to not only pay the costs, which we as government would have to pay, but also include a profit? Just how do you do that sort of thing? It has to be more!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I think we can give many examples in this province where the services are just not available and where it is just not possible for the government to provide all the institutions, for children and so forth. In certain cases we have to buy these services; and those who are providing them, of course provide them at a profit. Otherwise they just couldn't operate.

May I use the example, say of children's services: There are under the Ministry of Health certain children who are placed in certain camps operated by individuals, and you are aware of these; the government hasn't got those institutions available, so therefore we buy those services to provide assistance to those children who require it.

Mr. R. S. Smith: A couple of comments: First of all, the minister indicated earlier these amendments were in order that services could be provided by district welfare boards, to which I am sure there is going to be no profit accruing; and then he talked about volunteer services he wanted to encourage across the province, and if they are volunteer services certainly they are not going to be operating at a profit. Then he talked about buying services at specific camps, I presume for young people with health—pardon?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Children with behavioural problems!

Mr. R. S. Smith: Well those payments, generally speaking, as I understand it are not made directly by this ministry and there is no contractual arrangement between the ministry and those camps. Perhaps there is through the Children's Aid Societies, but the amendment that has been offered here today would not preclude the Children's Aid Societies making any agreements with those private individuals—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Although it should!

Mr. R. S. Smith: Maybe it should! Even though the moneys are provided to the Children's Aid Societies to enter into those agreements, I don't think the minister has really pointed out any specific instance where there is a requirement.

Even though you can talk about northern Ontario, and bring that in to perhaps indicate there may be something come up in the future, I haven't heard of anything yet and—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, my officials just reminded me we are now purchasing services from trade schools, this is a reference to assessment for rehabilitation services. This amendment would limit our operation in this area, so therefore we feel that to provide the services to the people who require them we need maximum flexibility. We would not want to have an amendment whereby we would be unable to do the things we are doing now; and I don't think members opposite would want that sort of an amendment either.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Chairman, with the greatest of respect, the minister has before him, in his office, requests from all kinds of community groups willing to provide services which this ministry hasn't been able to provide, and he hasn't given them a cent. I talked to Peter Harrington of the Welfare Action Centre today. He didn't get any money, he hasn't had one red cent!

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): Pass this section and we can deal with it!

Mr. Martel: That's nonsense; you had the opportunity to provide that sort of grant a long time ago—eight months ago!

Hon. Mr. Welch: They are non-profit now.

Mr. Martel: That's right. They are non-profit now and you still haven't provided them the money, and you haven't made use of their service.

Hon. Mr. Welch: That is why section 6 is in here.

Mr. Martel: That is a lot of nonsense.

Mr. Foulds: You want to go to the Versafood style of social welfare!

Mr. Martel: When you had those facilities available to you, through groups which just wanted grants, you wouldn't even make the grants available.

Hon. Mr. Welch: You don't understand the section.

Mr. Martel: No one understands except Tories—by the divine right of kings!

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Martel: Right! Well, we had occasion to talk about it last week regarding various grants. And from some strange places we found out people were disturbed at the inaction. They were Tories too! I pointed out to that individual that she should talk to the minister, whom she knows quite well, to make the changes necessary. Here it is insisted that it go to profit-motive organizations.

Hon. Mr. Welch: There is no insistence in that section.

Mr. Martel: All right then, all the minister has to do is accept the amendment and he can make use of an untapped wealth of service out there.

Mr. Foulds: Lay it on.

Mr. Martel: Out there, there are simply thousands upon thousands of people who are willing to help, and they are not asking for any profit; all they are asking is for a little wherewithal to do the job. Why does the minister insist that it then go to profit organizations if they want to help?

Mr. Foulds: It is called reprivatization.

Mr. Martel: It is called—as the former Treasurer (Mr. McKeough) said, I think, when he touched off the Red Shield campaign last March or something like that—it is called "re-privatization." Isn't that what it is really all about?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Proper utilization of all resources.

Mr. Martel: Oh, proper utilization! The government hasn't even made use of the facilities which are out there. We're willing to give the minister that now, except we are not willing to give it to other organizations that are profit-motive in design.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): They are doing well.

Mr. Martel: That is why we will oppose it. But the excuse that the minister has given—as the member for Nipissing so well pointed out—was to start out by saying he needed funds for all those people out there who didn't have funds. Everyone agreed with that, and as he continued to add we finally came down to the crunch: "We want to be able to provide money to profit-motive organizations."

Hon. Mr. Welch: That's not what the minister said.

Mr. Martel: That's what it is really all about.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): How does the member have the nerve to ask for so much?

Mr. Martel: That's really what it is all about.

An hon. member: The member for Algoma doesn't know what he is talking about.

Mr. Martel: Why doesn't he go and read the bill?

Mr. Chairman: Order.

Mr. Bullbrook: Order over there.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Does the minister want to speak on it or what?

An hon. member: Ask him a question; that will shut him up.

Mr. Martel: Then he will have to think for a while for an answer.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether other members of the House have run into this or not. In Owen Sound the Community and Social Services department is handled directly by this government for the county and the city. We have an arrogant type of administration there which is not sensitive to people's needs and I find that there is a great area to have a buffer to work for people.

All of us here are ombudsmen of some type to solve these problems in each area, but we aren't physically capable of doing this job of answering the hundreds of calls we get in any given time we are home. Financially none of us can afford to dig into our pockets the way we are doing, to handle these things because of the arrogance of that man's department. The minister himself is a man I respect, but these people lead him around by the nose and he doesn't know what is going on. It is a sad situation.

So we have a situation in Owen Sound where I have at numerous times threatened to have the man's job and by God I can get it if I want to—I'll get rid of him if I want to. But he always comes back into line at a desperation point. The fact is, I'm sick and tired of digging into my pocket, because when the city handled the show I could phone up the administration or—

An hon. member: Sounds familiar.

Mr. Sargent:—and say, "Look after these people, whether it is a Friday afternoon or not. They're broke; they have no groceries for the weekend," and you all know what I'm talking about. But the people who handle the show up there now are arrogant, because they think they can get away with this stuff.

It again comes back to the point that all government should be local—not handled by this bunch of arrogant bureaucrats down here. We should have the right to run our own affairs and look after people. Now, what brings me to the point—and I am sorry I came into this late—

Mr. Bullbrook: Not at all.

Mr. Sargent:—the thing is, we have a group called the Contact Centre there and they are a group of people who have been operating on a budget from the Local Incentives Programme. Is it Local Initiatives or Local Incentives?

Hon. Mr. Welch: Initiatives.

Mr. Sargent: Local Initiatives Programme from Ottawa. They ran out of money on Saturday. They got a phone call from Toronto here on Saturday afternoon that said, "You are out of business." So 20 people go down the drain and all their efforts are down the drain—which they have taken two or three years to build up. Every area in the city is supporting this group, but with the federal money, they have turned the tap off. The reason they have turned the tap off is because your administrator wrote in and told them he didn't want them interfering with his welfare programmes.

Mr. Martel: You people have never opened the tap up.

Mr. Sargent: Now, these people would go to bat for the people and get back to a member, to people in authority, and we would get things done for people. For the super-minister to sit there and say that you should give these programmes to profit people, it doesn't work.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I didn't say that.

Mr. Sargent: Why, you said that there may not be people who would do that for free.

Hon. Mr. Welch: I didn't say that. The explanation of the minister is not that—

Mr. Sargent: Well, I understood you to say that. But there are lots of people on the Contact programme who'll go out and do a job in this area.

Mr. Martel: That's right.

Hon. Mr. Welch: Thousands upon thousands.

Mr. Sargent: I suggest, Mr. Minister, that you will have to take a good, clean, new look at what you're doing for people in this province, because the arrogance of some of your administrators is completely unrealistic. They go completely by the book and you can't do that in dealing with people, as you know. You couldn't be where you are today unless you cared about people, but your people don't care about people.

I suggest to you that when this amendment comes before you we are going to support it, and I would like to ask the minister to make moneys available to put that Contact Centre in Owen Sound back in business as of tomorrow morning, if he will do it.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): I don't think there is sufficient clarity in the bill, at least for my purposes.

On several occasions, Mr. Chairman, the minister has mentioned a single agency or institution to which the benefits would accrue, namely camps for children. But if it were possible, I would like to have the full range of what you really have in mind under this statute brought to light in this Legislature so we really know what we are dealing with. Exactly what have you got in mind under the heading of this section?

The member for Nipissing pointed out that the Children's Aid Society must have its considerable role to play in the children's allowances, so it is only by indirection that you are working there. Exactly what does this particular section aim at?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I mentioned it.

Mr. Bullbrook: I would like to add, if I might, that I wanted to make the point that it would seem to me that those on the government side can't resist the wisdom in the intention of the amendment, really. It's an unattractive concept for all that people should make a profit out of tax dollars for the provision of social services. That's an unattractive concept.

Hon. Mr. Welch: The incentives programme.

Mr. Bullbrook: I am talking to the minister. I'll get to the secretary in a moment. May I suggest to you that that is basically an unattractive concept, and I would hope the minister wouldn't resist that generalization.

What the member for Lakeshore and everybody else is asking for is some example of your need. The one you have brought forward thus far is the question of assistance through trade schools. Well then, one wonders what in heaven's name the Provincial Secretary for Social Development is doing? When I see community colleges advertising courses in cake decorating I wonder where his policy integration is. What is he doing with those community colleges, which are his responsibility? Why isn't he integrating those programmes under curriculum development there with the needs that you have under trade schools?

Those trade schools are a farce. The minister knows it. The trade school section of the Ministry of Colleges and Universities knows that they are a farce. The accreditation procedures in connection with those trade schools are a farce. Go down to King St. and Yonge St. and see Career Colleges where they charge little girls $1,000 to become dental assistants, and when they give them the certificate they can't get a job anyway. There is where the Provincial Secretary for Social Development has a totally integrated responsibility in connection with this bill, right there, right there.

If, in point of fact, there is something wrong in principle in spending public funds to the profit of other people for the social needs of our citizens, then you can't resist it by saying, "I am sorry, they are providing a service that we can't provide." That is the function and responsibility of the secretary who sits in the front row and is supposed to develop an integrated policy in that field.

Mr. Renwick: There are many citizens' groups—

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Minister?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Just a brief word.

Mr. Sargent: I like those apples.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: As I mentioned earlier, it's certainly our intention to use, whenever possible, non-profit agencies. At the same time we do feel that when they are not available, and the services are available, we should not be limited by this amendment. And if I may use an example, take a foster home. If in a certain area there's no home for the aged, we should be able to enter directly into an agreement with that person, and to provide facilities—

Hon. Mr. Welch: What's wrong with that?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: —to look after that elderly person.

Hon. Mr. Welch: What's wrong with that?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: So this is what we're asking for, just flexibility.

Hon. Mr. Welch: What's wrong with that?

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the minister a question?

Mr. Chairman: The member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Minister, I won't flog this point, but under this section 6(e), the government may enter into agreements with organizations, municipalities, other persons or corporations—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Sorry.

Mr. Sargent: It's all right. Will the minister undertake to give me an undertaking that he will make available about $72,000 for Contact in Owen Sound under this section 6(e)?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Seventy-two thousand dollars for what?

Mr. Sargent: To keep Contact Centre in Owen Sound operative under this section 6(e) if it passes.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, if the hon. member has an individual problem, we'd certainly be glad to look into it.

Mr. Martel: Well, the minister has been looking into the Welfare Act since May.

Mr. Sargent: Well, I mean does it qualify under 6(e)? Does this qualify contact centres?

Mr. J. Duksza (Parkdale): It's a very good point.

Mr. Sargent: Does it qualify? I'm sorry, Mr. Minister, I just want to know.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This section, Mr. Chairman—

Mr. Martel: I will write the provincial secretary tomorrow, after it passes.

Mr. Sargent: The minister is the boss. Does he know? Does it qualify or not?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: This section, as it says, permits agreements with agencies, municipalities and so forth:

The minister may enter into agreements with organizations, municipalities or other persons or corporations, respecting the provision of social and community services, including—

Mr. Sargent: I can read! I can read! Yes!

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Well, if the member can read, there it is!

Mr. Sargent: Well, will the minister give me an undertaking that he will put them back in business right away by giving them $72,000 for their budget?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I'd be glad to give the hon. member an undertaking that I certainly will look into it.

Mr. Martel: The minister has been looking into the welfare section since April.

Mr. Chairman: Ready for the question? With respect to section 2, subsection 6(e), it is moved by Mr. Martel that clause 2 of Bill 225 be amended by adding the words "on a non-profit basis" after the word "provision" in the proposed section 6(a).

The House divided on the amendment moved by Mr. Martel, which was negatived on the following vote:

Clerk of the House: Mr. Chairman, the "ayes" are 35, the "nays" are 62.

Mr. Chairman: I declare the motion defeated.

Shall the latter part of the motion carry after the word "operation" in proposed section 7(a)?

Section 2 carried.

Are there any comments on any other sections of the bill?

Bill 225, as amended, reported.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves that the committee rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House begs to report one bill without amendment and one bill with one amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

DENTAL TECHNOLOGISTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Potter moves second reading of Bill 203, An Act to provide for the Licensing and Practice of Dental Technologists.

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill 203, I would like to advise the House that I will be referring the bill to the standing committee on social development, and at that time I will be recommending to the committee an amendment changing the name of the auxiliary from dental technologists to dental therapist. Since Bill 203 is so closely associated with Bill 204, I will also be making a recommendation that an amendment be made to Bill 204 to include provision for lay representation on the Dentists' Governing Council and also to include that dentists' accounts must be itemized to show the actual cost of dentures, other laboratory costs and the professional fee, failing which the accounts should not be payable.

The report of the Dental Technologists Advisory Committee which was tabled on Nov. 21 contains recommendations for other amendments to the bill, primarily of a procedural nature, and these will also be introduced during discussion by the standing committee.

When I tabled the report of the Dental Technologists Advisory Committee, I outlined to members of the House our concerns leading up to presentation of the bill for second reading. In brief, and to state them again, there were two principal concerns: the health of the public, and provisions of such health care at the lowest possible cost compatible with adequate safeguards.

These then were the two overriding principals which have guided us in our thinking.

May I speak for a few moments, Mr. Speaker, about the Lowes report, if I might call it that. This was a report commissioned for a specific purpose and in keeping with Bill 203 as it was first introduced, namely: If denture therapists were to be licensed, what should be the guidelines and controls? The report group was not asked to consider the relative merits as to whether or not denture therapists should be licensed. This, I am sure the House agrees, is a function the Legislature should reserve for itself.

As I said at that time, and I would repeat, the report is excellent and thoroughly covered the specific grounds of its jurisdiction.

It did produce, however, one of the conundrums which the ministry has had to resolve. If we are to license denturists to practise independently, we will have to assure ourselves that the health care provisions are adequately covered. This point, covered in the Lowes report, calls for a three-year post-secondary school course with a realistic curriculum.

This has caused us major concern in determining if such a procedure, necessary from a health care consideration, is practical. At the ministry, we have come to the conclusion that the health care criteria, essential as a basic concomitant, produce an out-of-balance equation when we try to balance them with the second aspect of providing dentures at the lowest possible cost with built-in health safeguards.

I will request that the Lowes committee be reactivated to recommend qualifications for denture therapists as defined in the amended legislation. Under these circumstances, we do not feel that the three-year post-secondary course is justified.

During the recess, Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity of studying the National Health Services in Great Britain. I think they probably have had more experience in the delivery of health care than any other country in the world, and they insist that any type of dental auxiliary work be done in co-operation with and under the supervision of a qualified dentist.

At this stage, then, we came full circle, to review our position as to dental surgeons. Here we already had the built-in expertise for health care responsibility. It was essential, however, that we find a formula that would ensure the lowest possible cost.

This factor was finally resolved to our satisfaction by the submission of the Ontario Dental Association and the College of Dental Surgeons, who submitted that they are prepared to guarantee that dentures—a full upper and lower plate—would be provided for a normal, standard set at a current cost of $180 with any future increase subject to negotiation.

There are in operation at this moment 21 dental clinics across the province which are prepared to give—and in many cases are now giving—this service to the public at this price. They have guaranteed that additional clinics will be opened and that in those areas of the province where dental clinics are not a practicality, a similar service will be provided by individual dentists. This is a commitment by the dental profession, Mr. Speaker.

Since it was this government's intention from the beginning to see that dentures were provided to the public as economically as possible, and at the same time to assure the public of quality care, it has been the decision of the ministry to recommend to the standing committee an amendment to Bill 203 to require that the new type of denture therapist be licensed to operate under the supervision of a qualified dentist.

Mr. Speaker, I have outlined the underlying rationale for the proposed amendments to Bill 203 and I move second reading of the bill and that the bill be referred to the standing committee on social development.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it's fundamentally wrong that we should be asked to debate in this House a bill for which the minister has substantial amendments to bring in after we've completed the debate.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): It is going to committee.

Mr. Deans: I think the least the minister could do is provide us in the opposition with copies of the amendments that he intends to bring in in the committee in order that we can put those together with the bill and determine whether or not the bill then is worthy of support.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): It changes the whole principle.

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on the point of order which has been raised and which I believe is a valid one, I was going to ask the minister if he might clarify his last sentence or two. Did he say that he was going to offer an amendment requiring the supervision of a professional dentist before any services can be performed by the dental technician?

Mr. Deans: That is what he said.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): That is what he said.

Hon. Mr. Potter: That is right, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: On the point of order further, Mr. Speaker, in your judgement would this not simply negate the principle of the bill which, as it was originally introduced, was to allow these people to deal directly with the public? Is the minister, in fact, reversing the principle of the bill?

Mr. Deans: Yes, that's right.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): The original bill is redundant.

An hon. member: Certainly it is.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Potter: The bill, Mr. Speaker, was to provide for the licensing and practice of dental technologists. In the original—

Mr. J. R. Breithaupt (Kitchener): That is what is now being disallowed.

Hon. Mr. Potter: Pardon? It will still provide for the licensing and practice of dental technologists, only I am suggesting that when it comes for third reading I am going to recommend that it be done—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Third reading?

Hon. Mr. Potter: When it goes to committee rather, I will propose an amendment that it be done under the supervision of a dentist.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): You can forget that Lowes report.

Mr. Deans: Further to my point of order, I want to make it clear to you, sir—

Mr. Drea: He never does.

Mr. Deans: —that we are not debating the merits of the amendments here. The fact of the matter is that the explanatory note of the bill says that the bill creates a new profession to deal directly with the public for the taking of impressions and for fitting complete upper and lower dentures.

The minister has indicated that he intends to change that principle in committee and I feel it is wrong that we should be asked to debate a bill in principle when the principle is about to be changed.

Some hon. members: Right!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, surely you are going to make a ruling on this because the hon. member for Wentworth is absolutely correct. The principle is laid out in the explanatory note as he read it, and the minister's announcement of his intended amendments simply negates the principle. It reverses the stance of the bill.

There is only one course of action open to the minister and that is to withdraw the bill and bring in another one so that we can debate the principle that he intends to enact.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: How can we debate this bill? It cannot be debated under these circumstances.

Mr. Drea: Those are the guys who want to change everything.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is what the government is doing.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister had better think about that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! In connection with the point of order there is merit in the argument as I see it, but it was understood the other day, when the same topic was discussed and I was in my seat in the House, that this would be the way it was done. Apparently it was acceptable at that time.

Some hon. members: No, no!

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, I want to make it quite clear that there was no understanding that this was the way it would be done.

The minister indicated that he had some amendments. Had those amendments not changed the principle of the bill then it is entirely possible the bill might have been proceeded with, but the amendment that the minister intends to bring in does, in fact, change the principle of the bill and therefore makes this bill which we are about to debate redundant.

Mr. Drea: The member's own leader asked if there were amendments.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Not to the principle of the bill.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: I would further suggest on the point of order, Mr. Speaker—which I do consider to be an extremely important one, dealing with a matter of urgent public importance—that you suggest that this matter at least be put over until you have had an opportunity to consult with some advisers because surely, sir, you cannot permit the government to proceed with a bill under these circumstances.

Mr. Speaker: Without having the bill before me—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The bill has to do, as it says, with providing for the licensing and practice of dental technologists and I see nothing to change that in the proposed amendments—

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! A person can only speak once to a point of order. If you are not happy with the bill you can vote against it on second reading.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: No, on a further point of order—

Mr. Renwick: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The members of this caucus have met with representatives from the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, from the Association of Dental Technicians and from the dental therapists or dental technologists. We have discussed in detail with them the provisions of the bill in order that we could have an informed debate.

Now it is just not possible for there to be an intelligent debate on a bill which has been reversed, as has been said by others who have spoken on the motion, until we have had an opportunity to consult again with the various groups which have a prime interest in the bill and in its principle.

I ask, Mr. Speaker, that you determine your ruling, not on the basis of the title of the bill, but on the basis of the statements made by the minister when he introduced it, and on the explanatory note given to support the interpretation that we gave to the bill.

Mr. Drea: He asked for it.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I think it is very unfair for the cabinet ministers who are present in the House to put the Speaker in this invidious position. They have, of their own action, reversed the principle of the bill. They know this bill has been the subject of great public discussion for many, many months.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Way to go, Doc!

Mr. Singer: I would think if they had any sense of propriety, or democratic procedures, they would voluntarily withdraw this bill and withhold any debate until a new bill is presented to the House.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That is good advice!

Mr. Singer: I hope they don't put you in the unfortunate position where you have to make a ruling on an unfair matter of this kind.

Mr. MacDonald: On a final point of order!

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What makes the member final?

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, on a final point of order as far as I am concerned; a final point of order: It is unfair for them to put you in an invidious position, but you are the guardian of the rules of this House.

Mr. Drea: I can see the member crying all the way!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: It is certainly in gross violation of the traditional rules of this House that a minister should come in and announce on second reading and assignment to committee, that he is going to bring in an amendment which will reverse the whole principle of the bill.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): The opposition can't.

Mr. MacDonald: So it is your responsibility, painful as it may be, to ask that this bill be withdrawn.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Potter: I withdraw the bill, Mr. Speaker, and we can reintroduce it.

Mr. Speaker: In connection with the point of order, the basic principle is there, but it is changed with the proposed amendment.

Did the hon. minister say he was withdrawing this bill?

Hon. Mr. Potter: Yes!

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): He said he was withdrawing it and bringing in a new one.

Mr. Martel: There you are!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): Come on big mouth!

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): What about the committee system?

Clerk of the House: The second order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion that this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the government.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

When the House rose I wasn't sure whether the hon. member for Middlesex South (Mr. Eaton) had finished or not, but he is not here. I had the hon. member for York Centre down for the next speaker in the budget debate. Is he prepared to proceed?

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, the budget which was brought in by the government opposite proves one thing: that the Premier (Mr. Davis), in spite of all the campaign promises he made, simply cannot give something for nothing any more than anyone else can.

Some of us, Mr. Speaker, have been recalling that the Premier during the course of the election campaign, which of course a lot of us would sooner forget, stated that the Conservative Party would not promise anything it could not afford. Well, this budget that we have been examining this year certainly seems to have put the lid on that idea, because obviously taxes are having to be raised all around.

But without a doubt, Mr. Speaker, the basic feature of this budget is that it shows up how very lacking in perspective this government is when it comes to an order of priorities. In fact one might say that those priorities are extremely distorted! There is an increase of about two per cent on tobacco, an increase of from five per cent to 10 per cent on booze, and this is compared with an increase of 17 per cent to 60 per cent on tuition fees.

There certainly seems to be a lack of perspective here, and as my colleague from Kent (Mr. Spence) says, the sacrament of marriage is not even safe from the government's predatory fingers when there has been a 50 per cent increase in the cost of marriage licences.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): Good move!

Mr. Deacon: There you are then! If this government has its priorities all wrong, what should these priorities be? Where should the government be spending its money—I should say where should it be spending "our" money—to achieve the best possible value for the people of this province?

I would say to the government, as Dolly Levy says in "Hello Dolly": "Money is like manure; it doesn't do any good unless you spread it around a little."

The Toronto-centred region has been getting most of the goodies for years, and this budget continues to provide ill-conceived, destructive, socialistic and bureaucratic projects such as North Pickering, more vast expanses of expressways and lavish and costly centres such as Ontario Place and the Science Centre. But at last, as yesterday's election results showed, Toronto is beginning to realize that these so-called goodies are beginning to give it cause for concern.

Too much gorging by one area of the province is the cause of over-congestion here and starvation of opportunities in other parts of Ontario. It should be a priority of this government to spread more opportunities throughout Ontario to the other communities of this province, big and small.

It should be a priority of this government to ensure that the people in these communities have some control over their own quality of life and standard of living. It should be a priority of this government to make sure that the choice of jobs, choice of services and choice of living accommodation are available to people throughout the province.

It should be a priority of this government to ensure that the present projections for a population of eight million people for the Toronto-centred region by the year 2000 never come to pass. This government should use its spending power to ensure that the bulldozer of so-called progress, which has been allowed to run rampant in the Toronto-centred region because this government has been hypnotized with the idea of bigness for its own sake, should not flatten everything in its path as we speed towards the 21st century, with ever-increasing problems of pollution, economic instability and a reduction in the quality of life.

I say again, Mr. Speaker, that the Toronto region must not—in fact I am convinced that it will not—be allowed to grow to eight million people. The people of Toronto, and indeed the people of this province, will not tolerate it. Growth—and growth there will and must be—should come throughout the province, with opportunity and choice available to people in all parts of Ontario.

Unfortunately, the total thrust of this present budget, and indeed of this government's actions for some years, seems to be predicated on growth measured by very narrow and inadequate standards. The Metro Centre development for example, depends on a population of eight million in the Toronto region to make it financially feasible. But the side-effects in the form of intolerable congestion and inconvenience can result in it being a community disaster.

The proposed Pickering airport only makes any kind of sense at all if it is associated with a mushrooming population in this region. But it destroys a major portion of those very areas that the government originally designated as essential greenbelt.

There is no evidence anywhere in this budget, or in any other of its actions, that this government realizes the problems of unlimited growth in this region. It seems determined to let the Toronto region become bloated and unstable like so many large metropolitan regions in the world—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and Tokyo, for example. Belatedly, the authorities in these areas are trying to correct the problems which have come to them as a result of sheer bigness; yet the Ontario government seems to have learned nothing from the experiences of others.

The government seems to think that it can sit in a central position and decide, for example, solely on the basis of averages, whether the quality of life is being maintained for the people of Ontario.

It seems to think that it can decide, for example, that if a man leaves, say Smiths Falls, which is his home, because there is no opportunity for work there, and comes to Toronto and earns $10,000 a year, that is necessarily an improvement in his way of life and his standard of living. Yet that same man would in all likelihood be far happier living in his home in Smiths Falls, which costs much less money. He is still able to enjoy all those values, other than straight material values, which will accrue to him from living in a smaller centre.

There is the absence of noise, the absence of pollution, room to breathe, greenbelt areas, the ability to be part of a closely knit and concerned community; and by his actions to affect the quality of life in that community.

I have news for the Premier, and his high-flying cabinet. Some people prefer jeans to mink stoles. Some people even prefer walking to flying in $2 million executive jets; and not everybody wants to live in this asphalt jungle.

I see no evidence that this government is taking a hard look at the cost of all this so-called progress. It isn't asking the questions that it should be asking. Can we afford it? Is it worth it? Where, in fact, is it leading us? Do the people of Ontario want eight million people in the Toronto region in the year 2000? Have we no choice? Can we not control this; or must it instead control us?

I'd like to see some evidence that this government has a concern for the quality of life in the whole Province of Ontario. The only plan for redistribution of anything from the Toronto region to other parts of the province is that for transporting trainloads of garbage out to them. That must be the last straw. "Send us your people and we'll send you our garbage."

I'd like to see some evidence that it has a programme to deal with all the problems of transportation—the business of moving people, quietly, efficiently and economically from one area to another; not just within its own Toronto-centred region—which result from the fact that this Province of Ontario is larger than several European countries put together.

I'd like to see some evidence that this government has the intestinal fortitude to contemplate deep surgery for the problems of Ontario, rather than simply applying a Band-Aid where it hurts. This government is bleeding less favoured parts of the province to feed the Toronto region.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Right!

Mr. Deacon: And, we all know that the Toronto region is already suffering from high blood pressure with the accompanying symptoms of nose bleeds and headaches leading to a possible fatal haemorrhage.

What happens is this. A man in Nakina, for example, finds that he has no job opportunities or business opportunities. There is no economic base any longer, nor does there appear to be any assistance on the horizon from this government. And yet this place is his home. He paid a few thousand hard-earned dollars for it, but because there are no prospects for jobs, it is now nearly worthless.

Nakina is a place where he could survive; where he could live his own life much more satisfactorily. But we apparently are forcing this man to live where the jobs are. If he comes to Toronto or other large centres he finds that the costs of housing, the costs of living are far, far higher there.

In order to cover these costs, he must find a job which pays more. Because the job pays more, this again reflects itself in higher costs elsewhere in Ontario because the products that are made at these higher wages have to cost more. A spiral effect, an upward spiral, starts to take place.

Why does the new headquarters for the Workmen's Compensation Board have to be here?

An hon. member: Right!

Mr. Deacon: Why do we have to pay $7 per sq ft for its new head office when we could have had equivalent quality accommodation at half the cost in Peterborough or Orillia, or Sudbury or North Bay? For that matter, how do we justify lending $15 million and buying $7 million worth of land at the corner of Bloor and Yonge to cause more intolerable congestion and pollution in Toronto and deprive another part of the province of a great opportunity for employment?

Instead of creating all the opportunities here and here alone; instead of denuding other centres; instead of forcing people to come here by creating the best opportunities in Toronto, we should be helping them to solve the problems in the places where they live. By failing to do so, we are creating even more problems for ourselves in the future.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Look out, Jim. This is going to get him a lot of votes in northern Ontario.

Mr. Deacon: People come to the big centres, but then we provide them with no room to live. They are forced either to accept less suitable, cramped, costly accommodation, or to live so far out in the dormitory suburbs that they help compound the transportation problem all over again.

With our Toronto-centred region plan we are building up all the misery, all the confrontations, all the problems that come with excessive size, as we have seen in the large cities in the United States—riots, conflict, violence, excessive welfare problems. We can prevent that but only if we allow ourselves to shape events rather than be shaped by the events themselves.

Let us look, Mr. Speaker, at some specific items of expenditure as presented in this budget.

Let us see if, with a little more foresight, a little more careful planning, a little more concern for the welfare—the real welfare—of all the people of Ontario, throughout the province, we could make a start on a commonsense programme of so allocating our expenditures that they will act to the benefit of all.

I note, for example, that highway expenditures in this budget—that is, expenditures for the construction of highways—are estimated at $375 million. That is a lot of roadbeds laid and concrete poured and asphalt mixed. However, my calculations indicate that only $28 million of that $375 million is earmarked for construction north of the French River. Another small portion has been graciously handed out to eastern Ontario in order that another miniscule piece of Highway 417 can be completed.

Highway officials will say, "Yes, but you see we are spending far more per capita in the less densely populated areas than we are in the heavily populated areas." Of course, that is nonsense; or at least it is nonsense to quote that sort of unrelated figure. Of course, they are spending far more per capita. There are far fewer people. In fact, far fewer "per capita", as it were, and distances are far greater! The amount bears no relation to the sort of job that has to be done.

Consider this, Mr. Speaker. If the government were to take $100 million of the money presently allocated for highway construction in the rest of Ontario and spend that money in the less favoured areas in northern and eastern Ontario, for example, think what a fantastic effect it would have upon these areas! The deletion of $100 million would not materially cause the roads in the more heavily populated parts of Ontario to deteriorate. Our standards are already high, among the highest on this continent. In fact, in my own region of York, they have been building four-lane highways from nowhere to nowhere to keep the road contractors and their bulldozers and asphalt layers occupied.

But so little has been spent to provide good standards of transportation—the lifeblood of communities in our less densely populated areas.

The diversion of $100 million would boost morale; it would increase living standards; it would demonstrate to the people of these areas that the government is sincere in its efforts to bring them a greater quality of life. It would help spark a great deal of increased activity in all the towns in these areas—activity which would lead to more jobs, more services, greater prosperity—a step in the right direction.

Incidentally, I notice that the former Minister of Highways was inclined to fly everywhere in northwestern Ontario whenever he had occasion to visit this less densely populated part of the province. He didn't dare try to get around that area in his limousine for he would have broken all its springs in doing so.

I believe that it should be part of the responsibility of the Minister of Transport and Communications (Mr. Carton): to travel on a school bus in northern Ontario every so often, as the children of the area have to do every school day, and see just what sort of transportation system his ministry is providing.

While we are on the matter of the Ministry of Transportation and Communications I have another suggestion for helping the less favoured areas of this province. I understand there are some 14,000 employees in the Ministry and I am informed by reliable sources that at least 3,000 of these could be relocated outside Toronto where they now work. Dispersing their places of work could result in more efficiency and other advantages in that ministry.

Three thousand employees and their families—think of the spending power that would be put into other regions of this province. Think of the jobs, the related services necessary, the better schooling that would happen in these centres into which these government employees moved with their guaranteed jobs and pay packets.

Toronto going to eight million people. What nonsense. The Premier should spread it around.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): Right.

Mr. Deacon: Spread it around, and I am not referring to Toronto's garbage.

It is apparent, Mr. Speaker, that this government's policy is to try to centralize everything, even though, with its ill-conceived policy of regional government, it has paid lip service to the idea of decentralization.

Nowhere is the evil of overall central control exhibited more blatantly than in the area of education. Here, a heavy-handed, top-heavy imposition from Queen's Park is stifling the initiative of local school boards everywhere.

It is coming up with brilliant schemes, like the Moosonee Education Centre, which appears to be a monument only to the fancies of an architect, and the ego of the former Minister of Education, now our Premier. The Moosonee Education Centre has done nothing really to help the area, nothing really to help the people of that area. The reason—simple! It was not planned nor executed nor operated by the people who know the area best, the people whom it was supposed to serve—the people of the area.

But, of course, the ministry knows best—the ministry and its experts. Consider this: Based on a US study, the Ministry of Education came up with the fact that apparently a school of 5,000 pupils is cheaper to operate than a school of 50 pupils. For this reason, therefore, apparently operating on the government's belief that bigness is next to godliness, the quality of education produced by such schools should be better. The ministry reduced its norm from 5,000 to a 1,500 or 2,000 maximum and then proceeded to apply this sort of reasoning to education in Ontario.

Of course, the size of the school has little to do with economics. The economics of education depends on the benefits that each student derives from that education, not on the economies which can be effected by centralization.

Education is not a sausage machine. It is not a matter of putting meat in one end and bringing sausages out the other, all at pre-conceived per-unit costs. Whenever a country decides that it wishes to raise its standards of education, it does that because it reasons that the benefit it receives will be shown after the standards have been raised. The economies of education come simply from the quality of the students who are a product of that education, and the abilities which they then bring to the society as a whole.

The mass education route—the extravagant sausage machine—is turning off students. In fact, it is producing, at many times the cost, students who are less interested in education now than those from the old days of the neighbourhood school boards and their little red school-houses.

The best type of education comes from close co-operation between teachers, students and parents, all working together. They work best in small, decentralized, wholly responsible units, particularly when those units and the public they represent are kept well informed about what they are achieving in comparison with their counterparts, and how this is being accomplished.

Bureaucracy should contribute little, other than to provide unconditional funding and to act as a clearing house for the exchange of ideas and for publishing the evaluation of results, thus providing each school grouping with alternatives on which to base its decisions as to the best type of education for its area.

The money that this government grants in the form of education should be on a dollar-per-pupil basis, with no strings attached—although I should hasten to add here that the money spent by the Ministry of Education should, of course, be publicly accountable. I am sure that we will be hearing more about that later.

Mr. Speaker, this is a government which seems concerned with bigness for its own sake. This is a government which is prepared to let Toronto grow to eight million people, not because it thinks that that is best for Toronto, or best for Ontario, but simply because it appears unable to produce plans which will benefit the quality of life of the people of this province, not only for tomorrow, but for the day after tomorrow, and for the day after that. In short, the government appears to lack common sense.

No, wait a minute; I'll retract that. I wonder whether I can, though, after what just happened in this House a few minutes ago. There is one member who seems to have common sense and good qualities, and I think this is as good a time to say it as another. I'm referring to the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter), who has come into his ministry and on to the government scene like a fresh breeze at times—although at times he has also put the government in a bit of a turmoil as he has this afternoon.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Well, he just blew it.

Mr. Deacon: He is direct, he is practical, he tries to deal with problems on a common-sense basis and is trying to provide a new approach to health care. He is prepared to enter into a complete reassessment of the health facilities in this province by means of district health councils which could, if they are properly organized, bring control and direction of health care back into the community. He agrees we cannot afford hide-bound methods any more. Maybe the other members of this government should learn something from him.

Mr. Speaker, no one can accurately foretell the future but we cannot, as this government seems prepared to do, sit still with our hands folded and wait until it catches up to us. If quality of life is to be more than a meaningless phrase for the people of this province, then it is the responsibility of the government of this province to see that the quality of life is extended to all citizens. It will not be achieved by a Toronto of eight million people. It will not be achieved by taking the reins of government and tying them in a tight knot at the centre of things in Queen's Park. It will only come with the realization that growth must be nurtured and distributed throughout Ontario.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Cochrane South.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I'd like to make a few contributions to this debate. As I see the smiling face of the Leader of the Opposition looking—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): I always like to hear the member speak.

Mr. Ferrier: —I would like to deal, first of all, with something with which he was particularly familiar and in which he participated; that is, the northern tour that took place last September in the early part of the month.

This was put on as a big production where-by we were going to go and see the north-central and the north-east parts of the province. The minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier) and his staff set up the tour. They didn't invite any suggestions from any of the members of the areas to which the tour was going. What they did was that they wrote to the chamber of commerce, and the chambers of commerce are supposed to speak for all the people of the northeast. I suppose there is such a love relationship between the government and the chambers of Commerce—the chamber of commerce is the Tory organization in every community—that is why the government took their advice.

I don't think that on that tour we actually saw many of the most significant things. It was interesting; the hospitality was very good; the company was enjoyable. But there were a lot more things that could have been seen had we consulted some other people who would have made some suggestions.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): It was dark when the member took us around.

Mr. Ferrier: The tour of Timmins was after dark, and I had to try to point a few things out to the members.

Mr. McIlveen: The member explained everything in the dark.

Mr. Ferrier: I would say that it was a down-right shame that only one cabinet minister went on that tour. That was the Minister of Natural Resources.

An hon. member: The Minister of Community and Social Services (Mr. Brunelle) was there.

Mr. Ferrier: The Minister of Community and Social Services went along for a day when it went through his riding, but none of the rest went.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ferrier: I want to say that it was educational to a point; but to put out that kind of money and have just two of the cabinet go, I think is a shame. We are still waiting for the Chairman of the Management Board to come up to the north. He announced when he was in that other portfolio that he was going to take a tour of the north.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): I was. The member should ask his colleague.

Mr. Ferrier: We would like to see the minister there.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: He knows I was there.

Mr. Ferrier: We would give him a very warm northern welcome, anytime he'd like to come.

Mr. E. R. Good (Waterloo North): How come the member for Sudbury East (Mr. Martel) was not there when the group went through his riding?

Mr. Ferrier: I know that the Leader of the Opposition has made a few statements. We've discussed the Texas Gulf situation back and forth. When we were talking about the conflict of interest legislation in this province, everybody was quick to get on the bandwagon to say what investments they had. I'd suggest to the Leader of the Opposition that if he wants to upgrade his portfolio he could sell his shares in Cara and then he could buy Texas Gulf and he'd probably be a lot further ahead.

Mr. D. A. Paterson (Essex South): He sounds like an investment dealer.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Paterson: Still reading the Financial Post?

Mr. Ferrier: One thing that has occupied my attention during the summer has been being a member of the select committee on land drainage. I would like to say as a member of that committee that I think we've done a fairly useful service for a lot of the farm people of this province.

We have gone out and met with many of the farmers and discussed some of the real problems that they are experiencing in their land drainage. It has been a working committee and I think that we have come up with a good interim report which will be of benefit to the people, should it be acted on.

We were pleased to welcome the select committee on snowmobiles into my riding. We had a very good meeting. One thing that came up at that meeting which has, I think, aggravated snowmobilers all across the province, is this raising of the licence fee to $10.

Mr. J. E. Stokes (Thunder Bay): It isn't even a licensing fee, it's just a registration.

Mr. Ferrier: Registration—and it has been done by regulation so they could slip it through without anybody knowing. Some of the people in my riding brought up the fact that they don't go on the roads, they just go back in the bush and yet they have to pay this fee. I think it was unjust. I think it was rather a sneaky way of exacting more money out of recreation-minded people. I think that the government in the next budget could cut back on that fee. I think it would be very much justified.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Keep talking!

Mr. Ferrier: I have to concur with the statements of the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. R. S. Smith) and the hon. member for Sudbury East and others on the levels of the FBA pensions. To suggest that people can really—really—exist on the mothers' allowances and on the disability allowances and so on, is so unfair. I would think that there should be some more humanity over there.

We talk about the $150 for the old age pensioner not being enough, but yet the disabled are expected to get by on $105 or $115. In many cases their health is gone and the support they need is equally as great as the old age pensioner.

I think that humanity itself requires that these pensions be upgraded. The cost of food has gone up. The cost of rents has gone up. If these people are to live in anything else but a slum they have to take money from some other part of the budget to pay their rent.

I just don't think that in this province, and in this day and age, that we should force this kind of indignity upon citizens of this province, some of them at the lower end of the economic scale. I think it is taking unfair advantage of a significant group of people, and that is not fair.

Another suggestion that I would like to make to the government—it has come from the great city of Timmins—is that the municipal elections could well be held early in October, as took place in the new municipality of Timmins—I guess it is called Timmins now—and in Sudbury and Waterloo and so on. Everybody was celebrating victories and so on yesterday, but the turnout was very very poor here. Up in Timmins the turnout was much higher.

I think that if you had the municipal election earlier—when the weather was better it would have been easier for poll workers to get the votes out—you would get a much larger participation in municipal elections.

We have seen the cutbacks taking place in health spending and in school spending. I am concerned, for instance, in my riding, the Timmins High and Vocational School is an old building and needs to be upgraded, and the ministry has turned thumbs down on any spending for that building. I hope to pursue that more with the minister. I think that the previous ministers of health have really compounded a problem in this province by putting so much emphasis on active treatment care for sick people, the most expensive kind of care possible.

They put all the emphasis on that and we have got a health system that costs so much that now you start paring back on it and causing dislocation, and so on. If there had been proper planning in that department before and attention had been given to chronic-care beds and a much wider application of the home-care programme—convalescent type of units such as they have in Alberta—I would think that the type of cutbacks that are taking place now would not have been required.

I want to speak just for a couple of minutes about a project that has been initiated by a group that I was knocking a few minutes ago, but I think that it is very worthwhile so I am going to endorse it and give it extra publicity here in the House. It is a proposal that was put forward by the Timmins-Porcupine Chamber of Commerce, of all people, and it is a proposal that they have made to the Ministry of Industry and Tourism. It was announced previously that some consideration would be given to some type of feature attraction in the north, something like the Science Centre or Ontario Place down here.

Of course, when that announcement was made you got one municipality vying with the other to get the big attraction. I hope—and I have expressed it in letters to the Prime Minister (Mr. Davis) and to the Ministry of Industry and Tourism—that rather than spend all the money in one place the money be spread out so that a number of communities benefit from it.

My area has not got too much in the way of tourism. It does not attract the number of tourists that many of the areas of the north attract. For instance, during the months of June, July and August, the number of registrations of tourists in the Timmins-Porcupine area is just equal to approximately one day of tourist registration in all of Sault Ste.

Marie. So we really do need something more to promote tourism in our area.

What the Chamber of Commerce has suggested is that there needs to be a centre with natural resources and industry related to it. Thousands of Ontario citizens owe their livelihood almost entirely to the mining and forest industries, yet they know little about the industries, and few have the opportunity to see the initial stages through which raw materials must pass before they reach the factories and urban centres. At the same time, they are unable to appreciate the need for conservation and the planned extractions of our natural resources.

So they have proposed a Natural Resources Science Centre. The centre would consist of a building complex housing numerous displays and scale models relating to the resources and the resources-related industries in northern Ontario. Displays could represent conservation, forestry, mining and hydro-electric production. From the conservation point of view, a wildlife display of stuffed animals and birds in a natural setting could be combined with aquariums or pools with various species of fish; plant life—with various types of trees, their use, life to maturity, effects on soil erosion—could be included and would demonstrate the need for preserving our forests.

For mining, they suggest that a display would simulate an underground tour that would show the mine workings and other things like this. As for forestry, it could show a lumber and pulp industry operation, and it could show how hydro-electric power is generated from various sources.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member find this a convenient place to pause in his remarks?

Mr. Ferrier: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker.

It being 6 o'clock, p.m., the House took recess.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1972

The House resumed at 8 o'clock p.m.

Clerk of the House: The second order, resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion that this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the government.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. Speaker: When we rose at 6 o'clock the hon. member for Cochrane South had the floor. If he would continue, please.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I have just a few remarks to finish my speech. I would like to say that it was a very pleasant supper hour and the hospitality of the Speaker is as good as it ever was. We all enjoyed ourselves.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That is a Delphic oracle pronouncement. Be more explicit!

Mr. Ferrier: Yes, indeed.

I was talking about this project in the town of Timmins. I would like to read the summary of the project. It says:

A complex of this type would, we believe, be the only one of its kind in the country. We believe that tourists would be attracted to it as they are to the Ontario Science Centre and Ontario Place. Where else, in a matter of hours, could they see electricity being produced, go underground in a mine, visit a small sawmill, walk through the bush and see hundreds of animals, birds and fish in a natural environment?

The value of this complex in the field of education would be immeasurable. Thousands of students, elementary, secondary and university, visit the area each year as part of their education programmes. The time factor makes it impossible for them to see or learn much about the north, its people and its industry. Since all areas mentioned are related to natural resources which are abundant in the Timmins-Porcupine area, we are confident that expertise would be available from local people to assist in the development of the various displays.

I think that the idea is a very good one. I know that the government over there has put a freeze on spending in a number of areas, but I think that a number of the communities in northern Ontario could benefit from some money being spent there to provide this kind of tourist attraction.

I would like to support the concept put forward and hope that the government, within the next few years, would see fit to respond in a positive way. With some assistance from the local people, this kind of complex could come into being in Timmins, with perhaps another one in Cobalt and one up the way in Kapuskasing, and so on. It is an exciting prospect and it would give us an extra base for our economic life and foundation.

Now, I noticed in the statement the Minister of Health (Mr. Potter) made before he withdrew his bill to introduce it again in another form, that he had negotiated the fees the dentists were going to charge for false teeth. I am glad that this principle has been accepted and that we are now going to have negotiation of fees with the various professions.

I will look forward to his announcement as it pertains to the medical profession and fees under OHSIP; and following that we will look forward to the announcement by the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) for the negotiation of fees under the legal aid plan.

It is a very exciting statement that the minister made today and I am glad that he finally responded in a positive way to the suggestions that this party has been making to him and his former colleagues for quite some time.

Mr. MacDonald: The light has dawned!

Mr. Ferrier: The light has dawned, and we are delighted that he is the minister who has made this announcement. We always knew that he was forthright in his statements.

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): The member had too much orange juice for supper.

Mr. Ferrier: I know the doctors don't like this, but one of their own number made this suggestion, the principle that is now enshrined in the statements of this House; and I am afraid they are going to have to live with it and like it or lump it.

Now there is just one other item I want to deal with before I sit down and let more weighty members of the House engage in this debate—

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): The member is too modest.

Mr. Ferrier:—and that is to express my opposition to the Reville report. When that type of report comes in, all I can say about Reville is that the government should have appointed a select committee of this Legislature to deal with it and not have given it to a crowd like that; because I believe it is about as reactionary a document as has been presented in this province for a long time. The member for Port Arthur (Mr. Foulds) has put out an excellent review of that report, expressing the opposition of this party to it. I want to say that I endorse that review.

I think that it is grossly unfair to allow, or to suggest that the trustees can bring in some skilled negotiator to carry on their negotiations. Well, the trustees haven't got time to prepare for meaningful negotiations, they have got to have some big shot come in and do it for them; but the teachers are supposed to have all the time in the world to prepare for it.

Mr. J. A. Taylor (Prince Edward-Lennox): Watch it, Reverend; it isn't our report.

Mr. J. M. Turner (Peterborough): Don't get carried away.

Mr. Ferrier: I just want to say that that provision is unacceptable to the teachers and it is unacceptable to this party and it is unacceptable to me. I think that the minister had better come in with something a little better than this report if he is going to promote some harmony among the teachers and the people of this province.

Then there is the idea of taking out a number of the principals who have some leadership to offer and who would probably take a pretty hard stance as far as some of the negotiation procedures are concerned. I don't think that is a very good thing either to try to take them out of the bargaining unit.

As another thing, I want to say that teachers are concerned about education. To say that they can only negotiate their salaries and this type of thing and not have any meaningful say in what goes on in the classroom—their teacher-pupil ratio, and a lot of these other things—is a retrograde step.

I know the minister is studying this a little more fully and I hope that he doesn't accept the kind of legislation that has been brought in to strap down the civil servants as a model for this one; because I kind of think the teachers will fight back a little more effectively than the civil servants did.

The government of British Columbia tried to slap the teachers down and push them around—

Mr. MacDonald: The previous government!

Mr. Ferrier: The previous government!

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): That is why it is previous.

Mr. Ferrier: The teachers finally came awake to the fact that they had to do something of a political nature.

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Very well said!

Mr. Ferrier: They were a significant force that brought down the Social Credit government there. We now have a decent, forward-looking, progressive government there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): About time it happened in Ontario as well.

Mr. Turner: The member for Cochrane South has been working too much.

Mr. Ferrier: I am telling you, Mr. Speaker, they are going to be presenting model legislation that will bring in a new day for the people of British Columbia. Ontario is going to have to be doing some running to keep up with the kind of government that is going to take place in that province, and is taking place there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ferrier: I said I was going to speak for five minutes; I have spoken for 10. I think I have made a contribution to the debate. With these remarks I will sit down.

Hon. Mr. Winkler moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): I think there is a degree of unanimity that we revert to introduction of bills so that the Minister of Health can re-introduce a bill as a result of the debate this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: Do we have unanimous consent?

Agreed.

DENTURE THERAPISTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Potter moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to provide for the Licensing and Practice of Denture Therapists.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. R. T. Potter (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. members have already had the explanation. Rather than delay the House I will forego any explanation at this time.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Did the minister call that an explanation?

Clerk of the House: The second order; resuming the adjourned debate on the amendment to the amendment to the motion that this House approves in general the budgetary policy of the government.

ON THE BUDGET

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, I want to mention several matters I think are worthy of note for the House to consider in relation to the budget. One of those is the very great concern I and my people have in regard to the possibility of delay that may arise due to the international airport site and the North Pickering development, and what a delay might do to services for my people. I would like to suggest to the Ministry of Transportation and Communications that I feel that certain things must be done, regardless of the developments and the processes that will proceed in regard to those two development projects.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Sock it to them!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: One of these is that my area should be serviced with the project that has been underway and under planning, called the Greater Metro Freeway, and that there should be full consideration and immediate instigation of action regarding the possibility of a Scarborough Expressway and its attachment to the Gardiner Expressway.

Mr. F. Young (Yorkview): Oh, Bill is not going to like that.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I realize that it is the concern of people in Metro, but I think Metro Toronto is bigger than just the people here, that we in other parts of the province have an interest in this city, a very vital interest. On behalf of my people I put forth the need for this promotional project to get underway. In my experience here in eight years—a little over eight years now and going on for 10—I have seen the completion of the Gardiner Expressway to where it stops now at the eastern end from the exhibition grounds. In that time I have seen the completion of the Don Valley Parkway, the widening of Highway 401 and the rebuilding of the road up to Sutton from the end of the Don Valley Parkway. I have seen all those highway developments that have been undertaken in that period of time, and my experience in travelling into this city is that our need for additional serviced routes and facilities is greater than it was eight years ago.

I do feel that we have to proceed or else we will be delayed to the point where the need will breed chaos in the eastern end of the city.

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): The member is going against the government's policy.

Mr. W. Newman (Ontario South): We're talking of the east end; don't worry about it.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: But I do think that we have to have that facility. There is absolutely no need for delay in a route bypassing the town of Markham for Highway 48. There is absolutely no need for delay, in my opinion, in building Highway 407 from Markham eastward to this eastern terminal in its present planning stage, regardless of whether there is going to be a North Pickering or an international airport.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Right!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: These links are necessary now. When one travels down from Muskoka on the east side of Lake Simcoe or from the counties of Victoria and Haliburton, one realizes there is an immediate need, not a delayed need.

I say that this government should move on these projects almost immediately or else we will have—

An hon. member: Highway robbery!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson:—chaos in the eastern end of this city, the like of which they haven't got anywhere else in North America.

Mr. Singer: Except in the western end!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: When we went over to England we saw some traffic jams in London—and I don't want that to happen in this Province of Ontario. I feel we must have that facility, and to me it is a very urgent matter.

I would like to mention one other thing. This province is considering a policy for natural resources. I think it is good that we are doing this, but I think there is one important principle that should be considered.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Public ownership.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I am not for public ownership—only where necessary.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): That's exactly their position.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): That puts him ahead of many of the Tories.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I am sorry if I don't agree with my colleagues across the floor, but I want to say that this world is in very short supply of various minerals.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): And land.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: When one realizes there is only about 30 years' supply of natural gas at the present pace of usage; and that zinc, platinum and various other minerals are in short supply; it is in the interest of Canada, as far as I am concerned, that the Province of Ontario in its taxation policy take into consideration that if we must buy minerals some day in the future from someplace else, that the minerals we now have and are selling to other countries of the world should bring a more proper return than they do at the present moment.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): Most intelligent.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: That doesn't mean there should be public ownership, in my opinion. It can be done, but we must have a proper return, especially to the Treasury of Ontario.

An hon. member: Get rid of corporations!

Mr. Lawlor: Does the hon. member notice that the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr.

Bernier) is away? However, the Minister of Revenue (Mr. Grossman) is here; he's listening to the member.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: When one sees the need in the Province of Ontario for a tourist information outlet on Highway 401 east of Metropolitan Toronto and realizes what it would do for tourism in Ontario, I think it is long past due that this government should instigate and install just such a facility.

Much of the tourist area of Ontario lies in a section of Ontario that would be serviced by such an outlet, and the present token effort represented by the service centres on Highway 401 just does not fulfill what we need. They only do a very partial coping job. It's not good enough for the Province of Ontario and it's not good enough for the people I represent. I would like to see this province undertake that because I don't think it's a great expenditure but it would bring great rewards. It would bring great rewards to about 30 members of this government, on this side of the House alone. I think it's worthy of note for that consideration if for no other.

I think we also have to review the municipal road budgets and bylaws of the municipalities in this province. There certainly is great need for review of the ordinary bylaws for maintenance and construction. That doesn't mean that the need hasn't been there all along for some time, but the need has now reached a crisis stage in many municipalities. It isn't great in numbers of dollars when we deal with each individual one, but it may add up to quite a few dollars in the long run. I do think it's not wasted money; it's well spent money and the need is there.

One of the reasons we have this need is the expansion and consolidation of the school system in Ontario. I don't know whether the members of the House realize this, but with the development of the bus system to bring pupils to the centralized systems, we now have to have sanded roads and snow-ploughed roads early in the morning and late at night. In much of rural Ontario a few years ago it was only necessary to have one ploughing; today we have this need as often as twice and sometimes three times a day. This has put a burden on municipal roads departments which has created this need that I speak of—the review of the ordinary bylaws. I hope our people will take a good look at that because it is a real urgent need.

I'd like to suggest one other thing that I am very much concerned about. That is that today around us events are occurring and conditions coming into being that are direct results of proposals accepted at federal-provincial conferences. How little we as individual members of this House, outside of certain ones who from time to time serve in the capacity as members of the executive, have to do with these occurrences—or even for that matter know of them.

I am really not talking of this Legislature alone. In this country one branch of government must defend itself against the aggressive assertions of authority by another. Also, of course, one must assume responsibilities the others may have evaded.

Actually what has been happening, if one is to believe the news coverage, is each of us has defended his own borders against the depredations of neighbouring tribes, wherever possible enlarging his own territory. To the ordinary member of this House, federal-provincial affairs are much like wrestling a whale. Just when you think you've got a hold on it, you feel that mass of blubber slipping out of your hands. Then it lies on its back, grinning at you.

It could be said the conferences have shown how far we have to move in such-and-such a direction, but of course we would have to allow for another physical force at work, inertia. The country feels, when a federal-provincial conference is in session, like the family feels when the baby gets hold of a hammer—we never know what to expect next.

It was apparent through this past election that the people have power which only at times are they capable of exercising. The members of the House they have elected have lost powers which they must recover if they are to govern in a responsible form of government.

The years have seen the shift of legislative creativity to the executive and with it has come a substantial increase in executive power. In the main this is unavoidable because the members have not retained the means to cope with the increase in the numbers of problems and their complexity on their own. It is hard to estimate in an exact way the significance of administrative legislation through rule-making, although the volume of such during any given period equals the legislative law-making. The significance of such often may exceed that of the Legislature.

High-ranking civil servants may not create policy, but working behind the scenes with influential friends they can effectively disconcert the administration. Our ability to take part as members who support this administration is like the blind man trying to wash the elephant. He has no idea how to start, and he never knows what part of the creature needs the most scrubbing, so he ends up by throwing a bucket of water on the animal and hoping for the best.

Recently each member here found out the tenants of this place are elected to office. No one else at Queen's Park ever has to look the voter in the eye.

Mr. Speaker, few men love their country in the abstract. Rather they love it in their daily lives, which symbolizes, serves and protects the immediate way of life to which they are attached.

It is not given to us to see the way of the future, but does not history show that such massive changes as we are witnessing, which have occurred in past civilizations, also spell opportunity. There is no magic in medicine. If we, you and I, don't try the course, we certainly don't deserve a ribbon at the end.

Ownership has changed dramatically over the years, but few critics realize ownership doesn't mean what it used to anyway. The concept has changed drastically since the 19th century, though the use of the word hasn't. A citizen may buy land and build a house and call it his castle. He owns it in a financial sense; but how much control has he?

Mr. Lawlor: In the financial sense, he doesn't own it!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Society instructs him to erect and maintain it according to standards of appearance, environmental protection, health and safety. He requires society's permission to alter it or expand it.

He may not dispose of his waste any way he wishes, he may not keep certain pets, his house is not a sanctuary from the law. A court may order a search day or night. Utility personnel and municipal inspectors may demand entry. The owner so-called may not even burn down the house or it's arson.

Mr. Lawlor: The Tories did all that.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: I would say to the hon. member for Lakeshore that we have accepted many of the philosophies and ideologies of his party and perhaps this country will rue the day we ever did.

Mr. Lawlor: It is the one thing that has sustained this government in office.

Mr. Cassidy: So speak the rest of the backbenchers.

Mr. Lawlor: The member wouldn't be standing there if the government hadn't!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: Mr. Speaker, when we act in the present, we do so in the light of our memories of the past and our hopes for the future. In that sense, our future is with us and the decisions we now make will determine what we can become.

Today the wisdom of this ancient concept often seems challenged. Man often wonders if he is not the victim of his institutions and beliefs rather than the creator.

Mr. Lawlor: The member is a victim of his institutions.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: This country has proven that it is capable of appreciating great arts, but questions its production of them. Since we can really be no more than what we believe ourselves to be, do we continue to rob ourselves of the fruits of the position that has been won for us by the arts? As a society can only have the kinds of men we nourish, are we asking ourselves: Are we nourishing the enlightened men who have the capacity to create a great civilization?

Mr. Lawlor: If the member wants my answer, I say no.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: That truth perhaps is more than one man can convey to another in adequate fashion with respect to a deeply felt and highly personal encounter with arts. It cannot be answered thoroughly by questions or answers; it can only be experienced.

Today more than ever we need the hope that the arts can give us; there are messages unmistakable. I am not just sure where this country is going, nor what life in Canada will be like five, 10 or 50 years from now. But it is clear that the old ideas of obedience to law, public thrift and common honesty; the old concepts of local self-government and individual responsibility are being questioned. If they are discarded, what we would have in its place is why I am not sure where this country is going.

Mr. Lawlor: Down with Barry Goldwater!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: In the long run, as Keynes said, "We are all dead." It is the vital intervening years with which I have concerned myself in preparing these remarks. I hope they will induce the members to reflect and reason about them, and make decisions today that will lead us in a good direction in the challenging years ahead.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The member for Huron-Bruce.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I want to first of all congratulate you on your high office and the way in which you handle your office. It's not an easy job to referee in a place like this but nonetheless you do it with good grace and you do it in a very fair manner.

I also want to pay tribute to the newly-appointed cabinet ministers. I think that—

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Come on!

Mr. Gaunt: I think that—

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): There's one over there who looks pretty good.

Mr. Gaunt: I'm going to say something about her in a minute—

An hon. member: Keep going!

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Gaunt: Actually, the one appointment I was very pleased about—I was pleased about them all—but there was one appointment that caught my attention more than the rest, and that was the fact that my good friend, the member for Scarborough East (Mrs. Birch)—

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Stand up!

Mr. Gaunt: —was appointed to the cabinet. Not only is she a good seamstress, but I'm sure that—

Mr. Laughren: That's chauvinistic.

Mr. Gaunt: She is a very gracious lady and I'm sure that she'll add much charm and grace to the cabinet room.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: And some much needed common sense.

Mr. Laughren: Perhaps she'll civilize the cabinet.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): And having said that!

Mr. Gaunt: While expressing my congratulations to those who made it, at the same time I express my regrets to those hopefuls who didn't. There'll always be another chance, so take heart.

Mr. Reid: Especially the way they're operating over there!

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): The member should be on our side.

Mr. Gaunt: Many speakers have talked about the budget. It's been described in glowing terms by the government members. It's been torn to shreds by the opposition members with good reason. There's nothing new about that approach; it's just that after engaging in that system of debate for a period, new or useful information and ideas really cannot be added.

Like many others, I was disappointed with the budget. It was what one might call a cynical budget.

Mr. Laughren: It might have been a federal budget.

Mr. Gaunt: The government was in a bind. The Premier (Mr. Davis), last fall during the election campaign, said that he would not raise taxes in the new session. Yet the government desperately needed additional revenue. Rather than do it through the so-called front door, the government decided to come in through the back door by raising student fees and eliminating the loan portion of student awards, and abolishing the residential property tax rebate—all designed to ease the tough financial bind with which the government was faced.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: It's called the MacNaughton programme.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): It's also known as a fiscal nightmare.

Mr. Gaunt: Just lately we have seen the government's programme to cut grants to hospitals and for new school construction.

Mr. Laughren: Long live budgets!

Mr. Gaunt: The fact remains that the situation was brought on by government neglect, lack of planning and a distorted sense of priorities.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Right!

Mr. Gaunt: The government has made its bed and now it's going to have to lie in it. The unfortunate part is that all of the people of the province will have to suffer with the government.

I want to turn now to the matter of regional government—

Mr. P. J. Yakabuski (Renfrew South): It is not true.

Mr. Gaunt: —as it applies to Huron and Bruce counties. The topic is of great concern to all in our part of the province and I want to reflect to the Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) and the government the views of the great majority of the people with whom I've spoken on the matter.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: He wouldn't know anything about public opinion out there in Huron, would he?

Mr. Gaunt: I am glad to see the Treasurer is here tonight—

Mr. Reid: Smiling as usual.

Mr. Gaunt: He and I share a—

An hon. member: Happy Charlie!

Mr. Gaunt: —part of Huron county, so I hope his views coincide with mine, in which case these remarks can be used—

Mr. Laughren: I am sure they do.

Mr. Gaunt: —to reinforce his own views when he gets to the cabinet table where these policy matters will be discussed, I presume.

When I make these remarks I'm basing them on the premise that regional government is coming to our area of the province; that there will be some form of regionalization in our part of the province. Against that background I want to make these remarks.

The Treasurer, I understand, will be receiving written briefs for the next four or five months on the Design for Development proposals presented by his people at the public meeting in Walkerton in October. I think the Chairman of Management Board (Mr. Winkler) was there or perhaps it was at a subsequent meeting. In any case, the people from Treasury, Economics and Inter-governmental Affairs were in Walkerton to present this proposal. As far as I am concerned, these few thoughts that I have can be taken as my formal presentation on the topic.

The plan itself that night, as far as I can determine, I wasn't able to be there myself but I'm told that it wasn't very well received. The officials backed off the plan and they made a plea that this was really not a plan, it wasn't a fait accompli, but merely an analysis to stimulate discussion about the region's future.

Stimulate discussion they did, because the subject has received a great deal of attention from municipal officials and the general public in the last two months. So much so that the Bruce county council voted 42 to three in October in favour of reducing its own size by eliminating 11 deputy reeves.

I understand this motion has come to Toronto for consideration and approval, which raises another point. The ministry introduced an amendment to the Municipal Elections Act, I believe it was last spring, permitting municipalities to have a deputy reeve if there were over 1,000 voters in the municipality.

On the one hand the ministry is trying to amalgamate and enlarge to achieve greater efficiency, and in the next breath it permits an increase in the number of municipal officials at the local level. I can't quite understand that. Maybe there is some reasoning with which I haven't been made familiar, but it seems to me there's a real inconsistency there and it's rather difficult to understand.

It adds to the confusion at the local level, because people get the impression that the government really doesn't know which way to go, that it really hasn't made up its mind.

All right, back to the Walkerton meeting, Mr. Speaker. Municipal officials at the meeting objected to the orientation of the entire county to serve the purposes of the Toronto-centred region. Essentially the Design for Development plan pegged Bruce county as the recreational playground for Metro.

Many felt that since Bruce is one of the largest counties in Ontario, with excellent agricultural country and tourist facilities—actually Bruce is the largest beef-producing county in the province and is one of the oldest established resort centres—

Mr. Sargent: Bull or beef?

Mr. Gaunt: A little bit of both! A regional government should be established within the confines of the present county boundaries. In other words, the regional government of Bruce should be established with the present boundaries.

I agree, that's the way it should be done; and I'll tell you why.

Most people in the area recognize and admit that change is necessary and that some form of regionalization is inevitable. The question then becomes, what form will it take? In my view, any form of regionalization has to have accessibility as a cornerstone.

Smith, in his report three years ago, said that access was the cornerstone of local government. By access he said he meant the most widespread participation possible on the part of all or virtually all individual citizens.

It is largely on this question of access that many rural people across the province have become concerned. For the most part, regionalization has meant the lumping together of two or three counties, and this matter of access has been severely eroded.

That is one of the most serious faults of the new government structure. There is much unrest over this point and I think Bruce county and Huron county typify this unrest. The fear in Bruce and Huron, as I read it—

Mr. Sargent: And Grey county!

Mr. Gaunt: —and Grey county, my friend says—is that it will lose its identity—

Mr. Sargent: Stay out of there, Charlie!

Mr. Gaunt: —if pushed into a multicounty unit.

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): I'll stay out.

Mr. Sargent: The minister got the word, eh?

Mr. Gaunt: Bruce has a lot to preserve in terms of—

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: I am listening to the member's colleague here.

Mr. Gaunt: —its tradition, its culture, its values. It has an identity of its own. It's not a wealthy area but it does have 42,000 residents, a figure which swells to 100,000 during the summer months.

It makes economic sense to maintain the area as a farming and light industrial area, keeping it essentially rural. Geography places the county in a semi-isolated position. There are no large towns in the entire area and at the same time it is a good size. There is good balance between farm and urban residents.

It's 130 miles from Tobermory on the north tip of the peninsula to the southern Huron boundary. It has a 250-mile shoreline. Because of its large area, its economic and sociological characteristics and its present community identity, it is now a region according to most of the present yardsticks. It's a natural, self-contained unit.

Regional government structure, like everything else, has an optimum size. I say Bruce is the optimum size for regional government structure. Bigness for bigness' sake is not necessarily better. More often, the opposite is true.

Consideration should also be given on the basis of climate. Bruce county and Huron county are in the snowbelt area. We get a lot of snow. In many cases we get more snow than they do in places in northern Ontario. Imagine what would happen during a big snowstorm if the highway headquarters were located 100 miles away. It would be utter chaos for school bus operators and for traffic generally.

Bruce has taken a leading role over the years in reform and change. I can think of a number of areas where they led in this. There is the assessment system. They went through a computerized system with respect to assessment. They were one of the first counties to do so.

They have dealt, I think, rather effectively—perhaps it hasn't resulted in any concrete action—but at least they've tried to come to grips with the problem of cutting down their own county council. They've made the motion, as I indicated earlier, to cut out 11 deputy reeves. This will reduce the size of county council, and to an extent one gets a certain type of amalgamation under that system.

The point I'm making is that Bruce has over the years played a role in reform and change. Four years ago, I'm told, the bureaucrats here in Toronto told members of the Bruce county council that Bruce would be declared a region if they reduced the size of county council. Now they won't commit themselves, and so the county is left high and dry.

As I indicated earlier, the county has passed the motion and they want to proceed. This is just the first step, as far as they are concerned, in revamping and revising the entire county council system, and yet they don't want to push it too far unless they have assurances from the government here that it's going to be favourably met.

Much of the problem with regional government so far is that with the creation of the huge organization the individual becomes lost and the bureaucracy takes over. Associated with this is the tremendous increase in cost—the county school board problem all over again.

However, municipal institutions constitute the strength of free nations and they do so because they are within the people's reach. Experts are detached from people. The elected people have to be in continual contact with their electors and have to be responsive to them. That's how the system works best. For that reason, a rural area should not be too large because it destroys this fundamental principle of democracy.

In addition, the Bruce area is not a rapidly developing area, nor will it be; so the pressures for regionalization are not as great as those around Kitchener-Waterloo, for example. Consequently, when the government gets around to a regional programme for Bruce and Huron, as it surely will, I hope the government looks at all aspects and decides to set Bruce up as a self-contained regional unit.

I think the same applies to Huron. At the moment there are 45 councillors in Huron county council. Huron has a population projection from 300 to 600 persons per annum for the next 15 years, which will result in an estimated population of from 56,000 to 61,000 persons by 1985. There are 26 municipalities in the county.

At this point I just want to outline very briefly the historical pattern of population growth in Huron county. It has been one of almost steady decline since the late 1800s, alleviated by the post Second World War boom which accounted for the population recovery until the 1960s when stability became the chief characteristic of the area.

The rising population up to 1881 reflected the healthy economic development of the period when Ontario had established itself as the breadbasket of Canada in which Huron county played a very major role indeed, and still does today. We are one of the leading counties in beef production, pork production and in poultry production. Indeed, we have the world hay champion as a resident of Huron county. We are very high on the list of forage producing counties when compared with other counties in the province.

The population began to decline; it dropped from a high of 76,526 persons in 1881 to just over 43,742 in 1941. This 43 per cent decline in gross population levelled off during the war and recovered 27 per cent of its loss, reaching 53,805 persons in 1961.

Between 1961 and 1966, the county expanded at the rate of 2.7 per cent. The urban areas accounted for approximately 3.3 per cent while the rural areas declined 0.6 per cent. Considering the last decade the county has expanded 1.2 per cent, reaching its present population of 51,100 persons.

Huron county functions well as a unit now. It could continue to do so under a form of regionalization. What I am saying is that the county as it presently stands is already made for regional governance. It is already there, and given the present boundaries of the county I think that there are many characteristics about the county which lend themselves to an ideal regional system: It has a good urban rural mix, it is a fairly large county, it has a good agricultural base; and in my opinion it should remain that way.

So really I am saying that in setting up a form of regional government, allow the counties of Huron and Bruce to maintain their identity and in that way the government can cut out many of the faults of regional governments already established, and at the same time take advantage of the good features of such a system as I have described. In that way one has the best of both worlds.

I hope the government looks at this matter very closely and adopts it when they decide to move forward with regional government in Huron and Bruce counties. I hope that my friend opposite, the Treasurer, agrees with my views in this respect—

An hon. member: How can he agree with them, he's not even listening?

Mr. Gaunt: —and I hope that he will put them forward at cabinet meetings and see that his other colleagues accept the principles which I have enunciated.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, let me congratulate you and the Speaker himself on the delightful way in which things are going this year. We have had no problems at all. You haven't had to throw out any of the members—any of the responsible members—up to now, and I trust this situation will continue.

Mr. B. Gilbertson (Algoma): I wouldn't take it if I were the member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): He'll get it later.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, you know one of the duties of the opposition members—and this is not a very pleasant duty, because what we really come here for is to make laws, assist the government, be helpful to them when they need assistance, and to pass on the requests of our constituents. But outside of that important material, one of our onerous duties which we must do is to look for trouble on the other side. We don't like doing that because we like all those fellows over there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: They are cheerful, delightful fellows. But just the same, in order to keep them honest—and that is what we really want to do, and that is the only reason we do these things—we do occasionally look to see if we can find perhaps a little bit wrong over there for which we could mildly chastise them.

Mr. Gilbertson: Very little.

Mr. E. M. Havrot (Timiskaming): Pretty hard!

Mr. Shulman: Well, Mr. Speaker, you can imagine my excitement when I got a phone call some two months ago that one of the front bench cabinet ministers—one who hasn't been mentioned yet—was dabbling in the land deal business a little bit. And according to this dabbling which I was told about over the phone, it made the other two ministers look like they were doing nothing at all. It really sent the Attorney General (Mr. Bales) and the member for Chatham-Kent (Mr. McKeough) back to the minor bush leagues, because this is really big dabbling and making big money.

I got very excited. I was given the instrument number, which was 76126B, up in the township of Whitchurch, which I must confess I didn't know very much about at that time.

Fortunately, in order to save expenses, I've sent my daughter to law school so she is able to do the title searchings for me at a nominal fee. I gave her an allowance and if she doesn't do them she doesn't get her allowance. She dashed off to the township of Whitchurch to look up instrument No. 76126B just to see what this front bench cabinet minister was doing; and she phoned me with great excitement and she said one Eric Winkler, back in 1966, had bought this little piece of land for $100,00 and sold it at the end of 1970 for $298,520.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Great profit!

Mr. Shulman: Well you can imagine, Mr. Speaker, how excited I got at receiving this news, because this wasn't one of the ministers who had volunteered his land holdings. I thought, well, I have finally got Eric. I have been looking and looking and here we are, we have got him finally. Why did he forget that little deal where he made this $198,520? So in order to nail it all down we went up to photostat the deed and the instrument and everything; and I was a little surprised that Eric had given Hong Kong as his address. I thought that was rather neat of him.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I have been there.

Mr. Shulman: But on the other hand, ministers who are dabbling like this of course would give a false address. One wouldn't expect them to give their real address. The only thing I couldn't figure out was, if he was smart enough to give a false address why wasn't he smart enough to give a false name. So I thought the best thing to do was to go and see the minister.

An hon. member: That is a Chinese name.

Mr. Shulman: Is that a Chinese name? Okay.

I went to see the minister and Mr. Speaker—or I guess it's now Madam Speaker—you can't imagine the chagrin I felt, the despair at all the efforts my daughter had gone to, when we found it was the wrong Eric Winkler.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I feel pretty badly too.

Mr. Shulman: Madam Speaker, tonight I would like to talk about a rather serious matter which I have some hesitation talking about, quite frankly.

Mr. D. W. Ewen (Wentworth North): Well why bother?

Mr. Shulman: Well I feel as we go along the member may see the need.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): Count on it!

Mr. Shulman: I make no pretences to qualities I don't have, and I am rather nervous about making this speech.

It has to do with the bombings in the construction industry. It has to do with the reason that no charges have been laid; and it has to do with the reason that a royal commission has not been called into that matter and the other matters of violence in the construction industry.

During the summer there was a series of bombings and machine-gunning involving a firm in the lathing business, as a result of which there was some considerable publicity in the papers. At that time, as a result of information which was given to me and which I will tell to you, Madam Speaker—you will know them of course—I said to the press that a royal commission should be held, and that if a royal commission were not held I would name the persons responsible in the House and demand a royal commission at that time.

A few days after I had perhaps foolishly said this I received a letter and I would like to read that to you, Madam Speaker. It is on the stationery of one Ryland H. New, Suite 1420, 44 King St. W., Toronto 105, Canada. It is dated Sept. 5, 1972, and it is addressed to me and it reads as follows:

Your action regarding the bombing and lawlessness existing in Canada today in endeavouring to have some steps taken to correct it is most commendable and I wish to extend my personal support and best wishes for your success.

I admire the intestinal fortitude you are showing and just wish to warn you to be careful and see that no personal reprisals are attempted. I am indirectly interested in the activities of the construction industry and have no desire to see any unlawful organization successful in actions harmful and even fatal to others.

Best wishes,
Yours very sincerely,
Ryland H. New

I though he had worded it rather strangely; but perhaps he had meant it well so I wrote him back a nice thank you note.

Then I thought perhaps I should look a little further into who Ryland H. New was. I looked into it and he is the chairman of National Sewer Pipe. It is a concrete company and I was a little disturbed at that—I was afraid they might have got a small order!

I became more disturbed the following day when Mr. New phoned me and once again he stressed the danger that I was running if I were in fact to make this speech.

He went on to say something which I think may underline the need to have a royal commission—one of the things that will underline the need to have a royal commission. He said, "You don't have to investigate the bombing further because I can tell you who did the bombing. There was no one bombing Acme Lathing. The people who own Acme Lathing bombed it themselves in order to collect the insurance."

That seemed pretty wild because the amount of insurance they collected was a few thousand dollars while the company is a multimillion dollar company. I thanked him and I called the police.

Of course, before hanging up I asked him who had given him this information and he said he couldn't tell me.

I called the police and gave them a copy of the letter and they interviewed Mr. New and he admitted sending the letter. He admitted making the phone call. He admitted that someone had given him this information but he flatly refused to tell the police who this someone was.

Now this information is phoney; it was planted deliberately. There is only one way to get Mr. New to tell us who planted this information and who wanted this passed on to me so urgently along with this lovely little warning; and that's to have a royal commission and bring Mr. New to the stand and ask him. He will be forced to answer and then we will find out, perhaps, a little bit more of this problem.

The other reason I got just a little nervous about the speech is that on Thursday two delightful police officers came to visit me wanting information, wanting to find out what information I had. I co-operated with them as best I could and they asked about the names I was going to mention tonight. I told them and I said, "If I need protection after I give the speech, will you look after it?" They said, "We hope you are still around after this speech for us to protect."

They did get me a little nervous but I am sure they were being very jocular. He had a big smile on his face when he said this. But just the same, I think perhaps there should be a royal commission. I will go into this in some detail.

There have been a number of red herrings. New's red herring was not the only one. I received another phone call at the very same time—in fact just within a day of that—from a gentleman who identified himself by the name of Jim Peters. Mr. Peters is the owner or manager of a company called Universal Acoustics and he said, "You don't have to search any further. I can tell you who did the bombings." He said that last year one of the men who owns Acme came to him and offered to pay him a piece of the company if he would undertake to bomb Acme.

The reason that Acme wanted themselves bombed is that one of the partners owned only 10 per cent of the company but wanted to hold 51 per cent and thought that if he scared his other partners he would be able to buy them out.

It was a fairly plausible story. He said he used to work for Acme, which was true.

Again I came to the police and asked them to check this out. It didn't check out either. This man also lied.

He lied because of the time that he was supposed to have been given this offer. It turned out he was in Florida and it turned out that the man who was supposed to give them the offer was on the east coast, in the Maritimes; and there was no way such an offer could have been made. Also, the man he had falsely accused actually already owned a third of the company; he didn't own 10 per cent.

So the police confronted Peters with this information which they now knew to be false, and he admitted that he had lied but he wouldn't say why. I think Mr. Peters should be called in front of a royal commission to see who paid him to throw this red herring across the trail.

Now I'm going to have to go back a bit to give the background, because it all begins some time ago. This is the problem with organized crime. If you don't stop it early when you can—and this government had its chance some years ago—it grows, because they are not satisfied with little bits. They want more and more and more. It's the government's and its Arthur Wishart's fault; there's no question about it. They had opportunity after opportunity to stop them and they didn't take those opportunities.

The background goes back, strangely enough, all the way to 1903 when the lathers first formed a union in Toronto. This was a part of an international American union, and they called this union, Toronto Local 97.

It was run honestly, as far as I can tell, although one never knows in these craft unions; some strange things go on. But, as far as I can tell, the union was run honestly and properly and the troubles only began in 1965, at which time they hired two men. One is Bruno Zanini and the other is Gus Simone. The reason they hired these two men is they wanted to expand into the residential field and they wanted to sign up all the labourers.

I'm going to be naming a number of names tonight and they are all of one ethnic origin, Mr. Speaker. I want to stress to you that, although the persons who have perpetrated these things tend to be of one ethnic origin, those persons who suffered are of the same ethnic origin.

The reason this has taken place is that a large number of immigrants came to this country in the last 10 and 15 years. They don't know the language. They are anxious to make good and they have been exploited and exploited and exploited—by labour, by crooked union leaders and by crooked contractors. The government has had this information now for at least four years. They chose not to do anything about it.

I must refer you back to a speech made in this House on Oct. 28, 1970. It's a very lengthy speech, but just to lay the groundwork for what I'm going to say tonight, I must quote briefly a portion of it. I'm quoting from page 5681 of Hansard. I'll try and be as brief as possible here.

Mr. Shulman: The difficulty all began back in 1965, and quite frankly, the full story sounds as though it came straight out of the McLellan crime hearings. The two unions involved were Local 562 of the Lathers International Union, which was partly innocent in this matter may I say, and the Canadian Concrete Forming Union. The difficulty began in the latter half of 1965 when three international unions were engaging in a campaign to organize the employees of a number of construction companies in this city.

The heads of these construction companies were very anxious that they should not be organized and they engaged the services of a private investigator, Mr. Norman Menzies, in order, first of all, to obtain information as to which of the employees of some of these companies had signed applications for membership cards in any of the three unions. May I say, just to set the matter straight, Mr. Menzies did have a charge laid against him last year, but for reasons of which I am not aware the Crown has withdrawn those, and so there are no charges pending against him.

Let me digress just for a moment. I now know the reason those charges were withdrawn. The Crown attorney made a deal with Menzies that if he would give evidence in another case against a Mr. DiLorenzo he would drop the charges against Menzies, and in fact that is what took place. To start the quote again:

One of the contractors involved informed Menzies that he wanted to prevent the three unions from becoming the bargaining agent for any of the employees. Menzies then proceeded to attend at the various construction projects in Metropolitan Toronto where the employees were working. He purported to be . . . an official of the union, and he was just coming up to see who had already joined. He questioned the employees, one at a time, as to whether or not they had signed application cards with any of the three unions. He then took the resulting information back to the employer, who promptly discharged all of the employees who had signed application cards for the union.

Mr. Menzies was given other instructions. [He was told] to follow and observe closely the actions and conduct of certain organizers of the three unions, and in particular to ascertain the addresses of the residences these organizers visited after regular working hours. On delivering the resulting information . . . the detective was informed that if any of the employees lived at these addresses, they were to be discharged.

Menzies was also given orders by one of the contractors that he was to beat up certain of the organizers from the three unions [but] he did not do this.

Although he hired someone to do it, incidentally—but I'm digressing again.

Now, despite all these efforts, it soon became clear that in order to prevent the international unions from ultimately successfully organizing the men, it would be necessary to forestall them by setting up a phoney union. Mr. Bruno Zanini, a labour leader with a rather chequered past and then an official of Local 562 of the Lathers International Union, was approached about the possibility of setting up a sweet-heart union.

In the first week of Oct. 1968, a meeting of Local 562 representatives, plus a group of contractors, was held in the afternoon at the office of Robert Ross, chairman of the contractors' association. . . .

Among those present were Gus Simone and Bruno Zanini—and there's a long list of contractors who are not relevant to what's coming up tonight, so I'll omit that.

During the meeting it was agreed by the contractors, on behalf of its members, that they would sign a collective agreement with Local 562 as soon as the majority of the employees of each of the contractors had signed application forms for membership cards with Local 562.

But at the meeting Simone and Zanini informed the representatives of the contractors that it would be impossible to get these employees to sign application cards unless they were instructed to do so by their employers, since a large number of former employees had been discharged in 1965 and 1966 when it was discovered by Mr. Menzies that they had applied to become members of one of the three international unions.

As a result, in order to assist Local 562 in getting these employees signed up, the contractors' representative at the meeting agreed that each of its members would make available to Local 562 a list containing the names and addresses of all their respective employees. George Orla, who . . . is a public relations officer for the DiLorenzo group of companies, was instructed to assist Local 562 in its . . . organization. From Oct. 7, 1968, to the middle of Nov. 1968, Orla, while continuing his regular duties with the contractors, actively assisted Local 562 in doing the organizing.

And then it goes on about how they signed up the various people in this phoney union by having the employers give instructions to their employees that they should join up. For example:

On Oct. 17, 1968, a further meeting was held at the York Centre ballroom, attended by approximately 700 employees of different contractors and . . . several superintendents and foremen . . . who were [to tell] that the employers were giving [their] approval and, in fact, wanted the employees to join the union.

Mr. Sargent: Would the member kindly get to the point?

Mr. Shulman: Patience, patience! I know it's hard for the hon. member for Grey-Bruce to understand this, but it'll get through to him in a while.

Mr. Sargent: Well, ask anybody in the House if he understands it. Nobody else does.

Mr. Shulman: I'll explain it privately to the member later. We'll take a couple of days off.

Mr. Sargent: It's very poorly put together. For a guy who writes books it's very bad.

Mr. Shulman: Well, my books cost more.

To continue:

All application cards signed by the employees were not kept by the union, but they were kept at the office of one of the contractors. The money that was collected in respect of the same was kept by Local 562 [in accordance with instructions from the contractors].

Now, these application forms had not been signed by any of the superintendents and foremen, and when the time came to hand them in Simone and Zanini then forged the signatures on each of these cards. Finally, when the cards were all handed in, after the signatures had been forged, a collective agreement was signed and entered into between Local 562 and the contractors. It was to run until Jan. 31, 1974.

It looked like the contractors had things all fixed up; they had a nice phoney union. And, suddenly, it all fell through, because . . . the international unions . . . were aware of what was going on . . . Through their US contacts they contacted the headquarters of the Lathers' union, who . . . issued instructions to Gus Simone in Toronto informing him that he must not cover this group of men and that he must turn them over to the Labourers' Union here in Toronto . . . They instructed him to turn them over to Local 183.

Well, from this point on there was considerable pressure put on Simone not to follow these instructions. In fact, his life was threatened if he did by Charlie Irvine and also by Zanini. He was even threatened again, I quote:

The following morning, that is Saturday, May 24, Simone and Zanini met at 1801 Eglinton Ave. W., in Simone's office and Zanini told him at that time that if there was a transfer over to Local 183, that a rough friend in Hamilton, one Johnny Papalia, would be coming down to take certain action.

I don't want to spend a great deal of time rehashing the past, but the next thing they did was to call a strike.

This phoney union called a strike. Before calling the strike they got together with the various contractors to settle the date on which the strike would be convenient. They then called this phoney strike and the contractors let the men all go out with their blessing, because it had been prearranged that they would go on strike for higher wages.

They then came back and were granted higher wages, most of which they did not receive but which were siphoned off and went into the pockets of the principals involved, mostly the contractors and these two labour leaders.

The next thing that happened was this:

The International union challenged the certification of this new union . . . and a hearing was held in front of the Labour Relations Board. That hearing turned out to be a farce because a number of foremen were sent to the hearings as witnesses by the contractors. On the morning of the hearing the foremen were all assembled in one of the contractors' offices and after the meeting they were told they should tell the examiner at the Labour Relations Board that they were carpenters and that they worked with tools. The purpose of saying this to the examiner was to prevent the carpenters' union and the other union from obtaining certification by increasing the number of employees in those classifications; because normally, of course, foremen would not be allowed to vote in this type of vote.

These men were instructed to go in and lie and they all did it.

I have affidavits substantiating it, which the police also have, and which the Attorney General also has; and which they had two years ago and which for reasons of their own they did nothing about.

Not a single charge was laid as a result of all of this perjury in front of the Labour Relations Board. The Minister of Labour did nothing. The Attorney General did nothing. The police did nothing.

Mr. A. J. Roy (Ottawa East): The member should lay a charge.

Mr. Shulman: I'm doing it right now.

To continue the quote:

On July 16, 1969, a collective agreement was signed between the Canadian Concrete Formers Union and the contractors. All the contractors in Toronto did not go along with this . . . Those that did not then began to suffer from a reign of terror, because simultaneously with the setting up of these phoney unions there occurred a chain of violent incidents in order to force the dissenting contractors to order their employees to join this new union.

Fires were set by placing propane heaters close to walls. Floors were collapsed by loosening jacks. Lives were threatened with crude notes.

Chief of Police James Mackey made a list of the incidents that took place at this time . . .

And if anyone wishes to read it it is on page 5685 of Hansard of Oct. 20, 1970. I'm not going to read it now, it's a lengthy list. It was a veritable reign of terror to try and force the contractors into line.

The police knew about all that was going on. They prepared a report and this report was sent on to the Ontario Police Commission, which in turn sent it on to the Attorney General's Department with the suggestion that a royal commission be held. Not only was no royal commission held, there was no statement at all from the Attorney General in the many months that he had the report.

Finally, the international unions, by a massive organizing effort succeeded in organizing the labourers. It was an incredible battle that took place in Toronto but as a result of it the Concrete Formers Union collapsed—Local 562 had been forced out by action of the international unions — and ultimately the Italian labourers were largely organized by the Labourers' Union and to my knowledge—and I've been looking at it as closely as I can—they have been fairly represented since that time and there has been no exploitation of this particular group.

Bruno Zanini was sidetracked completely as the Concrete Formers Union collapsed and he became inactive and literally was forced out of labour circles entirely. Gus Simone on the other hand was still back with the Lathers and then there proceeded a different direction for this type of extortion. This is the problem with people like this. When one thing doesn't succeed—or if it does succeed, when it's completely conquered they are not content—they move out in other directions.

Well, Local 562 had split off from the original local—Local 97 of the Lathers—the idea being to go into the residential field and take over the Labourers. Suddenly there were no Labourers to take over and they looked about to see what they could take over. The only area that was left was the original Local 97, which was run by one W. B. Johnson and, as far as I can tell by examining the books and the papers, was being run completely honestly and they decided they would take over Local 97. They did it in a very clever way.

There were three firms at that time which employed most of the lathers in this city. Those three firms—I won't trouble members with their names—but they ultimately merged into one company called Northdown Drywall and Construction Ltd.

Now, Northdown Drywall and Construction Ltd. employed most of the lathers in the city, or their three predecessor firms did. They were paying union wages, which had been worked out in negotiation.

Suddenly, these firms decided that they were no longer going to use Local 97 people, but they informed Local 97 that they were going to use Local 562 people.

Why was this? The answer was very simple. The workers from Local 562 came to work for a dollar an hour less, doing exactly the same work. This was despite the fact that Drywall had a contract with Local 97 saying that certainly those were the rates of pay and that they were to use their employees.

Well, of course, the Local 97 people were pretty upset and they attempted to picket the places of work that were being constructed. But it did them no good because the Local 562 lathers crossed the picket line without hesitation and went to work for a dollar less. Very soon the men who had been forced out of work—many of whom were immigrant labourers who depended on this for their living—were forced to quit Local 97 and join Local 262 and go back to the same job they had before, but for a dollar less an hour.

It is very interesting where that dollar less an hour was going. I'll tell you where it was going. It was going, only partially, into the pockets of the contractors. Partially, it was going into the pockets of Gus Simone, who headed the union.

Of course, Local 97 fought back. They applied to the Ontario Relations Board for permission to prosecute Northdown Drywall for breaking its contract. As soon as they did this, suddenly, an order came down from the head office of the Lathers' Union in the United States that Local 97 was to go out of business. They were ordered to merge with Local 562 immediately and Local 562 was to take over the affairs of the lathers.

They received these instructions from the United States and they went to the Supreme Court and appealed this. After a very lengthy battle—I have the order of the Supreme Court here—the Supreme Court ordered that the head office did not have the right to order such a merger and they were given back their office and their funds, which had been seized by the head office.

They then went back to the Labour Relations Board to apply for permission to prosecute Northdown Drywall and Construction and the Labour Relations Board refused this permission. I have the order here. It's dated May 11, 1972. It's a very lengthy thing. There are seven pages. I just want to read the last paragraph, because it explains why they refused permission to prosecute. I quote:

We need not determine whether Local 97 is bound by the ruling of the general president of the LIU or, indeed, whether in another proceeding the board would follow the ruling of the general president in arriving at its decisions. The question before us is whether there was any mala fides [Perhaps the lawyers would explain that.] on the part of the respondents in adopting the course of action they did.

An hon. member: Bad faith!

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. To continue:

If the respondents acted in good faith the board should exercise its discretion in this matter and refuse to grant the application for consent to prosecute. On the facts set out above, we find that the respondents acted in good faith when they accepted the decision of the general president of the LIU and abided by the provisions of the collective agreement between them.

And they refused to allow them to prosecute.

To sum it all up, the president of this international union had ordered that Local 97 cease activities in Local 562 so that the various workers who were lathers would continue to work for a dollar less an hour for this other union doing exactly the same work they had done before.

Well, for all practical purposes, that was the end of Local 97. I think they have 39 members who are working on little projects around the province. But for all practical purposes they were out of business, and there wasn't really anything more they could do. They had been stymied by their own international; they had been stymied by the Ontario Labour Relations Board and there was nowhere else they could go. The people who suffered were the employees, the lathers.

I don't wish to go into detail but there is a lengthy story in the Globe and Mail of Saturday, Nov. 4, on the various unpleasant things that happened to the members of that union; and how they went to work for the same company doing exactly the same work for less money. They worked a longer work week, earned less holiday pay and greatly reduced overtime rates. It was a straight squeeze play which involved payoffs in all directions and many thousands of dollars that were stolen—or ripped off, thank you—just disappeared!

When the Minister of Labour (Mr. Guindon) had this brought to his attention by the Globe, he said he was terribly sorry but under the Labour Act there was no way he could prosecute.

Now we come to the bombings. The various firms in the construction field, particularly in the lathing field, have always felt that competition was inefficient, because the problem with competition is that if you have various people bidding on the same project one may bid less than the other. Now this is highly inefficient, obviously, from a free enterprise point of view. It would be so much better if they could all get together beforehand to decide how much to bid and that might let them make their profits be a little better.

Back in 1968 some 10 different contractors got together and they arranged—there were 11 lathing and plastering firms—to work together to fix prices over a three-year period. I am sorry, this was back in 1963; this was over a three-year period from 1963 to 1966.

The federal government, which doesn't seem quite as reticent to attack these people as our provincial friends, found out about this and laid charges as a result of which a conviction was obtained. I have a copy of the conviction here in the Supreme Court of Ontario against the various firms. The one to which I wish to draw your attention is Cesaroni Bros. Ltd., because their name will come in a little bit later. I quote from the paper of that time:

The firms had all pleaded not guilty but when they appeared for trial Nov. 20 they changed their pleas to guilty and were fined a total of $75,000.

Mr. Justice Samuel Hughes ordered the companies, their officers and their employees not to engage in similar conduct in the future nor to engage in certain specified practices relating to preparation and submission of tenders.

Special Crown prosecutor W. Z. Estey at the time linked Local 48 of the Operative Plasterers and Cement Masons International Association to the conspiracy. He said that to ensure discipline Local 48 occasionally would withdraw its men from a company that did not participate in the pre-arranged pricing schedule.

The smallest fine imposed on an individual company was $2,500 but five of the 11 firms were fined the maximum $10,000. Three of those firms were Gambin Bros., Donaldson-Barron Ltd., and Cesaroni Bros. Ltd. A director of each of the three firms was a founding director of the information centre.

Now this brings us up to date. That conviction didn't impress these people too much because they are doing the same thing again; only this time they enforced it not only with labour troubles but with bombs.

The largest firm involved in the lathing business in Toronto at the present time is Acme Lathing and it is a multimillion dollar company. The other large firm is Northdown Drywall, which is owned and controlled by the Cesaroni brothers. There is a small company called C. Romanelli Lathing; a very, very small company. However, C. Romanelli Lathing has one or two assets which make it perhaps just as important as the large companies with which it is competing.

At the beginning of October, 1971, the owners of Acme Lathing were visited by two men. One was Gus Simone and the other was this same C. Romanelli. They came to the office of Acme to suggest that Acme merge with Romanelli.

The proposition they made was this: "If you merge with Romanelli we will have one big firm. We will then buy all the lathing materials that are used in construction in Toronto from Cesaroni Brothers. The business is worth $50 million a year, and being moderate men we don't want to squeeze people; so we will only raise prices 10 per cent. That will give an extra $5 million a year to be split three ways between Romanelli, between Cesaroni and between Acme."

And I guess because it doesn't divide evenly, there is $1.5 million for each and the half a million dollars that was left over I presume would go to the good labour leader Gus Simone.

Well, people at Acme were a little disturbed, and they said: "Well, give us a little time to think it over." The first thing they did was to get a credit rating on Romanelli to see how big a firm it was. I have got the Dunn and Bradstreet book here, which they were so kind to supply to me, and this is the one from last year. This is not the one they used; they got a bank credit rating, I believe.

And when we look up Romanelli, it is here, Romanelli Construction Co. Ltd. We find that its credit rating is pretty bad. It is rated as DD3, which is the second lowest rating a firm can have. And in the full report of Dunn and Bradstreet it says the total assets of the company are between $35,000 and $50,000.

Well, it seemed ludicrous for Acme to merge with this tiny pygmy, which had no assets and which now really has become very quiescent.

The other thing that was of some interest to the people at Acme, was the name of the vice-president of this firm of Romanelli Lathing. His name was Elvio DelZotto. Now that may strike a familiar chord with my friends to the right because he was a Liberal candidate a few years ago.

When the Ontario Provincial Police prepared the report which they supplied to the Ontario Police Commission on organized crime in this province, Elvio DelZotto was named in that report. He was named peripherally as the representative of the contractors who went to meet the various people from the Mafia.

Now, when I was given that information two years ago I didn't mention DelZotto's name, because, frankly, I didn't think this was of enough significance to merit mentioning it here. But he suddenly comes in at a very crucial point in this whole proceeding. This is of great importance now, because Elvio DelZotto controls C. Romanelli—and Romanelli is responsible for the bombings.

The next thing that happened was that after Acme received the credit rating on Romanelli, they went to Local 562's Christmas party, which must be a jolly affair. Perhaps I can tell you a little bit about that after.

At that time they told Simone and Romanelli that there was no way they were going to merge and to forget the whole thing. Nothing was said, because it was a Christmas party. But the very next day Gus Simone came onto Acme's construction jobs and slowed them all down, pulling off the workers.

There were various payoffs, that were necessary—some in the thousands of dollars. It was necessary to hire unnecessary people—two foremen who didn't even speak English as one example; and didn't speak Italian either. And ultimately that harassment ceased.

But at that time Gus Simone said to one of the owners of Acme, just as a good friend, that Acme now had a choice of one of two things. They could either merge with Romanelli, or they could get out of the residential field. And if they didn't do either, their lives would be in danger and so would the lives of their families. This was said to two different officials at Acme.

The next thing that happened was that the vice-president of Acme began getting threatening phone calls at home. This went on all the way through January and February.

During last summer the various contractors in the field began to have pressures exerted upon them. Seven different contractors were induced, and I use the word "induced", to pay $1,000 a month—this went on for several months—to Romanelli, presumably for a campaign to increase the image of the lathers and the contractors in the city. He collected $7,000 a month for some months, saying he was passing it on to Simone; but Simone denies he ever received it. In any case, the money all disappeared.

There was then a pause until July 1. Shortly before July 1, another phone call in saying, "Well, will you merge or will you go out of the residential field?" When this was refused, on the night of July 1, some time between midnight and 2 in the morning, someone came to the offices of Acme Lathing with a semi-automatic machine-gun and raked the building.

There was then a two-week pause. I guess the people at Acme didn't get the message and a bomb was then placed at front of the glass doors at 73 Alness which blew up at 12.27 a.m. Unfortunately the bombers were not too accurate and by mistake blew up the place next door. They missed Acme.

However, you must give them an "A" for effort for trying. Two nights later they came back to blow up Acme's partner, Gemini Lathing, which is over on 6 Milvan; and again placed the bomb, which blew up a warehouse and truck. Unfortunately, they again placed the thing slightly wrong and it blew up the building next door.

By this time Mr. Romanelli was a little upset with the people that worked for him and he gave strict instructions that they had better blow up the right place next time or else they weren't going to get paid. It was ridiculous going around the city blowing up the wrong buildings all the time.

By now, unfortunately for them, the police had put a 24 hour-a-day guard on all of Acme and Gemini's buildings. They had a policeman stationed there all the time and a police car across the road; and they kept this surveillance on until the end of August.

The end of August was a Monday. They phoned up Acme and said, "We are taking off the surveillance. Everything seems to be fine now. There is nothing more to worry about." Two days later the place blew up. There was a huge bomb placed, sufficiently big to literally gut the place. I went up to see it myself.

Now this is interesting. Nothing happened all the time there was police surveillance, no matter whether it was open police surveillance or closed police surveillance. There is no question whatsoever that the people who ordered the bombing knew when the surveillance came off.

The conclusion to which we might first jump isn't necessarily true. I don't believe there is a policeman who is in the pay of these bombers, but what I do believe—in fact, what I know—is that they have a source of information within the police department, perhaps being given out semi-innocently.

What we do know is that one policeman who was assigned to this detail told everything to his wife. She then proceeded to tell all the neighbours on one certain street, because actually one of my informants came to me very upset because this policeman's wife, at a coffee clatch, had been telling the whole story of the bombings and the police surveillance and the surveillance coming off; and that is how they know what is going on. There is a leak as big as a sieve in the police department.

The police at this point began a very intensive investigation. They have kept up an excellent watch on the buildings owned by Acme and on the people involved and there has been no further bombing—at least not since the September bombing.

They went to visit Mr. Romanelli because they felt he would have information which would be of great value. Quite frankly, they are quite convinced that he is the man who has ordered the bombings, although of course he didn't lay the bombs himself. He refused to give any information and told them if they wanted to speak to him again they should come back and give him notice so his lawyer could be there.

They went to see Mr. Cesaroni with exactly the same results. I have got a Dun and Bradstreet on Cesaroni, too. I have it here in front of me. He is a far more substantial man with considerable assets. He has some difficulties with income tax. He doesn't like paying income tax. I can understand his problems, because I believe there are a large number of cash payoffs in that particular branch of the business; so they have just been fined some considerable sum. There is a huge sum of money that is being extorted and this sum of money is basically coming out of the pockets of all of us to a large extent, but primarily out of the pockets of the Italian labourers.

Now where is all this money going? We know that Romanelli got his $7,000 a month for month on end for the good of the industry, which went into his pocket. We know Cesaroni has been involved with this type of price fixing in the past. We know he was aware of what was going on with Romanelli in the pressure that's been put on Acme. We know the amount of money they hope to make out of this.

Gus Simone, now here's an interesting man. Gus Simone, a union leader, supposed to be paid foreman's wages, but right now he has just finished constructing a home out in Bolton which cost $150,000. It didn't cost him $150,000, it cost $150,000 because Gus has a unique way of putting up homes.

He goes around to the contractors. One of the contractors informed me he just went from contractor to contractor. One fellow said he said, "Wouldn't you like to donate the foundation?" To another, "Wouldn't you like to donate the windows?" To another, "Wouldn't you like to donate the big pool in the backyard?" It's the biggest pool I've ever seen in my life, I must say. I think it's 25 ft deep and 60 ft across. It's a big pool. I don't think there is any concrete in it yet.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): It's a quarry.

Mr. Shulman: I will tell you where the money came from to build that. Part of the house he got through extortion from the contractors, in a nice way. He didn't come out and say, "If you don't give me this I'll break your neck, or I will hurt you," or anything like that. He came out and said, "Don't you think it would be nice?" The contractors know from past experience that if Gus Simone gets mad at them the next day their workers aren't on the job, or there are union grievances, or the job doesn't get done.

The extortion is done in a very, very gentle way. There aren't any iron bars used. They only use those when it comes to really tough cases. The contractors usually go along beautifully, and they went along in the case of this big house. They went along in the case of building the—what's that big hotel they built?—Hyatt House. Somebody had a contract to pay—I have just forgotten the exact figure—I believe it was $7.75 an hour and they suddenly managed to pay $1 an hour less. That money had to be shared of course, one mustn't be greedy in these things; and a good hunk of that money went into the pocket of Gus Simone.

I haven't proof of this but I'm convinced because why else would he order his men to work for $1 an hour less than the contract requires?

There's one way you get all these guys—and I suggested this to the police the other day—because they can all be caught on income tax evasion. Simone isn't declaring this money. Romanelli hasn't declared his money. Cesaroni they can take another good look at.

We should follow the example they followed with Al Capone down in the United States, because the police are literally helpless to take action against these men for the simple reason that there isn't hard evidence. They have certain wiretap evidence, which is not good enough—it is not acceptable in court in any case—to get a conviction.

They got egg on their faces two years ago when, in his anxiety not to have a royal commission, the Attorney General ordered them to lay charges. And who did they lay charges against? They laid charges against DiLorenzo, such badly laid charges and such a badly conducted case because the Crown attorney didn't have his heart in it. It was so obvious he didn't have his heart in it that it was thrown right out of court.

I shouldn't speak badly of the dear departed, but when Al Lawrence was here he got up in this House and with deep feeling he said, "What a wonderful job this Special Project B police group did. Why we laid all these great charges against DiLorenzo." He didn't mention they were all thrown out of court. In order to lay the charges and to try and get evidence they made deals with everybody else around not to prosecute them and then they mangled the case.

The Attorney General of that day didn't want a royal commission and the Attorney General of this day doesn't want a royal commission. There's millions and millions of dollars being extorted one way or another; through violence, through threats, through the thought if you don't pay up your projects aren't going to be done, you're going to have strikes, you're going to have labour troubles, you're going to have fires, you're going to have roofs collapsing.

Local 562 is a model of how a union ought not to be run. The people running that union feel that the union is theirs and that the money that comes in is theirs. I don't want to go into the details of something that has already been in the press, but on Nov. 7 there was a long article in the Globe and Mail of how that particular union handles its funds. They think nothing of taking the funds out for personal reasons; personal reasons of the people in charge, let me say.

Well that's the way things stood at the end of October, and then a new gimmick came up. They couldn't bomb any more; that was out because there were too many police around. The heat was getting too great and Al Lawrence had sent order down to the police, "For God's sake, do something; this is getting embarrassing." And the police, literally, put a lot of men on it; they did their very best.

Now a new group came in. A new effort was made. Suddenly it was made clear to Acme that unless they decided to come to terms—and it was getting a little late in the day already to come to terms—they were going to go out of business entirely. How were they going to go out of business entirely? It was very simple.

Simultaneously, suddenly, by great coincidence, three insurance companies—the Continental Insurance Co., The Guardian Royal Exchange Insurance Co. and the Aetna Insurance Co.—wrote letters to Acme saying,

"We're very sorry, but effective immediately your insurance is cancelled." This was the insurance for office contents. This was the insurance for fire. This was the insurance for the building itself.

This was some lengthy time after the bombings had ceased—some many weeks. They didn't seem to be upset while the bombings were going on but suddenly, when all else had failed, this was the new form of pressure that came in. The insurance companies said, "We're cancelling your insurance, and not only are we cancelling your insurance, but as it says on the bottom, we are sending a copy to your mortgage holders."

Mr. Speaker, I'm not sure if you're aware of the significance of that, but if you have insurance on a building and you have a mortgage on that building, and the insurance is cancelled, the mortgage automatically becomes due. In effect, they were saying to Acme, "You'd better co-operate or get out of business." And as of that day the insurance was cancelled. This is the role of our great insurance companies. They co-operate beautifully with the Mafia.

I got in touch with all three insurance companies. The reactions of the different ones were interesting.

I must say Aetna was the most straightforward. I phoned up and I spoke to the Toronto manager. I explained the situation to him and I said, "I find it very interesting that you're co-operating with organized crime." He said to me, "Oh, no, it isn't that at all, that's just a coincidence. It isn't that we're co-operating with organized crime, it's just that we don't like having losses. We suddenly realized that Acme was too big a risk and, therefore, we're cancelling their insurance. We don't like to carry heavy risks, you know."

I said "Well, perhaps I misunderstand insurance. Isn't insurance the idea that many thousands of people pool their risks across the country so that the light risks will protect the heavy risks? I can understand your cancelling the insurance of a firm that did something to bring on its own trouble. But here's a firm that's having difficulties, and having difficulties only because it stood up against organized crime, and you're co-operating with organized crime to put it out of business." The man from Aetna said, "Well, frankly, we don't care about that. We don't care about that. That's their problem, we're just interested in making money." This is the man from Aetna. "And as far as you're concerned, Dr. Shulman, we don't care what you do and we're not going to reinstate that insurance, and you can go jump in the lake." That was the end of that discussion.

Continental handled it a little more subtly. They handled it a little more subtly, I must give them credit. They said, "We'll certainly look into it and phone you back in half an hour." Then two days passed, so I thought I should phone them again, and I got the same person on the phone again, and he said, "Oh, yes, yes, just what's your number again? Well, we'll phone you back tomorrow for sure." That was three weeks ago and they haven't got around to phoning back. But they handled it a little more subtly: They don't tell people to go jump in the lake. They're very nice, very nice.

The only intelligent one in the bunch was Guardian Royal Exchange. They said, "Well, that is terrible. That's just a terrible story you've told us, Dr. Shulman. We certainly aren't going to do anything that's going to help organized crime, and we're going to reinstate the insurance immediately, provided the other companies reinstate theirs. After all, you know, we're the smallest one of the bunch as far as the insurance goes; why should we take all the risk? But if they're prepared to pool the risk, we'll be glad to go along because we're public spirited and we don't want to do anything that's going to help organized crime."

It isn't too often I get to give a compliment to the other side of the House and I want to give one now, because we have a new minister here. He doesn't know much about wine, which is one part of his field, but he is willing to try and he is willing to learn and he is willing to do the right thing if it can be done without embarrassing Bill Kelly or any of that group of people.

I got in touch with him and I said, "Look, I don't want to embarrass you with the insurance companies—I know how much they give to the Conservative Party—but this is really pretty rough when they get in bed with the Mafia. It's going to be awfully embarrassing if I have to get up in the House and say that I came to you as the minister in charge of insurance and you couldn't fix us up."

He moved quickly and he moved efficiently and I gave him a tip of the hat. He called his Superintendent of Insurance, Mr. Grundy, that day and strangely enough the insurance companies changed their minds. You know, one must give credit to these insurance companies.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): They are flexible!

Mr. Shulman: They are flexible. When they see the public interest is involved; when they see the interest of the Conservative Party is involved—this is important. They move a little more quickly than if it's just a matter of crime and bombing and the Mafia.

Anyway, whatever caused them to see the light; suddenly, simultaneously, all three of them changed their minds and they came rushing back to Acme and said, "It's a terrible thing that happened. We are going to re-insure you immediately."

Let's give credit to the insurance companies where credit is due. When you twist their arm, they do the right thing.

What's the next thing that happened? It's interesting to trace this along. The next thing that happened is a man by the name of Joseph Bagnato—he's a boxer—was hired by Local 562 to help in matters of discipline. Sometimes unions have problems in discipline and it's good to have someone like Joe Bagnato around.

They hired him last year and he was very good at that, very good. He commanded respect among all the people he spoke to. I'm sure he would command respect if he spoke to me.

Mr. Drea: Wasn't he one honest man?

Mr. Shulman: Bagnato?

Mr. Drea: He was one honest man.

Mr. Shulman: Well, I don't think I came to that conclusion. Perhaps the member will come to that conclusion. I really would not come to that conclusion about Bagnato.

Mr. Drea: Is he a friend of yours?

Mr. Shulman: No, he is not a friend. Bagnato said that he could fix everything up because it was silly for Acme to go through all this wear and tear on the nerves and having people shooting machine-guns through their windows and throwing bombs at them. Even if they did blow up the wrong building most of the time, still it is distressing. You might go to the wrong door when you came to work in the morning!

He said there is a man he could arrange for them to meet who would fix everything up very quickly. They arranged a meeting in a restaurant. This was a very interesting meeting because there was this man and he was nervous that the officials from Acme might have been wired up so he didn't want to say anything. Through the whole interview he never said a word. The way he handled it—and it was done very cleverly—was he kept writing notes and after each note he'd light a match and burn that one before he wrote the next one.

It was impressive. It's a different way of doing business and it's good to learn these things because you never know when you are going to have to branch out.

Mr. Drea: That was the fellow—

Mr. MacDonald: I thought the member got into enough trouble this afternoon with his interjections, and getting involved!

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Go back to the Speaker's dinner.

Mr. Drea: If the member will take me out tonight maybe he will find out something.

Mr. Shulman: I can't get mad at the member for Scarborough Centre because he and I are now partners, which has caused considerable dismay on both sides of the floor. We've been working together for the past several weeks on a project of great importance to elect a Conservative mayor. But a good Conservative—they are not all bad, you know. There a few like him.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: How does the member stand with his friends? How does he stand with the caucus?

Mr. Shulman: I'm not going to get mad at the member for Scarborough Centre tonight because we are both on the same side. You know what was very interesting about that campaign? I found to my great horror that the financial chairman for our mutually beloved mayor turned out to be an official of Fidinam and this gave me some heartburn.

When I saw Mr. Saunderson's name there I got a little upset, but they assured me he was just there to do the banking and someone was watching him so it was okay.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): There goes Crombie.

Mr. J. Duszta (Parkdale): I will make a donation.

Mr. Shulman: In any case—where was I? Oh yes, the notes.

What the notes said were:

You can solve all your problems very quickly. All you have to do is pay me $30,000 to start and then take me on the payroll with a reasonable sum every week and there will be no more troubles, no more bombings, no more machine-gunnings, no more labour troubles. Everything is going to be fine.

This chap, from Acme—I don't know whether he was convinced or not—he didn't know what to do. Anyway he said he thought this wasn't a very good idea but he'd think it over, and he went off. Of course, the police promptly identified the gentleman who was sitting there. His name is Charlie Bagnato and by some coincidence he's Joe Bagnato's brother. It's probably coincidental.

When Joe Bagnato came to the office of Acme in order to set up this meeting, he said, "You had best meet this chap who can fix things up because otherwise Romanelli will bomb again."

All right, here we are. Here's this whole sordid, horrible mess and the big question that comes down is: Here are extortionists, people who do not hesitate to use physical violence. They have ordered beatings in the past. They've used bombs, they've used machine guns. Why has nothing been done?

Why was the first exposure which was made here over two years ago ignored? Why was the recommendation brought from the Ontario Police Commission to hold a royal commission ignored? Not only ignored, but suppressed?

Why was the one charge bungled so badly? Why was a Crown attorney assigned who didn't want the case and who handled it very much as though he didn't want the case?

Let me say very categorically, it is not the fault of the police. The policemen who were involved in this, as far as I can tell, have done a good job to the best of their ability. There is not enough evidence that will stand up in court, and of course you can't admit wiretap evidence to get a conviction against Romanelli, against Simone, or against Cesaroni. The only way you are possibly going to get these men at the moment is on income tax charges and that, of course, is not up to our Metro police or the other people from the Ontario Provincial Police who are involved.

Mr. Drea: Wasn't Simone the member's informant?

Mr. Shulman: I've never met Simone.

Mr. Drea: Simone is the man the member said was some honest man.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, Simone was an honest man once, I believe. Let me say I certainly do not believe he is at the present time.

Mr. Drea: Well, if the hon. member is going to give up, let me get up and say other things then.

Mr. Shulman: The member opposite may say anything he likes. He will have his chance very soon.

Mr. Roy: Atta boy, Frank!

Mr. Laughren: Hasn't the member for Scarborough Centre spoken on the budget?

Mr. Shulman: To continue, Mr. Speaker, it disturbed me why no charges were laid—why no royal commission was held. I can understand now why no charges were laid; the charges couldn't stick.

The police told me they have a stack of evidence this high, but they said none of it is sufficiently explicit as to who ordered the bombings, or who laid the bombs, to be admissible into court, so they can't lay charges that will hold. There is no point in going through the DiLorenzo nonsense again and laying charges that won't hold. Why has a royal commission not been held?

I want to digress for a minute to Herb Thurston.

Mr. Drea: He's got to be the member's friend.

Mr. Shulman: In their anxiety to tag someone, the Solicitor General (Mr. Yaremko) and his happy cohorts have suspended one Inspector Herb Thurston from his access to the confidential files of the Ontario Police Commission.

Now, I want to say this very clearly so it will be heard by the Solicitor General and, perhaps, so he will understand it, I will say it in words of one syllable. I have never met Herb Thurston. I have never received any information from Herb Thurston. He is not my informant. He has never been my informant. He has never given me any information directly or indirectly. He has never given me any documents. You've got the wrong guy.

Mr. Drea: Simone gave the member all the information.

Mr. J. H. Jessiman (Fort William): Is this a confession?

Mr. Shulman: I'm saying this for the benefit of the Solicitor General, because it is rather disturbing to see them running around inside the OPP searching, searching, searching; and grabbing someone just because they want to get rid of him for other reasons.

All right, there are three people responsible—let's forget about Wishart, he's gone. There are three people responsible for the fact that a royal commission has not been held.

One is our dear departed friend Al Lawrence. I have written to Lawrence, I have spoken to Lawrence. While he was here, I did everything I could to prod him off—to quote him—"to get him off his butt and into the mainstream of the problem". But I couldn't quite get him to move.

I wrote to him back on July 24 and said, "The police appear to be helpless in preventing these bombings. I am asking that you immediately take action before this war results in killing." He did nothing. That is not fair; he did something—he made a phone call.

Mr. Drea: Simone was the member's friend; he was doing the bombing.

Mr. Shulman: We are talking about Lawrence, my friend over there. Don't strain me. I still like the member for Scarborough Centre, but don't strain me.

Mr. Drea: Go ahead, strain yourself.

An. hon. member: What a match!

Mr. J. P. MacBeth (York West): He is killing the member for Scarborough Centre with praise—

Mr. Shulman: Lawrence made one phone call. He phoned the head of the OPP and said, "For God's sake do something and get this damn mess off my back." Pardon me, he phoned the head of the OPC, the Ontario Police Commission. Nothing happened, because it wasn't up to the police.

The only people that really order the royal commission are sitting in that front row—my good friend, the Provincial Secretary for Justice (Mr. Kerr), who wishes he could order it but can't; and the other two gentlemen who are sitting to his right and won't. As far as the member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) is concerned, I don't wish to say anything unkind, because it has all been said already. But perhaps I could quote from the Montreal Star of July 10 of this year, which sums it up far better than I, or perhaps anyone else in this House can do. This sums up the problem from the point of view of our Solicitor General. This is dealing with the problems of organized crime in the construction industry. It said:

What this comes down to is that the man most in charge is the man responsible for the police, Solicitor General John Yaremko, the ethnic community's gift to Ontario politics. Many a tale is told of Mr. Yaremko, most of them unfortunately only too true. It seems impossible that a more obtuse politician has ever practised. With Mr. Yaremko around the mob has little to fear.

An hon. member: Where was that?

Mr. Shulman: That was the Montreal Star. It was written—

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): Who wrote the article?

Mr. Shulman: No, I didn't write it!

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Who wrote it?

Mr. Shulman: It was written by Harold Greer.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Who wrote Wintermeyer's speeches?

Mr. Shulman: Wintermeyer's speeches? Not me; I didn't do it.

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): Was it the minister? Did he write them? The minister didn't write them did he?

Mr. Shulman: I have heard the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Nixon) wrote them—is that it?

Mr. Lewis: His style and content has improved.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: I will tell the member this—Wintermeyer made that speech, and he is no longer here.

Mr. Shulman: And I will tell the minister this: He is not going to be too far behind him at the rate they are shifting him down the line.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: That is right, and the leader of the member's party just missed by a hair's breadth.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Shulman: Somehow, Mr. Speaker, I feel that we have been diverted from what I was trying to say.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is trying to outloudmouth the member for Scarborough Centre.

Mr. Drea: An honest man! I don't want to divert the member from—

Mr. Lewis: Frank, go back to doing what-ever you were doing.

Mr. Shulman: The member for Scarborough Centre actually had a key job in the—

Mr. MacDonald: I hope they take the member out to avoid the embarrassment to both himself and themselves.

Mr. Shulman: The member for Scarborough Centre had a key job during the election campaign. He was given the job from 1 to 6 in the morning, of going around and putting those little notes on doorknobs saying: "Good morning, this is election day. Be sure and get out and vote for Dave Crombie". And he was assigned that job because they felt that was what he was most competent to do—and he did it very well. I want to give him credit.

And he was proud of it, mind you. He sent me a note when he came in here to the House the next day saying how cold he was. And I was sympathetic, you know. We want to encourage the workers.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): The member for Scarborough Centre should have quit while he was ahead.

Mr. Shulman: Well, Mr. Speaker,—

Mr. Sargent: This is a new low in politics.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. If I sink low enough I may get thrown out of this House—so I had better be careful.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): Stick to the evidence.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, we were wondering why there was no royal commission. Now, I don't know why there is no royal commission, but I know what Romanelli and Cesaroni and Simone think. And this was told by one of the contractors, and also by a police officer.

They aren't worried about the police, because they know there is not enough evidence to charge them. They weren't worried about the newspapers, because they felt that none of this could be printed. They were worried about my giving this speech in the House and producing a royal commission; but they weren't too worried about that, because they believe they have a powerful friend on the front row of the cabinet. I don't know whether they have or they haven't. They believe they have a powerful friend. However, there is one thing I do know, the police—

Mr. Sargent: Time, time!

Mr. Drea: We wouldn't want to cut him off.

Mr. Sargent: He is sick.

Mr. Jessiman: Right; he's sick!

Mr. Shulman:—from a detective who was assigned for an entirely different reason, to watch the home of Cesaroni. Just before the last provincial election, the person whom this detective saw to his amazement at this party of Cesaroni's—it was a fund-raising event for the Conservatives—was Dalton Bales.

Mr. Drea: The member is sure it wasn't Gus Simone.

Mr. Shulman: I spoke to the detective myself and said, "Are you sure it was Dalton Bales that was there?" He said, "I know Dalton Bales."

I asked the detective, who came to my office the other day, "Why didn't you go and ask him?" He said one doesn't go and interview the Attorney General.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I demand to know the date, the time and the persons present when I was supposed to be at some place.

Mr. Shulman: The date was shortly before the last provincial election.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Be specific!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Put up or shut up!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: The name of the detective is Max Chikofsky. He has given a report to the police. The minister can get it from them.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Where? Where was I supposed to be?

Mr. Shulman: At the home of Cesaroni.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Where is that?

Mr. Shulman: It is outside of Toronto. If members will bear with me for two minutes, I'll get the address.

Mr. Drea: Is the member sure it wasn't Gus Simone's place? The member's loyal friend, his union friend.

An hon. member: We'll wait.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We want specific information.

Mr. Gilbertson: Keep looking.

Mr. Shulman: I have it. Don't worry. It is out in a little town outside of Toronto which wasn't familiar to me.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Oh yes; Thunder Bay maybe!

Mr. Drea: Bolton, where Gus is building his big house?

Mr. Lewis: Easy! The minister is almost overreacting. Take it easy.

An hon. member: He is showing a little emotion.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: He hasn't said anything up to now.

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): That the minister wants to hear, that is.

Mr. Ferrier: Why doesn't the minister do something about it?

Mr. Martel: Read some of those letters about Inco! Did they cover them up? Read Dimension this month; it will do the minister's heart good. It was he and two cabinet ministers who covered it up; until the whole trial became in error.

Mr. Shulman: I will supply the minister with the date and the address. It is out near Unionville—some little town out that way. It was on a large estate. It is owned by Cesaroni. If he doesn't remember it, we'll get him the details. The police have it.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I asked for the details. He has made an allegation and I want the details now; because I am going to make a statement on this in reference to that matter, but I want the details now.

Mr. Shulman: The minister is not going to have the details now from me, because I haven't got them here, but he will get them.

But if he wants them this instant—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Get the police file.

Mr. Jessiman: Sit down, put up or shut up!

Mr. M. Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): That is overreacting, you know.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the member is very specific about a number of things, but when you ask him details—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: He doesn't know.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —he doesn't know.

Mr. Shulman: The minister will have them in two minutes.

Hon. Mr. Bales: He thumbs through papers. He doesn't know.

Mr. MacBeth: The member said that two minutes ago, and we haven't got them yet.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: If members will be patient, we'll have the details in just a moment, if the Attorney General doesn't want to ask his police commissioner, who is over there.

Mr. MacDonald: The member for Scarborough Centre opened his mouth this afternoon and had it shut by the government action.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: We have got three representatives from the Ontario Provincial Police and the Police Commission.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member made the statement. He should answer it.

Mr. Shulman: I have sent someone to get the address. The minister will have it in two minutes.

Mr. Cassidy: How many statements has the minister got there ready in case of need?

Mr. Martel: The way they cover things up over on that side, it is understandable.

Mr. Lewis: The minister knew this was coming.

Mr. Shulman: Let me say that this is no surprise to the Attorney General that this statement is being made tonight.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: This is a familiar tactic of diversion. I have seen it for 15 years from members opposite.

Mr. Martel: The Provincial Secretary for Justice is the greatest cover-up artist going. He remembers covering up for "Father Inco" until the whole file came. He won't find us confused.

Mr. Shulman: I have sent someone for the address and the date. But I want to know, Mr. Speaker, that the Attorney General—

Mr. Martel: Don't cover up!

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, unless the member can give those kind of details, I demand that he withdraw.

Mr. MacDonald: Oh nonsense!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: Let the Provincial Secretary for Justice tell us about the cover-up. He knows all about it.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member for Sudbury East has got a one-track mind.

Mr. Martel: He knows about it—

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Martel: —when the whole trial came in error. Don't play games with us about cover-up tactics.

Mr. Drea: Why is the member's leader biting his fingernails?

Mr. Speaker: Certain charges were made. The hon. Attorney General—

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, no charges have been made.

Mr. Speaker: Well, a statement was made—

Mr. MacDonald: He is presenting the facts!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Deans: On a point of order, no charges were made. A statement was made that the Attorney General visited a house. That is not a charge.

Mr. Drea: He doesn't even know which one!

Mr. M. B. Dymond (Ontario): He hasn't mentioned any specific house.

Mr. MacBeth: One and a half minutes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Martel: To paraphrase Shakespeare, "Methinks he protesteth too much."

Mr. Speaker: If the hon. member for Wentworth would just subside, I changed my words to say that a statement was made which was denied by the hon. Attorney General. The hon. member for High Park—

Mr. Lewis: He hasn't denied it!

Mr. Shulman: He hasn't denied it! He daren't deny it!

Hon. Mr. Bales: I shall deny it, but I want the specifics so I can give a truthful answer.

Mr. Shulman: Does the minister deny it?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I want specifics—

Mr. Shulman: Does the minister deny it?

Mr. Drea: Yes, he'll deny to the member and to anybody else.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacBeth: Two minutes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Jessiman: Well, the member sent his stoolpigeon out. What has he brought back?

Hon. Mr. Kerr: A seating plan for the House; that's all he brought back.

Mr. Shulman: No, he's—

Mr. Speaker: As I understand it, the member for High Park will furnish the information—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: I can't hear what you are saying, Mr. Speaker.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: As I understand it, the member for High Park will furnish the information—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: I can't hear what you are saying, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Speaker: I can't help it.

As I understand it, the member for High Park has promised to furnish that information which was requested in the next few moments. If he would just proceed with his speech, I think it would be in order.

Mr. MacDonald: And at this point the minister hasn't denied it, which to me as an observer is rather significant.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, if I may, before I say anything else, I asked where this place was that I was supposed to have been.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order please! The hon. minister is asking a question.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I asked where I was supposed to have been—

Mr. Jessiman: Sit down, Shulman.

Mr. Shulman: I have still got the floor.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I presume from the member's question that I have known a person named Cesaroni and that I was at his home or some place of business. I want to know where he says I was.

Mr. Speaker: I understand that information will be furnished.

Mr. Shulman: Does the minister deny that he was in Cesaroni's home?

Hon. Mr. Bales: I do not know Cesaroni and I have never met him so far as I am aware. I have never been to Cesaroni's home, but I want to know from the member for High Park where he says that was.

Mr. Shulman: If the minister will be patient, I will have the address. I don't want to make an error—

Hon. Mr. Bales: It seems very strange to me that in all the member's papers he doesn't have that kind of information.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The one time he is challenged.

Hon. W. A. Stewart (Minister of Agriculture and Food): He's challenged. Now he can't tell.

Mr. MacBeth: Three minutes, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Martel: Do you want a stop-watch?

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, the fact that I was making this statement in the House today appears to have come as a great surprise to the Attorney General. Perhaps it is, but I doubt it.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: A newspaper reporter wrote the last speech.

Mr. Jessiman: Is that the one up here?

Mr. Drea: No, that's Gus Simone; his friend.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, what I said—and I will repeat it—is that there is a police report, and it has been confirmed to me by the officers I spoke to, stating that the Attorney General was seen at the home of Cesaroni. Now, he may deny it or he may not deny it; it is in a police report. If he orders his royal commission, he will have the policeman there. I supplied the name of the detective who saw the Attorney General. It was 10 days before the election, which would be Oct. 11, 1971.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): That is the most churlish type of slander, really.

Mr. Shulman: It was at the estate of Mr. Cesaroni, near Unionville, which is outside of Toronto, and there are no further details other than that.

Mr. Bullbrook: That is awful!

Mr. Shulman: It is in the police record. And I am not saying—let me make this very clear—I am not saying—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member did say it!

Mr. Jessiman: He did say it!

An hon. member: Is the member backing up?

Mr. Shulman: I am not backing up one iota. I am not suggesting that the Attorney General was carrying the dynamite, and I am not suggesting that he was involved in the bombings. What I am—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: Give it to him with both barrels!

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Come on, Mr. Speaker. Make him withdraw it.

Mr. Shulman: I have the floor, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Does the hon. minister have a point of privilege?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I do not know a person by the name of Cesaroni. I have never met a person by the name of Cesaroni so far as I am aware.

Mr. Foulds: That's his alias.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I have never been at a home of a person named Cesaroni, or a place of business, so far as I can recall; and I can recall various places very well before the election.

Mr. Speaker: that is a truthful statement and I demand that the member withdraw those statements. He is required to under the rules of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. Does the hon.

member for High Park withdraw his statement?

Mr. Shulman: I do not.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I refer you to the rules of the House where the word of a member must be accepted. The member must withdraw.

Mr. Speaker: It is very clear in our standing orders that a member may not make a charge like that and—

Mr. Deans: What charge?

Mr. Speaker: Well a statement which another member denies. I can't just quote the order but is quite clearly there—

Mr. Martel: Tell us the charge.

Mr. Speaker: —and we ask the hon. member—

Mr. Deans: Well you better be prepared to quote the order.

Mr. Speaker: —for High Park to withdraw that statement.

An hon. member: No!

Mr. Shulman: Is the minister saying he doesn't recall it? Mr. Speaker, I am sure the minister doesn't recall his visit, but as there is a police report, and as I have personally—

Mr. Speaker: No, we are speaking—no.

Mr. Shulman: —spoken to the detective who saw him—

Mr. Speaker: No.

Mr. Shulman: —I cannot withdraw it.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Never mind that. The member has the Speaker's ruling.

Mr. Speaker: No. The hon. minister has denied the statement which you made—

Mr. Martel: All right, bring in the police commission report.

Mr. Speaker: —and we ask you to withdraw it.

Mr. Shulman: Sir, I ask that you request a royal commission to investigate the truth of this.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: It is a true statement to the best of my belief.

Mr. MacBeth: The member said he would have the information in two minutes.

Mr. Shulman: I have given it to the minister. I gave him a date, I gave him an address and I gave him the name. The minister can deny it from now to Doomsday but it's true.

Mr. MacBeth: The member didn't give the—

Mr. Speaker: We again ask the hon. member for High Park to withdraw that statement.

Mr. Martel: Throw him a fish.

Mr. Foulds: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! The member for Port Arthur.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Foulds: Could the Speaker be precise about the statement he wishes the member for High Park to withdraw?

Mr. Speaker: The statement which was denied as being true by the minister.

Mr. Foulds: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I can't repeat it.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member knows the statement he is talking about.

Mr. Foulds: How can the minister deny the statement when the statement the member for High Park made was that there is a police report?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister has denied the facts of that statement in this House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: I am just quoting the police report. I'm quoting the police report. How can he deny the existence of the police report?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: There is one answer, let's have the police report tabled.

Mr. Martel: Before they wipe it out.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: That's his job.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it seems to me that the Speaker's ground are weak. The exchange is peculiar.

The member has said that the Attorney General was at a specific place at a certain time. The Attorney General has responded that as far as he can recall he was not. I think that's that. Members may—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: No. Let me finish my point of order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Lewis: I would just like to finish my point of order—

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Is the leader of the NDP associating himself with those remarks?

Mr. Lewis: It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that at some subsequent time the Attorney General can clearly indicate in more specifics if he wants to, or the member for High Park will have to document it in further specifics—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: I don't know how you entertain this. In the House constant references are made that members on opposite sides of the House disagree with references that involve their persons and they simply say so. What kind of entertaining of new rules of order is this, withdrawing it? I don't understand that.

An hon. member: It is disgraceful!

Mr. Lewis: You have an opportunity before the orders of the day tomorrow to make your position clear. Withdrawal of a statement isn't going to satisfy what has emerged tonight in one respect or another.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The member for High Park—

Mr. Lewis: I don't see what you are accomplishing.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The member for High Park has said by inference that I was associated with those he has disparaged in the construction or lathing industry. He has particularly referred to people named Cesaroni and he has inferred that I am an associate or am aware or knowledgeable of them; or am an acquaintance. I would just say to you, Mr. Speaker, categorically, I do not know any people named Cesaroni.

Mr. MacDonald: The minister is repeating himself. Why bother denying it—

Hon. Mr. Bales: I do not—

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Demand facts!

Hon. Mr. Bales: I have asked for facts from the member and he made some pretence—

An hon. member: In other words, he's a liar.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —of sending somebody out to get the information and the person comes back, apparently bringing a seating plan for the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The member does not give facts about this matter—

Mr. Shulman: I gave the minister a date and I gave him a name and I gave him a place.

Hon. Mr. Bales: No, he didn't give me a date. He did not give a date.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: He didn't give a date; no date or place.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: Give him the date.

Hon. Mr. Bales: The member said about some time. He said out at some place.

Mr. Shulman: It was at the palatial home of Cesaroni, on the 10th or 11th day before the provincial election.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: No date or place!

Mr. Drea: How would the member know, if he wasn't there himself?

Hon. Mr. Bales: If the member knows so much about it being a palatial home, then he must know more.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order, Mr. Speaker!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Point of order, Mr. Speaker!

On what basis is the Attorney General speaking? Is it a point of privilege?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Yes.

Mr. MacDonald: It's a point of privilege? He didn't call for a point of privilege.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I did before.

Mr. MacDonald: He's repeating it for the third time. On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

An hon. member: Sit down! Sit down!

Mr. MacDonald: I'm not going to sit down. I've not been bullied by the loudmouths on that side that I've seen in 20 years and I won't start now!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Let them go back into the bush where they belong.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: We've been listening to that party for an hour and a half.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, I think there's one solution to this and the government can't evade it. The hon. member for High Park has stated—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: —that what he has said in the House is in a police report—

Mr. N. G. Leluk (Humber): Let him produce it!

Mr. MacDonald: There is one solution to it, produce the police report.

Mr. Leluk: Well, let him produce it!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! Rule No. 16 states that no member may impute false or unavowed motives to another member.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park certainly made quite definite statements about the presence of the hon. minister at a certain place at a certain time—

Mr. Lewis: Has the minister denied it?

Mr. Speaker: —without any exact dates or exact times. The hon. minister has denied it. The member for High Park must accept those words.

Mr. Lewis: Fine.

Mr. Deans: He has!

Mr. Speaker: We want clear acceptance of it—no ifs, ands or buts.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: May I continue my speech?

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Withdraw!

Mr. Deans: No, he doesn't have to withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: I understand you do accept the hon. minister's denial of certain statements that you made. If you accept that then you may continue.

Mr. Shulman: If the minister does not recall I, of course, would not question his word, Mr. Speaker. There is a police report—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Withdraw the charge!

Mr. Deans: There is no charge.

Mr. Shulman: There is a police report stating quite flatly that a detective saw the minister at that home at that time—

An hon. member: Hearsay! Hearsay!

Mr. Shulman: —and the detective's name is Max Chikofsky.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! I can't rule on any police report naturally.

Mr. Drea: He had his licence taken away and the member knows why.

Hon. Mr. Bales: It's quite obvious that he has talked to somebody, a person named Chikofsky, whom I do not know and have never have known. He has made these allegations and under the rules of the House he must withdraw them when I have denied them.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: He has to accept only the fact the minister can't recall.

Hon. Mr. Bales: On that point of order, Mr. Speaker, I can recall very clearly. I have asked for detail from that member. He has failed to give it.

Mr. Lewis: All right. It is up to him to provide that.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, he does his usual little act of being very vague about the details when he doesn't want to recall.

Mr. Drea: And Chikofsky was never—

Hon. Mr. Bales: He can recall very clearly and he can give exact information if he wants to, I'm very sure, having watched this man over a period of years.

Mr. Shulman: The minister hired me.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Not me.

Mr. Shulman: The minister was the man that ordered it.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Yes, but somebody fired the member.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister recall that?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, the member said he would give those details as to the exact location and date—

Mr. Martel: Two minutes.

Hon. Mr. Bales: He sent his colleague out to get that information—

Mr. Lewis: No, no, no!

Hon. Mr. Bales: —and he came back and the member can't remember now. Now we get—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —to the stage of him withdrawing his memory, but he doesn't withdraw those original statements.

Mr. Deans: No, he can't do that.

Mr. Martel: Oh, Dalton!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please; order!

Hon. Mr. Bales: And the leader of the NDP has associated himself—

Mr. MacDonald: He doesn't have to produce the police report.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. MacDonald: Let the Attorney General produce the police report.

Mr. Leluk: How can he produce something that doesn't exist?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

On a point of order the minister was speaking on a point of personal privilege. Has the minister finished?

Mr. MacDonald: He keeps repeating himself.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Cassidy: Get up again!

Mr. Speaker: It's a very clear rule in this House that we have to accept the word of another member. The hon. minister has got up and denied in very categorical terms certain facts which were mentioned earlier this evening, I know that the hon. member for High Park will accept the minister's statement.

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, the minister has got up to say that inferences were made and to say that a report does not exist. He is denying a substantive fact.

Mr. Speaker: No, the hon. minister made no such statement.

Mr. Cassidy: Secondly—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Cassidy: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: No, there's no point of order. The hon. minister made no such statement on that.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. He said that the thing he was objecting to was an inference which he apparently made. It is very difficult for members on this side of the House to control the tendency of people on that side of the House to make all sorts of inferences about their own conduct.

Mr. S. B. Handleman (Carleton): What else can we conclude?

Mr. Cassidy: But one cannot withdraw an inference which—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! I don't think I need to repeat myself.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: A lot of nonsense!

Mr. Martel: The minister knows what the cover up game is all about.

Mr. Speaker: Will the member for High Park continue his speech?

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, may I, on a point of order—

Mr. Martel: The minister has been after me for two and a half years and denied it all.

Mr. Shulman: The matter can be settled very easily. There is an official here from the Ontario Police Commission who is in a position to produce the report if the Attorney General will ask him.

Mr. Speaker: Well, that's not in our orders.

Mr. MacDonald: It's the important thing. Put it in the orders!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Look, if the minister is denying it, he is denying it.

Hon. Mr. Bales: It's denied and I want it withdrawn.

Mr. MacDonald: No, no! Let's see the report and see whether it's true.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: If the report does exist—

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Do you have a point of order?

An hon. member: He can't have.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: I suggest he cannot continue his speech until you rule on your statement.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: The member for York South lost the leadership because he made speeches like that.

Mr. MacDonald: Nonsense!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

I have asked the hon. member for High Park to accept the word of the minister who made a very clear statement a moment ago. Will he do that?

Mr. Shulman: I'll gladly accept his word. I insist there is a police report stating he was there.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: No, we must accept the hon. member's word.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: Of course, if he denies it it must be accepted.

Mr. Speaker: You have accepted the hon. minister's denial that there was—

Mr. Shulman: But may it be made very clear I insist there is such a police report and I insist that that's what the police report said. I do not withdraw that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Lewis: The leader of the NDP expects his colleague to bring the precise address and date into the House—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order please, order!

Can the hon. member for High Park produce the information which he purportedly has and hasn't been able to produce yet?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: I think I have produced it, but I will produce it again. And I'll say it again.

Mr. Speaker: Right now?

Mr. Shulman: Right now. The hon. Dalton Bales was seen by a detective who reported this to his employer and informed the police that he was seen at a fund-raising party at the home of Cesaroni. It was Oct. 10 or 11, 1971. It was not in Toronto, it was in the estate of Cesaroni outside of Unionville. Now what more do you want?

Hon. Mr. Bales: Was the member his employer?

Mr. Drea: I say one more time, the member is a liar.

Mr. Shulman: He was hired by the union.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Is the member for High Park the employer of Chikofsky?

Mr. Drea: He was never licensed in this province.

An hon. member: No, not Chikofsky.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is an irrelevant question. The member has produced the requested information. Would he continue his speech?

Mr. Shulman: You say I can continue? Fine.

Well, as I was saying when we had—

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, I say to this House that I do not know Chikofsky—

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —at least—I do not know Chikofsky, that's true—I do not know Cesaroni. Insofar as I am aware, while I meet many people I have never met a person named Cesaroni.

Mr. MacDonald: It's repetitious.

Hon. Mr. Bales: I've never been at a person's home named Cesaroni, or his office.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park must accept that statement.

Mr. MacDonald: But he has.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): He has done it four times.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: All right, but he may continue the rest of his speech.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that the—

Mr. Speaker: I understand the hon. member does accept that statement from the hon. minister, is that right?

Mr. Shulman: I think I've made my position abundantly clear, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: There has to be no misunderstanding. Carry on.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I don't think that all this came as a complete thunderclap to the government. Last Thursday, by some coincidence, two detectives came to see me with certain questions they wished to ask, one of which was, was I going to mention Dalton Bales in the speech today. So, perhaps, there was some advance warning and he wasn't quite as surprised as he appeared.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): So what?

Mr. Ferrier: There's a lot of cabinet ministers out tonight.

Mr. Shulman: In any case, Mr. Speaker, I suggest to you—

Mr. Deans: I've never seen so many Tory front benchers at a night sitting in my life.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: The member for High Park is concocting everything.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: In the Toronto Sun he has smeared every cabinet minister.

Mr. Shulman: But the Solicitor General is my favourite.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: And the member is an expert smearer.

Mr. Foulds: With targets like the minister, it's easy.

Mr. Drea: What about the heart attack at Julie's?

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Go ahead!

Mr. Shulman: May I continue?

Mr. Speaker: The point of this whole exercise—

Mr. Drea: Just a question.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I think that tonight is a new low in this House.

Mr. Speaker: Order! What's the point of order?

Mr. MacDonald: Order, Mr. Speaker! This is a speech.

Mr. Sargent: I, more than anyone, have taken your rulings. We play politics over here and we play them the way we think they should be—I can look a man in the face tomorrow. This defamation of character, this assassination of character, it's been going on—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order please!

Mr. Sargent: My point of order is this: If you allow this man to continue—

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order! There is no point of order.

Mr. Sargent: He has not withdrawn, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: There is no point of order.

Mr. Cassidy: The member for Grey-Bruce will get kicked out in a minute.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member—

Mr. Sargent: He has not withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member does not have a point of order.

Mr. MacDonald: Is the member the Speaker?

Mr. Sargent: They should be ashamed of that man.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, the point of this exercise is that there is a bad condition in this city. There are criminals who are doing violence—

Mr. C. E. McIlveen (Oshawa): Sure there is. He is right in the second row.

Mr. Shulman: —criminal activities. They are extorting. They are bombing. They are beating. They are shooting. And nothing has been done by this government.

An hon. member: Just short by one!

Mr. Shulman: They have consistently refused through the years to order a royal commission. One Attorney General after another has refused. There is an absolute need for a royal commission to look into these affairs, because regardless of what the truth is as to why it hasn't been held there are—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Regardless of what the truth is as to why they have not held a royal commission, a suspicion has grown up among both police and criminals that it is for reasons of which we should not be proud.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. Shulman: I suggest to you that the prima facie evidence that was given here in 1970; and the details which are added to tonight; and the reports which were sent by the police commission to the predecessor of the present Attorney General; the demand at that time that a royal commission be held into the violence in the construction industry; the request of Chief Mackey that a royal commission be held at the demand of the construction industry; and my charges tonight are sufficient evidence—

Mr. Drea: One should never drink pink champagne.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: —that if nothing else but to get the facts absolutely straight, the government is required to hold a royal commission.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Withdraw the charges!

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I was going to turn to a different subject. Would you like me to continue, or should I adjourn the debate?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: If I may just interject: I was listening to some degree to the exchanges that took place. It seems to me that the hon. member for High Park had the floor. He was delivering his contribution to the budget debate.

In the course of so doing he made certain allegations which were his opinions. Apparently some statements were made to which another hon. member had taken offence. It seems to me that here we have simply an argument.

If the hon. member for High Park had made certain allegations against the integrity of another hon. member, I would think that that other hon. member had every right to rise on a point of privilege to deny those allegations. I think each member of this House must assume that each other member is an honourable member.

In view of that, surely while the hon. member for High Park feels that he has certain information which, in his opinion, is proof of certain facts or certain actions or certain things, nevertheless if another hon. member denies the truth or the facts of those allegations, I think that the hon. member for High Park should accept the honour of the other hon. member. I think that is all that is required.

Mr. Shulman: Let me say, Mr. Speaker, I never—

Mr. Speaker: Therefore, the hon. member for High Park—I am sure he accepts the word of the hon. member—may proceed.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, if I may be allowed to speak, I was not questioning the integrity of the Attorney General, I was suggesting he had been used.

Mr. Speaker: Of course, that would be an opinion of the hon. member for High Park and he is entitled to his opinion.

Hon. Mr. Bales: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege, the phrase that the member used then, that I "had been used," to me indicates that he thinks, well, you went there but you went there without knowing why you went.

Mr. Speaker, I say to you, because you were not in the chair when I said it earlier, I do not know people named Cesaroni.

Mr. Deans: The minister doesn't know? He never has—

Hon. Mr. Bales: Okay, the member can repeat it if he likes, but this is a very serious matter. He may not take it seriously, but I do.

Mr. Deans: I do take it seriously.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. MacDonald: It is no more or less serious when the minister repeats it for the third or fourth time.

Hon. Mr. Bales: This is a matter of a person's reputation in this House and mine isn't going to be smeared by that kind of thing.

I said, Mr. Speaker, that I do not know people named Cesaroni. I have never met them so far as I am aware. I meet many people and I may not know immediately their names. But I have never been to the home of Cesaroni or to an office of Cesaroni, because I have no idea where they live, where they carry on business or anything about them.

Mr. Speaker, on that basis, the phrase that was used by the member for High Park a minute ago clearly left the impression with me that I was there and that he thought I was there, even though I didn't realize why I was going.

Mr. Sargent: So why doesn't the minister punch him in the nose?

Mr. Speaker: I would say that the hon. Attorney General does have what perhaps constitutes a valid point of privilege and that certain allegations were made against him.

Nevertheless, the hon. Attorney General has denied the allegations; there has been no documentary evidence or anything of any consequence that could be acceptable to this House as proof of anything. Therefore, I think it is incumbent upon the hon. member for High Park simply to accept the hon. member's word that he does not know the individuals and that is all there should be to it.

Mr. Shulman: Well, in view of that, sir, may I move that we adjourn the debate.

An hon. member: No!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Ferrier: The minister has to adjourn at 10:30 or make a special motion. He has to have a special motion to sit beyond 10:30.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to move that the House sit beyond 10:30 to accommodate the hon. member if he wants to conclude.

Mr. Deans: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it is already beyond 10:30. Such a motion would have to have been made prior to 10:30.

An hon. member: Oh now, now!

Mr. Lewis: Yes, by the rules of the House.

Mr. Deans: It has to have been made prior to 10:30 by the rules of the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Members are being much too technical and they know it.

Mr. Speaker: Order. On many occasions the Speaker has seen fit to permit the debate to proceed for a few moments beyond the closing hour of 10:30 in order to complete the matter at hand. I have seen fit to permit this to continue beyond the hour of 10:30 for a few moments because we were dealing with a specific matter.

It seems to me that a motion on the part of the hon. House leader to sit beyond may properly be put at this time. If the hon. members do not wish to approve the motion, then they may indicate so.

Mr. Winkler has moved that the House sit beyond the normal closing hour of 10:30.

Those in favour of the motion please say "aye."

Those opposed please say "nay."

In my opinion, the "ayes" have it.

Mr. Deans: The motion is out of order.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth has his opinion that it is out of order. I explained to him why, in my opinion, it is not out of order.

Mr. Lewis: That is fine; the member will speak a little longer.

Mr. Foulds: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, rule 3 of the standing orders says: "If at 6 o'clock", and so on, "the House will continue until 10:30 o'clock, p.m., unless otherwise ordered by government motion."

How can a government motion, put after 10:30, p.m., continue the hour of debate?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: I thought I explained it quite clearly. There have been many occasions—

Mr. Singer: The Speaker knows.

Mr. Speaker: There have been many occasions when we have called it 10:30 to facilitate the business of the House, when in fact the clock said 10:28, or when in fact the clock said 10:33. This has happened on many occasions. As Speaker, I accepted the fact that it was 10:30 of the clock. At that particular time a motion to sit beyond is in order.

Mr. Shulman: I am quite prepared to go ahead, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I had put a motion and in my opinion I expressed the thought that the "ayes" have it.

Mr. Lewis: I think you are right. I think that they have it.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Therefore we may sit beyond the hour of 10:30 and the hon. member for High Park had the floor. To the best of my knowledge and belief the little squabble has now been straightened out. The hon. member for High Park may continue.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Bullbrook: It wasn't a little squabble; it surely wasn't!

Mr. Speaker: I apologize to the hon. members. It has been pointed out to me that it is more than a little squabble.

Mr. Bullbrook: It is a serious thing. It is an imputation against the Attorney General of Ontario, and a very severe one.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, while I have the floor on that particular motion I would also like to move that we resume sittings at 2 p.m. Wednesdays.

Mr. Drea: No way! Let us do it now.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: We are going to do it now.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Winkler moves that—

Mr. Shulman: I was in the middle of a debate.

Mr. Speaker: Well perhaps we can deal with the motion. I'll give the hon. member the floor immediately. Mr. Winkler has moved that this House sit tomorrow at 2 o'clock. Shall the motion carry?

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for High Park may continue with his participation in the Throne debate.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Budget debate.

Mr. Shulman: This is the budget debate. We'll get to the Throne debate later. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to leave the royal commission—

Mr. R. G. Hodgson (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: It is my opinion that rule 16(a) subsection 8 has been violated by the hon. member. Therefore I ask you to seriously consider standing order No. 17(a).

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will perhaps wait a moment until I look those rules up.

Mr. R. G. Hodgson: 17(a), Mr. Speaker, I'll read it:

If a member on being called to order for an offence against standing order 16 or otherwise, persists in the offence, Mr. Speaker may direct him to discontinue his speech, and if such member refuses to resume his seat, Mr. Speaker shall name him to the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: He sat down.

Mr. Foulds: He sat down.

An hon. member: He hasn't accepted it.

Mr. Lewis: He hasn't done that.

Mr. Speaker: I appreciate the comments of the hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton. It seemed to me that after we had discussed the matter at some considerable length, I pointed out to the hon. member for High Park that he should accept the honourable word of the hon. member, which I expect he did do.

Mr. W. Hodgson (York North): He hasn't though.

Mr. Speaker: So I can see that there has been no breach of the rule. The word of the Attorney General has apparently been accepted and I see that there has been no breach of the rule. It was simply an argument.

Mr. R. G. Eaton (Middlesex South): Make him stand up and say it.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, if I can leave the subject of the royal commission for a moment and turn to a more serious matter. I would like to turn my attention to the Minister of Natural Resources (Mr. Bernier).

Mr. Martel: Leo the Lion!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Whose house was he at?

Mr. Shulman: I would like to talk to you about what is happening in the north, Mr. Speaker, because this is a far more serious problem. Bad as the construction industry situation is here in Toronto, it is a local problem. The situation in the north is a far more serious problem, because up there the whole area is dying because of actions of this government.

I have become very concerned with the attitude of the current Conservative government with regard to the independent section of the mining industry. I am here referring to that section of the base metal, that is the copper and nickel mining industry in Ontario which is Canadian owned, and which is not connected with the major American-owned smelter corporations. Their attitude, as expressed through their legislation, has resulted in almost a complete elimination of all independent mining operations of any significance in Ontario.

According to statistics contained in the annual report of the Minister of Mines for the year 1966 there were eight independent base metal mines, all of them Canadian owned, producing in Ontario. At the end of last year there were only five mines producing; and at the current rate of closing, by early 1973 they will all have been eliminated. All five mines were operating in a net loss position and all are in danger of closing.

I will list for the House the Acts of the Conservative government of the past few years which have significantly affected these independent Canadian-owned operations, and moreover, in many cases have actually discriminated against them. They are as follows:

1. The revision of the Mining Tax Act. Up until 1968, the taxes on the cash flow of mines in Ontario were in escalating percentage, starting at six per cent for the first million dollars of cash flow or defined profit, and escalating to 15 per cent on profits over $3 million. "The late" Mr. Allan Lawrence when Mines minister, revised this to a straight 15 per cent across the board, which meant a tax increase for International Nickel from 12 to 15 per cent—which is an increase of 25 per cent—but an increase for a small mine with a cash flow of less than $1 million from six per cent to 15 per cent, or in other words, an increase of 150 per cent.

Moreover, since this was a tax on cash flow or defined profit, and not through operating profit, it meant that in fact, a small mine with a short life, while appearing to be profitable, could actually pay in Ontario mining tax alone over 100 per cent of its true profit on the project.

2. The second Act of this government was the decision in 1968 to allow local municipalities to tax mine surface buildings. Prior to this change in the Act, mine production buildings were not taxable by local municipalities, and the local municipalities in which the miners resided were given a government grant in lieu of taxation, based somewhat on the number of miners resident in a municipality.

While this Act appears to be sensible on the surface, the net effect of it is: A large mine like International Nickel can be taxed by the municipality, and the benefit of the taxation accrues to the municipality in which the miners live; but a small mine operating in an undeveloped area of Ontario still is taxed by the Department of Lands and Forests in lieu of the municipality, but the taxes do not accrue to the municipality in which the miners live. That is because generally the miners come from various districts and they live in a bunkhouse in a local townsite which is unincorporated and receives no government assistance nor benefit from the tax.

3. Government grants for roads. This is perhaps one of the worst things. Do government grants for roads come under this minister's department in northern Ontario?

He is asleep. Is the Minister of Natural Resources asleep? He doesn't know! Well, it either comes under him or the Minister of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Carton).

Mr. Ferrier: The minister is involved. He is involved in the NORT committee.

Mr. Shulman: The government has been very liberal with granting incentives to major corporations for the building of roads, but has been very delinquent in providing treatment to independent producers. For example, Kerr-Addison was granted considerable road assistance to build a road into the Agnew Lake mine in Sudbury.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Pat Sheridan wrote that speech.

Mr. Shulman: The road assistance amounted to several hundred thousand dollars. Actually, nobody writes my speeches.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Am I right or wrong?

Mr. Shulman: Pat Sheridan wrote the one about the royal commission, actually.

Mr. Martel: Does Inco write the minister's? Does he recall those little letters, now that George has gone?

Mr. Shulman: I haven't had anybody write my speeches since I first came here. My first speech was written by a lovely NDP lawyer by the name of Ross—Paul Ross. He wrote a lovely speech for me on insurance and I had great pleasure in giving it here; but I found afterwards I wrote better speeches myself and since then I have done my own. But thanks anyway.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Such modesty is overwhelming.

Mr. Shulman: If it sounds that professional, I am flattered. I thank you.

Mr. Martel: Charlie Hughes writes good letters, doesn't he?

Hon. J. A. C. Auld (Minister of the Environment): Lands and Forests or Natural Resources?

Mr. Shulman: Pardon me?

Hon. Mr. Auld: The member quoted the Ministry of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Lewis: So it was then at the time of the change.

Mr. Shulman: That's what it was.

An hon. member: Oh, he'll withdraw that. It is Natural Resources.

Hon. Mr. Auld: When the member wrote the speech.

Mr. Shulman: The speech was written last night. The ministry of Lands and Forests was in existence in 1968, at the time of this particular problem. The minister is slow tonight.

Mr. Martel: Does Charlie Hughes write the minister's letters? He knows Charlie Hughes and his letters.

Mr. Shulman: I hope that this new Mr. Speaker is not going to make a lot of horrible judgements while he is in the chair.

Mr. Martel: Not any more, eh? The minister has a new ghost writer.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I was discussing the discrepancy between the way this government treats large corporations in the north and the way it treats small mining companies.

I'd come to the government's grants for roads and I gave as an example of how it treats the large corporations so beautifully, Kerr Addison, which was granted tremendous assistance to build a road into the Agnew Lake mine in Sudbury. The road assistance amounted to several hundred thousand dollars, even though this mine never produced and never was really anything except a development prospect with a shaft and is now completely closed down.

Noranda and International Nickel were granted liberal assistance with a road into the Langmuir township prospect and a first class road is now in existence at this location, even though no production has yet been obtained and it will probably be several years before production is obtained. This is a joint operation of International Nickel and Noranda.

On the other hand we look at the smaller mines; the government is not quite as generous. We take an operation like Texmont which is on the same scale as the Inco and Noranda operations in Langmuir—

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Who owns Texmont?

Mr. Shulman: —and which has been in production for a year since last June 30.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is a speech another member should have given. That was his speech.

Mr. Shulman: It has not only received no road assistance for its mine access road but the government has even refused to maintain the public road leading from the city of Timmins to the mining access road. It has continuously left these public roads in a disgraceful condition, unsafe to drive, and has even refused to supply such rudimentary essentials as snow ploughing of public roads in the wintertime.

This is straight discrimination between the large corporations who are bright enough to give the party huge donations at election time and the small corporations which cannot afford it. It is pure and simple pork barrelling; nothing more, nothing less.

Mr. Ferrier: That mine had to close down. It is not in operation now.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Not because of the road.

Mr. Shulman: That was one more way in which the government had to spend thousands and thousands of dollars. Does the minister have any possible explanation of why he treats Kerr Addison and Noranda as though they count and the small mines as they don't? There is no explanation. He has never been able to offer one. He never will be able to offer one. If they don't pay off, it's as simple as that; if they don't pay off, they don't get the services from this government.

Interjection by hon. member.

Mr. Shulman: Then the minister should give an explanation as to why he doesn't maintain those roads. The minister's silence is very loquacious.

An hon. member: He has no facts.

Mr. Shulman: Point four: Now we come to the restrictions on the exporting of concentrates and this was something we all welcomed when it came in.

In 1968, during an extreme shortage of copper in the world, the federal government imposed export regulations on copper concentrates. These restrictions were put on to ensure that Canadian smelters, even though not competitive on a world-wide basis, received an adequate supply of copper concentrate and that Canadian industry subsequently received an adequate supply of copper. Shortly thereafter, the Ontario government, through section 113 of the Mining Act, imposed its own export restrictions on concentrates. We all agreed with the theory behind this imposition of restrictions—that is, further processing of the raw materials in Canada, thus creating more jobs.

However, once again this was a restriction which did not affect International Nickel; which did not affect Noranda; which did not affect Falconbridge and which had very little or no effect on Texas Gulf. It was in essence another restriction on the independent mining operator and I'll explain why in a few moments.

In eastern Canada there are three smelters which in 1968 treated custom ore. These are as follows: First was International Nickel which treated copper and copper-nickel concentrate; second was Noranda which treated copper concentrate; and third was Falconbridge in Sudbury which treated copper-nickel concentrate.

Since the imposition of section 113 of the Mining Act, International Nickel has refused to treat any copper concentrates in Sudbury and has cut off all shippers. In addition, International Nickel has also refused to treat any nickel-copper concentrates. They've used this government's law to squeeze out the small producers. Falconbridge has refused to treat any copper-nickel concentrates and has cut off all shippers except one, which is mining a Falconbridge-owned mine.

It has used the government's law to cut off the independent producers.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: The member is so far off base. He doesn't know what he is talking about.

Mr. Shulman: I know the minister doesn't know what I'm talking about. He would if he was doing his job. This is the whole problem. If he was doing his job he would know what I was talking about.

Mr. Havrot: Smart alec garbage mouth!

Mr. Shulman: These are facts out of the North. Either the northern members don't tell the minister, or he doesn't listen. How he could allow a scandal like this—

Mr. Havrot: The member should look after his own backyard.

Mr. Shulman: —to develop if he knew the facts is beyond me.

The third one: Noranda has thus been granted a government-enforced monopoly on the treatment of concentrates from the independent mines and has accordingly raised its smelter treatments to the extent that literally every independent copper mine in Ontario is now operating at a loss—a substantial loss. In fact, Noranda has in some cases doubled and almost tripled its charges. These increases in smelting and refining charges were in addition to the normal clauses provided in a contract for the escalation of wages and materials.

In addition, it has enforced ridiculous clauses, such as no payment for concentrates until 120 days after the date of delivery. It never did that before. It is all new since the minister gave it the monopoly.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is one individual.

Mr. Shulman: That's one, but the only company that will accept the mining stuff.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: That is one individual the member is referring to.

Mr. Shulman: Every independent mine is in the same mess. Soon there aren't going to be any individuals left, but the minister doesn't care about that. It doesn't matter that there's huge unemployment in the north. Perhaps he will find some money to give Norty Cooper to open something up out there.

Mr. Havrot: Get 'em a job on that one.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, I will come to the member for Timiskaming shortly.

Mr. Havrot: Yes. Yes. Blabbermouth.

Mr. Shulman: Stick around. I have got quotes from the last Throne Speech when the member said in five years that the mint will be big and producing hundreds of—

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, we will remember that.

Mr. Havrot: Yes, and the member for High Park killed it too.

Mr. Martel: You can't kill what isn't there.

Mr. Deans: Who is that fellow?

Mr. Shulman: That is the fellow who wanted to buy some stock in Silver Shield.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Anyway we will come to Silver Shield.

Mr. Martel: Why have they not laid charges against them?

Mr. Shulman: We'll come to that. We've got all night, gentlemen, because I am sure our good Eric and Red will keep us sitting here all night.

An hon. member: Charlie might get tired though!

Mr. Havrot: We don't want to hang around and listen to the member.

Mr. Martel: Why not, the member for Timiskaming might learn something.

Mr. Shulman: Well he should. If he had listened the last time, his community would have been a helluva lot better off.

Mr. Martel: He will learn about Rogers—

Mr. Havrot: If the member for High Park goes up there, they will skin him alive.

Mr. Shulman: Well, I was up there; has the member forgotten?

Mr. Havrot: Yes, the member crawled in during the middle of the night.

Mr. Shulman: I came in in the morning and I left in the night. The member has got his times backward, like everything else.

Anyway, it was a pleasant town to visit; it's nice seeing a ghost town. No, that's the wrong word. It's not nice—because it's your fault. It's very un-nice, but you people are responsible. You blunder, you give money in the wrong places. You produce spurious hopes, you don't help the independent mines who could produce employment up there. You don't help the tourist industry which could bring employment up there. You don't help the lumber industry in the proper way. You do everything wrong that's possible. When you are going to give money away, you give it to Nordic. All right. Let's go on.

Mr. Martel: Like your Wilderness Park. And Killarney, with the last hardwood section about to be cut.

Mr. Shulman: I was talking about the restrictions, Mr. Speaker, on the exploitation of concentrates.

Mr. Martel: Has been there for four years, it hasn't turned a wheel.

Mr. Shulman: There's an additional clause that Noranda puts in. It is that Noranda will be allowed to market the copper not in the best market available for the copper, but what in fact amounts to the worst market available for the copper—and that's a new rule.

In other words, when the foreign markets were higher than domestic markets, Noranda insisted that the copper be marketed at the domestic price—or at least a large portion of it be marketed at domestic copper price. But now that the foreign markets are lower, it insists for new contracts that it be marketed at the foreign copper prices—or at least that a major portion be marketed at the foreign market prices.

It is a straight ripoff which is closing each and every one of our small mines. By this time next year there won't be one in northern Ontario. We will still have the big three—and the small mines will be all gone.

Mr. Drea: The member for High Park will have a book called, "How I Made a Million"—

Mr. Shulman: Right.

Mr. Drea: Right?

Mr. Shulman: Right! My partner is back from Scarborough somewhere—

Mr. Drea: Oh, I am no partner of the member.

Mr. Shulman: —Scarborough Centre. He's got his second wind.

I now want to talk about the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act which again is helping to destroy the small mines in the north.

Well, it had to be done. Most of the things I think they did were designed to punish these people who hadn't given donations at election time, but I think this one was done just out of sheer stupidity, because they couldn't have figured this one out.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, from "the big three."

Mr. Havrot: But the member has got a big car!

Mr. Shulman: I received donations? Nobody gave me any donations. I pay for my own cars.

Mr. Havrot: But the member has an $11,000 car.

Mr. Shulman: I pay for my own cars.

Mr. Drea: The member didn't pay for that!

Mr. Shulman: Oh, I know what the member is referring to. We'll come to that car, too. I'll tell him about that too if he wants to know.

An hon. member: Don't bother.

Mr. Drea: I guess the member didn't make a million up there, eh?

Mr. Shulman: Well, I could have if I had sold Silver Shield short.

To continue with the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act—

Mr. Drea: The member never made a million in his life.

Mr. Shulman: No, I haven't, although it was a great temptation. The minister tempted me, he really did, because after hearing his comments it was very difficult to withstand.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Shulman: Good idea. And most of them need it.

Mr. Ferrier: And some should go a little sooner than others.

Mr. Shulman: To turn to the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act, Mr. Speaker. In his budget speech of March 28, 1972, the then Treasurer, the member for Chatham-Kent—remember him?—incorporated a change in the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: The then Treasurer incorporated a change in the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Act which essentially imposed a tax of 25 cents per gallon on diesel fuel used in the mining industry. There was a provision that 17 cents of this tax could eventually be rebated, provided that the fuel was not used in licensed motor vehicles. The Act intended, in fact, to impose a net tax of eight cents a gallon on diesel fuel used for generating power as well as in diesel vehicles used underground and in pits.

Mr. Drea: The member for Wentworth should take a bow for his colleague. He must be a real trial.

Mr. Shulman: The problem with this tax is that it resulted in an unfair proportion of the tax once again being borne by the small independent operators. All major mines in Ontario belonging to smelter corporations have hydro-electric power connections.

Mr. Deans: Does the member for Scarborough Centre do this often?

Mr. Drea: No, stand up and take a bow for him.

Mr. Shulman: These hydro-electric installations are paid for initially by the mines, but the mines are repaid the costs of construction of the hydro lines by a reduction of their power bills until the entire cost of the hydro lines has been repaid. Thus the cost of these hydro lines is borne by Ontario Hydro or the public. However, the independent mining operations have established their plants to use electrical power generated by diesel fuel.

The net effect of this tax on diesel fuel is such that a small mine such as Texmont, operating on diesel fuel, will pay as much in taxes as a large American corporation such as Texas Gulf or Falconbridge, which has hydro power connected.

Mr. Drea: Say, how is Stelco going to feel about this?

Mr. Shulman: Moreover, the burden of this tax is to be imposed not on the established major corporations but on the small developing mines. This is contrary to the announced policy of all political parties in Ontario, namely that they wish to encourage the development of Canadian mines by Canadians.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. L. C. Henderson (Lambton): The member is going to say something now, is he?

An hon. member: He ran out of gas.

Mr. Shulman: To sum up on this subject, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Henderson: Oh, is he going to say something?

Mr. Drea: Did the member for Wentworth expect this?

An hon. member: We admit it's tough to follow that speech the other day by the member for Lambton.

Mr. Shulman: I see that our southern backbench Conservative members don't understand the problems of the north. But this is understandable—there are so few of them who come from there.

Mr. Drea: Did the member sell it short?

Mr. Shulman: No, I didn't sell that or anything else short, but I should have because this government mismanaged it so badly. The statistics from the Ontario—

Mr. Henderson: When is the member going to say something?

Mr. Shulman: Well, just keep listening. By 2 or 3 in the morning we'll be getting to the meat of it. This is just the introduction.

Mr. Drea: He's a nice, friendly fellow.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. But the member for Scarborough Centre is speaking of his friend, his compatriot, who worked so hard to produce the same mayor.

Mr. Drea: Well, the member for High Park is no friend of mine.

Mr. Ferrier: The Treasurer has got some subversives over there on the other side behind him.

Mr. Henderson: Even the New Democrats don't agree with the member for High Park.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, do you think you could subdue those exuberant products of your dinner?

Mr. Speaker: I don't believe it was the dinner.

An hon. member: It was a wonderful dinner, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MacDonald: Very perspicacious!

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I received these statistics from the Ontario Department of Mines handbook, volume 6, the annual report for 1966, which said that in that year the following independent nickel and copper mines were operating in Ontario, most of them on a profitable basis: Kidd Copper, Gordon Lake, Canadian Jamieson, Copperfields, Kam-Kotia, Ethel Copper, North Coldstream, Rio Algom, Copper Corp., Tribag. By next year at this time there will not be one left. They will all be gone, and the reason they are going to be gone is purely and simply because of the policies brought into the north by this minister and his predecessor, by the unwise and foolish legislation.

Mr. Henderson: You think the companies should sit by and—

Mr. Drea: Did he sell short on any of those?

Mr. Henderson: What are the names of those companies you say are going close?

Mr. Shulman: Going to close? Most of them are already closed.

Mr. Ferrier: Kam-Kotia is closing.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, the point which I am trying to get through to the dimwits is that these mines—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the word "dimwits" is not parliamentary language.

Mr. Shulman: It is not parliamentary, but it is so apt, Mr. Speaker. But if it is not parliamentary, I will withdraw it.

Mr. Speaker, may I say the point I was trying to get through to these wits who are facing us is that all, each and every one, of the small independent base metal mines in northern Ontario will be closed by next year unless the government immediately—and I mean immediately—changes the damn fool laws that it brought in either in error or deliberately, because it is going to turn the north into a ghost area and all of the silly make-work projects that it dreams up aren't going to save the north.

Mr. Drea: Ah, the triumphs of socialism! I made a million but you didn't, so they are going to close.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order, please!

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. I would like now to turn to another subject, Mr. Speaker, a related subject, which also relates to the problem in the north. Again we come back to the Minister of Natural Resources, because it is so disturbing to see the way that he runs his department, or doesn't run his department, perhaps I should say.

Last spring, you will recall, Mr. Speaker, the subject of Silver Shield had some discussion in this House. At that time I mildly chastised the minister for allowing his deputy and Alan Eagleson, his friend, to be used to promote what I described at that time as a phoney mine.

Mr. Drea: Listen, the member made so much money, his leader isn't even allowed to answer the questions.

Mr. Shulman: To promote a phoney mine.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, this is becoming a very spirited debate.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Drea: Well let him stand up and say he made nothing.

Mr. Shulman: Could you do something about the member for Scarborough Centre, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough Centre does not have the floor.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like now to turn to a new subject, the subject of Silver Shield mines which had some discussion in the House last spring when I was forced to mildly chastise the minister for giving money to this fraudulent project, for allowing his deputy and Alan Eagleson to be used to help promote this fraudulent project. If you will recall at the time the remarks of the minister, and particularly the member for Timiskaming—

Mr. Havrot: I am glad I reminded you.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, thank you very much, it was difficult to remember.

At that time, if you will recall, they were defending the project. They were saying it wasn't true all the terrible things that had been said. It was going to be a great boon for Cobalt, it was going to put hundreds of people to work, it was going to make money, it was going to progress—

Mr. Havrot: You had to open your big mouth.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, I opened my big mouth. Well, apparently the member for Timiskaming, Mr. Speaker, objects to my having opened my big mouth to point out that a fraud was taking place in his town. He doesn't like frauds being mentioned in his town.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: The situation, Mr. Speaker, as you will recall was—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker, who has the floor?

Mr. Speaker: Order please!

I would ask the hon. member for Scarborough Centre kindly to discontinue his continual interruptions.

Mr. Shulman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): It is not interruption; it is a lot of drivell.

Mr. Shulman: It is just noise. I wouldn't mind interruptions, Mr. Speaker, if he would make an interruption that had something to do with the subject of the speech but he seems to be hepped on the stock market. I presume he has lost some money and he has my sympathy.

Mr. Drea: The member made $2 million on it.

Mr. Shulman: If he wants to discuss that with me—

Mr. Drea: At $1,000.

Mr. Shulman: If you would like to discuss the stock market with me I would be glad to discuss it at any time, but I don't really think this is the place.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please!

Mr. Shulman: Thank you. The situation, you will recall, Mr. Speaker, was that there was a small silver mine on the Glen Lake property which by fraud, and I repeat this, was stolen from the shareholders through a fraudulent bond issue; the money of which disappeared into the pockets of the directors. The company was put into receivership, a foreclosure took place and the shareholders were forced out.

Mr. Drea: It was called "How I Made a Million."

Mr. Shulman: The mine was taken over by International Mariner in this way for a few cents. Actually, they were taking over the bonds but they never intended to pay the bonds off so it didn't really matter.

Mr. Drea: How I made a million.

Mr. Shulman: A new ore body was drilled for and a small ore body was found.

Mr. Drea: How I made two million.

Mr. Shulman: Then the stock fraud began by setting up or promising to set up a refinery and a mint.

Mr. Drea: It's called "How I Made a Million" by Morty Shulman.

Mr. Shulman: From beginning to end it was obvious that this was not economic. It was obvious there was not enough ore in that mine to supply either the refinery or the mint. In fact, there was so little ore in the mine it was obvious the ore was going to be all gone before the mint was even completed.

Mr. Havrot: That is how much the member knows about mining. You can get silver from other places.

Mr. Shulman: The member for Timiskaming is pointing out that one can buy the silver from other sources. I guess—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: I guess he has forgotten what the—

Mr. Havrot: There are a number of other places—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please! Order!

Mr. Shulman: I guess the member for Timiskaming has forgotten what the promoters said. They said, "Vertical integration! We are going to take it out of the earth from this little mine. We are going to put it in the refinery and refine it and then we are going to mint it out and it will turn out to be great big beautiful metal."

"Vertical integration" were their words. I went up to the mine and I asked the mining engineer what vertical integration was. He was a little embarrassed and said "We don't use that term up here. That is a promotional term down in Toronto."

Mr. Drea: Last time they put you on the line.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Armstrong was just a little embarrassed by it. It was a fraud, pure and simple. A lot of funny things have happened since that speech was given.

When I got up here in the House I criticized the minister. I said there had been a very strange promotion going on; that he had been used; that his deputy had been used; that the Conservative Party had been used. I said Cobalt was going to suffer and that this thing would all be shut down three years hence, and the government would have egg on its face. We didn't have to wait three years. It was shut down six months hence.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Who was the engineer the member talked to?

Mr. Shulman: Armstrong.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Mr. Armstrong?

Mr. Shulman: There have been a number of developments since I gave my speech, Mr. Speaker. First of all, as you know, the federal government has withdrawn the grants which it had promised because it is that government's contention that there was something wrong in the granting of the grant. There have been certain charges laid which I won't go into.

In England last week, Silver Shield, even though it hasn't got a mint, ran its first ad in the English papers. Jacques Cartier Mint, it calls itself, I think. It ran its first ad in the English newspapers offering to sell these beautiful plates with a picture of the Queen and Prince Philip on them.

I don't know where the company was going to produce them. It doesn't have a mint to produce them in.

Anyway it ran the ad for only one day because it turns out the name Cartier is patented in England, so it ran into some difficulties there. The company had to pull the ads out of the papers. Perhaps it was just as well. What if the company had received orders with money? How was it going to fill those orders when there is no mint here producing, when the mint is closed up there? Where are they going to find some undefined place down here to build the mint? How dare they take orders for things to be produced by a mint that doesn't exist. This is just one more strange thing about Silver Shield.

But leaving Silver Shield itself aside, I turn now to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations. He has been a mild disappointment to me in this particular matter, because he trusted someone in his department instead of going to look for himself. Many weeks ago I received a complaint that the Ontario Securities Commission in their investigation of Silver Shield had questioned a certain official as to where he had received the funds with which he had purchased Silver Shield shares. That official replied, "Why, I got it from a friend in New York." They said, "What's the name of this friend in New York?" and he supplied the name. They kept the interview going and they went in the other room and phoned this chap in New York and said, "Did you loan any money to Mr. X?" and he said, "No, I didn't." Then they came back and confronted him and he admitted he lied.

What happened next was that the people lower down in the Securities Commission were pretty upset and they wanted to lay charges against this man, but the head of the Securities Commission said, "No. It is none of our business. Don't lay charges." I found this very strange, so I asked the minister. To my great disappointment, without questioning the head of the Securities Commission or anyone else there who was involved in the matter and who could have told him the truth, he said it hadn't happened. But it did happen. It did happen, and I want to know why. I still want to know why.

The other question I have to ask—and I am not making an allegation, so let's get that quite straight—

Mr. Havrot: The member is kidding.

Mr. R. K. McNeil (Elgin): He could have fooled me.

Mr. Deans: It happens regularly.

Mr. Shulman: We know what the activities of the federal officials were, but what I want to know is, were the provincial officials in-involved? Why do they do all these stupid things? Did they too buy stock? What did your investigation find out? When are we going to have the answers? The whole thing smelled. It smelled from the beginning. It smells worse now. It was a promotion, pure and simple, for the purpose of selling stock. The minister was taken in. His deputy was taken in. The government was taken in. They gave them money which was used on fancy promotional train trips. It was a travesty of what your department should be doing.

Mr. Martel: The minister was up and had his picture taken there, didn't he?

Mr. Shulman: And there have been no answers given. Incidentally, I must say a word about Nortie Cooper, who is a charming gentleman I must add. I spent two pleasant evenings with this man. After I gave this speech in the House, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Havrot: He took you out to dinner.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, he took me out to dinner.

Mr. Havrot: See that!

Mr. Ferrier: How many times did he take you out, Ed?

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I have never been taken to dinner by a promoter before and I was expecting great things—you know, wine, women and song—and I was waiting for the great effort to be turned on. I said, "Where shall I meet you?" and he said, "Would Lichee Garden be all right?" I found that a little disappointing, but we went there. And there was no wine, no women, and no song.

We had a pleasant dinner at Lichee Garden and Mr. Cooper said to me in his most pleasant way—and he is a very pleasant individual—"You know, you have made a big mistake but I am not mad at you for it. You have done me a big favour, because when you see that mine and see what a mistake you made and admit it publicly, it is going to be worth a million dollars in publicity for me." You have to believe this thing, he is so convincing. He said, "Come on up and take a look. Bring your engineers and see for yourself." So I got together a group of five engineers and off we went up to see the mine. It is a lovely mine, very pretty, but unfortunately there is only one thing wrong, there is no silver. But outside of that it was a very nice place to visit and—

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal privilege. Does the time of this House have to be taken up by this type of rambling talk? Surely the members of this House have much more important business to talk about?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member certainly has no point of personal privilege.

The hon. member for High Park has his right to participate in this particular debate. There is no time limit. There is no stipulation as to what he must talk about. Therefore, the hon. member for High Park is breaking no rules of this House, nor can there be any point of privilege.

Mr. Martel: If the Minister of Natural Resources is embarrassed that is his fault.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Me, embarrassed?

Mr. Martel: Does he ever love to have his picture taken. They were all there smiling, Leo the Lion and the deputy minister.

Mr. Foulds: Where did the minister go for supper, the Lichee Garden? Where did Norton Cooper take him? He never takes him?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Did the Minister of Natural Resources ever buy any stock? Did he buy any stock? How about his deputy?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Shulman: How about Eagleson?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, as we went into that mine and we got the report of the engineers, the big question on my mind was: "Why did Norton Cooper invite us up to see this mine, to see these two empty buildings—what was to be the mint and what was to be the—"

Mr. Drea: They wouldn't even let the member on the train.

Mr. Shulman: —we came in by plane—and what was to be the refinery? As we came out of there I thought: "There was nothing here. Why did he invite us up?"

You know something—I really believe this—I don't think he knew. I think he was conned himself—perhaps he conned himself. He would never—

Mr. Drea: Why was he inviting the hon. member?

Mr. Shulman: Because if he had known there was nothing there, why would he let us see it? It just didn't make any sense.

I think that this was a promoter, a rather pleasant promoter, who knew very little about this particular business, who got involved, sold himself and proceeded to sell everyone else and the whole thing was a fraud—

Mr. Drea: Does the member really know anybody who would buy him a free drink? Does he really?

Mr. Shulman: There is only one person in this room who has bought me a free drink. I hope I don't embarrass him, but the minister who is responsible for that department sent me a lovely bottle of brandy this afternoon, for which I thank him. Does that qualify?

Mr. Drea: We know he has taken so many other places!

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Martel: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Shulman: Why doesn't somebody buy him a free drink?

Mr. Martel: Why don't you silence him?

Mr. Shulman: Because if you give him a drink this is what happens. That's why they don't buy him drinks.

Mr. Speaker: Order. This exchange is out of order.

Mr. Martel: Would you muzzle him?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order.

Mr. Martel: Will the Chairman of the Management Board muzzle him?

Mr. Shulman: Well, to continue, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Martel: I'm trying to listen to this, muzzle him.

Mr. Shulman: —the fact remains that Silver Shield was a ripoff on the people of Ontario. It was a ripoff on the people who bought the stock. It was a ripoff on the city of Cobalt and it was a ripoff on the minister's department and what bothers me mostly is that when it was all pointed out to him he didn't take any action. That's where the problem is.

Mr. Drea: I was always wondering why there were so many consenting adults.

Mr. Shulman: You see, when he first got this post I thought, "Maybe he'll be different." Every now and again you get a good minister. There are two or three ministers of whom I have hopes, but most of them have fallen from the mould so quickly.

I went to the Minister of Natural Resources shortly after he got his post. I brought him a case.

Mr. Havrot: A case of wine?

Mr. Shulman: I'm sure he'll remember it, Leonard Pryor was the name.

Hon. Mr. Bernier: Leonard what?

Mr. Shulman: Leonard Pryor was the name; the man who lost his fishing camp.

Mr. Drea: Was the member a consenting adult?

Mr. Shulman: The minister said all the right things. He said: "Yes, I'll look into it. Yes, I'll certainly do something about it. Yes, I'll be in touch with you." That was eight months ago. We're still waiting.

Mr. Drea: Yes, but the member was a consenting adult. He was the guy who was the consenting adult.

Mr. Shulman: We're still waiting. Mr. Speaker, if those ministers over there wish our support—and it can be of value, and we try to support the ministers who are doing their best, and you have two or three. I don't see any of them at the moment, unfortunately, but they do enter the House occasionally.

They get our support and we don't do them what we have to do to this minister because he doesn't do his job. When facts are placed in front of him which are clear, black and white, he still does not go ahead and take what is obviously the required action.

We had a man last year, whose case was brought to this minister and every other minister, whose livelihood had been destroyed through an error of this government and through the malignancy of Steve Roman, and this minister said he would do something about it. All the other ministers said it was another minister's department. This minister said he would get together with the proper men and do something about it and he'd let me know. When is he going to let me know?

Hon. Mr. Bernier: In the fullness of time.

Mr. Shulman: In the fullness of time! He doesn't care about the family that can't earn a living. That's irrelevant to him.

Mr. Lawlor: A pretty callous attitude.

Mr. Shulman: This completes my preliminary remarks, Mr. Speaker. I would now like to turn to the main portion of my speech.

Mr. Martel: Move the adjournment.

Mr. Shulman: No, they won't have an adjournment.

Mr. Martel: I know, but bring them back in.

An hon. member: The member for York North over there likes to stay.

Mr. W. Hodgson: The member can't talk in another seat. He should get in his own seat.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I'm starting in a new portion of my speech, perhaps this would be an opportune time to move the adjournment of the debate.

Some hon. members: No.

Mr. Havrot: No.

Mr. Shulman: I move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Martel: Okay, sit down.

Mr. Lawlor: It is not debatable.

Here comes the House leader.

Mr. Sargent: The member could go on for weeks.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, the motion I moved earlier this evening was specifically to accommodate the hon. member and I'm prepared to stay here until he concludes his remarks.

Mr. Shulman: Am I not correct—on a point of order, Mr. Speaker—that a motion to adjourn the debate is not debatable?

Mr. Martel: That's right.

Mr. Eaton: Vote against the motion.

Mr. Speaker: The motion to adjourn is in order. I therefore put the motion.

The hon. member for High Park, Mr. Shulman, has moved adjournment of the debate.

The House divided on Mr. Shulman's motion, which was negated on the following vote.

Clerk of the House: Mr. Speaker, the "ayes" are 15, the "nays" 41.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion defeated. The hon. member for High Park has a quorum.

An hon. member: Sock it to 'em, Morty.

Mr. W. J. Nuttall (Frontenac-Addington): You've got to be kidding.

Hon. Mr. Kerr: I don't blame you for wanting to go home.

Hon. Mr. Auld: Get your feet down, Elie.

Mr. Martel: I have been in the House, where I belong. The minister has been out resting.

Interjections by hon. members.

An hon. member: I thought he had been out thinking.

Mr. Shulman: That's resting for him!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude my preliminary remarks by discussing one of the problems that we face constantly, which is that of the insurance companies. This is a fairly lengthy subject, but I think I would like to start off with the problem of health insurance, because for some reason in this past year this is an area where the insurance companies have become more and more anti-social and less and less willing to pay the debts which they have incurred.

Mr. E. J. Bounsall (Windsor West): There they go, sneaking out.

Mr. Martel: Is the minister leaving again?

Mr. Foulds: He is not leaving us? Stick around. Continue the debate!

An hon. member: The minute you leave, we'll adjourn the House.

Mr. Martel: You can criticize.

An hon. member: You want to hear about your friends in the insurance companies?

Mr. Speaker Order.

Mr. Martel: Leo, what do you do with your coat?

An hon. member: Don't go away for too long now.

Mr. Martel: We'll all be back for another vote very shortly, Leo.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to discuss with you the Aetna Life and Casualty Co. This company, without a question, has supplanted my old favourite Allstate as being the worst of the various companies that do not pay their claims.

You will recall last spring we had a terrible problem with Mutual of Omaha. There was a man who was disabled with a long-term disablement, and his policy in small print said that the company need not pay unless he was totally confined to home. He would go once a week by taxi to his doctor's office and they used this as an excuse for cutting off his benefits. To the credit of the former Minister of Consumer Affairs, when I complained to him he twisted the arm of Mutual of Omaha and they have once again begun paying the benefits.

However, I have now found another company that is even worse than Mutual of Omaha and it seems to be spreading through the entire industry. This is Aetna Life and Casualty. One of my constituents and one of my neighbours in fact—

Mr. McIlveen: Don't give him any water.

Mr. Shulman: —had run into a very serious problem with these people. Back on Jan. 1, 1966, this man—whose name is Emanuele Farrugia and he lives at 734 Indian Rd.—took out a long-term disability policy with Aetna Life and Casualty. Some three years passed and unfortunately he developed severe disabling arthritis in his spine and his other joints which gradually crippled him. He is no longer able to work. He went to his family doctor who x-rayed him and told him he couldn't work again. This doctor sent him to a specialist, a very well known specialist, Dr. Pennell, St. Joseph's Hospital, who also said he could not work again. He applied for long-term disability benefits from Aetna Life, and on Feb. 20, 1969, they sent him a letter saying, "We will pay you regularly and if you have any problems, please let us know."

This went on for some two and a half years until—let me get the exact date—

Mr. Martel: Be precise.

An hon. member: Yes, be precise.

Mr. Shulman: —he received a letter this spring—actually, it was on May 10—from Aetna Life asking that he go to a doctor of their choice and have another examination. Then on July 7 they sent him a letter saying our doctor says you are not totally disabled from doing any occupation and, therefore, we are cutting off your benefits immediately. I found this very strange because this man had some three certificates at this point from three different doctors saying he was disabled. So what I did was I got in touch with a doctor I know, a specialist in orthopaedic medicine—his name is Zeldin—and I asked him if he would give me an independent opinion as to whether or not this man was totally disabled or was not. He examined him for me in July and sent me a note saying that in his opinion Farrugia was completely disabled and could not work again and was totally incapacitated.

So, I wrote back to the insurance company saying, “Hey, what’s going on with you people? Why don’t you pay this claim?” The man is totally disabled. I have now, not only his own doctor, not only the specialist his doctor sent him to, but also the independent specialist, who all confirm that he’s completely disabled.

So, the insurance company was very decent about the whole thing, and they wrote me back and said, well, under those circumstances perhaps we should have a medical referee examine him and decide it finally once and for all. That seemed very fair. No one could object to that. I agreed to this. I wrote them a letter and I said fine.

Here’s the letter. Actually, I wrote them on Sept. 15 of this year, and I said:

Thank you for your letter. It is customary, at the Workmen’s Compensation Board and elsewhere, when choosing an independent referee to choose a physician acceptable to both parties. I presume you will follow this course. Yours sincerely.

I took it for granted that we would mutually agree on an independent doctor and the thing would get settled once and for all.

But the idea the insurance company has of an independent referee is very different from the idea I have. Their idea of an independent referee is someone they select, someone who has worked for them before, and someone whose name they do not wish to have considered by any outside party. In any case, they refused to have someone chosen whom I had prior knowledge of. They chose a doctor of their choice, a psychiatrist actually, which I found was rather strange. They sent

Mr. Farrugia to see him. Then they sent him back a letter saying, “We’re very sorry, but our doctor doesn’t think you’re completely disabled. Therefore, we’re not going to pay you.”

This was all very mysterious. If their doctors—apparently reputable men—find him not completely disabled and all the other doctors do, what is going on? So, I got in touch with the insurance company and with the two doctors who had sustained them and I said, “May I see a copy of your reports?” Both doctors gave me the same reply which was, “We’re very sorry, we can’t give you copies of the reports. We supply them to the insurance companies. If they have no objection, we’ll give them to you.” But the insurance company did object. Here they’ve got four independent doctors who say the man’s completely disabled. They say they have two opinions saying he isn’t completely disabled, but they flatly refuse to have me examine those opinions. They will not allow their reports to be seen.

Well, it smells to high heaven. It’s just a pure and simple case where they don’t want to pay a proper claim.

One does the only thing one can in those circumstances: I wrote the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations on Oct. 11 and I said, “This insurance company is robbing the public and it shouldn’t be allowed to do business in this province. I think a hearing should be held to determine whether or not this company should be allowed to continue to sell insurance.” The minister replied to me on Oct. 19, and he said, “I’ve asked the Superintendent of Insurance to look into the matter and to report to me.”

That was Oct. 19. I waited for four weeks, until the middle of November, and I heard nothing more. I phoned the minister and asked him what was happening in that particular case and he said, “We are still investigating.” Another four weeks have gone by and we’re into December, and Farrugia still hasn’t heard anything from the insurance company or from the department. So again I’m asking across the floor—if I can interrupt the minister: Mr. Minister, I’m discussing the Farrugia case and asking you if you have yet had a chance to have your Superintendent of Insurance look into the matter of whether Aetna Life should be allowed to continue to sell insurance in this province since it refuses to pay legitimate claims?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Is the member asking me a question.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, I am.

Hon. Mr. Clement: I don't know why Mr. Farrugia doesn't exercise the rights every other citizen has, and issue his statement of claim and a writ and sue them, if that's the position the member thinks he's in.

Mr. MacDonald: What is the purpose of the Superintendent of Insurance?

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. This is not a debate.

Mr. Foulds: It isn't?

Mr. Deans: It is a debate.

Mr. Shulman: It is the budget debate.

Mr. Speaker: The member for High Park has the floor. If you want to continue speaking, speak.

Mr. Shulman: I certainly do. Don't get upset; it's just the beginning.

Mr. Speaker, I asked the minister what he was going to do about it, and I was under the misapprehension he was doing something about it. Now I get his answer: Why doesn't Mr. Farrugia, who has no income, no money and is now having to go on welfare, issue a writ and sue the insurance company?

Mr. Lawlor: Does the minister know how long that takes?

Mr. Cassidy: Typical Tory answer.

Mr. Shulman: Here is a man who is incapacitated, who can't work, who can't earn anything, and we get an answer like that. Well, if the minister—

Mr. M. C. Germa (Sudbury): What have we got that department for?

Mr. Shulman: —gives us many answers like that, he is going to have a rough time here, because that is really a dereliction of duty. Surely it is the responsibility of the minister and of the Superintendent of Insurance to look into matters like this, and when there is an obvious injustice to step into the insurance company.

The minister's predecessor saw it that way. We had exactly the same case last year with Mutual of Omaha and he was embarrassed about it and he called in the vice-president of Mutual of Omaha and said, "What in hell are you people doing?" As a result of that Mutual of Omaha started paying the claim. This is a new minister, new on the job and I will pardon him this little indiscretion—which shouldn't be pardoned because it's a very, very disappointing reply—

An hon. member: Very revealing.

Mr. Shulman: —surely he has a responsibility to protect the people of Ontario from the insurance companies, because they sure need protection; we've had enough examples of that tonight.

Now we find out it is not only in the field of health insurance—it is in the field of life insurance, it is in the field of auto insurance, it is in the field of disability insurance, it is in the field of home insurance, which we thought was very sacrosanct. Whenever they can their motto is: "Screw the public. Profit—that's what counts."

It is the minister's responsibility to act as a buffer between—

Mr. Drea: I thought that was the member for High Park's motto.

Mr. Shulman: These big companies and guys like Emanuele Farrugia, who doesn't have two cents to issue a writ. I hope that the minister is still going to take some action in this case because Farrugia is not an isolated case; it's an unfortunate case and it's an extreme case, but over the few years that I've been here I've had at least eight or 10 similar cases just in my small field. I can imagine how many there must be through the province, because the insurance companies don't really care; they don't really care.

Mr. Drea: Why doesn't the member ring his bell?

Mr. Shulman: I could move adjournment of the debate and we could do it. There aren't enough of the government's people to stop it.

Mr. Drea: Ring the bell. Just go bong, bong, bong.

Mr. Foulds: When we want the member over there to bark we'll pull his leash.

Mr. Drea: What was that?

Mr. Lewis: He said when we wanted you to bark we'd pull your leash; quote, unquote.

Mr. Drea: All right then, buddy, you have to walk out of here tonight.

Mr. MacDonald: What sort of a thug are you anyway?

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Lewis: Can I seek the protection of the Speaker?

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I'd like to leave the insurance companies in the tender hands of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Relations, and hope that perhaps he'll have second thoughts on the comment he made and that we will actually get some response on this particular problem from him—because if not, I'm going to have to keep bothering him about it. The trouble is, when we bother him it also bothers the insurance companies, and the insurance companies are very allergic to bad publicity. They are going to be very upset with the Minister if he doesn't fix this up. Not Aetna but the other companies, who are also being tarred by Aetna's brush. So I suggest for the good of the Conservative Party, and for the good of the insurance companies, that the minister pull up his socks and make these people pay off.

I would like to turn to another matter in the field of the Attorney General. I am sorry he is not here this evening to hear me. It has to do with the role of organized crime in this province—not the bombing department of organized crime—but a somewhat different department.

Mr. Deans: Like a department store.

Mr. Shulman: There is a large multi-million-dollar swindle that is being run through Toronto which boggles the imagination. This is a different type of organized crime—there are no guns, there are no bombs, there are no threats. It is a more conservative type of organized crime, if that is the right word.

It is run by a group of people who are of international origin, although they find Toronto a convenient place to stop in because they aren't harassed unduly here as they are in other jurisdictions.

Mr. Drea: Good, solid union leaders.

Mr. Shulman: No, this has nothing to do with union leaders. This has to do with the Conservative leaders. You will recall, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Drea: No, just good solid fellows from the States, dropping in on the union leaders.

Mr. Shulman: Yes, as a matter of fact, I understand the member has been watching and has seen the member for Scarborough West walk into the office of a certain union leader who is suspect—

Mr. Drea: Oh, never with him; never with him.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. The member for High Park has the floor.

Mr. Drea: Oh, never with him.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, you will recall last year we discussed the Bank of Sark at some length. The Bank of Sark, as you know, was an international swindle that was set up on the island of Sark by Canadians. A chap by the name of Mr. Herbert Lyon Singer was one of the brains behind it. He is now living in Montreal.

This bank carried on a spurious bank business, issued a number of spurious notes, guaranteed spurious certificates and guaranteed spurious loans. As a result it is estimated that it stole some $250 million across the world from international banks and international brokers.

Well, the Bank of Sark dissolved when finally Interpol got after it and put pressure on in England to have it closed down and no one went to jail as the result of these activities. But the incredible thing is that they are starting up again in Toronto—under another name, of course.

I have here in front of me an article from the Globe and Mail business section, dated Oct. 25, 1972. Here we have this great laudatory article, which really boggles the imagination. It was written by a Wayne Cheveldayoff, who I presume is a reporter—

Mr. Drea: He is the fellow who is paid by the local trade council.

Mr. Shulman: It says he works for the Globe and Mail.

At any rate, the heading is: "Offshore Bank Plans to Channel Funds Mainly into Canadian Real Estate and Securities." It moves on at great length about how a group of Canadian-European investors has formed a Barbados-based private bank to channel funds from Europe and the Far East, mainly into Canadian real estate and securities, according to Toronto businessman, Peter G. Landolt. Mr. Landolt, who is president of Landolt, Imhoff, Inc. of Toronto, said the Burlington Bank Ltd., with head office in Bridgetown, Barbados, will have an authorized and fully paid capital of the equivalent of $25 million. He said in this interview:

The board of directors of Burlington would consist primarily of specialists in international banking with extensive connections in all major areas of banking and finance and whose current contact includes some of Europe's major investment and financial groups. [It goes on:] However, he said he could not disclose the names of the directors-elect to the bank until their appointment is officially confirmed probably by the end of the year. He also refused to disclose the name of the bank's owners. His shareholders currently include Canadians and Europeans but the Canadian holdings eventually will be sold.

Anyway, it goes on at great length about this whole beautiful swindle. And it is a swindle—nothing more or nothing less. Once again the police are aware of it. They are aware of the—

Mr. Drea: That is why the member's leader is so silent.

Mr. Shulman: —activities. Well, we only speak one at a time over here. It's a little different over on that side.

They are aware of the activities of this company and of the associated firm of Lancer Investments. This summer, to give you an idea of just how flagrant it is—and it is terribly fragrant—fragrant?

Mr. Drea: Fragrant is the right word.

Mr. Shulman: It is both, yes. It smells! I had a group of young university students working for me and I asked one of them to go up to see these people and see if he could purchase a bank charter because I was told they were selling phoney bank charters.

Mr. Drea: Did they get paid the minimum wage?

Mr. Shulman: They got less than the minimum wage. They did it for nothing. Anyway, one of these young chaps, Steve Crickmore, went on my behalf as a potential investor; he doesn't look that old but they bought him. He went as a potential investor to these people and said he heard that they sold bank charters and he wanted to buy a bank charter. They said they are pretty expensive and it is difficult to do but perhaps something could be worked out. They gave him a name in Miami to go down and visit. Sure enough, we thought it was good enough to send him down to Miami so we sent him down to this address that was given—a Mr. Sol J. Cooper of 1996 Southwest 1st St., Miami, Fla. He now had not only the presentation that he wanted to buy a bank charter but he had the recommendation from Lancer Investments here in Toronto. He arrived at this firm and he actually came back to me with a bank charter!

Mr. Drea: And the member flew right down there to Florida!

Mr. Shulman: We now have here a bank charter, under the Corporations Act for Archway Bank Ltd. This particular bank is incorporated in the territory of the British Virgin Islands and was incorporated on Oct. 29, 1971. Its purpose is to carry on within the British Virgin Islands and elsewhere the business of banking in all its branches and to transact, etc. It is a very beautiful charter, very expensive; I now have a bank charter and I thought perhaps we could open a little branch downstairs and we would put over it, Archway Bank. The point I am trying to make here—

Mr. Drea: Has the member ever met the lady involved?

Mr. Shulman: The lady involved? Oh, the Virgin Islands. Not for many years. I was thinking perhaps the member for Scarborough Centre might be interested in buying a half interest in my bank. It is very reasonable. I will let him be the front man.

Mr. Speaker, the point which I am trying to make here is that these international criminals are using Toronto as their centre. They are very clever not to consummate any of the deals in one country. They always do it through two or preferably three or four countries.

Mr. Drea: What ever became of Gus Simone?

Mr. Shulman: Would the member like to talk about him again? If we get the Attorney General back, I will.

What they do is they sell notes or charters or phoney stock, doing the deal here in Toronto, on a bank in another country and consummating the deal in the third country. This one is typical. They set it up here in Toronto. They send you down to the United States. The actual legal documents are in the British Virgin Islands.

Now I am suggesting to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations, if he is interested once again, and to the Attorney General, if someone will give him the word, and to the Provincial Secretary for Justice and even to the Solicitor General, that when a group like this, which has a record like this—and it is a bad one which is known to the police—moves into this city, sets up a phoney bank with a great full-page publicity in the Globe and Mail financial section, which shows how cleverly they did it, it is time for them to take action. Otherwise, we are going to have another Bank of Sark scandal in this province. It isn't peanuts. Millions and millions of dollars are involved. The government has to move quickly because these people move quickly. They flip from country to country. They flip from jurisdiction to jurisdiction.

Mr. Drea: This is another friendly union—

Mr. Shulman: This one is not a union, unless we call it a union of crooks.

Mr. Drea: —beyond the two, the member has mentioned.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I suggest through you to the minister again, and I know he is a new minister, and I know he is having his problems, but here is a major scandal which is about to burst over his head. The name of the company is Lancer Investments. The name of the bank that is being set up in conjunction with them is the Burlington Bank. It is being done through Toronto. They don't have any $25 million. They don't even have $50,000 in assets. It is going to be a quick in and a quick out and unless you move fast there is going to be a lot of money leaving Ontario in swindles.

Mr. Drea: In the meantime all your unions are backing them.

Mr. Lewis: Frank, there's a call for you. Somebody motioned behind you.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I am sure everyone here, particularly my associates, will be delighted to hear that I have used up all the material I brought with me tonight. I find it is going to be difficult to get the permission of the government to adjourn until morning to get more ammunition, so I am going to complete my brief presentation—I really only intended to speak 20 minutes, but they provoked me—by coming back to what I said about it in the first place.

There is a definite need for a royal commission into the violence in the construction industry in this province. It isn't going to be papered over, it isn't going to be glossed over, and it isn't going to be forgotten. Because if you don't do anything now, if you don't move against these people now, they are not going to be content to stay back in the woodwork. Six months from now or a year from now when the heat is off they are going to be back, spreading out again. They do it in two ways, through craft unions where there are immigrants involved who don't speak the language and are afraid to complain, and they do it through crooked contractors.

Mr. Drea: Maybe the member for Hamilton East back there—

Mr. Shulman: The member for Hamilton East's contact is not with the unions which we have been complaining about tonight. The majority of the unions in this province and this country are honest. I wish the corporations were as honest as the unions.

Mr. Drea: That may very well be. Maybe I will get up and talk about the unions. You won't like that either.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for High Park has the floor.

Mr. Ferrier: All you had to say about them didn't do you any good up in my riding.

Mr. Lewis: I tell you it would be a revelation.

Mr. Drea: I am happy for you.

Mr. MacDonald: Mr. Speaker, why don't you call him to order? If there are any breaches over here you are very, very quick from the chair.

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, I am going to conclude. I am making an appeal to the government, primarily the Prime Minister, because at this point it has to go to the Prime Minister, to say that this situation is sufficiently serious, is sufficiently violent. There has been sufficient time given. There have been dozens and dozens of violent acts. Surely we don't have to wait until someone is killed? There is not enough evidence for the police to take action. This Legislature must take action and it must be done in the form of a royal commission because there is no other choice. I thank you for your patience and I'm sorry I kept you so late.

Hon. Mr. Stewart: Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, the House leader has asked me to advise the House that tomorrow consideration will be given to items No. 15, 5, 4, 14 and 2 on the order paper.

Hon. Mr. Stewart moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6, 1972

The House met at 2 o'clock, p.m.

Prayers.

Mr. Speaker: We are pleased today to have visitors with us from the Central Park Sr. Public School. There are other students of whom I have not been advised who are also with us. I'm sure we want to extend a welcome to all of them.

Statements by the ministry.

Mr. M. Shulman (High Park): Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps the hon. member should wait until prior to the orders of the day before a question of privilege is brought up. I have not in the past ruled on this particular point, but this is the way it should be. It should be raised just before we enter upon the orders of the day, unless the question of privilege has to do with some proceeding during the period between now and then.

Mr. S. Lewis (Scarborough West): It may.

Mr. Shulman: It very well may affect it, sir.

Mr. Speaker: All right. We'll listen to it.

Mr. Shulman: Sir, I wish to withdraw a statement I made last night about the Attorney General (Mr. Bales). Information was supplied to the police, to me, to a reporter and to an official of the carpenters' union by a private detective that the Attorney General had been seen at a certain home, which I referred to last night. This morning the private detective changed this story; he now says he did not see the Attorney General there.

Hon. E. A. Winkler (Chairman, Management Board): Well, well! Let's be sure before we start—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Shulman: And on that basis, sir, I am no longer able to substantiate that allegation and I withdraw it.

Mr. V. M. Singer (Downsview): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

Hon. J. Yaremko (Solicitor General): The member is irresponsible, completely irresponsible—and his leader. How many persons have committed suicide lately because of the member for High Park?

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. The hon. member for Downsview has a point of order.

Mr. Singer: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, it has always been a custom in democratic legislatures that where a member has charged another member with misconduct—

Mr. Shulman: I did not.

Mr. Singer:—and the facts are later found to be incorrect, there is a serious, important and democratic responsibility on the member making the charge that has been proved to be false to resign his seat.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Singer: I would suggest, sir, that this custom is so well established that it is part of our procedure and since the hon. member for High Park has not fulfilled his obligation merely by withdrawing the serious charges he made last night, one would expect that he should carry it out in the manner indicated in parliaments over many hundreds of years and resign his seat from this Legislature.

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Let the member for Lakeshore (Mr. Lawlor) speak to that point of order!

Mr. Shulman: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, if I may. I did not last night or at any other time—

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: Hansard will record what the hon. member says!

Mr. Shulman:—charge the Attorney General with misconduct. What I charged was that he had been seen by a detective at a certain home.

Hon. A. Grossman (Minister of Revenue): Why did the member do that?

Mr. Shulman: This information came from a police report which exists. It exists; it is a true police report.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Shulman: There was no charge of misconduct. I presented the facts as they are. There is such a police report; this information was demoralizing to the police. If there is anyone who should be resigning from his seat, it is not I, sir.

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: The member hasn't got the guts.

Hon. G. A. Kerr (Provincial Secretary for Justice): He hasn't got the report either.

Mr. Speaker: Order please.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, while awaiting your ruling on the point raised by the member for Downsview I would like to suggest to you—

Mr. I. Deans (Wentworth): There is no ruling!

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member have a point of order?

Mr. Sargent: My point of order is that this member owes an apology not only to the Attorney General but also to the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: My reason, sir, is that it is a gross breach of privilege. This man can be a character assassin of any of us, of any person in Ontario he wants to label. He owes the minister an apology, and he owes every member of this House an apology. He should do it now.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Oh come on. Make some sense. Don't just state your opinion.

Mr. T. P. Reid (Rainy River): Oh keep quiet, Renwick. You can't support that.

Mr. Speaker: Order please.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, speaking to the point of order, could I just add this for your consideration: In the course of the debate last evening, I think you will find subsequent to the statement made by the member for High Park that he did refer to his statement as charges. I heard it with my own ears, and I'm sure that it will be there and substantiated.

An hon. member: He didn't make any charges.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: But he did say that!

Mr. Speaker: To my knowledge no such procedures have ever taken place in at least the recent history of this Legislature. I shall have to read the rules, the precedents, parliamentary tradition, etc., to determine just what position should be taken and what position should be taken by whom. I shall also have to read very thoroughly and carefully the transcript of what did take place last evening, and I will be very happy to do that at the very first opportunity and to so apprise the House of my findings.

Any action of course is not up to the Speaker to take; it is up to the individual member or the House collectively for the committee on procedures and elections or procedural affairs, whichever—

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): It's a sad commentary that the government hasn't done anything about that.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member surely must realize, when the Speaker is attempting to pass judgement or speak to the hon. members, when he's on his feet, that the other members should remain silent, if you please.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: I shall do as I suggested I would do. I'll look into all aspects of the incident and I shall report my findings to the House here as quickly as possible.

Mr. Sargent: On a further point of order, Mr. Speaker, will you rule on my point of order?

Mr. Speaker: I forget what it was. Will the hon. member repeat it?

Mr. Sargent: Well, you shouldn't have forgotten, Mr. Speaker. If you had been in the chair, it wouldn't have happened last night.

Mr. Renwick: Mr. Speaker didn't forget. There wasn't one.

Mr. Sargent: My point of order was that in view of the fact that he has made a withdrawal, that he admits he had made a false statement about the member and he admits that everything he did was wrong, why doesn't Mr. Speaker then make him apologize to the member and to this House?

Mr. Speaker: My investigation, my research, my inquiries will include the matter raised by the hon. member for Grey-Bruce and I shall comment upon it at a later date.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker doesn't take that much time when he is kicking me out of the House.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: I might say that in those circumstances there is absolutely no doubt as to the course of action.

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Statements by the ministry.

Mr. F. Drea (Scarborough Centre): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, in the light of the member for High Park's withdrawing his remarks about the Attorney General that were made last night, I would like to withdraw the remarks that I made about the member for High Park last night.

Mr. Speaker: I must confess—

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Speaker: — I don't know what those remarks were, but they stand withdrawn.

An hon. member: Let's start all over again.

An hon. member: You're not going to stop Hansard, are you?

Mr. Speaker: Statements by the ministry.

Oral questions.

INJURED WORKMEN'S ASSOCIATION

Mr. R. F. Nixon (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Labour. Following his comments on the front steps just a few moments ago in addressing the Injured Workmen's Association, can he make clear to the House what steps he will order, as far as the regulations and proceedings of the Workmen's Compensation Board are concerned, to improve the lot of those people who were petitioning the Minister of Labour just a few moments ago?

Hon. F. Guindon (Minister of Labour): Yes, Mr. Speaker, in my comments to the group which appeared before the Legislature at 1 o'clock, I told this group that, of course, we were looking at the present time at the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Board and, because they were mentioning questions of benefits as far as the Act is concerned, that I would be prepared to, and I will, bring this matter to the attention of the resources committee to which our ministry belongs.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, having to do with the level of payments and the fact that so many of these people are trying to subsist on incomes far below not only the poverty level but the subsistence level, wouldn't the minister make some emergency recommendations and see to it that their payments are increased with a goal to at least hooking it to the increases in the cost of living?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: These matters are for a government policy decision and I will certainly see that we get some action in this regard. I want to bring this matter to the attention of the government as soon as possible. When you look at the Workmen's Compensation Board in Ontario, you will find that it's about the most generous in Canada—and in most jurisdictions in North America. But that doesn't mean that some of these people do not suffer. You just wonder if perhaps there is no other way through a package of social benefits which could be worked into a certain scheme. That is what I think we should study before too long.

But, as far as the board itself goes, when you look at the benefits, I think by and large they are away ahead of many other jurisdictions. I have on my desk a request which I received a couple of days ago from the governor of New Jersey asking people from the board to go and overhaul their own workmen's compensation legislation.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, is the minister saying to the House that he has not submitted to cabinet a different scale of benefits for workmen's compensation claimants?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: What I said, Mr. Speaker, is that I am prepared to bring to our resources policy field—and that is where it should go—a study and recommendations that I have in mind concerning the workmen's compensation benefits.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, what recommendation does the minister have in mind which he has yet to bring to the natural resources policy committee?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: As my hon. friend will realize we have received a number of briefs, a number of representations. Some of them have to do with increasing the maximum of $9,000—which was increased, as a matter of fact, in April, 1971, from $7,000 to $9,000. That is one area.

We have also increased benefits to children of injured workmen and to orphans and these are other areas that perhaps may have to be upgraded.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask whether the minister has looked at the administrative proceedings of the board, the way in which its internal review operates, and the paralysis of the pension and rehabilitation departments? I mean is the minister prepared to undertake an overhaul of the entire Workmen's Compensation Board and not have just an amendment of the Act?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I think this was made quite obvious, Mr. Speaker, when I announced in this very Legislature that a task force was to be appointed—and it will be appointed very shortly—looking at all these aspects.

Mr. Lewis: Will the task force be appointed during the life of this wind-up session? Will the minister make an announcement as to its chairman and its members?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I would hope so, and I would be glad to make an announcement as soon as I am ready to do it. I would hope it would be during this present session.

Mr. Lewis: By way of one last supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Has the minister considered that the problem with the entire Workmen's Compensation Board continues to lie at the top? Has he perhaps considered an alternative government appointment for the chairman of the board?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, I am very much aware of what is going on at the Workmen's Compensation Board. I know full well what my hon. friend is referring to—some of the attitudes—and I am bringing the board much closer to me.

Mr. Sargent: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker, of the minister: How does one get to talk to this man down there? Nobody is running the store. I have been phoning there for a matter of 10 days to get to Legge, to his exec, or to anyone down there who knows what is going on. They are all away in New York or some place and nobody knows where they are. Now who is running the store?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply to my hon. friend from Grey-Bruce I can assure him that as long as I am Minister of Labour I will be able to talk to him and I want him to talk to me as well; not only the chairman but all the members of the board.

Mr. Sargent: Why can't I talk to him? Why doesn't he answer his phone?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I think the hon. member will realize that it is not always easy to reach the chairman of a board with 1,600 employees but, just the same, I see no reason why he shouldn't be able to reach him.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Leader of the Opposition.

CHANGES IN GOVERNMENT POLICIES AND PRIORITIES

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, a question of the Premier.

Would he not think that the members of the House and the citizens and taxpayers of Ontario would be well served if he would gather together the decisions made by various ministers which are designed to reduce the cost of programmes that have been extant now for some years so that we can, for once, know the extent of the retrenchment policy of the government? We would like to know specifically, how much money it is intended would be saved in the next year and—something of real concern, not just interest—how many jobs will be affected by the changes in priorities which have been announced piecemeal by various ministers and the Premier.

Hon. W. G. Davis (Premier): Mr. Speaker, I think there is some merit in what the Leader of the Opposition is suggesting.

I see some administrative difficulties in pulling all of this together, but certainly from the government standpoint the greater the public understanding is of the changes in priorities to a certain extent or the greater its recognition that certain programmes have to be curtailed or the rate of acceleration be decreased—whatever phraseology one may wish to use—the better. It would be appropriate perhaps, Mr. Speaker, as part of the budget presentation because this is at the time, of course, when the government will be outlining in detail many of these things.

I certainly will consider the suggestion made by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: A supplementary: The budget presentation is surely still a few months off, but decisions are being announced and the effects are being felt now. Wouldn't the Premier agree that it might be better that something other than simply the normal question period should have been made available at this session so that we could discuss the far-reaching decisions taken by the administration?

A statement by himself or the Treasurer (Mr. MacNaughton) which itself would be debatable—you might call it a mini-budget; and I know that this has been done in other jurisdictions and even here in the past—should have been the approach taken when such far-reaching changes are not just contemplated for some budgetary period in the future but are enacted over a period when the Legislature itself is in session.

Mr. Lewis: It still can be. We can use the supplementary estimates to that end.

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, of course it is very hard to determine some aspects of the government's programme as it affects say employment or the cutback in capital expenditures by both the post-secondary community and the hospital community. One has to weigh what the level of construction would be in that particular field against what is happening in the private sector.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that to compile this sort of information with some predictions at this moment would be difficult for the government. Certainly I can see the merit of having this kind of information available, from our standpoint as well as from that of the members opposite. I will certainly give consideration to it.

I think it has some merit though, and I emphasize this, because the whole question of the fiscal position and the directions that we wish to take as a government normally form part of the budget process. Of course, some of the programmes or the cutbacks that have been announced will relate to certain fiscal years. Now in some areas it will mean an immediate situation and in others it won't happen much before the budget itself, so that perhaps at the time of the budget really isn't that inappropriate. But I will certainly consider it.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: Can the Premier indicate to the House what must have been put to him and the Treasurer, at least the goal in reduction of expenditure by the changes that have been announced, and the number of jobs that would be involved in a matter as sensitive as this? Surely this was considered by those who were planning and executing the announcements?

Hon. Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, certainly we have certain objectives and these very appropriately, I think, must be part of the budget statement. Without trespassing on the prerogatives of the Treasurer, I think I may say one of the objectives of course is to bring our expenditure patterns more closely in line with our revenue situation and to concern ourselves about the extent of any provincial deficit.

As it relates to any projections with respect to jobs, of course, this also relates to the kind of cuts and the kind of creativity that is demonstrated by those agencies that are affected. Some of them can be done administratively perhaps. They aren't all labour conscious. Some of them are; there is no question about that. But I think it is really somewhat premature to get into this aspect of it.

But I repeat again, I think it is a very valid question and one to which the government will address itself.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition have further questions?

Mr. R. F. Nixon: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

WINTER WORKS PROGRAMMES

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, a question of the provincial Treasurer: Now that the federal government has announced a major winter works programme, could the provincial Treasurer tell us what Ontario intends to do with its reported $106 million share of it?

Hon. C. S. MacNaughton (Treasurer and Minister of Intergovernmental Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I don't think I can accommodate the hon. member. The detailed information reached me this morning in a Telex about a mile long. We are making an analysis of it now and hopefully will be able to be more specific about it later on.

I can say that we welcome any assistance the federal government provides. We do want to look at how it relates to our own programmes and how it can be co-ordinated. It may be that there are some difficulties involved in it, but I would be premature if I tried to give you a full analysis of it today.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask the Treasurer—not wishing to engender a political response, you understand—is he saying that he knew nothing of the federal programme until he received it by Telex this morning? There was no advance consultation of any kind?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, there was no advance consultation of any kind. I can say that as recently as three weeks ago—

Mr. Lewis: He certainly hasn't learned very much.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: —I approached the federal Minister of Finance to request as much information as I could get. He indicated then that he would hopefully make this information available to us in two weeks. I believe it is three weeks now. But he said he wasn't in a position to do it at that time. I don't know whether this is the proper thing to say—I'll say it anyway. There was a certain amount of confusion in Ottawa at that time so I can understand his position.

Mr. Sargent: Will that step up the minister's allocation to municipalities from here in? The minister has already made an allocation, hasn't he?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, our allocations have been announced. Every municipality knows what they are and I believe I sent the details of our provincial programme to every member in the Legislature. Whether they have received it yet or not, I don't know.

Now the federal programme is separate and distinct from the provincial programme. It does provide for this much; the province can elect that the assistance to municipalities goes through the province for approval, or it can elect to allow the federal government to do it themselves. We think we will opt for the former because it will help us then in the co-ordination approach as much as possible. But to get into the detail any further than this, Mr. Speaker, I simply haven't had time.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Supplementary: On the matter of consultation, can the Treasurer describe the consultation that he had with the municipalities before he announced the provincial programme, particularly the consultation that might have been undertaken before the dollar allocations were arrived at?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: There were some discussions, not in great detail, Mr. Speaker, with the provincial-municipal liaison committee. I can't say whether it is a defensible position or not that we didn't pursue it too far. As I have said, we were waiting to see whether or not the federal programme provided us with any element of co-ordination.

Mr. Reid: Oh well, that is a little different story.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: But I would say this to the hon. member; the programme this year is almost identical to the programme of last year and the municipalities should be able to engage in their participatory side of it very quickly without too much complication.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The funding is somewhat reduced.

Mr. M. Gaunt (Huron-Bruce): A supplementary, just on a matter of clarification. I take it from what the Treasurer has said that all clerks in all of the municipalities across the province have been notified as to their allocation as of this moment?

Mr. W. D. McKeough (Chatham-Kent): Particularly in Southampton.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you, Darcy.

Mr. Deans: I hope so.

Mr. Sargent: Thirty thousand dollars?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that information has either reached them or is in the course of reaching them—it is either there or it's on its way. The details have all gone out.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West.

TAX CREDIT FOR MACHINERY

Mr. Lewis: Yes, Mr. Speaker, could I ask of the Minister of Revenue when he will have for us the list of those corporations that took advantage of the tax rebate?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, as you know, I advised the member that I have the answer ready today.

Mr. Lewis: Does the minister want to answer it now?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Is it all right with you, Mr. Speaker? Shall I give the answer now?

Mr. Speaker: I think perhaps it would be all right now since the hon. member who asked the question has just reminded the hon. minister. The hon. minister may now make his reply.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: On Nov. 24, the hon. member asked for certain statistics relating to the five per cent investment tax credit. The investment tax credits that have been claimed to Nov. 15, 1972, relate mainly to the 1971 taxation year. The bulk of the 1972 claims will not be filed until some time in 1973, because tax returns are filed six months after the close of the taxation year.

During the period from Apr. 26, 1971, to Nov. 15, 1972, a total of 16,944 tax credit claims were received from corporations on filing of their corporate income tax returns. The amount of these claims against corporate income tax payable was $27.5 million. Of the $27.5 million claimed, $20.3 million was used to reduce income tax payable.

The remainder of the credit, amounting to $7.2 million, can be carried forward by corporations into the next taxation year to be applied against corporate income tax payable. The credit cannot be carried beyond Mar. 31, 1973, unless a corporation has a net loss during the qualifying period, in which case the credit can be carried forward one additional year.

The hon. member has asked for amounts of credit claimed by individual industries. Since this information is related to income tax payable, I am precluded by section 93, subsection 1 of the Corporations Tax Act from divulging such figures. I think I mentioned that in an oblique fashion when the hon. member asked the question.

I can however, give a breakdown of the credits claimed by class of industry based on the major categories of business as defined by Statistics Canada. This breakdown is as follows: Agriculture, fishing and forestry, 318 claims for $137,000; mining, quarrying, oil and gas wells, 64 claims for $376,000; construction, 1,636 claims for $1,271,000; transportation, storage and communications, 385 claims for $2,790,000; public utilities, 17 claims for $1,582,000; wholesale trade, 1,325 claims for $902,000—

Mr. Sargent: That doesn't tell us a thing.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: It just gives the answer to the question that was asked.

Mr. Sargent: Why doesn't the minister table it?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: The hon. member didn't want it tabled; he wanted it read in the House.

Retail trade, 2,245 claims for $1,788,000—

Mr. Bullbrook: This is a three-minute egg.

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—service industries, 2,205 claims for $1,439,000; finance, 1,178 claims for $1,884,000; manufacturing, 3,815 claims for $8,131,000—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: What was that one just before the last one?

Mr. Deans: What's that figure?

Hon. Mr. Grossman:—making a sub-total of 13,188 claims for $20.3 million. The unused credit claims carried forward one year are 3,756 claims for $7.2 million, for a grand total of 16,944 claims for $27.5 million.

An hon. member: Beautiful!

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, Mr. Speaker, could I ask the minister whether he can estimate for the House or give some documentation to the House of the number of jobs that this credit produced, given this programme as the most important job-producing programme of the last budget?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the Ministry of Revenue has no facilities for those sort of figures.

Mr. Sargent: How was the sales tax?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: All we can do is carry out the administration of the legislation. I've given the hon. member the information he has asked for and which I'm able to do.

All I can say in general terms, as I said when he first asked the question, is that it's presumed that when you steam up the economy, when you provide credits for the purchase of equipment and machinery, obviously it's going to provide jobs. How many I'm not in a position to say.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary, has the minister looked into how many jobs were lost in Ontario? I suspect overall we lost more than we gained, by virtue of the automation induced by this tax credit which the government handed out.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, the answer is the same. Obviously if I can't give the hon. member the specific figures of how many jobs were created, I can't tell him how many jobs were lost—if in fact any jobs were lost, which I doubt very much.

Mr. Lewis: A final supplementary: Can the minister tell me, since he was $105 million off his estimate—he estimated $125 million and he used $20 million—how many tens of million of dollars does he expect to be off his estimate this year and what effects it will have on the economy?

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Obviously, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has asked what is a rhetorical question and he's making a speech, because he knows that I don't have this information. I didn't make such an estimate. I have no information in respect to that.

Mr. Sargent: It's probably what got him back into the second row.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: I suggest the hon. member direct his question to whichever minister may have made such a statement.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: This Treasurer doesn't know the answer to that question.

Mr. D. C. MacDonald (York South): We may go back to the old one.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question, Mr. Speaker: Could the minister indicate who in the government did make the calculation in regard to the numbers of jobs that the Premier said were going to be produced as a result of this tax credit?

Mr. MacDonald: In fact, he said there were 6,000 created.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I don't recall anyone making such a statement.

Mr. Lewis: It's just another corporate ripoff.

Mr. McKeough: The hon. member should—

Mr. Lewis: He was $100 million off.

Mr. McKeough: The member is in the 19th century.

Mr. Lewis: The 19th century! No wonder they threw the member for Chatham-Kent out of the cabinet.

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Grossman: Mr. Speaker, I think this has just proved that the question was a rhetorical one.

Mr. MacDonald: It has proved the minister doesn't have an answer.

Mr. Speaker: Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have any further questions?

OSPREY BLUFFS SUBDIVISION

Mr. Lewis: Yes, I do, Mr. Speaker. I want to ask the Minister of Natural Resources whether there has been drawn to his attention the development of Osprey Bluffs subdivision in Osprey township, Grey county, which development on the face of it runs directly counter to the escarpment report and preservation.

Hon. L. Bernier (Minister of Natural Resources): Mr. Speaker, this matter hasn't been brought to my attention but I will certainly make myself informed.

Mr. Lewis: Will he look into it?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Kent.

FARM TAX CREDIT

Mr. J. Spence (Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Treasurer of the Province of Ontario.

Could the minister tell me why there is the delay in mailing to the municipal clerks across the Province of Ontario application forms for the 25 per cent farm tax rebate? When will these forms be in the hands of the municipal clerks?

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, I shall have to find out that information and see that the hon. member gets it.

Mr. Spence: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

May I tell the minister that it will take a month before the municipal clerks would be able to complete the forms in townships across the province? This is a concern—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The government doesn't seem to be in any rush to get that money out this year.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Sandwich-Riverside.

HOME BUYER PROTECTION

Mr. F. A. Burr (Sandwich-Riverside): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Chairman of the Management Board regarding a promise he made in a speech at Kitchener on Oct. 12 that the government would bring in legislation to protect home buyers in the matter of warranties and guarantees. Is this legislation about to be introduced?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, in the technical sense the question should be directed to the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations (Mr. Clement), but I am rather certain that that legislation will be introduced in the first session in the new year.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Windsor-Walkerville.

EDUCATION OF FORMER CROWN WARDS

Mr. B. Newman (Windsor-Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Community and Social Services.

In light of the too-rigid interpretation of the Child Welfare Act concerning Crown wards and in light of the recent memorandum sent to directors of Ontario's Children's Aid Societies concerning Crown wards who reach 18 years of age and continue their secondary school education, does the minister intend to amend the Child Welfare Act to make it very explicit that a Crown ward, on reaching 18 years of age and attending a secondary school, may remain, at the discretion of the Children's Aid Society, a Crown ward until that ward has completed secondary school education?

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that it is necessary to amend the legislation. I believe the legislation as it is now is flexible enough to permit assistance. If the hon. member has any cases that he feels are deserving and that are not being looked into properly, I would be pleased to give them my personal attention.

Mr. B. Newman: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister aware that at present the individual must appeal to his department rather than the Children's Aid Society at the local level which is more familiar with the need for the continuing education of the Crown ward?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: My understanding, Mr. Speaker, is that the local Children's Aid Society reviews the cases and then submits them to us. I have just mentioned, I am not aware of any problems lately. If there are any, I would be pleased to be made aware of them.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Wentworth.

DISPOSAL OF WCB BUILDING

Mr. Deans: A question of the Minister of Labour. Will the Minister of Labour explain to the House the more lucrative conditions which now prevail which encourage the Workmen's Compensation Board to divest itself of its office facilities on Harbour St. to the Ontario Provincial Police rather than pursuing the offer to purchase by Fidinam?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member, I can only say it came to my attention that the Minister of Government Services (Mr. Snow) was deeply interested in obtaining the building presently occupied by the Workmen's Compensation Board for a reason of economics, because the price was really fair and just. They felt that the government could save some $2 million or $3 million by buying this building. That's all that I knew about it, and I approved the decision of the board to make the deal.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deans: Supplementary.

Mr. Speaker: I think the hon. member who asked the main question should be granted the first supplementary.

Mr. Deans: Can the minister indicate how much the Ontario Provincial Police are paying to the Workmen's Compensation Board for the building—whether they are going to pay the $3.5 million which was offered by Fidinam? And if, in fact, as he says, this is a very good purchase in terms of a saving of some millions of dollars, how then did the board come to the conclusion that the Fidinam offer was the best offer it could get?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The deal was made by the board and Fidinam before I occupied this portfolio. But when the Minister of Government Services showed his interest in buying the present building from the Workmen's Compensation Board, I approved it, because as I said, again, it would have cost in the neighbourhood of $6 million for a new building. This one did fill the purpose. This one did provide all they needed and I approved of it. As for the deal itself and the price, the hon. member would have to ask the Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker: The building cost $5 million to build in 1953 and the market value today is $10 million. In view of the fact that it was offered to Fidinam for $3.5 million, would the minister venture to say that if the Fidinam deal hadn't come to light Fidinam would still have the deal for $3.5 million? What took it out of the Fidinam deal?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: It was part of a total package. I understand that the Compensation Board asked for bids and Fidinam had the best bid.

Mr. Sargent: Supplementary: The building is worth $10 million, and we're selling it to Fidinam for $3.5 million. It's out of the package now because of the exposure.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, of course, it's the member's assessment that it's worth $10 million.

Mr. Sargent: No, no. That's—

Mr. Bullbrook: They weren't bids, they were proposals.

Mr. Deans: Supplementary question—

Mr. Bullbrook: They weren't bids. The minister should clarify that.

Mr. Deans: A supplementary question of the minister—

Mr. Bullbrook: They were proposals.

Mr. Deans: Has the minister reviewed the entire Fidinam deal in the light of the fact that they are no longer going to purchase the Workmen's Compensation Board building and that was a major selling point at the time that the presentation was made to the committee?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: No, this was looked into by the Minister of Government Services.

Mr. Deans: How does he have anything to do with it? It's this minister who approves it. Why would he look into whether or not the deal was still a good deal when, in fact, he is the person who has to make the decision? Has he now looked to see whether the deal that they agreed to with Fidinam, which should have and did include the sale of the existing building to Fidinam, and which no longer does, is still a lucrative and worthwhile investment for the Workmen's Compensation Board?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: This was discussed by the two of us—the Minister of Government Services and myself.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary, and forgetting about Mr. Kelly and his $50,000—

Mr. Singer: For the moment.

Mr. Bullbrook:—for the moment—since this really wasn't a bid, and the minister in error innocently enough said it was, and since it was a proposal, isn't it incumbent upon him and his cabinet colleagues, in view of the change, to review the entire proposal? And are they doing so?

Mr. Deans: I thought that is what I said.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Well, I presume this was done by my colleague.

Mr. MacDonald: We have a final supplementary. In the review, would the minister give some explanation as to why a building would become part of a package deal at $3.5 million when the minister himself now concedes that it's worth at least $6 million, because he can save $2 million or $3 million by using it otherwise?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I want to make this very clear, Mr. Speaker. I didn't say that this building was worth $6 million. I'm talking about a new building that Government Services would have to build—

Mr. MacDonald: Well, why was it put in—

Hon. Mr. Guindon:—if they were to give the OPP all the facilities they needed.

Mr. MacDonald: Okay then. My question can be put even more simply: Why was the building put in the Fidinam package deal at $3.5 million—a fire sale price—when the minister now concedes that it should be about $6 million?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: I didn't say that. The building that I'm referring to is one which was needed for the OPP, as I understand from my colleague.

Mr. MacDonald: Right!

Hon. Mr. Guindon: Now, it would have cost the Ministry of Government Services more than $6 million, I'm told, to provide the facilities—

Mr. MacDonald: New or rented?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: —for the OPP. In the meantime, the Ministry of Government Services felt the building presently occupied by the Workmen's Compensation Board was adequate; they were able to use it and it really suited their purposes. That's the reason we've agreed to it.

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary: I think the minister is in error here. We are talking about 90 Harbour St., sir. And that building was in the Fidinam package for $3.5 million; it was pulled out of the deal when the whole Fidinam scandal came to light. That's what we are trying to find out.

Mr. J. M. Turner (Peterborough): That's not true.

Mr. Sargent: Oh yes, it is completely right.

Interjection by an hon. member.

Mr. Sargent: What we are trying to assess, Mr. Speaker, is why it is not part of the Fidinam package now.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: As my hon. friend knows, all this occurred before I came in as Minister of Labour—

Mr. Sargent: Yes, I know that.

Mr. Reid: That's no excuse for not knowing now.

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce is talking about the whole deal—so I'm sure my colleague, the former Minister of Labour, would be glad to answer his questions.

Mr. Bullbrook: By way of supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Scarborough West is next with a supplementary.

Mr. Lewis: By way of supplementary relating to what the minister does know, how much has the OPP paid for the former Workmen's Compensation building? That was the arrangement to which the minister put his signature. How much did they pay?

Hon. Mr. Guindon: The deal was made by the Minister of Government Services, and to my knowledge it is $3.5 million—the same price.

Mr. Sargent: But it cost $5 million to build!

Mr. Speaker: There have been a reasonable number of supplementary questions.

Does the hon. member for Scarborough West have any further questions?

Mr. Lewis: No, I was finished a long time ago.

Mr. Speaker: All right. I believe the hon. member for Grey-Bruce had a new question—

Mr. Sargent: A new question? Oh, yes.

Mr. Speaker: —on another topic.

NEW COMMUNITY OF NORTH PICKERING

Mr. Sargent: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Minister without Portfolio from Ottawa South. Those fellows are playing musical chairs so much it's hard to know what's going on over there.

He spoke in the House yesterday about the North Pickering development and said that probably 3,000 lots had been bought in the area for around $5,000 per lot. This means the government has spent perhaps $15 million on acquisition to date. Is that right?

Mr. Lewis: It is actually 5,000 lots at $3,000.

Hon. C. Bennett (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question, first of all I did not indicate the number of lots. I said that the government had purchased approximately 20 per cent of the ownerships in the North Pickering community. I was asked the average price paid for the lots, and I said between $3,500 and $3,800.

Mr. Sargent: That's what I wanted to find out. Then, using this projection, the whole package is going to cost about $100 million. Is that right?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: I'd say, Mr. Speaker, roughly in the range of $100 to $125 million. Correct.

Mr. Sargent: Thank you. Does the minister agree that we should proceed with this programme when statistics show that Malton is the 70th least busy airport in North America and that there is no need for another airport? Ottawa says there is no need for another airport—

An hon. member: They might put it in Owen Sound!

Interjections by hon. members.

Mr. Sargent: Does the minister agree that we should still proceed to spend $100 million on this programme?

Interjections by hon. members.

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question yesterday I indicated very clearly that this government will proceed with the North Pickering development regardless of the decisions that might be arrived at by the federal government of this country.

Mr. Sargent: Regardless of cost?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): A question of the Minister of Education.

Mr. Speaker: Excuse me. A supplementary by the hon. member for York Centre.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): In arriving at this decision, has the government taken into consideration the comments of the Town Planning Institute, which considers that every sound planning principle has been ignored in the development of this North Pickering plan?

Hon. Mr. Bennett: Mr. Speaker, at this particular time we have no actual plan for the design and development of the community itself. Those are things that we'll be dealing with, sir, in the future. As to the overall scheme of the project, I am not aware of any comments from the planning institute.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Deacon: A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: There have been sufficient supplementaries on that. The hon. member for Port Arthur.

REPORT ON RACIAL BIAS IN SCHOOL TEXTBOOKS

Mr. Foulds: I have a question of the Minister of Education, Mr. Speaker.

What action does the minister plan to take in response to the text book committee report on racial bias with regard to the 370 books which are presently used in the system and which have elements of bias in them? The minister has made substantial statements about future publications. What about those that are already being used?

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, I think, as the hon. member stated, we've made a very full explanation of what steps would be taken to try to eliminate bias from textbooks in the future. We intend to pursue those procedures as those books which have been identified in the various studies are reprinted—

Mr. F. Laughren (Nickel Belt): Why would it be?

Hon. Mr. Wells: —but there is no indication that—

Mr. Lewis: The minister is kidding. He is not serious.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, having pointed out the problems and having pointed out the textbooks which are a problem, there is no indication and there is no desire, in any way, on the part of this government to burn those books or censor them at this point in time. With the goodwill of all concerned, I'm sure that over a period of a few years those books will either be replaced or in the reprinted versions the offending sections will be corrected. That, I think, Mr. Speaker, is the policy which is supported by most people.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: By a very easy mechanism, such as removing those books from Circular 14, say within a two-year period, couldn't he obviate the problem that way and get rid of those books? Two years would give him enough time to phase them out of the school system.

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, I don't think the situation calls for that kind of action. I think, as I say, that the reprinting, and the consideration of updated versions of these textbooks will take care of the particular matter over a period of time. I don't know whether or not my hon. friend is aware of it, but I know of no other jurisdiction in Canada—and not many in North America—that has moved as far as we have concerning bias in textbooks used in schools.

Mr. Laughren: That is not right. What would be difficult about issuing a list of substitute texts?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, the reports that have been done on bias in textbooks are public information now. Teachers in the schools have these lists. They can, if they wish, on their own cease to use those books. They have a certain latitude of choice here and I think that this is the proper way it should be taken care of. As I say, we are not going to ban any particular books or take them out of circulation at this time.

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker: Has the report with the list of books which contained bias been circulated to the schools in this province?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, it hasn't been circulated to the schools of this province but it is public information and is available to anyone who wishes to have a copy.

Mr. Lewis: By way of a supplementary, why would the Minister of Education, having said that it has not been circulated through the schools or to the teachers of the province but is simply a public document, want racially offensive passages in textbooks to have continued use in the schools for X-years until reprinting removed them? Why would he want that? Why would he put up with it? Why did he have his committee in the first place?

Hon. Mr. Wells: Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated, there are no other jurisdictions in Canada that I know of which have moved as far as we have in coming to grips with this particular problem. My hon. friend knows that we on this side of the House are determined that offensive passages will be removed from textbooks in the future, but this also is a matter of very great concern to a lot of people. It is very easy to cross the line from removing offensive passages to censoring books. There are a lot of people—

Mr. Lewis: Nobody is suggesting that! We don't want the government to censor our reading matter. We know what we would be left with!

Hon. Mr. Kerr: Tear out the pages.

Mr. Lewis: A few earthy passages is all we would have left!

Hon. Mr. Wells: I am just saying that I think that members have to—

Hon. Mr. Winkler: The member may be better off than he thinks!

Hon. Mr. Wells: At least the textbooks would be very conservatively biased! Mr. Speaker, I think the course of action that we're taking is the proper one and the one that will result, in a very few years, in all these books ceasing to be used in our schools.

There is one other very important part—and this is the part that we are pursuing very carefully—in the task force's report and that is that somehow in the curriculum—and I am determined that we get to this point—we have to develop within the students themselves the ability to examine critically the things they read and be able to pick out bias and not be led to believe that everything they read in the printed word is the absolute gospel truth. That is a very important thing to do in our schools' curricula.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Foulds: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Reid: We have been over that!

Mr. Foulds: Is the minister saying that, having identified this racial and sexual bias, the government is not willing to act with any haste on the matter?

Hon. Mr. Wells: What I am saying is that we are not intending to ban the use of any of the textbooks that have been identified. We intend that in the process of revision of those books, the evaluation procedures and assistance procedures will apply.

Mr. Speaker: A supplementary?

All right, the hon. member for Rainy River.

KENORA-RAINY RIVER TRANSPORTATION STUDY

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, as the Premier has gone, a question of the Minister of Transportation and Communications.

Is the study that he commissioned on the transportation feasibilities in Kenora and Rainy River ready, as the minister said in early October it would be? Is it available to the members?

Hon. G. R. Carton (Minister of Transportation and Communications): It will be available in January, 1973.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hamilton East.

ANNUAL INSPECTIONS OF GAS-FIRED FURNACES

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

In view of the death of an eight-year-old girl in Toronto in September, caused by carbon monoxide through the malfunction of a gas appliance heater, and the subsequent coroner's jury report, supported by the executive committee of Toronto, that there should be mandatory, free annual inspections by the gas companies, would the minister consider amending the Energy Act or the respective Act to provide for annual inspections of all gas and oil appliances?

Hon. J. T. Clement (Minister of Consumer and Commercial Relations): Mr. Speaker, I know the matter to which the hon. member refers. I think the inquest did, in fact, establish that the young girl involved died of carbon monoxide poisoning because of what appeared to be the malfunction of a gas-fired furnace.

The problem of annual inspections pertaining to gas-fired furnaces is one of cost—to the consumer—and of practicality in view of the large number of gas-fired furnaces in use throughout this province and in view of the relatively small number of people who would be competent to carry out such inspections. Early in 1972, the technical standards branch of my ministry commenced a detailed review of inspection procedures of the various gas distributing companies and this has been augmented by the study of all accidents reported to date. The analysis to be done upon completion of those studies will provide the information needed to establish what recommendations, if any, are necessary.

I share the hon. member's concern. It is a tragedy; it is a serious matter. Whether or not annual inspections are the answer, I do not know. It appears from the information available to me that the most important inspection, of course, is the initial inspection, prior to or at the time the furnace is tied into the distribution system. That, sir, I understand, is extremely critical, and whether the matter can be handled or not, my studies will hopefully indicate in the not to distant future.

Mr. Gisborn: Supplementary, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The time for oral questions has gone by.

Petitions.

Presenting reports.

Mr. J. P. MacBeth (York West): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the report of the select committee on the Ontario Municipal Board.

If I may make a few comments on presenting it, I understand, sir, that all committees, particularly the select committees of this House, are indeed excellent committees. This has been an extremely excellent committee. It has consisted, in all but one member—and that is the hon. member for York South—of freshmen members of this House. Because of this we had to turn for advice from time to time to the hon. member for York South.

Mr. Lewis: That's why it is a good report.

Mr. MacBeth: Well it could be. But I wanted to go on and say—

Mr. MacDonald: Even if the Solicitor General thinks otherwise.

Mr. MacBeth: —that because it is a freshman report, if there is any virtue or merit in it it belongs to the reform group—

Hon. Mr. Yaremko: As a member of a committee the member for York South has done well. It is here in the House that the trouble is.

Mr. MacBeth: —and if there is any fault in it, we must lay that fault at the door of the hon. member for York South for bad advice!

Mr. MacDonald: I obviously bid for that.

Mr. Renwick: He got it both ways.

Mr. MacBeth: I apologize for the delay. We were commissioned to have this before the House on Oct. 31. We found when we got into the task—because of the summer months and the number of people who wanted to speak to us—that we could not, in fulfilling our duties, meet that date. We have come to the members some six weeks late, but we think we have a good report to present. It was an extensive task that the House gave us, and we received good co-operation from all people. We hope we have a good report.

We would have liked more time to get into the field of planning. We have tried to deal with these matters, not from a planning point of view but only where planning and the OMB crossed, and then we have followed only the road of the work of the OMB.

We feel that there is much that should and could be done in following up the Planning Act of this province, and that it needs an extensive overhaul. The committee, I think, would all volunteer to be re-established on such a task of looking at the planning of this province. We would all be glad to volunteer for it.

Just let me review very briefly some of the main recommendations that we have made. It is interesting, Mr. Speaker, that no municipalities that came before us suggested the abolition of the OMB. They all started out saying that the board has done a good job. Then they would say, "but."

Now the "buts" encompassed the whole gambit of the OMB's responsibilities. But no one suggested that all of those responsibilities should be removed. We do not think that the board should be abolished, but that it should be retained.

We do suggest—and this is one of the most radical things that we have suggested—that the work the board was early in its life commissioned to do, that is, supervise the monetary responsibilities of the municipalities, should be taken from the board. That work should be handed over to Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs. We feel that today that has become a rather mechanical matter. Whereas the board spent considerable time on it, that could be well handled as an administrative matter by the minister, rather than the board spending so much time, and the municipalities spending so much time on it.

The chief complaint of the municipalities was on the delays that the board creates. We have made many recommendations in here to eliminate the red tape and to cut down the reasons for delay.

We are also suggesting that amalgamations, changes in boundaries, over which the board has in the past had many hot sessions, should be removed again to the purview of the minister, as he is now doing in such things as regional government matters. This again is an administrative matter which should not have the heat of anger poured on it from different sides; this should be the responsibility of the minister. The recommendations for that are set out on page 15.

We suggest that the board should be the sole body for assessment appeal. On page 16 we suggest that no longer should there be a double-barrelled responsibility, one to the county court and the other to the OMB. The county court's jurisdiction should be removed with provision, because of the BNA Act that makes taxation matters in certain fields subject to legal decisions, that there should be room to appeal on legal matters to the divisional court. But as far as the quantum of assessment is concerned, that should be purely a matter for the OMB.

Again you will see much in here on citizen participation. On page 21 we have set out some suggestions for that. We think we are in tune with what is happening across the province now where the citizens want to get into the act. We are saying let them in, but let them in at the municipal level, not at the OMB level. We are suggesting many ways in which they should be in at that level and where the action should be, before the council rather than before the OMB.

The OMB should become an appeal body only and should deal with matters, not de novo, but on accepting the evidence that has already been properly documented and put before the council. We have provided rules to speed up the hearings.

As for appeals to cabinet, you will see those set out on page 18. We realize that cabinet, because it must be responsible for the policy of the OMB, must have the right to challenge any ruling of the OMB, but that parties before the OMB should only have that right on appeal to three members of the board who would then say, "Yes, this is a sufficiently important matter to go on."

Mr. Speaker, that is a summation of the main points we have in our brief. We hope that these will be put into legislation; that the work of the OMB will be removed from the front pages of the newspapers; and that it will become a more efficient and speedy servant to the people of this province. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

REGIONAL MUNICIPALITY OF WATERLOO ACT

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton moves first reading of bill intitled, An Act to amend the Regional Municipality of Waterloo Act, 1972.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, without going into a detailed explanation of the various sections of the bill, let me simply say if it is satisfactory, that it provides for the continuance at the regional government level of many of the matters that were formerly under the jurisdiction of the county and the local governments in the area.

MUNICIPAL UNCONDITIONAL GRANTS ACT

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Municipal Unconditional Grants Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, this Act simply provides that under the Public Hospitals Amendment Act, 1972, the responsibility for payments concerning hospitalization of indigents by municipalities is removed and therefore section 8 is no longer necessary. I refer to section 8 of the Municipal Unconditional Grants Act.

PUBLIC PARKS ACT

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton moves first reading of bill intituled, An Act to amend the Public Parks Act.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

Hon. Mr. MacNaughton: Mr. Speaker, the provision repealed disqualifies a member of a parks board who has a pecuniary interest in a contract with a board. This matter will be dealt with by disclosure under the new Municipal Conflict of Interest Act, 1972.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day I would like to say that the House will sit this evening at 8:30 o'clock to accommodate the members who have committed themselves in regard to the sports award dinner. We will proceed, with one little change, with what was announced last night. That is, the second order will be a housekeeping bill by the Minister of Education; it is No. 23 on the order paper. So it will be Nos. 5, 23, 7, 14 and 8. But somewhere in there we are going to reserve the right to revert to item No. 4, because I believe there is a feeling that we could conclude No. 4 this evening. With the cooperation of the House, that will be the course of events.

Mr. Speaker, I call No. 5.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: Mr. Speaker, further to the statement by the hon. minister, has he given any thought to the other hours of sitting for the rest of the week? Or is he going to consider that at any time before Thursday morning?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: I will be in a position—

Mr. R. F. Nixon: The minister is in a position now.

Hon. Mr. Winkler: —this evening to detail the balance of the week.

Mr. R. F. Nixon: That's two days in advance. The minister shouldn't commit himself unduly. Couldn't he have told us about the night session last night?

Hon. Mr. Winkler: Doesn't the member trust me?

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Clerk of the House: The fifth order, House in committee of the whole; Mr. R. D. Rowe in the chair.

FAMILY BENEFITS ACT

House in committee on Bill 230, An Act to amend the Family Benefits Act.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any comments, questions, or amendments to any section of the bill? If so, which section?

Mr. E. W. Martel (Sudbury East): Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: Which section, please?

Mr. Martel: Section 1 (1a). I anticipate a reply from the minister with respect to ensuring that recipients will not have to make any repayment whatsoever. But in the event that is not forthcoming I'll move the following amendment anyway and then we can have the explanation on the record so that in fact no welfare officer or district welfare administrator will attempt to make someone make a repayment. I think once we get the explanation from the minister on the record that won't occur. But I want to ensure that, so I'll move that section 1(1a) be further amended and that the following be added after the word regulations in line 16: "Any amount so provided shall not be recoverable from the applicant or the recipient or any of his dependants."

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Martel moves that section 1 (1a) be further amended and that the following be added after the word regulations in line 16: "Any amount so provided shall not be recoverable from the applicant or the recipient or any of his dependants."

The member for Riverdale.

Mr. J. A. Renwick (Riverdale): Mr. Chairman, the amendment speaks for itself and I know it will commend itself to the minister. Anything the member for Sudbury East puts before the minister, he always gratefully accepts. I'm sure he will accept this amendment.

The minister may not be aware of the procedures that demand the repayment of moneys which have been determined to be overpayment. This is simply to ensure that what is given with one hand will not be taken back with the other hand on some basis of making a decision of the board of review retroactive in the matter.

What we are trying to do here is to meet the problem which is involved in alleviating hardship. If the board of review determines there is hardship and provides this interim assistance for any particular person or family, it would appear to us that it should be abundantly clear in the statute that it is not intended that that moneys would be recovered by repayment if, for some reason or other, the board of review made a decision which had some retroactive effect.

Mr. Chairman, I want to raise a couple of other matters on this clause with the minister. I would like to know the procedure that the minister envisages for establishing this interim assistance while the matter is before the board of review and pending a decision by the board.

When the decision is made which results in a citizen making an application to have the matter dealt with by the board of review, as I understand it, at the present time there is in many instances an automatic termination of the allowance to which the person is entitled. He files his application to the board of review and the board of review meets reasonably expeditiously.

Must he wait until the board of review, in fact, meets to hear his case in the initial instance before this intermediate relief will be provided? Or does the mere filing of the application by the person to the board of review permit the board of review to make the decision as to whether there is hardship and to avoid any delay or lengthy interruption in the provision of immediate assistance?

I assume that the hearing would take place in the normal course and the decision would be made at some future time. It does seem to me that the House should have some indication from the minister of the procedure which he intends to follow in order that there will be no gap during which an applicant to the board of review is subject to unnecessary hardship.

The second matter is one which I was not aware of until I ran across it quite recently.

As I understand it, when a decision is made that a person is not entitled to disability assistance under the Family Benefits Act, the decision is based upon the medical advisory committee or the medical review committee, whatever the proper term is. I understand that, in that case, there is no right of appeal to the board of review.

I would like to have the minister clarify that for me. If there is no right of appeal to the board of review by a person who has been disentitled to a disability pension or who has been refused a disability pension on his first application—that is, a disability award under the Family Benefits Act—it would appear to me that that person would not have the benefit of this alleviation of his immediate hardship while the matter is being considered.

Mr. Chairman, I am asking the minister specifically to advise whether there is, in fact, an appeal from an adverse decision to the board of review by a person who has applied for disability pension. The information which I have is that there is no such appeal and therefore a group of persons is being excluded from this alleviating provision. If I am wrong, I would be glad to hear that I am wrong and that the board of review does hear appeals from persons who have had adverse decisions with respect to either the original entitlement to a disability pension or to a disallowance of the disability pension.

Mr. Chairman: The minister.

Hon. R. Brunelle (Minister of Community and Social Services): I indicated to the hon. member for Sudbury East yesterday that the interim payments are not recoverable. I've asked for a legal opinion, and that legal opinion is as follows, and it just substantiates what I have said:

The interim payments authorized by Bill 230 cannot be recovered from a recipient even though he should ultimately be found by the board to be ineligible to receive an allowance under the Act. Section 13(b) of the Act provides for the recovery of an overpayment of moneys to which the recipient was not entitled under the Act. If the interim payment is made in accordance with an order by the board of review, it is not recoverable under section 13(b), nor indeed under any other provision of the law, because it is money to which the recipient is entitled in law, by reason of that order.

So, again, Mr. Chairman, we feel that this is a redundant amendment and it's not necessary. Those interim payments are not recoverable. The recipient does not have to pay it back.

Mr. Chairman, I'm not sure if I'm replying to all of the questions of the hon. member for Riverdale. However, a family benefits handbook is sent to every welfare recipient and on pages 27 and 28 is outlined, in very simple language, the procedures for appeal. And it says:

If you are not satisfied with a decision about your family benefits, you should write to the director of family benefits stating the reasons for your dissatisfaction. After this, if you are still dissatisfied, you may appeal any decision on your eligibility, or the amount you get, by writing to the board of review, preferably within 30 days of the decision on your case. You do not have to pay any fee to appeal a decision about family benefits.

And then it states that the following decisions by the director of family benefits can be appealed.

(1) Refusing, for any reason, to grant a family benefits allowance. (2) Granting an allowance that is smaller than you think it should be. (3) Cancelling, suspending, or reducing your family benefits allowance.

And it tells how to complete form 6 and the other forms. The book says: "The board makes an order pending a hearing; there is no waiting." The member also asked me about whether decisions can be appealed with reference to—I wasn't too sure of this—the suspension of an allowance for a disability?

Mr. R. S. Smith (Nipissing): Disability.

Mr. W. Ferrier (Cochrane South): Used with the grants.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The reply is no, it can't be appealed to the director. It may be appealed to the board of review. I think the hon. member maybe is referring to a specific case.

Mr. Renwick: No. I think that what the minister has said is that an applicant for assistance under the Family Benefits Act by reason of disability, has the same right to go to the board of review as anybody else has, against a refusal to grant, or against a subsequent disallowance.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: It would be my understanding that recipients under the three Acts —Family Benefits, General Welfare Assistance, or Vocational Rehabilitation Services—are all eligible to appeal.

Mr. Renwick: Right. Then I think the minister's explanation—that the decision of the board of review to grant this interim relief for a person would be a non-recoverable award—would appear to clarify and satisfy the implication of our amendment, and with the consent of the House I assume my friend would withdraw that.

The third point that I would like to ask the minister is, will he amend the forms to make certain that persons who have occasion to be advised by the director of their right to appeal to the board of review have this additional capacity or privilege to make an application, or to be advised that they can in fact get this interim relief pending a hearing and until the final disposition?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: If I understand correctly, Mr. Chairman, the member is asking if we would revise form 6 to make the recipients aware of this new provision in this bill. I think it is a very reasonable request and we would be pleased to do so.

Mr. R. Gisborn (Hamilton East): I take it that we have agreed on the amendment not being necessary? I don't know if it is officially withdrawn or not.

Mr. Chairman: Order please. Suppose we deal with that now. Does the hon. member for Sudbury East agree to withdraw the amendment?

Mr. Martel: I'll withdraw the amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman: The member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Gisborn: Yes, I want to clarify in my own mind the application of the section itself. I tried to raise the question with the minister on second reading. How does the application of this amendment conflict or integrate with the payment of municipal assistance under the Municipal Welfare Act? We have a situation where, if a person is in need and is waiting for an application to be processed, or for assistance under the Family Benefits Act, or if he is waiting for the adjudication of a Compensation Board application or for unemployment insurance, and he is in need, he applies and can get municipal assistance within two or three days.

How does this conflict with those payments?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, this amendment will apply to all welfare recipients under the three Acts that I mentioned. You are probably referring to those under the General Welfare Assistance Act whereby if, at the discretion of the local administrator, he does not agree to provide these interim payments, we have the authority to do so. We could pay them and then recover them from that municipality. This is done in certain instances.

I would like to tell the hon. member, Mr. Chairman, that in those cases where they may be refused by the local administrator, this Act applies. They will be receiving payments, and if they don't receive them locally they will receive them from our ministry, and then we in turn will recover that part—the 20 per cent that—

Mr. Gisborn: This is very confusing, Mr. Minister. You see, your department in its application cannot overcome the terms of the application of municipal welfare. It's pretty well defined that if a person is in need through financial hardship it can be demanded.

Now unless your section here means that you are going to pay an amount in addition to what they would be entitled to under municipal welfare, then I can't see the benefit of this change. It would be only another administrative move.

It might be helpful to the local welfare board. It will save them their 20 per cent if you immediately pick it up. But what will be the complication if the person is already receiving municipal welfare and he has made application for a disablement pension under the Family Benefits Act and is refused and appeals to the review board? They continue to get their payments under municipal welfare in any case.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: I don't know, Mr. Chairman, but I'm having a hard time explaining. This Act applies to all welfare recipients who are appealing their decision under the three Acts: The Family Benefits Act, which mainly concerns long-term cases administered by the province; under the General Welfare Assistance Act, which is mainly administered by local municipalities; and under the Vocational Rehabilitation Services Act.

I don't know about this, Mr. Chairman. I'm not being too clear. The purpose of this Act, as is indicated, is to provide instant payments to those recipients during that period when they are appealing the decision, when the board is hearing their case. On average, it will be about two months. They will be receiving about two months' payments, and even though the decision of the board is negative and is not in their favour, the recipients will not have to repay those payments.

Mr. Gisborn: Is the minister saying that, if a person applies for municipal welfare and is refused, then he can apply to his department for an interim payment?

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: No. If he applies for municipal welfare and if he is refused, he can apply on form 6 to the review board. If, in the discretion of the review board, they feel that there are financial hardships to that family, they can direct that payment be made and they can direct that payments be made by the municipal administrator. If he refuses and if the board is satisfied that there are hardships, then I believe the province will pay it and then will recover from the municipality. As you know, the province pays 80 per cent, and the municipality pays 20 per cent. We will recover that 20 per cent from the municipality.

Mr. Gisborn: Would the minister show me or explain to me where in his Family Benefits Act it gives the entitlement to an applicant for municipal welfare—

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The member means the General Welfare Assistance Act?

Mr. Gisborn: —to use the family benefits review board to appeal his refusal? The appeal board on municipal welfare is the Hamilton welfare committee. That's where they go.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: Mr. Chairman, I may be open to correction. If a recipient is receiving general welfare or has applied, I guess, for general welfare, he would not require interim assistance. This other note says yes. Half of the board of review cases that are heard are heard under the General Welfare Assistance Act.

I don't know if this is any help, Mr. Chairman. For instance, in the year ended Mar. 31, 1972, there were 1,780 cases heard. Out of those, under the Family Benefits Act, there were 644 cases; under the General Welfare Assistance Act, there were 658 cases—these are welfare recipients—and under the Vocational Rehabilitation Services Act, there were 28 cases heard. Out of that number, 30 per cent of the appeals were granted.

Mr. Gisborn: I am now beginning to understand. What it indicates to me is that there has been a great deal of misunderstanding and confusion with the municipal welfare board, because we had one of the longest and most controversial problems a year ago in Hamilton over the welfare rights organization trying to establish the appeals procedures for recipients of municipal welfare. Finally they agreed that they would have special appeals to the city welfare. At no time did I hear it mentioned or presented that they could appeal to the review board under the Family Benefits Act.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle: The board is set up, Mr. Chairman, under the Family Benefits Act. It applies to the General Welfare Assistance Act, as well as the other Acts I have mentioned. It applies to the three Acts.

Mr. Chairman: Shall section 1 stand as part of the bill?

Section 1 agreed to.

Mr. Chairman: Are there any other comments, questions, or amendments to any other sections of the bill?

If not, shall the bill be reported?

Bill 230 reported.

Hon. Mr. Brunelle moves that the committee of the whole House rise and report.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

Mr. Chairman: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole House reports one bill without amendment and asks for leave to sit again.

Report agreed to.

SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT

Hon. Mr. Wells moves second reading of Bill 243, An Act to amend the Schools Administration Act.

Mr. J. E. Bullbrook (Sarnia): Mr. Speaker, I want to comment in connection with the statute, not from the point of view of my own particular responsibility here in the Liberal Party or in the House itself but because the bill—on my understanding of it, subject to correction by the minister—is propelled into legislation as a result of a matter that arose in the city of Sarnia. One of my constituents was relieved of his responsibilities as a teacher with the Lambton County School Board and he did make application for a board of reference.

What happened then was that the first meeting of the board of reference was held in camera. An application was made, I believe, to the divisional court at that time for an order of prohibition in connection with the holding of the reference in camera, by virtue of the terms of the Statutory Powers Procedure Act and that was upheld. Subsequently, the teachers' appointee to the board of reference resigned.

There was then another application to the divisional court and it did, in effect, I believe, issue an additional writ of prohibition in connection with the continuing of the original board of reference. I understand that the minister found, on the advice of his legal advisers, that he didn't have the power to appoint a new board.

The essence of the legislation, as we read it, is that it does enable the minister, in circumstances such as I have outlined, to appoint a new board of reference. I wanted to ask the minister if he would explain the actual wording. There is a difference in wording in subsection 1 in connection with the cessation of duties by a representative of the board.

The words used are, ". . . the representative of the board or of the teacher dies, for any reason is unable to continue to act or withdraws from the board of reference"—that is one set of circumstances which would prevail in connection with either of the appointees there. Whereas, when the minister refers to the chairman, he talks about his disqualifying himself or his prohibition from acting. I would be interested—I suppose more so in committee—but the minister might like to comment, Mr. Speaker, on the difference in wording in the two sections.

We will, of course, support this. I wanted to make a comment I had made privately to the minister. The question arises as to the need for the appointment of a judge as chairman. I am wondering really whether it is necessary that the ministry and the minister himself be restricted to a judicial appointment? Surely there must be people outside the judiciary who can act in a sufficiently objective fashion and maintain the knowledge of the situation that is necessary for an appropriate decision?

Those are the only comments I make. We will, of course, support the legislation.

Mr. J. F. Foulds (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the minister hasn't made an opening statement, there are a few matters of principle that bother me. Although I had been reading of that case, I wasn't aware, unlike my colleague who has just spoken, that those particular circumstances gave rise to this bill. I think we must look at this bill not as a remedy for a particular situation, but for its ultimate and overall impact as a piece of legislation generally.

I am sorry I am not a lawyer, and I do not have the terminology with which to discuss it adequately, but I would be inclined to oppose section 1 of this bill for two reasons.

It seems to me, first of all, that if one side has a good case in terms of the matter brought before the board of reference, and one side has a weak case, the side with the weak case could withdraw for a frivolous reason and leave the matter for the chairman to decide on his own. As a result, the person with a strong case, who had obviously applied for the reference board, would not have the opportunity to put his arguments with the strength that he might.

The other thing that bothers me about this section—and I am afraid that I detect a note of elitism in it—is that it seems to me the two sections of the bill are in some sense contradictory, in that the second section in fact allows for a restructuring of the board of reference, whereas the first section does not.

It seems to me that in a board of reference of three the chairman has certain obligations and responsibilities, but at the same time all three members of such a board are of equal importance. It is a bit like the Trinity; all persons in the Trinity are of equal importance, although the Father and the Son perhaps get a little bit more publicity in terms of the mythology of our culture.

But this does bother me. Perhaps the minister can explain it, and if the explanation is satisfactory we could approve of the bill. But if not, I would move that we move to committee on it to discuss why in section 1 we do not allow for a restructuring of the committee and in section 2 we do. I object to what I detect as a possible elitist principle there.

In section 2, once again on a matter of principle, why is it that the onus should be on the person who has applied for the board of reference to be the one to request a restructuring of the board when the circumstances requiring the restructuring are not of his making.

Those are my comments on the principle of the bill, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the minister could reply. I think we perhaps could have had a more fruitful discussion if he had made an opening statement.

Mr. Speaker: Is there anyone else who would like to speak to this bill before the minister replies?

The hon. minister.

Hon. T. L. Wells (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, the principles of this bill are such that in a general way they are redefining how we do certain things with a board of reference if certain actions happen. They were, however, as my friend has said, motivated by the particular instance of the Lambton county board; otherwise I wouldn't have it here at this particular time in this session. It would be part of the general amendments, which of course we would be bringing in next spring.

As my friend from Port Arthur is probably aware, there are other matters concerning boards of reference that are under discussion between ourselves and the members of the teaching profession. A lot of things are being looked at concerning boards of reference. One of them is the matter mentioned by my friend from Sarnia, that of having judges as the chairman of boards of reference.

I must say that I share a view similar to his. I don't think that in this day and age, and given the kind of prohibitions we have put on judges from acting in other areas, that our legislation should say that a judge has to be a chairman. But this is what it says right now and until we change it, it has to remain this way.

We are looking at it because I think the members of the teaching profession are not too keen to have that changed until they can be shown exactly what the other alternatives are. I think that this is one of the things that we are working out with them.

Now, regarding the differences in wording here and the points that were referred to concerning the differences between section 1 and section 2. Section 1 indicates a procedure if, for some normal reason, one or other of the two appointed parties, other than the chairman, has to drop out of the hearing.

I don't know that we were considering other than normal situations, such as my hon. friend mentioned, where one person feels he has a better case than the other, so he drops out in order to force the other person to drop out and leave the judge to determine it.

We really weren't thinking of it in that light. We were just thinking that if one party or the other, because of illness or because of some other reason, has to cease to act, rather than starting the whole thing over or allowing for a substitute person to come in halfway through a hearing it would perhaps be better if the other person dropped off and the judge himself acted as a one-man board. Now, this is the thinking in this particular section.

The second section, of course, has two parts to it. One of them deals with what happens before a hearing starts. It indicates the procedures that will be followed before a hearing starts. Section 2 talks about what will happen after a hearing is already begun and something happens to the chairman. Or, as in the case of the Lambton county situation, a prohibition order from the court has been upheld and the present board of reference is prohibited from carrying on.

I realize there may be differences of opinion as to how this should be handled, but we felt that the proper way would be for the person who had asked for a board of reference to again make an application for a board. There may be circumstances where he doesn't automatically want it again. We felt that within 90 days of something happening, as under section 2, he should again ask the minister to appoint a new board. This gives the minister the powers to do it, which we don't have at the present time.

Mr. Foulds: There are a couple of questions I would like to ask the minister and I know that is not permitted on second readings.

Can we move to committee? We won't be unduly obstructionistic.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the bill be ordered for third reading? Committee?

Agreed.

CONSUMER REPORTING ACT

Hon. Mr. Clement moves second reading of Bill 229, An Act to control the Storage and Supply of Personal Information for Rating Purposes.

Mr. D. M. Deacon (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, when the government introduced this bill to control the preparation of personal reporting files, it exhibited a very worthwhile desire to provide safeguards in an industry which, on many occasions because of lack of regulations, has seriously abused and interfered with the rights of individuals.

This legislation is long overdue and we in this party reflected our concern nearly a year ago by introducing legislation which received the support of every speaker when it was introduced in a private member's debate.

There is a feeling abroad that personal reporting and retail credit agencies are useful only to those companies which employ their services. However, the fact that they are in existence at all indicates they provide a real service to consumers as a whole. For example, the advent of personal reporting agencies reduced the incidence of refusals of policy applications by life insurance companies to a very small fraction, actually one-third of one per cent. It used to be much higher than it is now.

The use of personal reporting has enabled these companies to produce actuarial tables which are far more accurate and thus calculate risk in such a way as to enable many more people to enjoy the benefit and protection of a sound insurance programme. Other people who use the personal reporting agencies include bonding companies and prospective employers.

It is in the field of personal reporting in which there has been the greatest evidence of abuse and interference with personal privacy and rights. Credit reporting agencies which deal only with factual information have been the source of much less complaint. We are therefore pleased that this legislation in Bill 229 deals not only with the credit reporting—which was all that Bill 23 of the last session proposed—but it is proposing to regulate the all-important field of personal information.

I am sure that it is not the government's intention that this Bill do other than regulate the operation of such agencies to protect the consumer, but not to cause the industry which performs this valuable service to disappear from sight altogether. Yet I believe this is what the effect of this bill will be.

As I mentioned earlier, Mr. Speaker, the House will no doubt remember that I introduced a private member's bill last March which sought to deal with exactly this subject. This enabled me to gain some depth of insight into the subject. My interest had been aroused by the serious damage suffered by one of my constituents as a result of an incorrect personal report about which he had no knowledge because of the negligence of this government in failing to deal with this unregulated and potentially dangerous industry.

Although my initial interest caused me to feel otherwise, my research convinced me that such agencies, in fact, as I've mentioned before, do perform a useful service both to their customers and to the consuming public. For the most part they had voluntarily taken a few timid and quite inadequate steps to protect private rights. Generally speaking, the agencies I approached were both interested in and co-operated greatly in developing ideas to remove the potential areas of abuse.

However, let me turn to those specific parts of this bill which I consider to be unnecessarily stringent or to be remiss in the objective of protecting the public. I regret the government has not followed more closely a bill of similar intent which has been in force in the Province of Manitoba for two years. We are fortunate in this province in having not only the experience of that province but of other jurisdictions on which to draw.

They saw the need and they moved long ago when it was obvious there was need for regulation in this field. Yet for some reason, the government failed to include in its definitions a clause which would prevent wholesale evasion of the clear intent of this bill.

I refer to section 1(c), where a definition of a personal reporting agency is as follows: "Consumer reporting agency means a person who for gain or for profit furnishes consumer reports."

This means, Mr. Speaker, that only those agencies which are in existence solely for the purpose of compiling, storing and providing this type of information for profit come under the provisions of this legislation. There is no provision to regulate the activities, for example, of large insurance companies which might wish to set up their own investigation departments to provide personal reporting and which will be outside the scope of this bill. Nor, for that matter, is there any provision for any injustice which might occur where a prospective employer makes personal inquiries about a possible future employee and the employee suffers as the result of an inaccurate or malicious report about him made to that employer.

I would suggest that the definition of a personal reporting agency covered by the scope of this bill be amended to read as it does in the definitions in part 1 of the Manitoba Act, which would include anyone compiling personal information. It doesn't matter who you are as long as you are compiling it. If you are the employer compiling it on your own behalf, you still come under the provisions of this bill.

An hon. member: A good idea.

Mr. Deacon: Without such a definition it will be entirely possible for the whole intent of this bill to be frustrated and the injustices which it is intended to correct to continue unchecked.

In my conversations with the public and members of the personal reporting industry, I found a great concern on their part that the sources of information should be protected as far as possible. Those with whom I have discussed the problem point out that such sources will dry up or become completely useless, because most people would be unwilling to make truthful but adverse comments, particularly if it is in connection with elements of society such as organized crime and those of a similar nature, for fear that they would be exposed and subject to the intimidation of those about whom such comments might be made.

The whole ability of this business to obtain a truthful and accurate impression of a job applicant or an applicant for insurance or for a bond would come into jeopardy. It is particularly important, therefore, to protect us against those elements of society who wish to deceive us about themselves for their own gain and advantage. It's important for us to protect those vast majorities, 99 per cent or so of applicants, whose credit is good and whose lifestyle is beyond reproach, because they would suffer simply because there would be no way of distinguishing them from those about whom an adverse report might legitimately be made.

There are two areas in this bill, Mr. Speaker, where I believe changes could and should be made to continue to protect the rights of individuals and protect their personal privacy, which is the principle of the bill and which this party fully supports, but which would not destroy the basic contribution this industry can continue to make under sound regulation.

The first is in section 11(d); I believe this clause is unnecessary because it is redundant. The second is in section 13(4), where I believe the words "at the discretion of the tribunal" should be added at the beginning of the clause to avoid abuse by those who without just cause wish to determine the sources of information in order to cause some harm to them, to protect us against those elements of society to which I referred before. Since I am confident that the minister's purpose in this bill is to correct the present abuse and to make sure that the statements about consumers are correct rather than to punish the authors of them, this can easily be done, and I am sure that section 11(a) of the bill covers what he is wanting to do. If these two changes are made, Mr. Speaker, they would have the effect of protecting the source of statements made to a consumer reporting agency, while at the same time allowing sufficient protection to an aggrieved consumer to redress any damage which may have been done to him.

While we are on the subject of redress, I would suggest that it is not the object of this bill to provide ammunition for an aggrieved complainant to take his case to a civil court for an action of libel or slander. The purpose of the bill is surely to put right any inaccuracies which may be contained in the person's report and to see that the fact of these inaccuracies and the correct facts are circulated to all those who received the original, incorrect report in the first place.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the object of this bill is designed to cure rather than to punish. Now I would suggest that this might well be done as it was under the U.S. Fair Credit Reporting Act where a clause included in the bill would have prohibited the use of information acquired under the Act as evidence on which to conduct a punitive civil charge in another court.

Some of the other points in the bill that I want to bring to the attention of the minister, Mr. Speaker, include the definition of credit information. I think the definition in my own bill, where I talked about factual information rather than credit information, is far superior. It should include, and it should be possible to include, definite information such as name, age, residence, dependants and educational and professional qualifications. These are facts. They are matters about which there's no need to have a special provision such as we have on the other side, the personal information side.

I feel the definition in my bill is far more preferable, where I use the words "factual information" to distinguish between factual and personal information.

Another point I want to bring out is with regard to what I termed investigative information, which does not include factual or medical information. Investigative information would include things like character reputation, mode of living and so on. Those are the areas we are particularly concerned about in protecting the rights of individuals. They're the areas I feel the legislation should clearly and specifically cover and give particular protection.

Another point I completely disagree with in this particular bill, Mr. Speaker, is with regard to the fact that in addition to having written consent, they can also be in the clear and comply with the provisions of this Act if they give notice within five days of a report being made. To my mind we're not giving any assurance to the consumer that he actually is getting notice. We don't have any provision that it has to be delivered to him in person.

I submit that there's absolutely no delay necessary, and there's going to be no question as to the right of a company or some party to have information if we insist that there be written consent. And that written consent can be put into every single form on which a person is making application so that he is aware a certain agency or company is going to be compiling this information. It should be part of the form. It should be written down.

There should be none of this business about giving a person notice. There should be no possibility of that information being given to anyone else without his written consent. I think the minister is leaving a great loophole in this by merely stating that notice must be sent within five days.

I also wonder why we're giving the minister such strong powers in this Act, compared with the powers provided in my Act, which would require that someone who wants to make a special investigation has to go to court for an order. It seems to me that, wherever possible, we should give the public the protection of the courts, rather than giving the right to a registrar, as provided for in this bill, to go in on his own.

There's another aspect of the bill I proposed which is missing here, and I think it's a very important part. There's no provision for publication of the disputed reports which have been upheld by the registrar or the tribunal. In other words, the public will not be aware by any publication of what agencies are continually making inaccurate reports which are being disputed. I think one of the most effective methods of disciplining these agencies would be to have public access to and actual publication of their record of inaccuracies. I think that clause 30 in my bill would be a great help here because a fine is not enough.

There should be something which, in effect, is going to kill a credit agency's business because of its bad business record. It will be, in my mind, a much greater deterrent than fines.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the questions that this bill raises, I urge and I hope that the minister will refer this bill to a standing committee of the House in order that consumer representatives as well as the personal reporting agencies themselves can be heard. It's a very important bill and I'm pleased to see the minister nod that this is his intention.

Mr. E. Sargent (Grey-Bruce): Well done.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lakeshore.

Mr. P. D. Lawlor (Lakeshore): It is an important bill, Mr. Speaker, and it's a shame that we haven't greater time to desiderate upon it. However, I'm sure the hon. minister will send it to committee where it can be scalped inch by inch because we on this side have considerable misgivings about portions of this bill.

Obviously, the misgivings arise out of problems of the invasion of privacy and the far-reaching measures initiated here with respect to those. The designation of the bill, its purpose and intent is precisely to protect privacy. The whole problem that arises is to what extent it does so and to what extent it endangers the very thing it's seeking to protect.

The point made earlier in the debate about the wide definition of a public agency in section (1)—"A consumer reporting agency means a person who for gain or profit furnishes a consumer report"—does raise a problem of the ambit of this statute. Just who falls under it? Intertrade protective associations of all kinds are very often non-profit agencies precisely arranged internally to provide information internally to the agencies themselves.

I'm not sure whether the Better Business Bureau is a profit or non-profit agency. I suspect it may be a non-profit agency subscribed to by numerous firms seeking credit information, for instance. Then there is a further problem I would like to learn right at the initiation. Does, for instance, the banking industry fall within the terms of this legislation constitutionally—banking being a particular prerogative under the British North America Act of the federal government?

Does the legislation seek to encompass this? That's certainly a very wide area in which credit reports are constantly obtained and are used internally for that particular business.

I wonder about federally-incorporated insurance companies. It's within the insurance company ambit that the impressions of personal invasion through personal information arise in a probably more exorbitant way than they do for the financial community seeking purely financial information about human beings.

Those are questions that strike me with respect to how efficacious the Act is in its actual application and operation. In the other area that seriously concerns us we can go back a good many years.

The business of invasion of privacy as a separate, distinct cause of action in the courts wasn't really raised until about 1890 as a separate head of tort. That famous article written by two men who have been justly famous since that date, Warren and Brandeis, in the "Right to Privacy" in the 1890s in the Harvard Law Review, said the following:

The intensity and complexity of life attendant upon advancing civilization has rendered necessary some retreat from the world and man, under the refining influence of culture, has become more sensitive to publicity so that solitude and privacy have become more essential to the individual. But modern enterprise and invention have through invasions upon this privacy subjected him to mental pain and distress far greater than then could be inflicted by mere bodily injury.

That's the weight of the thing. It remains as true today and more than when those words were written well over a half-century ago.

It seems to me, within the terms of the legislation as drawn, with respect to the personal information aspect of that legislation, wherever it occurs throughout the bill before us, that some kind of restriction must be imposed upon that.

I suggest to the minister that the very least restriction that might be utilized is contained in a recent book by John Sharpe called "Credit Reporting and Privacy," issued by Butterworths. At page 106 he's talking about the guidelines established by the credit agencies themselves, the Credit Reporting Bureaus of Canada, which have an internal policing system or, at least, a code of ethical conduct with respect to the disclosure of information to those people outside.

May I just pause for a moment to say how widespread that is. If you or I want a credit report on somebody, any private citizen, it's fairly easily obtainable. You can go to some friend who subscribes to one of these agencies and you ask him to obtain it for you. You don't necessarily belong to it.

Nothing in this legislation is preventive of that particular kind of thing. All it does is reveal and make perfectly clear just how exploitative, how publicly available this sort of thing is. So far as the law is concerned, we are very remiss.

I mean, those fellows over there may grow time after time as to how advanced their legislation is vis-à-vis that of other jurisdictions or, at least, that it is on a par with it. But in this area protecting individuals, it is not true. British Columbia has legislation—mention has been made of the Manitoba legislation—and 38 states in the United States have legislation protecting privacy.

All the minister has thus far is a report from a Queen's University law professor telling him how to do it and what should be protected. We debated it ad nauseam two years ago with no effect at all. It is certainly an area in which the minister can be held to be negligent and a little ostrich-like in his approach to that particular area of human worth.

But to get back to the problem that I was mentioning and the question of the guidelines. And at page 106 they say in investigative procedures: "However, sensitivity of information looms larger."

This section is called "Ultra-sensitive information," from which they exclude the basic facts about your financial life. But the basic facts about your very intimate, personal life is equally subject to being bandied about and passed back and forth. And that's the sensitive area which I'm standing here terribly concerned with the legislation that we have before us.

In investigative procedures, however, sensitivity of information looms larger. For one thing much of the information involved is opinion or character information.

May I pause again. The minister tries to utilize some kind of rationality in his legislation by saying it must, in the furthest degree possible, be in some way "corroborated". Just what that means is what I would like to discover in committee. Just what type of corroboration have those people in mind here in protecting an individual's personal intimacy and integrity?

Anyhow, for one thing it states:

Much of the information is opinion or character information. This may be particularly so, for example, where the resource is requested for personnel or employment purposes.

It is, therefore, encouraging to see that the legislation and guidelines adopted by some of the professions provide that the specialized and more sensitive information gathered for personnel and related purposes should be maintained separately and not to be incorporated in subsequent credit reports except those issues for personnel purposes. I am saying this is the very minimum. I don't necessarily agree with that at all. I think that the legislation should be drawn coherently and with sufficiently sharp lines as to precisely what personal information is available to what kind of agency.

One of the faults in the legislation is that all agencies are lumped together, whether they are credit reporting services, insurance companies looking to insure someone as to their physical health and what their future possibilities may be, touching biology; the whole area of police reporting and investigations of that kind with respect to employment and job maintenance. There are five or six different types of agencies which are lumped together. Their purposes—what they want—are quite distinctive.

If the legislation were properly drawn, nicely drawn, touching these delicate things, then there would be a segregation within the legislation itself setting out the pros and cons of what may or may not be reported to agencies of various, diverse and distinct kinds.

I think it is worth nothing for my banker to happen to know that I beat my wife in the evening. What positive relevance has that to my ability to pay him at noon hour the next day on a demand note? None whatsoever.

Hon. R. Welch (Provincial Secretary for Social Development): It makes the member a poor risk.

Mr. Lawlor: Well, it may be that my wife would beat me and I wouldn't be able to attend, but apart from that—

An hon. member: That is relevant.

Mr. Bullbrook: Is he still beating his wife?

Mr. Lawlor: —the legislation is just too broadly drawn in that particular area and in others. There are numerous sections which are more properly handled individually in committee.

Look at the range of matters that will not be included by setting up certain time restrictions and limitations. The government automatically includes others, of course.

The business in (h) about information as to conviction for crimes after seven years from the date of conviction—doesn't the federal government, in my recollection, do a little better than that? I mean, you can have your record deleted after five years. Why does this government go for seven? Why should a person be pilloried over this greater length of time within the terms of this legislation?

The same thing applies with respect to statute barred debts. That is the most curious clause of all, because the government seems to contradict itself in the process of saying what it is trying to do. It says they can't be reported and then it proceeds, "unless accompanied by evidence appearing on the file that recovery is not barred by the expiration of a limitation period." That is what the minister is talking about. It is barred; the section covers statute barred debts because of limitation periods.

Is it just poor draftsmanship, or what goes on in this particular legislation? There seems to be something sacrosanct throughout that whole section about the seven-year rule. In every instance reference is made to it, except as to bankruptcies and there the minister requires 14 years. I would like to know the justification for that stretching out of time and that particular incubus upon anyone. There are about 15 subsections under this particular head and each one of them would have to be given very careful scrutiny as to what is or is not properly referable.

The minister does give a bowing obeisance to the government's own civil rights legislation by saying that matters of colour, creed, ancestry, ethnic origin, or political affiliation—thank heavens—is not to be disclosed. But he could go a good deal further in drawing the lines as to what may be disclosable and what not. Only those things which are pertinent to the very thing in question ought to be disclosable, and when it becomes a matter of the ultra-sensitive areas then that should be strictly contoured.

The minister doesn't do that in the terms of his Act. He treats it the same as any other cheap information.

Just one final word about the law of Canada. The minister may say that there is added protection given over and above this legislation, quite outside it—for instance in the law of defamation—and that is perfectly true. I think our law is a good deal better than in the United States simply because we fail to do very much about it, it has kind of grown up like Topsy, and floating around has, in Topsy's maturity, had greater weight.

For instance, in the questions of qualified privilege, in the United States as long as there is no gross negligence, as long as nuisance isn't involved as an invasion of privacy, and as long as trespass on the person isn't involved, the credit agency may disseminate this information very broadly.

In Canada and in British law, qualified privilege only relates to the very internal dissemination of the information among that particular group involved. If it leaks out, then under the law of defamation they are subject to damages, and to injunctions and to what not—the whole panoply of legal remedies—and it is up to them to justify the fact. You don't have to prove that they were grossly negligent. It is the other way around—they have to satisfy the court, on a reasonable balance probably, that they weren't. That is a beneficial aspect of this particular area of law which I think deserves to be mentioned.

As for the rest, the particular clauses, as has been pointed out by the hon. member for York Centre, are honeycombed with difficulties, and I am sure the minister will accede to having the bill heard in committee.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Grey-Bruce.

Mr. Sargent: If I may, I would like to congratulate the minister on this legislation. I am very happy about such things as inspection of information about an individual in the files, and the opportunity to correct it. I do feel that it is long overdue. It is a very vicious field in the area of business today.

Briefly, I want to relate my experience with this. I had a leading reporting agency approach me to buy a service from it. The fee was in the area of $700 for this service, and when I was kind of hedging on the whole operation, the agent suggested or implied it might be a good idea for me to buy the service because I would get a better credit report, which I could use any time. This is one of the levers which he offered to me. I was shocked and told him to get the hell out of my office. That was in Queen's Park here, about three years ago, so I do think it is long overdue.

I have a letter here to me from a leading attorney in Owen Sound, a young chap who was doing a lot along these lines. He wrote this letter to me, which I would like to put into the record:

On the matter of credit reporting, as you are aware, the right to privacy with respect to credit reporting, and the right of an individual to see any credit reports and make changes therein, as far as they are concerning him, are apparently the subject of much debate in all legislatures, including the Ontario Legislature.

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member—

Mr. Sargent: Sure.

Hon. Mr. Bales: —but on a point of privilege, I should like to make a statement to this House today, with the concurrence of the members of this House. I apologize that it was not available at the beginning of the House today but a great deal of work had to be done before I could make it.

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. members agree to accept this statement of the hon. Attorney General at this time?

Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Attorney General may proceed.

STATEMENT OF PRIVILEGE

Hon. D. A. Bales (Attorney General): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, during the course of a budget address last night, certain statements were made which I feel it is incumbent upon me to answer today.

I have been a member of this House since Sept. 25, 1963, and in that time I have never before experienced the feeling of disgust that overcame me last evening.

We have, Mr. Speaker, indeed reached a low ebb when a member, with no more support than his own twisted rhetoric, can embark upon a reckless and wanton attack on the character and integrity of another. To say that I was distraught to hear the member for High Park (Mr. Shulman), by cruel innuendo and facetious denial, link me to the recent bombings in this city, is to understate the obvious. I was physically disgusted.

Mr. Speaker, as the Attorney General of this province, I am responsible for maintaining public confidence in the administration of justice. I am therefore supremely conscious of the damaging effect that such innuendo and slur as was spoken last night in this chamber can have on that public confidence if left unchallenged or unanswered even for a moment.

I attempted, with very limited success, to elicit such denials from the member as would permit me to scotch the allegation immediately, before it was allowed to insidiously escape from this chamber to do irreparable damage to that system for which I, as chief law officer of the Crown, am responsible.
